What is needed is for HEW to get away from the numbers game and direct its attention to individual hospitals. If a hospital agrees to end discrimination in admissions, room assignments, staff qualifications and in all the many other areas specified in the guidelines, it should be presumed qualified under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The cynics will object to this, pointing to how subterfuge was used in many areas to circumvent the "freedom of choice" plan for school desegregation. But it is the opinion here that the time to measure performance is after July 1, when many medicare beneficiaries will be able to afford freedom of choice of hospitals for the first time.

There is too much at stake now to take punitive action against hospitals for past discrimination. HEW officials and the medical and hospital communities of Atlanta should work together in good faith to end discrimination in the care of the sick, to assure that all our hospitals are eligible on July 1 for medicare and continued federal financial support.—JIM RANKIN.

HOSPITALS

Medicare Discriminates, 2 Hospital Leaders Say

AC 6/11/66

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

Two Georgia hospital leaders Friday protested as "discrimination" the federal government's failure to clear most Atlanta hospitals to date under the civil rights restrictions for Medicare participation.

William H. Thrasher, president of the Metropolitan Atlanta Hospital Council, insisted hospitals here have been trying "in every way possible" to comply with the Civil Rights Act of 1964."

Glenn M. Hogan, executive director of the Georgia Hospital Association, declared that "some 5,000 hospitals over the nation have been approved automatically, without checks."

"We feel this is discrimination against us," he said. "We feel that if they had checked hospitals out all over the nation as they did in Georgia, there would be less than 1,000 that qualified."

The statements followed a second meeting in two days here between hospital spokesmen and Health, Education and Welfare officials.

Rolbert Nash, chief of the Office of Equal Health Opportunity under U.S. Surgeon General William H. Stewart, and other HEW personnel Friday afternoon held a session with Hogan and Thrasher in the office of State Health department director Dr. John Venable.

Continued on Page 11, Column 2

Hospital Leaders Accuse Medicare

Continued from Page 1

CALLED THE KEY

Hogan said Nash indicated — as he had done in a Thursday meeting here where Dr. Stewart and local civil rights leaders were present — that Grady Hospital's Hughes Spalding Pavillion, which has all-Negro patients, "is the key to a community problem."

The pavillion, as does Grady, comes under jurisdiction of the Fulton-DeKalb Hospital Authority.

Hogan and Thrasher indicated that they felt it "unfair" that a single hospital might hold up certification of others. HEW spokesmen Thursday had cited the fact that most Atlanta Negro patients are treated at four hospitals — Grady, Hughes Spalding, Holy Family, and McLendon.

HINT GROUP ACTION

Nash, at the Thursday meeting, hinted strongly that hospitals here should take group action to "change the pattern of hospital use that had resulted from development of an all-Negro hospital."

Hogan said he felt the Thursday meeting "ignored the old people, the future Medicare patients who should be the prime consideration." Thrasher, citing "meeting after meeting after meeting" on Medicare planning recently, said, "We feel that we are in compliance with the law, and we were embarrassed by the accusation that we are not. Hospitals have filed applications on an individual basis, and we feel that each hospital should be treated individually."

Federal government tabulators, admittedly behind in their paper work, have cleared only two Atlanta area hospitals, Ponce de Leon Infirmary and Aidmore, on Title VI (civil rights eligibility).

19 OKAYED

Although 48 Georgia hospitals were reported to have Title VI clearance, only 19, with a total of 1,868 beds, have officially passed both civil rights and operating standards tests for-no-more-questions Medicare certification. Ponce de Leon Infirmary, officially okayed Friday morning, is Atlanta's first approval. Hogan stressed that, once Title VI is cleared, the other clearance is virtually automatic since most eligible Georgia hospitals have been cleared by State Health Department inspectors on operating standards.

Official state Medicare hospitals to date are: Phoebe Putnam, Albany (284 beds); R. T. Jones, Canton (67); Peach County, Fort Valley (73); Hamilton, Dalton (150); Upson County, Thomaston (88); Memorial, Waycross (209); Forsyth, Cumming (36), John L. Hutcheson, Fort Oglethorpe (141); St. Mary's, Athens, 132; Coweta General, Newnan, 121; Newton County, Covington (80); Oglethorpe Sanitarium, Savannah (50); City-County, LaGrange (185); Valley, West Point (29); Tanner, Carrollton (82) Villa Rica Hospital, Villa Rica (35); Meriwether, Warm Springs (32); Seminole, Donaldsonville (42), and Ponce de Leon Infirmary, Atlanta (32).

State Hospitals Get Approval For Medicare

HOSPITALS
BC 6/12/66

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has made public the names of 5,558 hospitals which it lists as being in compliance with laws against racial discrimination.

Ths means, a spokesman said, that they are considered currently eligible to participate in the Medicare program of care for the elderly, insofar as civil rights law is concerned.

The department listed those rated as eligible but did not release the names of those viewed as being not in compliance.

A spokesman said that it is believed many of the 2,096 hospitals—largely in the South—not listed will comply before the program actually starts on July 1.

Georgia hospitals listed as being in compliance are:

Albany, Phoebe Putney Memorial; Athens, St. Marys; Atlanta, Ponce de Leon; Augusta, St. Josephs; Augusta, University; Austell, Austell; Blackshear, Pierce Memorial; Blairsville, Union General; Calhoun, Gordon; Canton, R. T. Jones Memorial.

Cartersville, Sam Howell Memorial; Chatsworth, Murray County Memorial; Clayton, Rabun County; Colquitt, Miller County; Columbus, Webb; Commerce, Banks-Jackson Community; Covington, Newton County; Cumming, Forsyth County; Dahlonega, Woodward; Dallas, Paulding County.

Demorest, Habersham County; Donalsonville, Seminole Memorial; Dublin, Laurens County; Franklin, Ernest Memorial; Fort Gaines, Clay County; Fort Oglethorpe, Tri-County; Fort Valley, Peach County; Gainesville, Hall County; Griffin, Griffin-Spalding; Hartwell, Hart County; Hazlehurst, Clyde Duncan Memorial; Hiawassee, Towns County; LaGrange, City-County.

LaFayette, Kitchens; Milledgeville, Milledgeville State; Monroe, Walton County; Newnan, Coweta; Powder Springs; Quitman, Brooks County; Ringgold, Stephensons; Royston, Cobb Memorial; Savannah, Oglethorpe, W. A. Chandler, Smyrna, Brawners; Statesboro, Bulloch County; Summerville, Chattooga County.

Thomaston, Upson County; Toccoa, Stephens County; Trion, Trion Community; Tucker, Doctors; Villa Rica, Villa Rica City; West Point, Valley; Warm Springs, Meriwhether Memorial; Waycross, Memorial.

Negroes Here Pressing Hospital Compliance

HOSPITALS

AC 6/19/66

Spokesmen for two predominately Negro organizations in Atlanta said Saturday they want "definite evidence" of desegregation before 18 Atlanta hospitals receive Medicare.

"We plan to protest before these hospitals are held in compliance with federal desegregation guidelines," Dr. J. T. Blasingame Jr. said at a press conference.

Dr. Blasingame is president of the Atlanta Medical Association which has charged that 12 Atlanta hospitals which have agreed to comply have not proposed any changes in discriminatory practices.

Six hospitals have not started compliance, he said.

"Evidence shows that local hospitals are not sincere," Dr. Blasingame added, referring to the recent announcement of compliance of the 12 hospitals.

Another group, the Committee on Implementation of the Civil Rights Act, 1694, announced "proof which it will present to the President of the United States and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of non-compliance of hospitals in this area."

Dr. A. M. Davis, a member of the committee, said telegrams have been sent to President Johnson and other officials and representatives requesting a meeting.

"We are asking for an audience," Dr. Davis said. The committee will send representatives to Washington, D.C., if the request is granted.

"We expect the President to direct the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare of our concern and in turn he (Secretary John Gardner) will enforce the guidelines."

**

Early Okay Brews For More Hospitals

Several Here Could Get Medicare Clearance Today

HOSPITALS

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

"Several Atlanta hospitals" are expected to receive Medicare clearance "very soon—possibly tomorrow," a spokesman for the Georgia Hospital Association said Monday.

Glenn M. Hogan, association executive secretary, expressed a new optimism and predicted that "two-thirds of all Georgia hospital beds—not hospitals, but beds"—should receive the necessary certification by the July 1 beginning of the Medicare program.

Local Health, Education and Welfare officials, who depend on a Washington, D.C.,-okayed "list" to update their announcements from the Atlanta headquarters, had no new announcements Monday. But Hogan said a new way of notifying Title VI (civil rights)-cleared hospitals by individual letters had been instituted and such letters were due in Atlanta this week.

END CONFUSION

The official clearance presumably would end weeks of confusion and counter-charges in which HEW, hospital and civil rights spokesmen alternately have wrangled over alleged Title VI violations in metropolitan area hospitals.

On the record so far, only Marietta's Kennestone Hospital and Atlanta's Ponce de Leon Infirmary have clearance.

Charles Sanders, Kennestone administrator, was called to Washington Monday night by HEW officials, who asked him to present a paper, "The Role of the Hospital Administrator in Medicare" before HEW workers and public health personnel there.

ONE IN REGION

The Marietta official was reported to be the only one in this region asked to attend the called meeting, another in a Washington series designed to speed clearance of hospitals and prepare for an expected influx of Medicare patients in early July.

Douglass Richard of the Social Security's Bureau of Health Insurance here said 48 Georgia hospitals now have both Title VI clearance and approval as to operating standards, the no-further-questions-asked official certification for Medicare participation.

76 AT LAST COUNT

HEW's last count on Title VI-only hospitals was 76, and clearance for civil rights almost automatically means the other approval will be forthcoming. Both agencies are behind in their paper work, but federal officials say they are aware that delays and mistakes will be made as the mammoth task is rushed to completion. An example: Marietta's Kennestone Hospital, administrator Sanders said, was cleared more than a week before the formal announcement. He finally called Washington and was told that "a computer knocked your name off the list by mistake, but we're getting it back on."

---

2 in Prison Suing for $635,000

Two federal prisoners have filed separate suits against the government for injuries they contend involved negligence by officials of the U.S. Penitentiary here.

Miles Malpass is seeking $610,000 as a result of being hit on the head with a heavy wooden object by a cellmate. He contends prison officials did not protect him adequately, and seeks a half-million dollars for being placed in jeopardy of life and limb and $110,000 for injuries.

Malpass in a suit in U.S. District Court here sets forth that he was attacked a second time May 2 by inmate W. W. Wood, and that fellow cellmates dragged Wood off him when he was "at the point of death" with Wood strangling him. He says he received no X rays although the top of his head has been without feeling and he has suffered severe headaches and nausea since the attack. The gash left a two-inch scar on his forehead.

IN SECOND SUIT

In another suit, inmate Eddie Padgett charges that when he was first taken into federal custody in Mobile, Ala., a cell door in the Mobile County Jail closed on his hand. He contends he was denied medical attention there and later in the Fulton County Jail, and that when he finally received it in a federal prison in North Carolina, the fractured hand had begun to heal in a deformed way.

The prison physician in North Carolina told him surgery would be necessary to correct the damage, Padgett contends, but after a year he still is awaiting surgery.

OTHER INJURIES

During his stay in Atlanta he suffered several additional injuries to his injured hand and was denied medical attention or X rays, he contends. He charges that his hand has been broken [illegible] additional places as

HOSPITALS

U.S. Okay Given To 7 Hospitals

AC 6/25/66

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Seven more Atlanta hospitals have been cleared for civil rights compliance under the Medicare Program, leaving 10 of the metropolitan area's 20 medical institutions still disqualified.

The latest figures on hispital compliance were released Friday afternoon in Atlanta by William J. Page Jr., regional director of the Department of Health, Education and Walfare.

In Washington, the department reported that 72.2 per cent of the hospital beds in Georgia have complied with Title VI of the 1964 civil rights act.

ONLY 81 CLEARED

However, only 81 of 176 Georgia hospitals — 46 per cent — have been approved for compliance.

Federal funds will be withheld after July 1, when Medicare begins, for hospitals not in compliance.

Regional Director Page said his staff is working around the clock to negotiate hospitals into compliance.

He predicted nearly all the Atlanta hospitals will have complied by July 1, a week away.

Among the 10 hospitals not yet in compliance are the Atlanta area's larger institutions.

Page said the hospitals know what must be done to bring them into compliance, and he anticipates they will make the changes.

"It has been narrowed to a point or a few points in each (Atlanta) hospital," he said. "It was brought to the attention of some of them as early as last fall. They still haven't done them."

All of the hospitals have shown a willingness to negotiate compliance, he said.

ADDED TO LIST

The seven hospitals added to the compliance list are:

Northside Manor, Peachtree-Parkwood, South Fulton, Georgian Clinic, DeKalb General, Georgia Mental Health Institution and Henrietta Eggleston.

Compliance was previously announced for Ponce de Leon Infirmary, Marietta's Kennestone Hospital, and Doctor's Hospital at Tucker.

The 10 on the noncompliance list are:

McLendon Hospital, Inc., Emory University Hospital, Crawford W. Long, Holy Family, Saint Joseph's, Georgia Baptist, Piedmont, Jesse Parker Williams, Hugh Spalding and Grady Memorial.

HE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JUNE 26, 196

Civil Rights in Medicine

HOSPITALS

Evolution in Hospital Integration Being Turned Into a Revolution by Medicare

By HOWARD A. RUSK, M.D.

One of the greatest problems in the current evolution of the changing patterns of medical services resulting from Medicare and Title 19 of the Social Security Amendments of 1965 is that of racial discrimination. Implementation of Title 6 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 in these new programs is turning this evolution into a revolution in many Southern hospitals.

A high-ranking Washington official concedes this is the most critical problem being faced in the new medical care programs.

To be eligible to admit patients under these programs, hospitals must sign statements that they are complying with the Civil Rights Act.

To their great credit, most Southern hospitals have been working quietly and effectively to change policies and procedures in order to comply. This has not been easy, for these policies have existed for many generations. Even when policies are changed by directive, changes in attitudes by both staff and patients come much more slowly.

Most Are Approved

Late figures indicate that most of the nation's nearly 7,500 eligible hospitals have been approved to take part in the Medicare program.

Last Tuesday the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People protested that, to gain approval, a Georgia hospital had placed Negro employes in beds in white wards at the time of inspection. The office of the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service acknowledged receipt of the protest and reported that it was investigating.

The Public Health Service has temporarily assigned more than 400 persons to administer the compliance program and to inspect applicant hospitals. The Administration has been conducting a last-minute, all-out effort to increase approvals by the deadline, next Friday. In a conference on Medicare in Washington last week, President Johnson made a new appeal for hospitals to comply.

Health has traditionally been a great leveler as far as tolerance and understanding are concerned. Critical illness or severe disability creates a bond of fellowship and understanding that transcends religious dogma, race and politics, whether local, national or international.

Two Contrasting Scenes

Some years ago this writer was speaking at the dedication of a new rehabilitation center in a large Southern city. It was at the time when troops had been called into Little Rock, Ark., and the entire South was a tinderbox.

There had been demonstrations in the city where the center was on the previous day. But in the center the writer was amazed to find white and Negro children together in the same wards. Negro nurses were serving side by side with white nurses. They ate in a common dining room, shared common restrooms, and worked together in complete harmony.

When the question was asked, "How long has this been going on?" the answer came in a low voice:

"Why, this has been going on for several years and we have no trouble at all."

When the white nurses were approached about the plan, the typical reply was:

"We would welcome the help of our Negro colleagues. We are short of nurses and we need them—and that is all there is to it."

'We May Get Into Trouble'

Further quiet checking disclosed that many Southern rehabilitation centers and children's clinics were operating on a fully integrated basis. The questioner, however, was always admonished along these lines:

"Don't write or say anything about this or we may get into trouble. Just let us go on as we are. We are doing all right and making progress."

In another large urban rehabilitation center in the North all patients are treated the same, whether rich or poor, black or white, Catholic, Protestant, Jew, Hindu, Moslem or atheist, whether illiterate or the holder of a doctorate of philosophy. They are housed in four-bed units and participate in a teaching and training program five to six hours a day.

In this totally integrated program involving 50,000 patients over the last 20 years there has never been a single reported instance of discrimination.

Because of the universality of medicine, it is possible that the greatest single contribution that has been made to integration is the ending of the traditional "separate but equal" policies in medical care. Severe illness and disability are a hard way to learn tolerance.

Last week the racial disturbances continued in Mississippi but not in the North Mississippi Community Hospital in Tupelo. There the traditional "Colored" and "White" signs have been voluntarily removed and the Negro entrance has been permanently sealed.

We have a long way to go. But we have gone a long way.

All Hospitals Here Expect Approval

HOSPITALS

AC 6/29/66

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

All Atlanta hospitals apparently will be declared officially in compliance with Title VI (civil rights) requirements for Medicare participation before Friday.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Paul J. Hallinan of the Diocese of Atlanta ascertained through personal telephone calls to Washington Tuesday that St. Joseph's Infirmary and the Holy Family Hospital were cleared four days ago, although Health, Education and Welfare officials here had not been able to supply that information.

Later in the day, Glenn M. Hogan, executive secretary of the Georgia Hospital Association, added to the "cleared" list Emory, Grady, Hughes Spalding, Crawford W. Long, Jesse Parker Williams and McLendon hospitals. Hulett Sumlin, administrator of Piedmont Hospital, said he had been assured "orally" that Piedmont would be cleared "although I want to emphasize that I have nothing in writing," and Georgia Baptist Hospital administrator Edwin Peel said he "had reason to believe" that action of a Tuesday board meeting would result in certification.

NEGROES PROTEST

Meanwhile, Atlanta Negro civil rights spokesmen charged here that "political pressure" had brought about certification of Atlanta hospitals. They said their own surveys showed "no visible evidence" of civil rights compliance here except in the case of a single hospital—Holy Family.

Charges came from Jesse Hill, chairman of the Summit Leadership Conference; Dr. J. T. Blasingame Jr., president of the Atlanta Medical Association; Dr. O. W. Smith, chairman of a Title VI implementation committee of Negro physicians, and State Rep. Ben Brown, director of community services for the Atlanta Urban League.

A "protest rally" was staged at Mount Moriah Baptist Church by Negro groups Tuesday night.

OWN INSPECTION

At the sparsely attended rally, Hill suggested that Negro doctors and community leaders stage their own inspections of hospitals. Hill said the Negro inspectors could determine for themselves if any certified hospitals were actually not in compliance.

Rally leaders read a telegram from the Rev. Martin Luther King that called hospital segregation "racism in its most damnable form." They also read a letter from Whitney Young Jr., executive director of the Urban League, declaring that "it will be disastrous if the federal government accepts this meager program of compliance."

Earlier, spokesmen for a Negro unit, the Atlanta Committee on Operation Health Improvement Plan, stated they were "disturbed over recent developments concerning the certification of local hospitals."

Dr. Smith said HIP sent telegrams to President Lyndon B. Johnson, HEW Secretary John W. Gardner, Georgia Reps. Charles Weltner and James Mackay and New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell "expressing our findings that there have been no significant changes made at any of the local hospitals that have already been certified for Medicare."

At a press conference here Tuesday, Dr. Smith stated specifically that DeKalb General Hospital, one of the earliest metropolitan Atlanta area hospitals announced by HEW as in compliance, was "not in compliance." Other Negro spokesmen assailed Emory University Hospital as a non-compliant and as "controlling some other hospitals and about 2,000 beds in the Atlanta area."

They said federal funds should not go to non-compliant hospitals. Hill said the group "does not intend to accept deals and circumvention of guidelines," adding: "We want some action."

HEW's slowness in notifying hospitals of clearance obviously irked some concerned officials here.

Hogan, reporting early Tuesday afternoon that he was "still in the dark" as to the status of Atlanta hospitals, said that "it seems ridiculous that we still don't know." Later in the day he obtained the desired information. Archbishop Hallinan said that "last Saturday, although I find our Catholic hospitals had been cleared the day before, St. Joseph's and Holy Family were still on the non-compliance lists."

HOSPITALS

Sanders Predicts Wider Compliance

Special to The Constitution

LOS ANGELES—Gov. Carl Sanders of Georgia, attending the National Governors' Conference here, said Wednesday he is hopeful that there will be a more "reasonable and realistic" approach to the new federal school guidelines.

Sanders expressed this optimism after talks here with John Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Gov. Sanders

The governor said Gardner is a man of "tremendous competence." Sanders said he feels the HEW chief is more interested in quality education than in rigid compliance with the guidelines.

He does not believe Gardner will be "actively campaigning" for such things as busing students or that he will be emphasizing percentages of white and Negro students in schools, Sanders said.

Sanders also said he was a member of a committee headed by Gov. George Romney of Michigan that recommended a rebate of federal income taxes to states with no string attached.

The conference Wednesday adopted the committee report, Sanders said.

The governor said he will drive to San Francisco for a few days after the conference before returning to Georgia next week.

$92,220 Granted To Grady

Grady Memorial Hospital has received a $92,220 grant from the Hill-Burton Hospital Assistance Program of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, to aid in construction of a $153,700 physical rehabilitation area.

J. W. Pinkston Jr., Grady administrator, said the funds, to be matched by the hospital, will make possible completion of a ground floor section, 6,225 square feet in size, left unfinished when Grady was built in 1958.

Grady's new Department of Physical Medicine will equip the rehabilitation unit with exercise, swimming and physical therapy aids designed to treat patients with multiple sclerosis, loss of limbs or limb functions, arthritis and other conditions indicating such rehabilitative efforts.

Pinkston said the unfinished area had been earmarked for such use when Grady was built but deliberately left at the time because the hospital had no Department of Physical Medicine.

Under an Emory University School of Medicine program, a department, headed by Dr. Mieczyslaw Peszczynski, was set up and is now being expanded. Exercise rooms and outpatient facilities are planned.

U.S. Asked To Prod Hospitals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of Negro physicians Wednesday threatened "dramatic action" unless the federal government forced hospitals in the Atlanta, Ga. area to desegregate.

The group, representing the Committee on Implementation of the Civil Rights Act, told a news conference only one of the 18 hospitals in the Atlanta area was in fact desegregated, although most had been ruled in compliance with federal guidelines for Medicare.

The doctors called the news conference after a two - hour meeting with Wilbur Cohen, undersecretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Dr. Roy Bell, chief spokesman for the group, said all they received from Cohen was "promises, promises."

Dr. Otis W. Smith said unless something was done soon to correct the situation there would be demonstrations and sit-ins throughout Atlanta in protest.

Bell said the group would report to the "summit of the Negro leadership" in Atlanta when he returned. He said it would be up to the leadership to take the next action and that it would be "dramatic."

Bell said Negroes comprise 40 per cent of the city's population and yet only one hospital, Holy Family was in actual compliance with the law. He said the remainder of the hospitals only had token integration.

Bell said one of the major problems was getting Negro doctors on the hospital staffs. He said doctors were accepted on the staffs of the hospitals only if they lived within a certain distance of the facility, and "a Negro physician is not allowed the privilege of office space in certain sections of town."

NEGROES CRITICIZE U.S. HOSPITAL AID

HOSPITALS

Medicare Helps Segregated Facilities, Doctors Assert

NYT 7/29/66

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, July 27—The Federal Government was accused by a new Negro medical and dental organization Wednesday of channeling Medicare payments to "many" hospitals that still discriminate against Negroes.

Spokesmen for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare countered that progress was being made by the nation's hospitals. But they conceded that "many problems" still remained in erasing discrimination.

Thirty-five Negro dentists and physicians aired their grievances at the Cabana Motor Inn here, in a meeting in which they formed a Southwide organization—the Hospital Improvement Association—to pressure the Government into rigid enforcement of the hospital provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Doctors and Dentists

Dr. Leonidas H. Berry, president of the predominantly Negro National Medical Association, and representatives of Negro medical and dental societies in Georgia, North Carolina and Mississippi got the new organization under way.

They said they want the Government to make more frequent use of a provision in the Civil Rights Act that gives it authority to cut off funds to any hospitals found to be discriminating against Negroes.

The new association con- probably a majority of those in the South — had made only token steps toward integration of their wards and staffs. Nevertheless, the association said, they have been certified as being in compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

The organization said that in Atlanta, for example, 17 out of 18 hospitals had been certified for Federal funds "despite the fact that only one of them has really integrated its facilities."

Dr. Leo J. Gehrig, deputy surgeon general of the United States, appeared at the meeting with a prepared speech that declared that "substantial progress" has been made in eliminating racial discrimination from hospitals.

After hearing the Negro grievances, however, he struck the word "substantial" when he delivered the speech.

Dr. Gherig said that, as of July 19, the Government was not sending Medicare funds to 219 of the 6,681 hospitals that had applied for them. More than 95 per cent of the 219 are in the South, he said.

The largest number of hospitals found ineligible for Medicare payments are in Mississippi, where only 46 out of 133 hospitals had been approved by the Government for Federal funds.

Negroes told Dr. Gherig he ought to cut off payments for many more hospitals. But they tended that many hospitals — saved their sharpest criticism for Robert Nash, the chief compliance officer in the Surgeon General's office.

Dr. Roy Bell of Atlanta shouted:

"I wish I could turn you black and your children black and send you down to Georgia. Personally, you ought to resign.

"You have shown no fortitude. I have no faith in you. You talk about 'black power' . . . you give us hogwash. What do you want us to do?"

Mr. Nash accused Dr. Bell of "emotionalism" and said some Atlanta hospitals had given Negro physicians staff privileges in recent weeks, despite long waiting lists of white doctors.

Australian Zoo's Head Retires

SYDNEY, Australia — Sir Edward Hallstrom, who will be 80 in September, has announced his retirement from the Taronga Park Zoo Trust, the Australian News and Information Bureau reports. "I'm feeling my age," he said.

Sir Edward has had a lifetime interest in zoos and is largely responsible for the improvements at Taronga Park. He was chairman of the trust from 1948 to 1959 and has since been its honorary life director.

HOSPITALS 8/4/66

ctors Called On to Prove Selves in Medicare

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION,

cies which gave required preference of one physician over another."

The latter statement apparently referred to HEW guidelines calling for integration in hospitals staffs. At a recent meeting of Negro physicians here with HEW officials it was pointed out that staff appointment procedures vary from one hospital to another, but that in at least one Atlanta hospital with a long waiting list for white physicians, new Negro applicants had "gone to the head of the line."

Dr. Godwin scored "time-consuming and costly" requirements for Medicare compliance. He noted that in a recent wire service interview Robert M. Nash, director of the Office of Equal Health Opportunity, "believes that any sizable hospital in the nation cannot survive without his approval."

Dr. Godwin said statements of some civil rights groups here insisting that Atlanta Medicare-certified hospitals are "non-compliant" are "highly disturbing."

"I have been informed," he added, "that this reaction does not represent the feeling of the major number of the members of the Atlanta Medical Association."

The association is an organization of Negro physicians here. Dr. Godwin said 19 of its 53 members also are members of the now integrated Fulton County Medical Soceity.

Negro Do

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

Dr. John T. Godwin, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, has called on Negro physicians protesting certification of Atlanta hospitals for Medicare to give "a demonstration of accepted responsiility and participation."

Dr. John Godwin

"Continued unrest, harassment and antagonism will only lead to destruction of the best system of medical care yet devised," he said.

Dr. Godwin told a meeting of his society that 50 Negro physicians have been appointed to previously all-white hospital staffs in the Atlanta area and 40 additional applications are pending.

ADMISSIONS CITED

"Negro patients are being admitted to every formerly white general hospital in Atlanta and to bi-racially occupied rooms," he said. "The average daily census was 106 Negro patients between July 7 and July 20 in those hospitals being checked by weekly reports to Health, Education and Welfare.

"Students for various paramedical schools are being recruited, accepted and are presently enrolled in various hospital schools throughout the color or creed.

"Some physicians are informing their white patients that they may be admitted to Hughes Spalding Pavillion. White patients have been admitted to this formerly all-Negro facility. White staff personnel are being actively recruited. More rigid physician regulations are being instituted. In the face of these demonstrated actions, it is evident there are still those in the Atlanta community who maintain a negative attitude toward the medical community — and they should be recognized as such."

'PAST TIME'

The society president declared that it "is past time" for Negro community leaders to "make the facts known and to accept their share of the responsibility to assist the community in providing the 1,000 hospital beds now needed."

Negroes also could aid, Dr. Godwin said, in "the necessary financial assistance for construction," in recruitment of paramedical students, teaching, assistance in free clinics, postgraduate education, volunteer hospital work and "the delivery of good medical care to all people."

"There does not appear to be a barrier for any qualified physician to begin to accept and meet this responsibilities," he declared. "It follows that if one receives, one should also give."

Dr. Godwon noted that Medicare already has "initiated changes in long-standing patterns for providing health care" and "instituted changes in hospital staff admission poli-

HOSPITALS

Negro Doctors Deny Hospitals Comply

AC 8/6/66

Group Charges HEW Failed To Get Institutions in Line

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

Spokesmen for the Atlanta Medical Association, an organization of Negro physicians, Friday took issue with Dr. John T. Godwin, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, over the much-debated issue of whether Medicare-certified Atlanta hospitals are really complying with civil rights provisions.

Asking to be admitted "to the mainstream of medical opportunity," they reiterated a charge that "HEW has thus far failed to enforce compliance by hospitals" here.

In a "rebuttal" press conference Dr. J. T. Blassingame Jr., chairman of the association's Title VI (civil rights) Implementation Committee, challenged remarks made by Dr. Godwin at a society meeting earlier this week.

WARNS NEGROES

Dr. Godwin had cited figures on admission of Negro physicians to Atlanta hospital staffs and on bi-racial occupancy. He had called on Negro protesters to give "a demonstration of accepted responsibility and participation," warning that "continued unrest, harassment and antagonism" would "lead to destruction of the best system of medical care yet devised."

Dr. Blassingame declared Friday, "Dr. Godwin failed to point out that the gains, which he pointed to with pride, were not accomplished until the 'unrest, harassment and antagonism' were begun, and that hospitals found on June 6 to be not in compliance were shortly afterward called in compliance without any of these gains."

He and other association members appearing at the press conference said admission of Negro physicians to four hospital staffs in recent weeks "actually involves only eight physicians, or 15 per cent of our membership, while 48 unacted-on applications (by Negro doctors seeking hospital staff privileges) involve over 50 per cent of our membership."

NEGROES ADDED

Dr. Godwin had stated that 50 Negro physicians had been added to previously all-white hospital staffs. Dr. Blassingame commented:

"The remaining staff positions which make the total of 50, we presume, are in the hospital which we have from the beginning called 'mostly nearly in compliance.' (Holy Family Hospital). Assuming that these gains are the reasons that all the hospitals except one are presently held to be in compliance by HEW, there is less latitude for praise when it is considered that seven of the 15 appointments were made by a hospital yet held to be not in compliance (Georgia Baptist Hospital)."

The Negro physician said his association "has never advovated anything that would lead to the destruction of the system of medical care, but, with its national group, has supported the government's effort to improve the system and the specific groups of patients covered by Medicare, who have previously been inadequately cared for by the system."

MADE VIEWS KNOWN

Dr. Blassingame said Dr. Godwin's remarks "were not expected" by Negro physicians who recently met with the society and made "all our view and motives . . . openly and candidly known." He added:

"We expected at least a statement of compassion from organized local medicine when our association sought admission of Negro doctors to local hospitals, in keeping with the law."

Remove All Bias by Sept. 15, U.S. Warns 8 Hospitals Here

HOSPITALS

AC 8/12/66

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

The off-again-on-again Medicare certification status of Atlanta hospitals appeared in question again Thursday as the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare served notice on eight hospitals that they must "take effective corrective action by Sept. 15 to eliminate remaining discrimination."

Crawford W. Long, Piedmont, Jesse Parker Williams, Hughes Spalding, Emory University, McLendon, St. Joseph's Infirmary and Georgia Baptist hospitals received warnings in letters from Surgeon General William H. Stewart.

Notices said action must be taken in "the granting of staff privileges to Negroes and in the referral of patients by some members of their staffs."

At the same time HEW announced that Georgia Baptist Hospital — previously denied clearance on civil rights counts, the only Atlanta hospital not certified for Medicare — now has been declared eligible "on the basis of substantial changes in their practices during the past month."

Although Georgia Baptist administrator Edwin Peel did not receive this word until Thursday afternoon, the certification was "granted retroactively to June 12," the HEW announcement stated.

The call for elimination of "remaining discrimination" was based, HEW spokesmen reported, "on an intensive survillance of civil rights practices in nine Atlanta hospitals during the month of July conducted by the Office of Equal Health Opportunity."

"As a result of the surveillance," they added, "one hospital, Holy Family, was informed that its compliance status has been fully substantiated."

Holy Family, alone of the nine hospitals, will no longer have to report its daily patient census by race with the name of the referring physician for each patient.

All eight hospitals cited must make the daily report—a practice some Atlanta physicians have threatened to test through legal action—plus reporting on "actions taken to eliminate discriminatory practices in the granting of staff privileges and the practice by some physicians . . . of referring Negro patients to predominantly Negro hospitals and white patients to white hospitals."

Continued on Page 16, Column 1

Comply by Sept. 15, 8 Hospitals Warned

Continued from Page 1

Hospitals were directed to submit the required data to HEW for the Aug. 15-Sept. 15 period. If reports are not received and corrective action is not deemed adequate by HEW, "We will have no alternative except to conclude that your assurance of compliance is not being fulfilled," letters to hospital administrators stated.

Georgia Hospital Association executive secretary Glenn Hogan commented that it was "regretable that HEW continues to threaten to deprive the aged people of Atlanta their Medicare benefits."

He insisted that all Atlanta hospitals were complying in "policy and practice" and said it would take time for "substantial dispersal of Negro physicians and patients."

The surgeon general's letters offered help from the Atlanta regional office or a personal meeting "to consider any questions that remain."

Simultanously HEW, which had hitherto withheld information regarding checks on Atlanta hospitals, released a report stating that "while there seems to be no evidence of discrimination in physical facilities once a Negro is admitted, discriminatory referral of patients by physicians in Atlanta still exists."

REFERRALS CHARTED

HEW cited a three-week period in which "referral of patients of 850 white physicians were charted." It noted that 135 referred Negroes, with 78 referring all Negro patients to formerly white hospitals, while 12 admitted each "a single Negro patient to a formerly white hospital" and "one admitted a white patient to a basically Negro hospital along with all of his Negro patients."

"Except for such actions," the report declared, "these 13 physicians had discriminatory patient referral practices." It charged that 44 Atlanta physicians showed "wholly discriminatory referral practices, with their white patients going to predominantly white hospitals and their Negro patients to predominantly Negro hospitals."

The report said granting of staff privileges at other than traditionally Negro hospitals is "proceeding slowly."

It said Negro physicians here have had privileges available to them at Hughes Spalding, McLendon and Holy Family hospitals since the hospitals opened. It said the other six hospitals "were known to be substantially staffed by white physicians until recently."

FILE APPLICATIONS

Twenty-eight of Atlanta's 52 Negro physicians have filed applications to these hospitals since June 15, the report stated and "most have not been completed and cannot be acted upon at this time." Crawford Long has accepted three; Georgia Baptist, seven; Piedmont, two, and St. Joseph, one Negro physician recently, it noted.

The report said that "need for qualified hospital workers and the force of the Civil Rights Act have removed discriminatory barriers to training programs in Atlanta hospitals."

The retroactive clause in Medicare certification of Georgia Baptist apparently means that patients 65 and over admitted on July 12 and subsequently will be able to get refunds on hospital bills paid by themselves. However, hospital officials said this would be a "laborious and time-consuming process."

Tanzania to Try Peace Corpsmen In Wife's Death

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A New Haven lawyer reported Thursday that a 24-year-old Peace Corps worker will be tried in Tanzania on Aug. 26 on charges of murdering his wife.

Carroll Brewster said he will leave for Tanzania Friday to prepare the case for Bill Haywood Kinsey Jr., 24, of Washington, N.C. Kinsey is accused of pushing his wife off a high rock near Maswa on March 27.

His wife, Peverley, 22, also a Peace Corps volunteer, was from Greenwich, Conn.

HOSPITALS

Negroes Blast Hospital Okays

AC 8/20/66

By MARJORY RUTHERFORD

Representatives of three Negro groups lashed out here Friday at the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and accused an unnamed state official and Georgia congressional representatives of "pressuring" HEW to obtain Medicare clearance for Atlanta hospitals.

The Rev. Samuel W. Williams, president of the Atlanta NAACP chapter; the Rev. Joseph E. Boone of "Operation Breadbasket," and two Negro physicians on a local Negro medical society "implementation committee" shared a platform to make the charges.

Dr. Otis W. Smith, implementation committee chairman, repeated earlier charges that Atlanta hospitals still practice racial discrimination.

All four attacked a recent HEW survey reporting on integration in Atlanta hospitals since beginning of the Medicare program. Dr. Smith termed it "the latest action by HEW to further affront the Negro populace of Atlanta," and the Rev. Mr. Williams said HEW's certification of hospitals here is "immoral." Their statement said HEW was "the enemy" and "guilty of the double-cross."

A recent announcement by HEW that Atlanta hospitals would be given a deadline of Sept. 15 to complete compliance is, the Negroes' formal statement declared, "a prelude to disaster unless HEW faces up to its responsibility."

The Rev. Mr. Boone said that HEW action amounted to "putting vaseline on a cancer—the cancer of segregation—instead of cutting it out."

The Negro group declined to name officials they said "pressured" HEW but their statement said it was "repulsive" that "the fifth Congressional representative who met with our delegation in July and indicated he would assure compliance . . . has been unusually silent during this period."

"None of our civic officials have expressed themselves on this urgent and serious issue," it added. ". . . This kind of silence invites irresponsible elements in this community to fill the vacuum."

Dr. Albert M. Davis, implemention committee secretary, said Negroes here were "exploring" legal methods of testing certification of Atlanta hospitals. He expressed the opinion that continued function of Medicare in hospitals that practice racial discrimination may be "a violation of the Sherman and Clayton acts."

HEW 'Back Off' Charged at Emory

HOSPITALS

9/1/66 AC

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Spokesmen for a committee of Atlanta Negro doctors accused the federal government Wednesday of "backing off" from enforcing desegregation guidelines against Emory University Hospital.

They protested to the White House and to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare because several Atlanta hospitals received a deadline extension from July 1 to Sept. 15 to avoid losing federal funds.

They said only one of 18 hospitals is in real compliance. They said others have desegregated "on paper" only.

EMORY CALLED KEY

Dr. O. W. Smith, committee chairman, and Mrs. Xernona Clayton, representative of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said there can be no progress "until HEW grapples with Emory University."

"Emory is the key to the whole problem," Mrs. Clayton said. "It controls five hospitals. It seems the federal government is fearful of Emory. HEW has repeatedly backed off from Emory University."

Mrs. Clayton said the university's power appeared to be reflected in the fact that it recently received more than $5 million in federal research grants.

HITS WELTNER

Mrs. Clayton repeated previous charges that Rep. Charles Weltner, D-Ga., has used "pressure . . . political influence" to gain leniency for the hospitals. Weltner has publicly denied this.

Mrs. Clayton also said Rep. James A. Mackay is "with the opposition" because he is an Emory trustee.

Smith and Mrs. Clayton said they protested to Douglas Cater, a special assistant to President Johnson, and to several officials of the U.S. Public Health Service. They also visited several congressmen, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

MAY BAR COMPLIANCE

HOSPITALS

AC 9/27/66

Senators Fight Hospital Rule

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate will consider legislation Tuesday that would prohibit civil rights compliance officers from requiring hospitals to assign Negro and white patients to the same room if the attending physician thinks it would be harmful to either.

The provision is part of this year's $10.5 billion appropriations bill for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which administers the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

It was added to the House-passed version of the bill by a group of Southern senators. The spokesman for the Senate Appropriations Committee, however, said he could not reveal their names.

In a report accompanying the Senate version of the measure, the committee said it inserted the provision because "responsible medical authorities" had objected to the assignment of patients to hospital rooms to enforce the civil rights act.

The committee said the physicians had protested that racial integration sometimes results in "situations prejudicial to the mental and physical well-being of the patient."

The purpose of the Senate addition, the committee said, was "to protect the patient, and in the interest of proper medical care procedures."

The one-paragraph section specifically prohibits HEW from using the money appropriated for any programs which requires the hospital to impose on a patient a room assignment which is contrary to his physical or mental well-being.

The appropriations bill, which included funds for the Department of Labor, is about $100 million less than the amount specified by the House.

It included $390.1 million more than was requested by the Johnson administration.

Cut from the administration proposal was $47.8 million for administration of welfare — virtually all state grants for this purpose.

HOSPITALS

Hospital Rule Eased In Senate

9/28/66 AC

By ART PINE
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate Tuesday approved legislation that would allow hospitals to segregate Negro and white patients — and not risk being judged out of compliance for it — where physicians believe it is necessary for the patients' well-being.

In order for the provision to apply, the attending physician and the chief medical officer of the hospital would both have to certify that the patient would be affected adversely if assigned to an integrated ward.

The clause, added to the House-passed version, of this year's $10.5 billion appropriations bill for the Department of Health Education and Welfare, was authored by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss.

VOTE IS 55 TO 11

It was passed in its final form 55 to 11, late Tuesday after having undergone five attempts to amend it, two of them by Stennis himself.

The Senate will vote Wednesday on a motion by Minority Leader Everett Dirksen to recommit the entire bill to committee with instructions to stand by the Johnson Administration's budget.

The Senate version of the appropriations bill was some $390.1 million more than was requested by the administration.

DEBATE IS LONG

The debate over whether the provision would, in effect, make ineffective the government's hospital compliance guidelines tied up the Senate for the entire afternoon.

Sen. Jacob Javits, D-N.Y., who led the opposition to the Stennis provision, said he thought it would "invite hospitals to avoid the civil rights guidelines."

The New Yorker envisioned physicians throughout the South

Continued on Page 9, Column 1

Hospital Rule Eased In Senate

Continued from Page

certifying thousands of patien for segregated wards, "leadin to the elimination of the whole program."

SENATOR EXPLAINS

The provision, Javits said, "would just negate Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as far as hospitals are concerned."

Stennis, however, said he had intended the provision "only as a humane measure."

He assured Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., that the government would "not have to change its guidelines one bit" if the provision were allowed to remain in the Senate version of the appropriations bill.

"It's tied to the appropriations bill," Stennis said of his provision. "That means it will only be in force for this fiscal year. After that, if you don't like it, you can leave it out of the next bill."

WHAT IT DOES

As approved, the one - paragraph section specifically prohibits compliance officers from using the 1967 appropriation money "to impose or enforce any requirements" on hospitals which is contrary to a patients' well-being.

In effect, the amended version relieves the hospital from responsibility for insuring desegregation for those patients whose physicians who prescribe segregated wards for health reasons.

A hospital judged out of compliance is in danger of losing federal aid, including authorization for Medicare.

WORDING QUESTIONED

Sen. Joseph Clark, D-Pa., and Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., exchanged barbs over wording the amendment to prevent mass certification that Javits envisioned.

Pastore, who defended the Stennis provision, said it was not intended to apply to a patient who merely stubbed his toe, but only to one whose nervous condition would be worsened if he were placed in an integrated ward.

Clark promptly introduced an amendment to alter the provision to apply only to those patients who have nervous conditions.

CLARK DROPS IT

After Pastore objected, Clark cracked: "Give me another two responsibility for insuring desegregation for those patients whose physicians who prescribe segregated wards for health reasons.

A hospital judged out of compliance is in danger of losing federal aid, including authorization for Medicare.

WORDING QUESTIONED

Sen. Joseph Clark, D-Pa., and Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., exchanged barbs over wording the amendment to prevent mass certification that Javits envisioned.

Pastore, who defended the Stennis provision, said it was not intended to apply to a patient who merely stubbed his toe, but only to one whose nervous condition would be worsened if he were placed in an integrated ward.

Clark promptly introduced an amendment to alter the provision to apply only to those patients who have nervous conditions.

CLARK DROPS IT

After Pastore objected, Clark cracked: "Give me another two minutes and I'll include heart conditions in the amendment."

Then he dropped the entire matter.

The Senate also defeated an earlier amendment by Javits and Ohio Sen. Frank Lausche which would have respectively added and decreased the total appropriation money.

Meanwhile, Georgia's Sen. Richard B. Russell emerged as a guiding hand behind the report accompanying the appropriation bill which seriously questions the legality of the new federal school desegregation guidelines.

REPORT IS ISSUED

The report, issued by the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, said the revised guidelines "contravene and violate" the legislative intent Congress had when it passed the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Russell admitted Tuesday he had "gone over and made some changes" in the sharp language of the report.

Asked how the highly critical report was slipped by the 19 Northern and Midwestern senators on the 27-member Appropriations Committee, Russell replied:

"Of course, I can't be responsible for people who don't show up when a meeting is called."

LANGUAGE APPROVED

It was understood the language of the report was approved sometime Thursday when the committee held a quickly called session.

At that time, several liberal senators were absent, and eight Southerners and an undisclosed number of middle-of-the-roaders okayed the report.

"I recall there was a quorum, though," Russell said.

Monday's report was the first time a standing committee of Congress had criticized the new guidelines.

Ralph McGill

New Holiday In Tokyo

Continued from Page 1

tor would have been grateful for a quiet day of serene, dignified celebration for the aged, but Tokyo was jumping, and also, there was a luncheon and a dinner ahead. A haircut eliminated most of the gray about the temples, and the day and the evening went very well. There was never a thought of hanging one's self.

HOSPITALS

Hospital Clause Holds Up HEW Funds

AC 10/13/66

By ART PINE
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Indecision on an amendment to allow hospitals to segregate patients for "medical reasons" is all that is holding up a $10.5 billion money bill for the Labor department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

A conference committee has resolved all other differences between the Senate- and House-passed versions of the appropriations measure, a Capitol source said Wednesday.

The conferees recessed late Tuesday to wait for a letter they asked HEW Secretary John W. Gardner to write commenting on the amendment.

DOCTORS DECIDE

The measure would prohibit HEW from requiring integration of Negro and white patients where physicians certify it would be "contrary to the patient's physical or mental well-being."

It would relieve hospitals from responsibility for compliance so far as those patients are concerned.

The amendment, added to the Senate version Sept. 28 by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., was passed by the upper house, 55 to 11.

AS A GIMMICK

Since then, it has had the strong support of Southerners and Republicans, especially those in the Senate.

A Midwest senator said Wednesday, however, he thought Gardner's letter would be used as a "gimmick" on which middle-of-the-road conferees could blame their votes.

If Gardner's letter is strongly worded, the senator said, the conferees might go either way. If it indicates that the amendment would have little effect, he continued, the committee might simply go along with Stennis.

AGAINST PROPOSAL

Another source said Wednesday that senators were being told the House members of the conference committee were "adamantly against the measure."

Gardner's letter, mailed early this week to Rep. John E. Fogarty, D-R.I., head of the House conferees, is expected to be strong.

HIS COMMENT AWAITED
Secretary Gardner

An HEW spokesman, Peter F. Libassi, said the department thought the Stennis amendment was "unnecessary and cumbersome," and should be taken out of the final bill.

NOT AS TOUGH

Libassi said present HEW regulations are less stringent than the Stennis amendment, allowing segregation both for medical reasons and for "compelling circumstances."

The last, he said, included "situations where the family would raise a fuss if a patient were placed in an integrated ward."

The spokesman also pointed out that existing regulations allow the hospital administrator to make room assignments without certification by the attending physician and chief medical officer, as the Stennis amendment would have it.

MORE RED TAPE

"This amendment makes more red tape than we ever thought of," Libassi said. "We don't feel the physicians should be burdened with the job of assigning rooms."

Gardner's main fear, Libassi said, is that the Stennis measure might confuse those hospital administrators who are already complying with the civil rights guidelines, by making them think they must obtain certification to segregate patients.

"We don't require that now, if the reasons are valid," he said, na"d we wouldn't even if the amendment were approved."

FLIMSY REASONS

In the letter, Gardner apparently also asks about the possibility of physicians certifying dozens of patients on flimsy or fraudulent grounds — a fear opponents of the measure expressed on the Senate floor.

"If there is a fraudulent certificate issued," Libassi asked, "does this mean we must declare the hospital in compliance?"

Southerners on the conference committee, especially Stennis, are expected to fight to the last to retain the amendment.

But moderates and liberals have already begun spreading the words that they think the amendment is more significant for its psychological impact than for its actual content.

BIG VICTORY

Stennis, who refused to see reporters about the measure Wednesday, had said earlier if HEW compliance officers were given the same instructions contained in his amendment, they weren't using them in the South.

Sen. Joseph Clark, D-Pa., who led the opposition to the amendment, said he thought it would "put in a loophole in the guidelines big enough to drive a Mack truck through."

Embarrassing CHAFE
Relieve painful itching, soothe quick!
Switch to super-refined hospital quality
MOROLINE
ONLY 17¢ White Petroleum Jelly®
Twice as much for 27¢

HOSPITALS

HEW Accepts Medical Segregation

By ART PINE
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Senate-House conferees Thursday scrapped a proposal that would have allowed hospitals to assign Negro and white patients to separate rooms for medical reasons without violating federal desegregation guidelines.

Instead, the conferees accepted a written promise from John W. Gardner, Health, Education and Welfare secretary, to permit segregation if medically necessary except when such cases amount to "a pattern" in any hospital.

The compromise was reached after a series of meetings between Gardner and Sen. John Stennis, D.-Miss., author of the proposal.

The Stennis amendment, tacked on to the HEW-Labor appropriations bill Sept. 28, had kept the $10.5 billion money bill in limbo more than three weeks.

Secretary Gardner

Sen. Stennis

All other differences between the Senate and House version had been resolved a few days after the measures passed both houses.

Gardner's promise, contained in a series of five letters, will be included in the printed conference report to be considered by both houses Friday. The Stennis amendment reportedly has been deleted.

As such, the Gardner letters will have no legal force, but will be part of the legislative history which courts can use later to interpret what the Senate meant.

It was apparently satisfactory to Stennis, who said he introduced his original amendment as "a humanitarian measure" to prevent compliance officers from taking action against hospitals which assign Negroes and whites to different rooms when integration would affect neither's health.

An HEW spokesman last week said compliance officers already had permitted segregation for medical reasons, but objected when the number of cases reached doubtful proportions.

The Stennis provision would have prohibited compliance officers from requiring integration where physicians and hospital medical officers certified it would be "contrary to the patient's physical or mental well-being."

It also would have relieved hospitals from responsibility for compliance so far as "certified" patients were concerned.

Opponents of the measure had feared Southern physicians would abuse the provisions by authorizing the segregation of hundreds of patients in each hospital.

The conferees, led by Rep. John E. Fogarty, D-R.I., had recessed for almost a week to wait for explanatory letters they had requested from Gardner.

The decision Thursday was considered a moral victory anyway for Stennis and other Southerners, including Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell, who supported him.

"Even if the language was not included directly in the report," said one Southerner, "we got the written promise from HEW."

HEW officials would not comment on the conferees' decision, which ostensibly is confidential until Friday morning.

HOSPITALS

Hospital Clause On Segregation

AC 10/22/66

HEW Pledge to Congress Suits Russell, Stennis

By ART PINE
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—A written promise that hospitals will be able to segregate Negro and white patients for medical reasons was routinely accepted by the House and Senate Friday as a substitute for a controversial amendment introduced by Sen. John Stennis, D.-Miss.

The promise, contained in a series of letters from Health, Education and Welfare Secretary John W. Gardner, was included in a conference report on the $10.5 billion HEW-Labor appropriations bill approved by voice vote in both houses.

The report, signed by Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell and other conferees, said Senate managers had only receded on the Stennis amendment after Gardner agreed to publish the letters.

Gardner's letters, each repeating substantially the same promises, said it was HEW policy to permit hospital officials to make segregated room assignments wherever there are "valid medical reasons or special compelling circumstances."

Gardner said compliance officers will definitely "honor determinations made by physicians that are based on a valid medical reason for making room assignments in a hospital on a segregated basis."

The secretary said that in deciding whether a hospital is complying with desegregation guidelines, officials will "disregard patient assignments made in accordance with a medical determination."

But, Gardner said, compliance officers will penalize any hospital in which segregation "is being practiced as a matter of policy by the flagrant misuse of medical determinations."

The understanding between Stennis and Gardner broke a deadlock over the Mississippian's amendment which had held up final action on the appropriations bill for more than three weeks.

In explaining the proposal on the floor Friday Stenn is said he thought the agreement generally follows the provisions of his amendment and "in some respects goes further."

The letters, although they don't have the legal force of an amendment, will be in effect a lot longer, Stennis said.

The amendment would have lasted only for the life of the appropriations bill, less than a year.

"In any case," Stennis said, "it will be but a few months before the entire matter will be before the Senate again, at which time we will have the opportunity to review and evaluate the situation."

Stennis said he was glad that Russell and Alabama Sen. Lester Hill, both conferees, were in the room when Gardner agreed to the compromise.

HEW officials also appeared to be satisfied with the agreement. Peter Libassi, Gardner's special assistant for civil rights, said the secretary took "great pleasure and satisfaction that the amendment had been eliminated.

"It would have opened the door to a serious disruption of enforcement of the guidelines," Libassi said, "and would have led hospital administrators to have false hope and encouragement that they could flout the guidelines."

Libassi was quick to say, however, that HEW did not consider the agreement a setback for Stennis.

He termed the exchange of letters between Stennis and Gardner "a full exploration of the problems involved."

"We shared the senator's concern," Libassi said. "We just don't think it was necessary to put the idea into legislation."

The Stennis provision would have prohibited compliance officers from requiring integration where physicians and hospital medical officers certified it would be contrary to the patient's physical or mental well-being.

It would also have relieved hospitals from responsibility for compliance so far as those certified patients were concerned.

Gardner's policy does not require certification, but allows the attending physicians, the medical staff or the hospital administrator's designee to make room assignments.

The secretary also said HEW has "no plans for modifying the guidelines," but "we do not contemplate any other change in regulations or guidelines affecting hospitals for the remainder of this fiscal year."

NURSING HOMES AND TITLE VI

Questions and Answers

Nursing Homes and Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964

NURSING HOMES that receive funds through federally aided programs such as Medicare or State welfare programs are covered by Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Title VI prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, or national origin in any program receiving Federal financial assistance. To help nursing homes understand the requirements of the law, the Public Health Service has answered questions posed by many nursing home administrators. These questions and answers are given here. If anyone has other questions or problems about Title VI, he can call on the Regional Program Director of the Office of Equal Health Opportunity in the nearest regional office of the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. These offices are located in Boston, New York, Charlottesville, Virginia, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City, Dallas, Denver and San Francisco.

1. How can a nursing home qualify for participation in Medicare under Title VI?

ANSWER: Each nursing home must provide an Assurance of Compliance (Form 441) and an Extended Care Facility Compliance Report (Form PHS–4888) concerning the policies and operation of the nursing home. These documents, which are part of the application for participation in Medicare (Title XVIII), will be forwarded to the Public Health Service. If the Assurance is acceptable, the Social Security Administration will be notified. If the forms raise any questions about discrimination or the home must take positive action before it is accepted, the Office of Equal Health Opportunity will notify the home promptly.

2. Will a nursing home that does not participate in Medicare but does receive vendor payments through public welfare have to meet the same standards of non-discrimination?

ANSWER: Yes, the same guides for non-discrimination apply to this home that apply to homes receiving Federal funds directly. The Public Health Service will be working with nursing homes that apply for participation in Medicare. The State welfare departments will be working with nursing homes that are receiving vendor payments for the care of welfare patients and will conduct routine on-site compliance reviews on a regular basis.

3. If a nursing home has never, or not recently, had a Negro patient but has signed the assurance form for participation, can it be cleared for compliance with Title VI?

ANSWER: The assurance of compliance could be accepted if the home adopts a non-discriminatory policy and has notified the public, its patients and its sources of referral that its services are available to all persons without regard to race, color, or national origin.

If the home does not publicize its policy, its assurance would not be accepted. There is a strong possibility that such a home would be identified for a follow-up visit to evaluate the results of its open policy. If, after a reasonable time has elapsed, the home still had no Negro patients, an on-site review would be made to find out whether minority groups are not cared for because of discriminatory practices by the home or its sources of referral.

4. How does a nursing home publicize its policy of non-discrimination?

ANSWER: This policy must be made known clearly to any prospective patients or sources of referral—especially those who may not have used the home in the past because of restrictive policies. The welfare department, hospitals, physicians, other social agencies and ministers, to name a few, are among those who usually refer patients. The minority groups who may not have used the home in the past should be notified. The home may do this through letters to civic and private organizations which have an active interest in equal opportunity and by a news release in the local newspaper. A copy of the written policy should be conspicuously displayed in the home so that patients and their visitors are aware of it. The Public Health Service has developed a model policy statement for the guidance of the nursing home administrator. Fundamentally, it is necessary that a clearly enunciated policy of non-discrimination in all aspects of nursing home activity is communicated to the community as a whole, individuals interested in treatment at the home, professional groups, and sources of patient referral.

5. If a nursing home does not plan to take part in Medicare or any federally financed program at the present time, can it qualify under Title VI at some later date?

ANSWER: Yes, if the nursing home receives no Federal funds directly or through State operated programs, it can qualify under Title VI and apply for participation in such programs at any time in the future. Qualification under Title VI will require the same policies and actions in the future as is required now.

6. If a third of the population in an area is Spanish-American or Negro, must a nursing home have the same proportion of patients?

ANSWER: No. Title VI is not being administered as a numbers game. The number of patients of any minority group that should be receiving services in the home is that number which would actually be there if there were no barriers to the admission on the basis of race, color, or national origin. If there is a great discrepancy between the make-up of the population in the service area and the proportion in the nursing home, it is necessary to determine if this is due to discriminatory practices.

7. If the sources of referral do not refer patients who are members of minority groups, what can the nursing home administrator do about it?

ANSWER: First, the administrator should make his open policy known to all his sources of referral. Secondly, he should seek out sources of referral which, in fact, are providing or referring patients without regard to race, color, or national origin. Although the administrator cannot force any source to refer patients to him on a nondiscriminatory basis, he can refuse or limit patients referred by such a discriminatory source and actively solicit the use of his home by sources that will refer without discrimination. Practically all hospitals and welfare departments are subject to Title VI because they already receive Federal payments.

8. If a nursing home has a long waiting list and has no applications from members of a minority group, how can it show that it is not in violation of the law?

ANSWER: Nursing homes can begin to solicit referrals from agencies or sources that will refer Negroes or other minority groups. When these patients are referred, they should be admitted to the home if there are beds available. If there are no beds available, these patients should be placed on the waiting lists and, once on, should not be passed over because of their race, color, or national origin. Whatever is good medical practice, of course, should still be followed, but a waiting list should not be used as a device to deny service to a person simply because of his race, color, or national origin. If the nursing home begins to take action now which will lead to full use of the home by all groups in the community, it will be cleared now.

9. Does Title VI require that every Negro in a nursing home be placed in a room with a white patient?

ANSWER: It is not necessary that each Negro patient be placed in a room with a white patient. It is important, in room assignment, just as in the delivery of services throughout the nursing home, that these services be provided without regard to the race, color, or national origin of the patient.

Nursing homes routinely take into consideration such factors as medical condition, room rates, age and sex in the assignment of rooms. These normal procedures which do not involve racial questions are permissible as long as the rules apply to both white and Negro patients alike and do not result in a pattern of segregated rooms, wings or floors.

10. If a physician believes that his patient should not be assigned to a room with someone of another race, can this be done?

ANSWER: Yes, in some cases there may be a valid medical reason or special compelling circumstances which would govern the assignment of a patient. But the assignment of patients may not be used as a device to evade compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

11. What is an administrator supposed to do if a patient refuses to share a room with a patient of another race?

ANSWER: In long term facilities, the problem of incompatibility is one with which nursing home administrators have been struggling for many years. Nursing home administrators have provided harmonious solutions for the health care problems of patients despite problems of incompatibility. In most of the circumstances arising in the area of Title VI compliance, they will be able to obtain patient cooperation so that the institution can be used freely by all.

We recognize that there will be instances where the prejudice of a particular patient will be so deep that it would be impossible from a practical or medical point of view to get him to accept a person of a different race, color, or national origin. In exceptional cases such as this, the occasional assignment or reassignment of a patient because of race will not be an act of noncompliance with Title VI; however, problems incident to room assignment may not be used to develop or maintain a pattern of segregation within the home or for the continued exclusion of persons based on their race, color, or national origin.

12. What if the nursing home serves only members of one religion or organization?

ANSWER: That nursing home would be treated like any other. If it provides services to all members of the religion or organization and the organization does not restrict its membership on the basis of race, color, or national origin, that nursing home would be in compliance. If the religion or organization does restrict its membership on the basis of race, color, or national origin, the nursing home could still comply with Title VI by making its services available to the community without discrimination.

13. Will the field staff of the Office of Equal Health Opportunity actually visit nursing homes?

ANSWER: Yes, members of the field staff will visit nursing homes throughout the country. Some of these visits will be made because of questions that arise from an evaluation of the compliance report submitted by the nursing homes. Others will come about because of complaints from minority groups. Others will be made as part of the agency's routine compliance activities to evaluate the total compliance in a given locality.

14. What kind of inspection does the Federal Government carry on in connection with Title VI?

ANSWER: Representatives of the Federal Government will notify the nursing home administrator in advance of the field visit unless there is considerable evidence that the nursing home deliberately concealed discrimination during a previous visit. With the administrator and his staff, the representatives will tour the facility to observe admission policies in practice, room assignments, use of service areas such as dining and recreation rooms, training programs and staff privilege practices. The survey teams will also visit sources of referral and minority group representatives in the community. The nursing home administrator will receive a notice of the findings of the visit.

15. What happens if a nursing home does not comply with Title VI?

ANSWER: It now appears as if many nursing homes have already taken some action to make sure that their services are available to all. For this, the entire community can be grateful. In the time left, the Public Health Service will do everything it can to help nursing homes come into compliance. If a nursing home does not comply with Title VI, it will not receive funds under the Medicare program and will not be able to receive funds under any other Federal Government program. State agencies like Welfare or Vocational Rehabilitation will discontinue using that nursing home.

If the nursing home participates in federally aided programs it must be willing to serve all patients in the community without regard to race, color, or national origin.

★ GPO: 1966 O—235-443

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE
Public Health Service
Office of Equal Health Opportunity

October 1966

NEGROES TO QUIT A WHITE SUBURB

HOUSING

Bakers Decide to Sell Their Home Near Philadelphia

Special to The New York Times

FOLCROFT, Pa., April 1 — Mr. and Mrs. Horace Baker, the Negro couple who became embroiled in violent racial demonstrations when they moved into the previously all-white Delmar village section of this borough in August, 1963, have decided to sell their house.

They say that "constant harassment" has made it impossible for them to remain in the Delaware County community of 1,500 two-story, row houses about five miles southwest of Philadelphia.

In announcing that the house at 2002 Heather Road had been put up for sale for $11,950, Mr. Baker said that he and wife, Sara, want to "get out as soon as possible" because their hope of being accepted by their neighbors had not been realized.

In recent weeks, Mr. Baker charged, neighborhood children have been greeting him with "Hey, Horace, when you moving" and "the native are getting restless again."

Mrs. Baker, a registered nurse at Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia, said that "after a while you take stock of yourself and what you really want for the children."

"We have noticed a change in our daughter Terri Lynn, 5 years old]. I think our continued emotional strain is affecting her."

The Bakers, who are 29 years old, also have a 17-month-old son, Horace Alexander.

Their neighbors denied the harassment charge today, but admitted that they would be "glad to see them go" because "it will be good for everybody's sake."

Mrs. D. Clark said she was "glad they are going for my kids' sake. They never bothered us, but I was raised with white children and I guess I'd just rather have my children grow up with white children."

A mother of four, who refused to give her name, said that she thought it was "the best thing that ever happened."

"If he needs help," she said, "I'm sure there'll be a lot of volunteers. They claim they're being harassed — by whom? Their children are out playing every day in good weather and nobody bothers them."

When the Bakers moved into Delmar Village crowds gathered outside, shouting insults and hurling rocks. The demonstrations continued for three days.

Police Restored Order

Before 150 state policemen restored order, vandals ripped out plumbing, destroyed the water heater and damaged the furnace. Other demonstrators, including many teen - agers, smashed windows with rocks, started a fire in a bedroom with garbage into the house.

The damage to the dwelling, which the Bakers purchased for $11,200 through the Veterans Administration, was placed at more than $2,000.

At the time Mr. Baker, a laboratory technician, was working for a Camden, N.J., condenser company. He refused to say where he is employed now and he also declined to disclose where he intended to move.

In November, 1963, Mr. Baker had a nervous breakdown and spent several days in Haverford State Hospital, a mental institution.

Two months ago he was charged with assault and battery on a Philadelphia policeman who arrested him on a charge of passing a stop light. He was indicted last Monday and is now awaiting trial.

Gay Street in St. Louis Isn't

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Gay Street in downtown St. Louis is anything but gay. It's a 350-yard side street, with dilapidated buildings and automobile parking lots.

HOUSING

Creative Venture in Housing

In the nation's capital churches and other groups have joined forces to help people leave slum living behind.

A. DUDLEY WARD

✦ IN AN EFFORT to make decent living conditions available to the economically, educationally and socially deprived among residents of the nation's capital, a new venture in housing has been launched by an interdenominational, interagency group representing a broad cross section of Washington's religious and civic life. The council of churches of Greater Washington, the archdiocesan council of Catholic men, the District of Columbia chapter of the American Jewish Committee, the local Episcopal diocese and All Souls Unitarian Church have joined forces with such organizations as the University Neighborhood's Council, the United Planning Organization, the Washington Urban League, the Brooke Society (a group of Catholic professional men) and Barney Neighborhood House. The over-all organization is known as COIN — Community Organizations for the Improvement of Neighborhoods, Inc.

The presence of the University Neighborhood's Council ensures that neighborhood people and volunteers will play an important role in the entire program. Begun in 1961 by a group of clergymen, it represents a unique grass-roots community voice. Its first president was the young Unitarian minister James Reeb, who was later slain while engaging in civil rights work in the south. Its energetic members are people who live and work in the area, developing meaningful personal relationships among neighbors, encouraging community awareness and involvement in mutual help. It establishes neighborhood clubs, nurtures grass-roots leadership, organizes volunteers and church support, and holds town hall meetings. It has been recognized nationally for its rare ability to involve the poor in the solution of their own problems. The United Planning Organization, funded by the Ford Foundation and federal antipoverty money, has committed itself to develop creative possibilities for social rehabilitation through such means as day care for children, adult education, family and job counseling and legal aid.

Squeezed Out by the Affluent

At the outset the sponsors of COIN faced certain acknowledged realities. Land values are so high in Washington that there is no possibility of building new, privately financed low or medium cost housing in the center of the city, where high-rise, expensive apartments are pushing out existing housing. Already such neighborhoods as Georgetown, Foggy Bottom, Capitol Hill and even Cardoza (where COIN will do its first work) are being pressured by the rapid growth of an affluent middle and upper class population. This pressure is squeezing the poor out of the central city into ever poorer and smaller areas where some kind of housing is still available to them. Public housing applications on file total about 6,000, and no real solution is in sight in that direction. Since there is no place for the poor to move, horrible overcrowding occurs. Another reality that must be faced is the fact that the poor do not want to move. All kinds of persons classed as poor or low income just don't want to move to the suburbs or other sections of the city. They want to live where they have been living, but they want to live decently.

Many of these people are not destitute or without guidance. For a typical example, consider the Conways, who pay $70 monthly for a kitchen and bedroom in a three-story building. With other residents — 18 in all — they share a bathroom located next door to their windowless bedroom. The Conways are not on relief; both husband and wife are employed, he as a construction worker, she as an elevator operator. They have not been poorly advised; their accommodations were obtained for them and their child by the alert staff of a well run housing center. The Conways are fortunate, for the center is able to place only 20 per cent of the people who apply to it. The Conways even had a choice between this and a similar apartment on another slum block — for $102.50, plus utilities. Meanwhile, they are only one of many such able families who are being forced to live in undesirable, dilapidated housing.

---

Mr. Ward, general secretary of the Methodist Board of Christian Social Concerns, with headquarters in Washington, D.C., is president of COIN, the organization of which he writes.

COIN's plan is to purchase for cash a number of large, rundown apartment buildings, completely rehabilitate them, then rent them to residents of the area on a nonprofit basis. With the necessary funds already provided through a combination of private and federal housing aid, COIN is already in business, actively negotiating to acquire its first properties. During rehabilitation it aims to keep dislocation at a minimum by utilizing several properties concurrently.

The purpose is to provide dramatic examples of how abject slum properties presently rented at rates beyond the reach of low income families can be transformed into model accommodations in the central city neighborhoods. Recent studies by the sponsors indicate that housing for families of this economic level, headed by workers both unskilled and semiskilled and hopefully by those on the way up as part of the great mobility of American life, is perhaps the most critical sociological need of the entire Washington metropolitan area.

Hopefully, Imitation Will Follow

The rehabilitation projects are intended also to serve as pilot models to inspire similar nonprofit and limited profit slum rehabilitation efforts by others, both locally and in other urban areas throughout the nation. The principle has been successfully tested in New York and Chicago, though not under such community sponsorship as has been mobilized in Washington. Long-term financing for such projects is available under the National Housing act through the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal National Mortgage Association at the below-market interest rate of 3 per cent. "Front money" to purchase the properties and process applications has been made available by local residents and church organizations.

COIN will try to induce private capital to become deeply involved. Surprisingly, of the first 12 persons approached to become guarantors of the initial front money, none refused. With this kind of involvement a new technique has been found whereby persons can put their credit at the disposal of such an organization with guaranteed reimbursement and without sacrificing any of the income they normally get from their securities and savings. This means that endowment or reserve funds of local churches or ecclesiastical bodies, or individual savings, can remain intact and simply be pledged as principal for the use of the housing corporation. It means that a revolving fund of credit can be created which will expand financial power beyond anything that is possible by means of any one source of funds.

It is evident that the need for housing is so great, the complexities in providing it so mammoth, that it is impossible for a small group such as a local church to handle it adequately. Certainly to make available the necessary amenities and services to encourage participatory growth by the people in need requires larger resources than small groups can muster. However, the tremendous resources available in money-lending institutions and real estate firms and in the services of contractors, architects and engineers can provide through nonprofit organizations like COIN the possibility for a major advance in securing housing through a constructive combination of private and public support.

COIN has determined to concentrate in one area initially, Cardoza, which is pivotal to the entire Washington metropolitan complex. Basically it will handle only properties of 100 or more apartments. This should make it possible to build a diverse, well balanced community with ranges of income, race, religion and culture.

The COIN idea gets around a real problem in regard to public housing. The nation has not yet arrived at the point where public housing is generally acceptable as a permanent way for people to live — this is attested by the tenants themselves. Nor have techniques been found whereby the pride of ownership most Americans have can be satisfied by public means. And there is still some stigma attached to dwelling in public housing. This unfortunate attitude must be overcome as public housing expands, hopefully becomes more desirable and offers more in the way of services.

More Than Bricks and Mortar

Housing is not simply a matter of bricks and mortar. Important human ingredients must be added such as good will and the hard work of many people representing a wide racial, social and economic spectrum. The opportunity for disadvantaged people to participate in a tenant council has been demonstrated as one of the most important early factors in the assumption of social and community responsibility. In addition, the possibility of ownership must be real, so that people who are now renting and who engage actively in the development of their projects can move from tenancy to ownership over a period of time. This incentive has been clearly indicated as a real factor in attaining economic mobility and social advance — even for the people most economically deprived.

COIN is not interested in cheap rehabilitation resulting in housing that barely conforms to code requirements. People must have housing of which they are proud, with recreational and other facilities and services and at rents less than they must now pay for deteriorated, substandard apartments. This becomes possible because of the nonprofit character of the enterprise, the saving realized when large restorations are forwarded, the financing now available at 3 per cent interest under Section 221D3 of the Housing act and the use of rent subsidies as they become operative through law.

The sponsors of COIN know that their own involvement in operation of the project may in the long run turn out to be even more important than the physical transformation and the financing economies that will be possible. For the more fortunate — the people in the churches and other organizations involved — will have a direct involvement with the poor at points that are really significant — economic aid and personal service provided under professionally trained people who are available through such groups as the United Planning Organization.

Benefits Beyond the Immediate

While operating its own properties COIN will make every effort to encourage the business community to interest itself constructively in the unprecedented demand for low income housing. The same 3 per cent federally subsidized financing used by COIN is available for such purposes to limited dividend profit-making enterprises. When funded by Congress the new federal rent subsidy program may afford still another avenue by which COIN can offer greater benefits and can seek to interest landlords who operate deteriorated properties, harassed by tenant problems and violations, in finding a way out of their dilemma.

The road to better housing is not an easy one. All who have been involved with COIN have found in the stark realities of the housing jungle difficulties almost beyond comprehension. They are shocked at the prevalence of incredible greed, inhumanity and crooked dealings. They discover that owners, real estate operators and money lenders have exploited the housing market for capital gains and operating profits while mining the physical facilities. They are distressed by the unconscionable extraction of fees, commissions and rents from properties and people they come across as they attempt to negotiate and implement plans. Almost prohibitive except for people of tough fiber is the intolerable amount of red tape involved in the process of obtaining federal funds.

But it is only as the private sector, combining efforts with the public sector, begins to put the brakes on some of the things that have been happening and sets out to change the direction which has prevailed in urban housing that long-range achievement will be possible. Hopefully the entire undertaking will mean for the churches the difference between submitting to factors which are debilitating for all concerned, especially for the people in need of housing, and becoming so deeply involved that they will never again be able to move from the place where real action is.

Copyright © 1966
Christian Century Foundation

Reprinted with permission from

The Christian Century

April 20, 1966

Single copy, 10¢
Quantity prices on request

For additional copies, write to
THE AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE
Institute of Human Relations
165 East 56 Street
New York, N. Y. 10022

May 1966

Realty Board Is Leading Drive Against U.S. Housing Bias Ban

HOUSING 5/24/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 23 — "Don't you agree," asked the letter from Ottumwa, Iowa, "it is about time that the civil rights hysteria be brought under control and we return to constitutional government?"

The letter, written by J. L. Harness, president of the Ottumwa Board of Realtors, was one of several hundred received by members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees in opposition to the open housing section of the Administration's Civil Rights Bill.

James A. Lynch, a real estate agent in Conshohocken, Pa., wrote:

"If this act is passed, we may as well repeal the Bill of Rights."

An anonymous card from California said:

"I have my life savings in an apartment house and will go broke if I can't choose who I rent to."

A large segment of the real estate industry seems to be aroused by the legislation, which is intended to ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

Much of the opposition was generated by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which has called on its 83,000 members to convince Congress that the proposal is "inherently evil and would sound the death knell of the right of private property ownership."

Allen L. Emlen of Philadelphia, chairman of the association's Washington Committee, will be the first opposition witness to the bill tomorrow before a House Judiciary subcommittee.

For the last three weeks the subcommittee has heard from proponents of the legislation.

The association called for a nationwide lobbying and letter-writing campaign in a May 4 bulletin sent to 1,500 real estate boards. "This forced housing law," the association said, "should be rejected so decisively as to end for all time any attempt to accomplish this objective through Federal law."

According to the association, the legislation is the first civil rights measure "which purports to grant one group an alleged 'right' by trampling on the rights of others."

Under Title IV of the Civil Rights Bill, an aggrieved party could sue in state or Federal court for a restraining order against an owner, broker or lending institution accused of discriminating on grounds of race, color, religion or national origin. The court would have authority to award the plaintiff punitive damages up to $500.

Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach has testified that the does not anticipate a rash of lawsuits if the bill passes. He said he expects widespread, voluntary compliance as was achieved under the public accomodations sections of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

A number of states have open housing laws with enforcement provisions much stronger than those in the proposed Federal law. However, most state laws exempt one or two-dwelling units.

For this reason, the association said, the Federal bill "is more drastic than any of the existing state-enacted forced housing laws."

A spokesman for the House Judiciary Committee, headed by Representative Emanuel Celler of Brooklyn, said most of the opposition had come from real estate interests but that there had been some mail from home owners. The spokesman added, however, that a number of home builders had informed the committee that the bill should be passed to eliminate race as a competitive factor in sales.

A large segment of the interests who would come under provisions of the legislation have taken no stand on the legislation. This includes the American Association of Home Builders, bankers and other lending interests.

One committee member said the silence of many interests added to the uncertainty over the fate of the bill. Members say there is much opposition to the housing section and that many membebrs who would feel obligated to vote for it are hoping that in an election year it will not be brought to a vote.

Representative Robert W. Katsenmeier, Democrat of Wisconsin said there had been generally less interest in the bill among the people than in civil rights bills of past years. In addition to affecting housing, the bill contains provisions for ending racial discrimination on juries and for strengthening Federal laws against harming Negroes and civil rights workers.

HOUSING

NCDH

TRENDS IN HOUSING

NATIONAL COMMITTEE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING
347 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10016 • LIS 5-0660

VOLUME X, NUMBER 5 • JULY 1966 • 50¢ A YEAR

White House Meeting Asks Vast Reforms

Realtors' Anti-FH Drive

Scare Propaganda Claims Rights Act Hits 'Basic' Freedom

LATE BULLETIN. Washington, June 29—The House Committee on the Judiciary today approved an amended 1966 Civil Rights Bill. Title IV (fair housing section) was amended to provide an enforcement agency, but would exempt most sales of existing housing.

Under the pretext of preserving "basic freedoms," an all-out campaign is being waged by the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB) to defeat pending Federal legislation aimed at protecting the freedom of Negroes and other minorities to compete for housing under the same conditions as other Americans.

Seeking to rally its 1,500 local real estate boards and their 83,000 realtor-members, NAREB has launched a national drive to get property owners to flood Congress with letters protesting enact-

Continued on page 4

Brazil Search Finds Stephen M. Rutledge

Stephen Rutledge, son of the NCDH Executive Director, ill and missing in northern Brazil where he was on a Peace Corps assignment, was found in a rural area of Brazil on June 17 after an intensive search by Peace Corpsmen, Brazilian authorities and his father. He is recovering in a Washington hospital.

Continued on page 7

Sets 4 Major Program Goals To Erase Ghetto Way of Life

The most sweeping recommendations for action to wipe out the ghetto way of life ever developed by any Government-related body came out of the recent White House Conference on Civil Rights, which brought together 2,600 people representing all segments of American society.

Titled "To Fulfill These Rights," the purpose of the meeting had been stated by President Johnson in his historic Howard University address on June 4, 1965, when he announced plans for calling the conference. The objective, the President said, would be to chart a course of action to make it possible for Negro Americans "to move beyond opportunity to achievement."

Major Housing Goals

These are the major housing goals set forth by the Conference:

¶ Freedom of choice—an absolutely open, racially unrestricted market in which housing is affirmatively merchandised to families and persons of all racial groups.

¶ An adequate and expanding supply of new housing units for low and moderate income families—widely dispersed throughout each metropolitan area.

¶ Racially inclusive suburban communities and new towns.

¶ Revitalization and integration of the existing ghetto areas.

In proposing specific action to achieve these goals, the Conference outlined a vast program of social and economic reform to be undertaken by the Federal Government, state and local governments, the housing industry, and private citizens. Highlights from these proposals appear later in this report.

A 30-member Council, chaired by Ben W. Heineman, head of the Chicago & North Western Railway Company, and A. Philip Randolph, President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, prepared and submitted to the delegates a report and recommendations for action in four major program areas: housing, education, economic security and welfare, and administration of justice.

In each of these subject areas,

Continued on page 7

VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT H. HUMPHREY addresses the 2,600 leaders who attended the White House Civil Rights Conference. Participants were broadly representative of all segments of the American community from captains of industry to resident-leadership from the nation's poverty areas.

Wilkins Appeals to Fair Housing Forces

Roy Wilkins, Executive Director of NAACP and Chairman of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, an affiliation of 100 organizations spearheading the campaign for enactment of the 1966 Civil Rights Act, is calling on citizens across the country to send letters and telegrams immediately to their Senators and Congressmen urging passage of the entire bill, including Title IV, the housing section.

"Every individual member of every local fair housing group, of every civil rights organization, and of every religious institution; every enlightened educator, businessman, banker, real estate man, lawyer and worker—indeed, every American who honestly believes in a system of justice and genuine equality of opportunity should get in touch with his Senator and Congressman today, urging passage of comprehensive Federal fair housing legislation with effective machinery for enforcement," Mr. Wilkins declares. "It is imperative that the voices of millions of responsible and concerned citizens be heard in the Halls of Congress at once."

HOUSING PACT SET, DR. KING CALLS OFF CHICAGO MARCHES

He Hails 10-Point Program and 'Defers' Rights Rally by 3,000 in Cicero

REALTY MEN BACK PLAN

HOUSING

Civic and Religious Leaders Agree on Steps to End Residential Prejudice

NYT 8/27/66

By JACQUES NEVARD

Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 — The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. announced today a halt in street demonstrations against housing bias in the Chicago area.

Dr. King made the announcement after his team of civil rights workers had reached a unanimous agreement with civic officials and real estate interests on a 10-point program designed to end discrimination in residential renting and sales.

The rights leader hailed the accord as "the most significant program ever conceived to make open housing a reality in the metropolitan area."

He said that as a sign of the Chicago Freedom Movement's good faith that the agreement would be carried out, it would "defer" its plans to send 3,000 marchers into the all-white suburb of Cicero Sunday.

Marches Could Resume

Gov. Otto Kerner later called off plans to send National Guard troops into Cicero to prevent violence.

Dr. King, whose Southern Christian Leadership Conference chose Chicago as its test case in a campaign against anti-Negro bias in the North, said the open housing marches would be halted only "so long as the program is being carried out."

Meanwhile, he said, he will remain in Chicago and work toward ending discrimination against Negroes in employment and education.

"We are still a long way from our goal," he said.

He declined to rule out demonstrations and marches to back up Negro demands for greater economic opportunity and better schooling.

The 10-point agreement to end housing bias was reached this morning by Dr. King, Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago and Ross Beatty, head of the Chicago Real Estate Board. The meeting was sponsored by the Chicago Conference on Race and Religion.

Continued on Page 17, Column 7

Dr. King Halts Chicago Protests As Housing Accord Is Reached

Continued From Page 1, Col. 1

Essentially the 10 points provide for better implementation and enforcement of fair housing laws, along with increased educational and moral pressure by religious, civic and union leaders.

79 Attend Meeting

Seventy-nine persons were present at the two and a half hour meeting in the Palmer House, and none voted against the proposed accord, which was worked out yesterday by a 20-member subcommittee.

A key point in the settlement was the announcement by the Real Estate Board that "in a significant departure from its traditional position" it would "withdraw all opposition to the philosophy of open occupancy legislation at the state level provided it is applicable to owners as well as brokers."

That language satisfied the civil rights team despite the reservation by the board of "the right to criticize detail as distinguished from philosophy" and its unwillingness to drop its appeal of a circuit court decision upholding the validity of Chicago's three-year-old fair housing ordinance.

Another point in the 11-page agreement provided that the Chicago Commission on Human Relations open proceedings on its own against brokers who failed to comply with the city's fair housing laws and that brokers found guilty of violations would have their licenses suspended or revoked.

Other points were as follows:

¶A pledge by the Chicago Housing Authority to begin "a leasing program which places families in their best available housing without regard to the racial character of the neighborhood."

¶A statement by the Cook County Board of Commissioners that the County Department of Public Aid would seek the best housing for aid recipients regardless of location and that "the department will not be satisfied if recipients live in less satisfactory accommodations than would be available to them if they were of a different race, color or national origin."

¶A promise that in relocating families the Department of Urban Renewal would place each family, regardless of color, in the best available housing, irrespective of its location.

¶An affirmation by the Cook County Council of Insured Savings Associations and the Chicago Mortgage Bankers Association that their policy was "to lend mortgage money to all qualified families, without regard to race, for the purchase of housing anywhere in the metropolitan area."

¶A statement from the Department of Justice that Assistant Attorney General Roger Wilkins of the Community Relations Service would look into the question of continued service by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to financial institutions found guilty of racial discrimination in providing public financial services.

¶Pledges from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, the Chicago Federation of Greater Chicago, the Chicago Board of Rabbis and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, which co-sponsor the Chicago Conference on Religion and Race, to use their full strength "in effecting equal access to housing in the metropolitan area for all people." The organizations said they would establish within 30 days one or more housing centers to provide information and help to minority families.

¶Pledges from participating secular groups, including representatives of commerce, industry, banking and labor, to secure the support of their organizations for the fair housing program.

¶The formation by the Chicago Conference on Religion and Race of a continuing body of representatives of religious and secular groups to "accept responsibility for the education and action programs necessary to achieve fair housing."

The accord was announced by Ben W. Heineman, chairman and chief executive officer of the Chicago and North Western Railway, who was chairman of the meeting.

ART BEAM-LITE

Gives Dramatic Lighting Effects: To Paintings, Sculptures, Art Objects

This compact fixture casts a concentrated beam of light on your most treasured art objects. Used in fine homes, museums, galleries, and by interior decorators, it is fully adjustable to project round, rectangular or oblong light beams. No beam overflow on wall. Easy to move. Also attaches to wall or ceiling. 5" high. Projects up to 20 feet distance. Only $17.50 each 2 for $32.50. Add $1 pstg. and handling each. Complete Satisfaction Guaranteed.

John Boston Esq.
Dept. T138A, Wellesley, Mass. 02181

(Cliff's draft) HOUSING Sept. 26, 1966

MEMO TO Bob Anderson
Paul Anthony
Glenda Bartley
John Boone
Vernon Jordan
Ed Stanfield
Al Ulmer
Emory Via

I must have your answer by Thursday morning.

H E L P.

solve problems of equal opportunity in housing and urban facilities

please comment and return to me

FROM: ~~SRB~~
Susan Bresler

How to get equal opportunity in housing and urban facilities

W H O

Federal government:	Congress, HUD, OEO, HEW, BPR, BOR, et al*
State government:	legislature, colleges & universities, trade schools & junior colleges
Local government:	City Council, citizen advisory committee, urban renewal staff; school board
civil rights groups:	SRC, human relations councils, Voters League, Urban League, NAACP, SCLC, CORE, SNCC; neighborhood organization in urban renewal area community groups:	churches; labor unions; civic clubs; business & industry

W H A T

1. National fair housing law	Congress
2. Federal-program-information agency with free telephone	Congress
3. Workable program requirement for neighborhood organization and self-survey in urban renewal area	HUD
4. Amendment to Housing Act directing CAP housing education component in urban renewal area	Congress-HUD
5. Fund Community Service Programs (Higher Education Act of 1965) and Training and Fellowship Programs (Housing Act of 1964): professional planning education training for planning, renewal,	Congress-HUD codes staff
6. Grants and technical assistance to local school boards for citizen education, from the first grade through adult education	Congress-HUD-HEW-local school board
7. Grants to states to revise local property tax systems	Congress-HUD
8. Grants to states for revolving funds and technical assistance to go to communities to coordinate Federal programs	Congress-HUD-OEO-HEW-BPR-BOR et al-state government
9. Funds for local public information program under Urban Planning Program Guide	HUD

* Abbreviations are listed in the back.

10. Use of students in housing information program — citizen advisory committee-urban renewal staff

11. Coordination between HUD and SRC on urban renewal areas, including intern exchange — HUD-SRC

12. Housing resources service and field programs: explanation of programs, constant vigil — SRC-civil rights groups

13. State fair housing law and enabling legislation for local governments — State legislature

14. Local fair housing law — City Council

15. Community workshops in housing-intergroup relations: — Community groups
    - communication between white and Negro leaders
    - endorse open housing policies
    - forum for problems of realtors, builders, developers, and lending institutions
    - low-cost housing programs

W H Y

1. National fair housing law
   a. Open housing laws aren't being initiated by state and local governments in the South. So, the initiative reverts to the Federal government.
   b. Negroes don't have equal access to rentals, to owner homes, to property, or to urban facilities. By urban facilities I mean streets, utilities, police and fire protection, garbage pickup, parks, playgrounds, code enforcement.
   c. The goals of equal opprotunity already established in employment and education aren't possible without, at at the same time, equal housing opportunity.
   d. The incentive for people to improve their own homes and neighborhoods is stifled when these people don't have access to the resources for self-improvement and neighborhood improvement.

2. Federal-program-information agency with free telephone
   One of the key problems with housing, planning, and renewal programs is that people don't understand what these programs are all about, including the City employees. This agency would make it possible for anyone with a question to get a quick answer at no cost.

3. Workable program requirement for neighborhood organization and self-survey in urban renewal area
   a. Planning experts like James Cunningham recommend neighborhood organization for better planning and for involving the people in renewal areas in programs to improve their neighborhoods.

b. The self-survey makes it possible for residents to determine their own needs, rather than waiting until the relocation phase of urban renewal to reveal their problems of inadequate employment and education.

4. Amendment to Housing Act directing CAP housing education component in urban renewal area

a. This type of amendment was used to get the Small Business Administration to make their services available to businesses in urban renewal areas. The same thing could be done to make OEO programs available to urban renewal area residents.

b. One of the key problems with housing and urban renewal programs is that the residents of renewal areas don't understand the programs. This makes relocation difficult. A housing education program could teach residents how to get good relocation housing.

5. Fund Community Service Programs (Higher Education Act of 1965) and Training and Fellowship Programs (Housing Act of 1964) professionsl planning education:

Planners are in short supply.

training for planning, renewal, codes staff:

It is already possible to give City employees a small amount of training under the Urban Planning Assistance Program. But this is not nearly enough training to equip City employees to do the job adequately.

6. Grants and technical assistance to local school boards for citizen education, from the first grade through adult education

For an example of this kind of program, see Corinth, Mississippi's proposal in their Community Renewal Program.

9. Funds for local public information program under Urban Planning Program Guide.

This Guide lists projects that are eligible for Federal funds under the Urban Planning Assistance Program, administered by URA. Local information programs are generally haphazard and inadequate. These funds would make it possible for communities to get professional help in explaining housing, planning, and renewal programs to the people in the community.

10. Use of students in housing information program.

For example, student teachers could get college credit for conducting classes and workshops explaining housing programs.

11. Coordination between HUD and SRC on urban renewal areas, including intern exchange

a. For example, where there is a Federal program in a community and the residents of a project don't understand

back of page 2

7. Grants to states to revise local property tax systems

The Training and Fellowship programs already make it possible for states to study tax systems. But 1) this program hasn't been funded; and 2) this program requires equal matching funds from the states. a 90% to 100% Federal grant to revise property tax systems is likely to be more effective than 50-50 matching funds.

8. Grants to states for revolving funds and technical assistance to communities to coordinate Federal programs.

a Federal agency may run out of funds before its next appropriation from Congress. Applications from cities pile up in the interim. State revolving funds could fill the gap between appropriations.

(con't back page 3)

back of page 3

(8 cont)

also, different Federal agencies are funded at different times of the year. So, State revolving funds could help communities coordinate urban renewal (URA) and anti-poverty (OEO) programs for example. At the same time, states could help communities develop and plan programs that ~~require~~ use funds from different Federal agencies.

the program, SRC, through the local human relations council, could explain the program and urge residents to seek better housing.

b. Interns from HUD can become more familiar with the problems of minority groups by working with SRC for part of their training period.

12. Housing resourees service and field programs explanation of programs:

Literature and workshops can explain housing, planning, and renewal programs to civil rights groups.

constant vigil:

SRC can also explain the rights of citizens under these programs.

13. State fair housing law and enabling legislation for local governments:

a. Even if a national law exists, states can experiment in ways to implement equal housing opportunity.

b. States may have special problems, say in employment or education, that they can handle best at the state level, in solving housing problems.

c. States can handle certain housing problems that neither the Federal government nor the cities can handle. For example, uniform building codes.

d. There are certain problems communities can handle themselves, except where urban development goes beyond the city limits. States can help out across jurisdictional lines.

14. Local fair housing law

Equal opportunity in housing and urban facilities depends, in the final analysis, on communtiies. It is the cities that plan the streets and the schools, attract the industry, and set the goals for urban living.

15. Community workshops in housing-intergroup relations:

communication between white and Negro leaders:

Although the Workable Program provides for a subcommittee on minority group housing, the subcommittee rarely meets with the larger citizens advisory committee. So, the need for white and Negro leaders to communicate remains.

endorse open housing policies:

Equal housing opportunity depends on strong citizen support and broad community understanding. Community groups can make open housing an ~~acti~~ issue.

forum for problems of realtors, builders, developers, and lending institutions:

Community groups can pressure these ~~groups~~ people to attempt to provide open housing.

low-cost housing programs:

Community groups can take more initiative in developing low-cost housing programs.

Abbreviations

CAP - Community Action Program (war on poverty)
HUD - Department of Housing and Urban Development
URA - Urban Renewal Administration of HUD
OEO - Office of Economic Opportunity
HEW - Department of Heath, Education, and Welfare
BPR - Bureau of Public Roads
BOR - Bureau of Outdoor Recreation

SRC - Southern Regional Council
NAACP - National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
SCLC - Southern Christian Leadership Conference
CORE - Congress of Racial Equality
SNCC - Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee

JUSTICE

clipped dup

Los Angeles Times ★

2 Part I—SUN., JUNE 13, 1965

Jim Crow Justice

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—For five days now a dozen Negroes had come to the Madison County Courthouse in Danielsville, Ga. (population 360). They climbed an outsi stairway to the courtroom, stooped to avoid a low cei ing and stepped into a darkened balcony to watch th the Ku mu r trial of two them

A series of articles reprinted from the Los Angeles Times

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times, Sunday, June 13, 1965

JIM CROW JUSTICE

LAST STRONGHOLD OF SEGREGATION

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—For five days now a dozen Negroes had come to the Madison County Courthouse in Danielsville, Ga. (population 360). They climbed an outside stairway to the courtroom, stooped to avoid a low ceiling and stepped into a darkened balcony to watch the murder trial of two members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Below them the Negroes could see the defendants, Joseph Sims and Cecil Myers, smiling and waving at fellow klansmen in the crowded, all-white room.

Outside, darkness began to fall and the Negroes showed signs of apprehension. Once in a while white faces turned upward to peer at the balcony. The black faces, leaning over the rail, withdrew quickly.

All-White Jury

It was Sept. 4, 1964. The trial for the murder of Lemuel A. Penn, a Washington, D.C., public school official, was about to go to an all-white jury.

The state had built a case that the defendants, as part of a conspiracy to intimidate and kill Negroes, had ambushed Penn on the night of July 11, as he drove through northeast Georgia en route to Washington after reserve officers' training at Ft. Benning, Ga.

In less than two hours the defense had presented its evidence. Sims and Myers spent less than 30 seconds each making unsworn statements (allowed under Georgia law) denying the murder.

Conviction Unlikely

Regardless of the evidence, nobody—least of all the Negroes in the balcony—thought seriously that white men could be convicted of murdering a Negro in Madison County—not even if the victim happened to be a distinguished educator, a decorated combat veteran of World War II, a lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve, and just passing through.

In an hour-long racist argument, a defense attorney five times emphasized the Anglo-Saxon blood of the jurors and shouted that FBI agents, on orders of President Johnson to "bring us white meat," had "infiltrated" Madison County.

The prosecutor had argued for a verdict "that will not be the ridicule of this country."

Negroes Slip Away

When the case went to the jury fewer than 12 Negroes remained in the balcony. In groups of two and three they began to slip down the stairway.

When the jury returned and acquitted the two white men, the courtroom was packed — but the balcony was empty. This was no time for a Negro to be in the courthouse—not even in the Jim Crow balcony.

What happened in the Madison County courthouse nine months ago is not unusual—or extreme. The fact is that in Madison County and in many other southern counties there is no time for a Negro to be at the courthouse except as a defendant, witness—or taxpayer.

Excluded From Juries

Both by conscious efforts of segregationist officials and by the use of systems hatched in a Jim Crow society, Negroes are excluded from juries in many areas of the South—even from some federal juries.

Although court decisions and laws have assured Negroes equal seating on buses and even in pri-

---

The origin of the term "Jim Crow" as applied to segregation practices is lost in obscurity, according to C. Vann Woodward, a leading historian of the South.

In "The Strange Career of Jim Crow," Woodward noted that Thomas D. Rice wrote a song and dance called "Jim Crow" in 1832, and the term had become an adjective by 1838.

Writers later applied the term to newly enacted segregation laws and ever since it has been used to identify such statutes and practices.

---

vately owned restaurants, they still must sit in segregated sections in many county courtrooms in the South.

A survey in Alabama, for example, indicated that almost 90% of the state's judges enforced segregation in their courtrooms.

The processes of justice, so often perverted to "protect the southern way of life" remain the South's last stronghold of segregation and discrimination by government.

U.S. Does Little

The federal government has done little to lift this yoke from the Negro's neck.

Congress has paid the problem scant attention. The Justice Department has been heavily involved with other civil rights problems. The federal judiciary has some housecleaning of its own to do.

Criminal and civil remedies on the lawbooks have not been used.

The Justice Department has intervened in individual cases but has never studied the problem in detail and neither has Congress. For that matter, civil rights organizations have done little beyond appealing injustices in individual cases.

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission has developed more information about Jim Crow justice—and documented more cases of its injustices than any other agency. But the commission's pleas for Congress and the Justice Department to take steps to change this system have gone largely unanswered.

As a result, a double standard of justice exists—one for whites and one for Negroes.

The frustrations of the system are reflected in the growth of the Deacons, a secret order of armed Negroes, and in the rising militancy of the Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee (SNICK) and the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE).

Needs Urgent

The need for reform is urgent, for without an impartial system of justice, the Negro's right to protest discrimination and his right to enjoy his newly won freedoms are hampered severely.

Awareness of the need is growing even in the South. Here, some political leaders, uncomfortable over the spotlight that Ku Klux Klan killings have put on the system of justice, acknowledge that the time for reform is at hand.

An appellate court judge in a southern state, appalled by the system's injuries, said in an interview:

"I'm surprised the Negroes have not done more in this field. Lunch counter sit-ins may be important, but what's more important than justice?

'Matter of Freedom'

"This is a matter of freedom or imprisonment and life or death."

The judge asked not to be identified or even have his state identified.

"It would be political suicide if I openly spoke that way," he said.

In 1963, Charles Morgan Jr., a white attorney representing Boaz Sanders, a Negro accused of murdering a white man in Birmingham, filed a motion to quash the indictment.

Complete Segregation

Morgan's motion carried Sanders from arrest by white officers and transportation in a segregated paddy wagon, driven by a white man, to a segregated jail staffed solely by whites, to a courthouse of all-white officials and all-white jurors where Negro spectators are segregated.

The motion noted that if sentenced to prison Sanders would be segregated with other Negroes in an institution staffed entirely by whites.

"If he receives the death penalty," the motion continued, "he will then be given a last meal by his white guards, visited by a white chaplain, shaved by a white barber, and taken by white guards to a yellow electric chair in Kilby Prison . . . the chair being the only facility in Alabama justice which is and has always been desegregated . . .

"A button or switch will be pressed or pulled by a white man, before white witnesses, and the condemned will die. Being in indigent circumstances, he will thereafter be buried in a potter's grave in a racially segregated cemetery, provided by the State of Alabama."

Conditions have changed but little in Alabama since that state's advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission reported in 1961 "frequent and flagrant miscarriages of justice and maladministration of the courts in the state."

Issues Raised

At the same time the Mississippi Advisory Committee reported receiving "many and at times unbelievable reports of atrocities and brutalities perpetrated by elected and appointed public officials in the capacity of law enforcement officers and under color of law."

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission has said that segregation of Negroes in justice facilities, such as police stations, courthouses and prisons—as well as exclusion of Negroes from service as police officers, prosecutors, judges and jurors—raises "equal protection" issues.

The commission reported that 87% of county jail facilities and 93% of state penal institutions in southern and border states were segregated.

The survey showed 63% of the courthouses had segregated rest rooms and 17% had segregated courtrooms.

In some areas of the South the system is so loaded against the Negro that his only choice may be to throw himself on the mercy of the courts.

A parole official for a southern state says: "Ignorant Negroes often waive their rights to a grand jury hearing, plead guilty to an accusation drawn by a county prosecutor, and hope for the best.

"This doesn't necessarily mean the Negro is guilty. It might mean he prefers to seek leniency instead of fighting the charge in a white man's court."

A Negro who understands his rights and insists on a grand jury indictment before trial may be dissuaded from this course in some rural counties by a prosecutor's emphasis on the fact that he would have to remain in jail several months awaiting the next session of the grand jury.

Railroading Noted

That innocent Negroes sometimes are railroaded to prisons and convict work camps is a fact obvious to anyone who has studied Jim Crow justice or even compared a cross-section of cases involving Negro defendants with a cross-section of similar cases involving white defendants.

Negroes frequently are convicted of manslaughter —and sometimes murder—for traffic accidents fatal to white persons. Reverse the races and there are no charges, much less trials and convictions.

The fact is that despite no reference to race in state murder laws, a white man just isn't convicted of murder, no matter how heinous the crime, when the victim is a Negro.

On the other hand, when both victim and offender are Negroes, the outcome depends not so much on the evidence as on other considerations: Was the victim a "good" Negro who gave nobody any "trouble" while the offender was not well liked by whites?

In that case the punishment could be severe. Especially if the victim worked for one of the community's leading white citizens.

Or was the victim a "no-count" Negro and the offender well liked by the white community? In that case it obviously was justifiable homicide.

Charles Morgan Jr., the attorney who represented Boaz Sanders and who now is southern director for the American Civil Liberties Union, says:

"The best defense in a southern court when you have a Negro client charged with murdering another Negro, is to bring in the client's white employer and have him testify 'he's a good nigger, honest and does his job.' "

Morgan, who represented many Negroes while practicing law in Birmingham, said:

"There are certain crimes involving Negroes that white juries just won't punish. Sometimes arrests are not even made.

"In practice there is no such thing as raping a Negro in some communities; it simply is not recognized as a crime. In many cases of murder and assault, the jury decides it's 'just another nigger stabbing.' "

As the South's most impregnable bastions of official segregation, courthouses and law enforcement agencies are deeply rooted in the region's attachment to racial values and its tendency to justify injustices in the name of those values.

W. J. Cash in his classic study, "Mind of the South," wrote of injustices to southern whites in Reconstruction era courts:

"For 10 years the courts of the South were in such hands that no loyal white man could hope to find justice in them as against any Negro or white-creature of Yankee policy; for 20 years and longer they continued, in many courts, to be in such hands that such justice was at least doubtful."

As southern whites gradually regained control of the courts, the Negro became "almost open game. For, from being places where no loyal white man could find justice, they turned now, and naturally into being places where no black man would find it."

Cash wrote that because of Reconstruction and the economic purposes of the South, southern courts "had become and largely remain to this day places in which the Negro could count on little consideration."

Some changes have taken place since Cash's book was published a quarter of a century ago. Negroes serve on juries in some places, especially in urban areas. A few Negroes serve as law enforcement officers, although in some places they lack authority to arrest whites.

The changes are relatively minor, however. Jim Crow still clings to the courthouse as to no other area of government.

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times, Monday, June 14, 1965

JIM CROW JUSTICE

COURTS CALLOUS, OFFICIAL ASSERTS

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA — You might say it was a case of conscience.

In a state capitol building in the South, a state official and a reporter were poring over records of criminal cases. They had waited until it was dark outside because the official had wanted it that way.

"When it comes to the Negro, the callousness of some courts is unbelievable," he had said. "Certainly I'll help you all I can. I can show you plenty of cases. But come at night."

Politically he could not afford to be identified with an attempt to pinpoint the evils of Jim Crow justice which pervades southern courthouses, enforcing segregation with a cruel double standard of crime and punishment.

But he wanted to help because the injustices of the system sickened him.

'Don't Identify State'

"Don't even identify the state," the official said as he handed the reporter a stack of records. "It's immaterial anyway. The same things happen in other states."

The records covered more than 50 recent cases either from the standpoint of trial and sentencing or parole action.

A teen-age Negro boy, who had never been in trouble, was hunting when a gang of white boys on a drinking binge happened by and decided to "devil" him. One of them grabbed his gun and it accidentally fired, killing the son of a leading citizen.

An all-white jury convicted the Negro of murder and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

"If the boy had been white," a witness said, "he never would have been tried."

An elderly white woman, jaywalking despite being warned repeatedly by police, was killed when she walked into the side of a car driven by a Negro. No case was made immediately, but several days later, after pressure by the woman's relatives, the Negro was charged with manslaughter.

Rather than face an all-white jury, the defendant pleaded guilty and received a five-year sentence. A local police official called it a "raw deal" and said the woman's death was "strictly accidental," but the Negro went to prison.

Hope for Mercy

The state official declared that because Negroes fear the courts, even when innocent, they often gamble with a guilty plea in hopes the white judge will show more mercy than a white jury. This is a long shot at best.

In one case, a Negro pleaded guilty to charges involving two minor burglaries and received two 15-year sentences to run concurrently. Leaving the courtroom the defendant muttered that the judge "really stuck it to me."

The judge overheard the remark and ordered the sentences to run consecutively—doubling the prison time to 30 years.

A young Negro man who had not been in trouble previously was standing in his yard when his white employer came with a gun and started pistol whipping him because of an alleged debt. For slashing his assailant to death with a knife, the Negro got 20 years for manslaughter.

A white neighbor, who witnessed the incident, said he was "not a nigger lover," but the Negro was railroaded.

"If it had been two white men," he said, "nobody would have pulled time." The witness said the victim "had a habit of pulling his gun" and threatening Negroes who worked for him.

The state official, handing the reporter records of cases in which Negroes had drawn prison terms in connection with white traffic fatalities, declared:

"You get a Negro drinking and driving and there's a white fatality, he's in real trouble—murder or manslaughter. If it's a white driver, nothing's done in most cases. It's sort of like the electric chair, an honor reserved for a favored few — Negroes and maybe poor whites."

Harsh Punishment

A white man does not have to die for a Negro to be prosecuted for a major crime as a result of an auto accident. In one case where a white man suffered a broken leg in a two-car collision, an elderly Negro was sentenced to eight years for assault with intent to murder.

Negro teen-agers often suffer harsh punishment for first offenses.

One youth without an arrest record had left his state looking for a job. Hungry and penniless, he broke into a small grocery and was eating Vienna sausage from a can when local police collared him. He got five years for burglary.

Another teen-ager with no previous record was sentenced to seven years for stealing 14 tires. Another got seven years for a $10 check forgery and another 10 years for forging checks totaling $39.

A Negro youth, whose family had worked for his white employer for more than 40 years, began taking chewing gum, candy and ice cream from the white man's grocery. He received a six-year sentence for burglary because the court thought he was "getting out of hand."

Eying the stack of records and declaring they comprised a "small sample" of the injustices he has seen, the state official declared:

"Certainly a man should not be sentenced just to satiate some prejudice in the courtroom or the community. But that's what often happens. Something must be done to guard the rights of people unable to take care of themselves."

More than half of the cases shown the reporter involved defendants who were tried or pleaded guilty —without benefit of counsel—on accusations drawn by prosecutors.

"The most glaring abuses are in that area," the official said.

None of those cases in any way concerned civil rights demonstrations.

But reports by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission document hundreds of instances in which Negroes in desegregation cases and Negroes and whites in civil rights demonstrations have been treated unjustly by courts and law enforcement officers in the South.

Daniel H. Pollitt, professor of law at the University of North Carolina, has pointed out that even attorneys seeking to defend civil rights workers often run into trouble in Jim Crow courtrooms. Writing in the December, 1964, North Carolina Law Review, Pollitt declared:

"The small band of southern attorneys who undertake 'racial' litigation often find the common courtesies of the bench and bar denied them."

Of the arrest of Clyde Kennard, the first Negro applicant to all-white Mississippi Southern University, Pollitt wrote:

"He was convicted of stealing five sacks of chicken feed on the basis of rather tenuous evidence. His lawyer was charged with contempt of court for explaining to the press that the sentence of seven years labor was a 'mockery of justice.' "

Warren Fortson, a young white attorney in Americus, Ga., recently charged that officials used morals charges against two teen-agers, the daughter and son of two prominent Negro families, to prevent them from taking part in civil rights demonstrations.

"We have made great progress in desegregation and race relations," Fortson said, "but the courthouse crowd has done everything they could to harass. The oppression of the courts and law enforcement are Negroes' major grievances now."

Sometimes just the suspicion that a person is on a civil rights mission is enough to provoke violence.

Two white Presbyterian ministers from Tennessee, the Rev. Geddes Orman and the Rev. Alexander Stuart, were beaten severely last year in Wilcox County (Camden), Ala., by a white man armed with a shotgun.

The ministers were checking on four Presbyterian schools for Negroes in the county, but were mistaken for civil rights workers. They recognized their assailant, but an all-white jury failed to indict. Wilcox County is 80% Negro.

In Selma recently, a Negro minister, the Rev. James Bevel, a member of Dr. Martin Luther King's staff, was arrested on a charge of contempt of court for disobeying a judge's order to sit in the Jim Crow section of the courtroom.

State-compelled courtroom segregation, as well as exclusion of Negroes from juries, has been declared a violation of the "equal protection" provisions of the 14th Amendment.

Discrimination in jury selection also is prohibited by federal statute, but the law has not been enforced.

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times, Tuesday, June 15, 1965

JIM CROW JUSTICE

NEGROES IGNORED ON JURY RIGHTS

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—Although the systematic exclusion of Negroes from juries in many southern communities is common knowledge, the Department of Justice has yet to prosecute in this century any official under an 1875 federal law prohibiting such discrimination.

On at least three occasions since 1950, the Justice Department, embarrassed at not learning of specific cases until they reached the Supreme Court, called on the U.S. attorneys to report such matters to the department.

Despite the department's appeals and its suggestions that a federal law was being violated, when the last appeal was made in 1956 the department still had not received any reports from the U.S. attorneys.

A Justice Department source told the Los Angeles Times he does not know whether any such reports ever have been received, despite additional Supreme Court decisions reversing convictions of Negroes because of jury discrimination.

Legal Provisions

The federal law provides:

"No citizen possessing all other qualifications . . . prescribed by law shall be disqualified for service as grand or petit jurors in any court of the United States, or of any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

It states further that "whoever, being an officer or other person charged with any duty in the selection or summoning of jurors, excludes or fails to summon any citizen for such cause, shall be fined not more than $5,000."

Several reasons are given for failure to enforce the law:

Lack of specific complaints from Negroes that they have been excluded; difficulty in proving systematic exclusion, and the feeling that federal juries in the South (not many Negroes serve on federal juries either) would not convict state jury officials regardless of the evidence.

Higher Priority

More recently, concentration of Justice Department personnel on racial violence and other civil rights matters which have had a higher priority has been a factor.

"We could have done more with the law," said Burke Marshall, who served as assistant attorney general in charge of civil rights from February, 1961, to January, 1965.

"We investigated several cases and concluded that Negroes were being excluded. But we never secured indictments and never made a major drive."

Marshall, now IBM general counsel in New York, said, "We might well have been requested by the administration to initiate a drive on jury exclusion, except we had a limited number of lawyers and they were on school desegregation and voting discrimination cases."

Bill Suggested

The Justice Department has not been "reluctant" to enforce the statute, Marshall said, but criminal proceedings may not be the most effective means of giving Negroes equal access to the jury box.

Marshall suggested that a bill empowering the Justice Department to initiate civil suits to prevent jury discrimination "might have some effect if the department had enough manpower for a major drive."

In 1961 the U.S. Civil Rights Commission recommended that Congress consider such a bill.

The 1965 voting rights bill gives the department that power in voting discrimination cases.

Federal Court Order

A civil law provides that excluded minorities can seek a federal court order enjoining officials from discrimination under pain of contempt of court. The 1964 Civil Rights Act empowers the Justice Department to join such class action, but does not authorize the department to originate the suit.

The Civil Rights Commission has declared that "a distinct disadvantage" in the injunctive suits under the present law is that they burden private citizens with the expense of correcting racial discrimination.

The only other civil remedy applies to individual criminal cases and has a rather minor and remote effect upon the over-all problem. A Negro may raise the issue before his trial, thus laying the groundwork for an appeal if he is indicted or convicted by an illegally-drawn jury.

Attorneys often are reluctant to even raise the issue before trial. Usually they don't dare challenge the local system or often they are a willing part of it. In some cases, attorneys fail to raise the question for fear it would prejudice the juries against their clients.

That the case-by-case appeals have no over-all effect is shown forcefully by the experience in Carroll County, Miss., where Negroes comprise more than half of the population.

Conviction Reversed

In 1959 the murder conviction of Robert Lee Goldsby, a Negro, was reversed on grounds of jury discrimination. Yet the Civil Rights Commission heard testimony only three months ago that Negroes still don't serve on juries in Carroll County.

The Justice Department, with guarded optimism that the need for voting investigations will diminish with passage of the Voting Rights Bill of 1965, is considering a major drive on jury discrimination.

Some cases already have been investigated in Mississippi, Georgia, Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee. But there have been no indictments and justice officials decline to discuss the cases.

In addition to possibly invoking the criminal statute for the first time since a Virginia judge was sentenced to prison for a violation in the 1870s, the department plans to join in civil suits it believes have merit. A drawback, however, is that civil rights organizations have not been filing jury exclusion suits.

Justice also reportedly stands ready to proceed under Title III—Desegregation of Public Facilities—of the 1964 Civil Rights Act to prevent segregated practices in courthouses. Again, a written complaint first must be filed, in this case with the Justice Department, before action can be taken.

In 1950, 1953 and 1956 the Justice Department, on the front pages of bulletins sent periodically to U.S. attorneys, urged reporting of all jury exclusion cases for possible enforcement of the criminal statute.

The first notice declared it was "quite clear" that the federal law applied. The second reported that despite the earlier appeal and "the apparent continuing practice of racial discrimination" no cases had been reported.

The third notice cited the first two, the Department's "embarrassment" of having to first learn of such practices when cases reached the Supreme Court, and added:

"Nevertheless, the Criminal Division has not received a single report or reference concerning a possible violation."

The Civil Rights Commission, acknowledging it might be "very hard to persuade a jury to convict a white official," has suggested that the Justice Department enforce the federal law—Title 18, Sec. 243.

"Presumably the requirements that criminal cases be proved beyond a reasonable doubt would increase the difficulty of establishing jury exclusion," said the commission.

"On the other hand, this remedy would to some extent relieve private citizens of the time and expense of vindicating their federal right.

"The resources and experience of the FBI would be particularly valuable in gathering the necessary evidence. Finally, Sec. 243 actions, like injunctive suits, would directly protect the rights of all members of the racial group within the community."

Since the offense is a misdemeanor, the commission pointed out, prosecution could be brought directly to trial on an information by a U.S. attorney instead of having to proceed through a grand jury.

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times, Wednesday, June 16, 1965

JIM CROW JUSTICE

U.S. COURTS BARRED TO NEGROES IN SOUTH

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—A federal judge in Mississippi has charged that a civil suit accusing his court of systematically excluding Negroes from juries is "unwarranted meddling by outsiders."

Regardless of the merits of the Mississippi case, the fact is that various systems of selecting jurors in federal courts in the South have largely excluded Negroes.

Jim Crow perches just as surely, although perhaps not as securely, in some of the South's federal courthouses as in some of its state courthouses.

The exclusion of Negroes from the federal processes of justice goes beyond juries.

Charges Voiced

In a recent report, the Southern Regional Council, a highly respected private agency seeking to foster racial equality, accused federal courts in the South of discriminating against Negroes and declared:

"A Negro involved in federal court action in the South could go from the beginning of the case to the end without seeing any black faces unless they are in the court audience, or he happens to notice the man sweeping the floor."

The Mississippi suit was filed last January by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of six Negroes. They claim that they are qualified for jury service, but have not been selected because of their race.

Judge Responds

It is a class action which, if successful, would bar the federal courts from following a system which largely excludes Negroes from jury service.

U.S. Dist. Judge Harold Cox, against whose court the action was filed, wrote a letter on Feb. 1, 1965, asking his former law partner, Charles Clark of Jackson, to aid the U.S. attorney in defense of the suit.

What the judge didn't know was that the U.S. attorney may not defend the suit. In Washington, the Justice Department told the district attorney to remain aloof from the action while it weighs the merits of the case.

Judge Cox has riled civil rights leaders with his rulings in segregation cases and has referred to Negroes as "niggers" and "chimpanzees." He reacted heatedly to the ACLU suit.

In his letter to Clark, the judge said that jurors in his court were "a fair cross section of our citizens completely without regard to race."

Cox called the suit "another piece of unwarranted meddling by outsiders who are apparently ignorant of the facts" and said he does "not intend to let this infamous attack go unanswered . . ."

The judge took the unusual action of asking a private attorney, Clark, to "assist the United States attorney in his defense of this suit as a personal favor and courtesy to me." He said he wanted the record "to show my intense interest in the question presented . . ."

JUDGE CHARGED—U.S. Dist. Judge Harold Cox of Mississippi who has been charged in a civil suit of excluding Negroes from federal court juries.

The suit asserts that Judge Cox's clerk and the jury commissioner deny Negroes their rights either by excluding them from the list of names drawn and summoned for jury duty or by keeping the list so small that only a token number of Negroes may serve on grand and petit juries.

In the case of petit juries, Negroes can be systematically and uniformly challenged and prevented from serving in the trial of any cases, the suit charged.

Mississippi Negroes "presently are being injured, oppressed, threatened and intimidated" while pursuing their constitutional rights, but are unable to secure protection afforded by the enforcement of federal criminal statutes because they are excluded from federal juries, the suit said.

Federal crimes against Negroes go unpunished because white juries will not convict white defendants even though proof of guilt is presented in court, the Negroes asserted.

The suit seeks an injunction against existing jury selection methods, asks dismissal of all present and prospective jurors and requests the court to enforce a new selection system. The complaint also asked $15,000 in damages for each plaintiff.

Case Transferred

Judge Cox assigned the case to Judge Sidney C. Mize, also of the Southern District of Mississippi, who died before a hearing could be held. The case has been transferred to Judge Claude J. Clayton of the Northern District of Mississippi.

Filing of the jury suit prompted Warren Olney III, director of the administrative office of the U.S. courts, to warn all district courts in writing that:

"With the sensitivity about racial discrimination increasing over the years, it was inevitable that the procedures used in the selection of jurors in the United States should come under increasingly close scrutiny."

'Avoid . . . Taint'

Regardless of the merit of the suit, Olney continued, it should emphasize to court clerks and jury commissioners the importance of "avoiding every taint of racial discrimination in qualifying and selecting persons for jury service in the United States courts . . ."

Clerks and jury commissioners are appointed by federal judges. All 65 district federal judges in the 11 states of the old Confederacy are white. So are all 28 district clerks and all 109 jury commissioners.

The Southern Regional Council noted that of 1,124 officials of the federal courts in the 11 states, less than 25 are Negro and they are lower echelon officials.

Of 196 assistant U.S. attorneys in southern states, 10 are Negroes and all were hired after Robert F. Kennedy became attorney general in 1961.

The council declared the courts "seem out of line with fair employment practices of federal agencies, not to mention the spirit and philosophy of the civil rights statute."

It accused "many" of the courts of having been "highly protective of segregation."

Until passage of the 1957 Civil Rights Act, federal jury commissioners were required to use state jury lists—from which, of course, Negroes already had been largely excluded.

Voter Lists Used

However, repeal of the requirement has not kept some courts from continuing to use the lists.

Some commissioners also use state voters registration lists, which in some areas include very few Negroes. For example, the lists have been used in Mississippi where the number of Negro voters is notoriously low.

The "key man system" is used by most federal jury commissioners.

"Key men" are substantial citizens, almost invariably white, selected by the clerks and commissioners to recommend jurors. They recommend people they know—usually white.

Negroes do serve on federal juries in the South, of course, but usually in token numbers. The system also tends to exclude whites in low-income and low-education categories.

The Southern Regional Council said the exclusion of low income and hourly income workers from jury service raises questions beyond racial considerations.

'Jury of Peers?'

"One may not only ask if it is possible under present circumstances to get a federal jury of peers for people who are not white, but also for persons who, regardless of race, are not middle-class," the council said.

But the Jim Crow element of federal justice is of more pressing concern.

After its study, the Southern Regional Council declared there is an "urgent" need for reform because "new federal legislation to protect citizens against the klan and other dispensers of death and ruin will . . . almost certainly increase reliance on the district courts for the protection of individual life and liberty."

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times, Thursday, June 17, 1965

JIM CROW JUSTICE

REFORM LONG NEEDED IN U.S. COURT SYSTEM

BY JACK NELSON
Times Staff Writer

ATLANTA—After an all-white Georgia jury acquitted two Ku Klux Klan members of murdering Lemuel A. Penn last year, a Klan official told a cross-burning rally:

"It just shows that you won't never convict a white man for killing a Negro who is encroaching on the white people of the South!"

The truth in the klansman's statement (although Penn was just passing through Georgia en route to Washington, D.C., when he was ambushed) causes Negroes to grin wryly when they hear the frequent argument that they should take their cause out of the streets and into the courts.

Nowhere is the degradation and oppression of the Negro more abject than in some Jim Crow courthouses.

Arrests Rare

No matter how brutal the killing, the chance of convicting a segregationist of killing a Negro or a white integrationist is practically nil in many parts of the South.

In many cases there are no arrests. When there have been arrests, acquittals or mistrials have resulted.

Byron de la Beckwith, a Greenville fertilizer salesman, was tried twice for the 1963 ambush slaying of Mississippi NAACP official Medgar Evers. Both all-white juries failed to agree on whether it was Beckwith who shot Evers in the back.

Beckwith remains free.

Three Slain

Three civil rights workers—one Negro and two whites—were tortured and slain in Mississippi last summer. A state grand jury investigated, but failed to indict.

The Justice Department charged a sheriff, a deputy sheriff and 17 others, including several klansmen, with civil rights violations. A federal judge threw out the cases on grounds no federal crime was committed.

The brutal crime remains unpunished.

In the trial last month of klansman Collie Leroy Wilkins for the ambush slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, Klan attorney Matt H. Murphy Jr. talked to the all-white Lowndes County (Ala.) jury as "one white man to another white man."

'Victory for State'

After a deadlock caused a mistrial, some observers interpreted the 10-2 vote for conviction as a "moral victory for the state."

But the vote in this night-rider slaying, in which a defenseless woman was stalked for more than 20 miles before being wantonly shot, was not for murder. It was for manslaughter.

In scores of other cases, documented by the Justice Department and the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, anti-Negro, anti-civil rights violence in the South has gone unpunished. In many cases, such as the bombing deaths of four Negro children in a Birmingham church in 1963, there have been no arrests.

Protection Asked

The killings last March of Mrs. Liuzzo and the Rev. James J. Reeb, a Unitarian minister who was clubbed to death in Selma, Ala., prompted a demand for new federal laws to protect civil rights demonstrators.

Dr. Martin Luther King and other civil rights leaders called for a broad federal statute protecting persons slain in the pursuit of their constitutional rights.

The Justice Department reportedly has been busy researching the subject, trying to come up with a proposal for such a law.

The probability that all-white juries would pass judgment on whether such a law had been violated raises the question of whether any new law would be effective without changes in the systems of selecting federal juries.

New York attorney Burke Marshall, who headed the Justice Department's civil rights division from 1961 to 1965, says the need for reforming the federal systems is "very important." But he says the issue is much like reapportionment:

"Not very sexy and hard to get people interested."

Selection Varies

A Justice Department survey in 1961 showed that the 92 federal district courts had "92 different systems of selecting juries," he said.

Most of the courts use the "key man" system, he said, discriminating not only against Negroes, but against poor whites.

"Sometimes it is against farmers, as opposed to city people," he said.

Marshall says federal judges should not be free to adopt whatever jury selection methods they desire.

After the 1961 survey, a bill backed by the department was introduced to set up uniform standards in the selection of jurors.

It died for lack of support.

Needs Key People

"Key people are important on something like this," Marshall said. "People like Emanuel Celler (the New York Democrat who heads the House Judiciary Committee). People in Brooklyn care about the voting bill, but they don't think much about the courts."

Since it is the federal courts to whom Negroes must look when they have been denied equal protection in state courts, reform in the federal judiciary seems long overdue.

Atlanta attorney Ellis Arnall, who was governor of Georgia from 1943 to 1946, sees a pressing need for intensive investigation and sweeping reforms of the overall structure of segregated justice.

"The urgency about the need is caused by the Negroes' increasing demands for equality," he said. "White justice takes it out on the Negroes even when they are not part of the civil rights movement because they are categorized as part of it.

Tells of Injustices

"Both as attorney general of Georgia and as a practicing attorney I have seen the widespread injustices of the dual system. Anyone with any intelligence knows the system discriminates against the Negro.

"The white man has tried to keep the Negro down in the ditch. In order to do this he has had to stay down in the ditch with him. The segregated system of justice is a perfect example of this."

Demands for equality in courts will increase in ratio to the number of civil rights demonstrators who run afoul of Jim Crow justice, Arnall said.

"There hasn't been much agitation before," he said, "because the average citizen dodges court like the devil dodges holy water. Therefore, attacks on the system usually have come only from those already in trouble with the courts."

Ballot a Factor

Equal access to the ballot will tend to chase Jim Crow from some of the courthouses, of course, because Negroes will become a factor in electing court officials and sheriffs.

But discrimination in the administration of justice is much more widespread than discriminatory voting practices. Nor is it confined entirely to the South.

Exclusion of the Negro from the ballot box is a serious problem only in Mississippi and parts of Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia.

Exclusion of Negroes from the agencies of justice —from law enforcement to judicial and penal institutions—is widespread throughout the 11 ex-Confederate states.

Action Risky

Direct action against the courts—any courts—is risky business. It entails contempt charges and possible charges of obstruction of justice.

But some civil rights groups have seriously discussed taking the risk to dramatize their plight in the Jim Crow courts. Sit-ins in jury boxes are among the tactics that have been discussed.

Burke Marshall
UPI photo

Lemuel A. Penn
UPI photo

How far the courts would tolerate such civil rights protests remain to be seen. But both federal court judges and some state appellate court judges have only to read their own decisions to see repeated warnings that Jim Crow justice breeds disrespect for the law and corrupts the democratic processes far beyond the courthouses.

Quotes Ruling

Judge Robert H. Hall of the Georgia Court of Appeals, in a decision last year, quoted a federal ruling:

"For racial discrimination to result in the exclusion from jury service of otherwise qualified groups not only violates our Constitution and the laws enacted under it, but is at war with our basic concepts of a democratic society and a representative government."

In his decision, granting a new trial to a Negro civil rights demonstrator convicted by an all-white jury, Judge Hall declared:

"The injury is not limited to the defendant—there is injury to the jury system, to the law as an institution, to the community at large, and to the democratic ideal reflected in the processes of our courts."

AN EDITORIAL

Reprinted from the Los Angeles Times

SUNDAY, JUNE 20, 1965

Where Due Process Is Denied

". . . Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

So says the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. Yet, in tragic fact, "the equal protection of the laws" is largely a myth for Negroes in most of the courts, state and federal, of the South.

The equitable and impartial administration of justice, a right guaranteed beyond argument to all Americans by the Constitution, has been willfully and consistently ignored in favor of a double standard of justice which in practice is an outrage against our laws and our national sense of decency.

The systematic exclusion of Negroes from law enforcement agencies and juries; the continued segregation of hearing rooms; the frequent intimidation of Negro witnesses and defendants—all point up the hypocrisy of the "justice" dealt out in many southern courts.

As Times Reporter Jack Nelson noted in his recent series on Jim Crow justice, in many counties of the former Confederacy "there is no time for a Negro to be at the courthouse except as a defendant, witness — or taxpayer." Even attendance in a court of law as a spectator can, in some cases, lead to personal harm.

The solution to this appalling situation does not rest in new laws. There are already statutes—some going back to 1875—which implement the Constitution by prohibiting discrimination in jury selection, the key pillar of Jim Crow justice. The trouble is that existing laws aren't being enforced.

The lack of federal enforcement in cases where abuses are readily apparent stems from a number of causes, among them the fact that the Justice Department — until recently, at any rate—has simply been too busy dealing with voter registration, school desegregation and other enforcement cases.

At the same time there has been little apparent pressure from outside the government. Civil rights groups have up to now concentrated their energies in other areas of discrimination. But, in the face of flagrant abuses of legal standards, what explains the silence and inactivity of the American Bar Assn.?

Some cases which saw discrimination in jury selection have been appealed to the Supreme Court, and reversals of convictions have been obtained. In these cases the law was clearly on the appellant's side. But the high court acted on this one point of law alone. It is possible that in so doing persons who were demonstrably guilty of crimes were permitted to go free. This remains a danger so long as lower courts do nothing about present discriminatory courtroom practices.

Unequal justice inevitably breeds disrespect and even contempt for the law on the part, not only of the victims of this inequality, but of those who practice and uphold it as well. Defense arguments in recent murder cases in the South show clearly enough that no punishment is anticipated in crimes against Negroes or against whites who support Negro causes. In such cases the very concept of law and order becomes a victim of violence.

This is not simply a regional problem. As long as the purposeful exclusion of southern Negroes from the agencies of justice continues, the most basic rights and values of this nation will be mocked. As long as Jim Crow justice remains, the corruption it represents will infect us all.

66

RAPE PENALTIES IN SOUTH STUDIED

JUSTICE

N.A.A.C.P. Fund Is Seeking Capital-Punishment Data

NYT 4/29/66

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON

The N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., announced yesterday that it was conducting "the only comprehensive survey ever undertaken" on capital punishment for persons convicted of rape.

The ground work of the survey, started last summer, was done by 28 law students who gathered data on 2,600 rape cases in 225 counties of 11 Southern states. The counties studied contain 56 per cent of the total population of these states.

The students worked under the supervision of Prof. Marvin Wolfgang and Prof. Anthony Amsterday of the University of Pennsylvania. The professors are now evaluating 28-page capital - punishment - survey booklets prepared for each case investigated and they expect to complete their studies in two years.

Although no preliminary information coming out of the survey was announced, Professor Wolfgang, a criminologist, said the facts sought "are those most likely to affect the discretion of jurors and judicial officials in sentencing or modifying a sentence imposed upon a person convicted of rape."

Negro Chief Sufferers

The fund's director-counsel, Jack Greenberg, said that it was "long-felt and with some justification" that the death penalty for rape was applied more often to Negro defendants than to white. Many officials, including judges, penologists and criminologists have agreed. Mr. Greenberg said he was certain the survey would prove this.

Fund lawyers are now defending 26 Negroes facing capital punishment in 18 Southern rape cases.

The data was gathered by the students over a 10-week period and it includes detailed information on the defendants, the victims, the circumstances of the offense and legal proceedings in each case.

Fund officials said the students searched trial dockets and appellate transcripts, interviewed lawyers, "both hostile and friendly," and at times were able to review prison and parole records. Newspaper files were examined to complete the documentation.

Citizens Not Hostile

The students met no hostility on the part of local citizens, Professor Wolfgang explained. "I suppose that was because they did not know what we were doing," suggested Michael Henry, a graduate of Harvard Law School, who helped with the survey in Arkansas and North Carolina. Mr. Henry has since joined the fund's legal staff.

Fund officials said that the United States was one of five nations that still permitted the death penalty for rape in which there was no fatality and that laws in the deep South made death mandatory in rape cases unless the jury, by majority vote, recommended mercy.

RIGHTERS AIM AT RAPE IN DIXIE

JUSTICE

Battle on Death Penalty Slated

AC 4/24/66

By AUSTIN SCOTT

NEW YORK (AP) — The main legal arm of the civil rights movement has disclosed it is preparing an all-out assault on the death penalty for rape, particularly in the South.

Jack Greenberg, director-counsel of the NAACP legal defense fund, attributed last year's sharp decline in executions to a previously undisclosed s' 'dy made for the campaign.

The Justice Department said in February that only seven Americans, an all-time low, were executed in 1965, none for rape.

That compared with 15 executed in 1964, 6 for rape; 21 in 1963, and 47 in 1962.

Greenberg said stays of execution obtained in many of the 18 capital cases his organization is handling accounted for the decline.

"The drop is due to this very project," he said.

In a statement, the fund said it intends to argue generally that capital punishment for rape has been applied unfairly against Negroes, and is systematically used as an instrument of repression.

This, the fund says, violates due process and equal protection, and prevents the equal application of the law guaranteed under the federal Constitution.

In addition, it said, the taking of a life "when the defendant has not killed or seriously threatened the victim constitutes cruel and unusual punishment."

The fund is in the middle of a study which Greenberg termed the only comprehensive survey on this subject ever undertaken.

"We decided we would investigate precisely what the facts were in a precise, scholarly study," Greenberg said. "The entire history of capital punishment is one which hits with unusual severity at Negroes."

Two University of Pennsylvania professors — Dr. Marvin Wolfgang and Dr. Anthony Amsterdam —supervised the study and hired 28 law students at about $30 a week last summer to spend 10 weeks in 225 counties of 11 Southern states.

They checked court records, attorneys, and even prison and parole officials in order to fill out a detailed, 28-page fact sheet on every rape conviciton in their areas since 1945.

The students turned up varying amounts of data on about 2,600 cases, Amsterdam said. He and Wolfgang estimated it would take another two years to process all the information, including a state-by-state analysis.

But they said information for some of the pending cases would be ready "very soon."

"It was necessary to go back in time far enough to see if a pattern exists," Wolfgang said. "We used standard sampling techniques to get a representative sample from each state. In no county were less than 50 per cent of the cases included."

Amsterdam termed the study "a stepping stone into the broader aspects of criminal processes."

He said: "There is some evidence of more frequent arrests, more convictions, higher bail (against Negroes). We consider this a pilot study in the functioning of a judicial system."

Amsterdam noted that juries and judges are given wide discretion in the administration of criminal justice, and that in some states the jury has "unlimited power to choose life or death."

The fund said laws of most Deep South states make death mandatory in rape cases unless the jury recommends mercy.

"It is in any event apparent that Southern states have greatly reduced the risk of death for the white defendant whereas the Negro defendant still runs a high risk of hearing the death penalty pronounced," the fund said.

The questionnaire which the students filled out on each case includes such details as the defendant's previous criminal history, whether threats were made and if so what kind, the type of assault, including whether force was used and what kind, and any issues raised on appeal.

"The facts sought are those most likely to affect the discretion of jurors and judicial officials in sentencing," said Wolfgang in an accompanying affidavit.

Calling the death penalty an "anachronism," the fund said the United States is one of only five countries which inflict the death penalty for rape where death does not occur.

The others, it said, are South Africa, Zambia, Malawai and Taiwan.

In addition to 16 states and the District of Columbia, the fund said, the federal government permits the death penalty for rape at sea, in territories, in the military, and where an Indian rapes a non-Indian on a reservation.

The 16 states were listed by the fund as Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri.

The law students investigated in all states except Missouri, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia.

UPI Telephoto

SURROUNDED

MEMPHIS, April 23—James F. Marquis Jr. (L) and L. H. Reynolds, both PTA presidents from Kingsport, Tenn., found themselves in a sea of women at a convention of the Tennessee PTA here. Needless to say, the men here were outvoted.

Klan Speakers Rap Reds, Politicians

KKK

AJ 6/5/66

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., June 4 — The Ku Klux Klan staged a mass meeting and cross-burning here Saturday night, and four speakers blasted everything from federal and state politicians to Communists.

Grand Dragon Calvin Craig said the meeting was the first of several to be staged in the southern sector of the state. The second in the series is to be Sunday at 3 p.m. at Crawfordville, scene of racial unrest during the last year.

Some 300 persons attended the rally in a field just outside the Sandersville city limits and heard Craig bitterly attack President Johnson, Gov. Sanders, gubernatorial candidate James Gray of Albany and 5th District U.S. Rep Charles Weltner, among others.

Other speakers were George Sligh of Jonesboro, R. L. Bing and A. B. Allison, who described himself as the chairman of his church board of deacons in Americus.

Although Craig emphasized in his appeal for members that the klan is "not an organization for anybody looking for violence," there were strong denunciations of the Negro.

SEGREGATIONIST gubernatorial candidate Lester Maddox was referred to only once, but his name drew strong applause from the shirtsleeved crowd, many of whom remained in their cars for the speeches, despite pleas from the platform to "come on up here and join with us."

Craig told the gathering that he and Sligh and other klan leaders had recently visited the Watts district of Los Angeles, where rioting had occurred. He said he could not understand the theory that poverty set off the outbreaks.

"I saw those so-called ghettos first hand and I'll tell you they are every bit as nice homes as you have right here in Sandersville, and you've got some beautiful homes here."

He then charged that the Watts strife was Communist-inspired.

Craig asked the audience for contributions and a dozen robed klansmen circulated through the gathering.

COURT AIDS NEGRO IN JURY SELECTION

NYT 7/22/66

Old System Upset by U.S. Appeals Bench in South

JUSTICE

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 21—A long-established system that had the effect of keeping Negroes off Federal juries in the South has been struck down by a Federal appeal court.

Lawyers here said that Negroes would benefit in two chief ways from the unanimous decision handed down in New Orleans yesterday by eight of the nine judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

It will require that jury lists of a district court include persons "broadly representative of the community" in which the court is located. It threw out a system under which "key men" in the community nominated persons for jury lists.

The decision is binding only on Federal courts in the circuit, which consists of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and the Canal Zone. But it was expected to be persuasive in other Federal jurisdictions.

Could Help Rights Bill

Although the decision does not apply to state court juries, it indirectly raises a potentially helpful argument for passage of Title I of the Administration's pending civil rights bill. That section, one of the most controversial in the bill, would prohibit discrimination in juror selection by requiring the creation of a "master jury wheel" composed of the names of at least 1 per cent of all the registered voters in each Federal judicial district.

In the South, the opinion held, "the qualifications required and the methods of selecting prospective jurors have, over a large period of time—list after list—resulted in Negroes' being substantially underrepresented."

The opinion struck down the Federal perjury convictions of Miss Joni Rabinowitz of New Rochelle, N. Y., a white civil rights worker for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, and five Negroes from Albany, Ga.—Elza L. Jackson, Robert Thomas, Samuel B. Wells, Slater H. King and Thomas C. Chatmon. It also dismissed the indictments against them.

U.S. Sought Reversal

The two cases were appealed from the Federal District Court for the Middle District of Georgia, where Miss Rabinowitz and the Negroes were convicted of falsely testifying before a Federal jury about a civil rights demonstration in Albany.

versial in the bill, would prohibit discrimination in juror selection by requiring the creation of a "master jury wheel" composed of the names of at least 1 per cent of all the registered voters in each Federal judicial district.

In the South, the opinion held, "the qualifications required and the methods of selecting prospective jurors have, over a large period of time—list after list—resulted in Negroes' being substantially underrepresented."

The opinion struck down the Federal perjury convictions of Miss Joni Rabinowitz of New Rochelle, N. Y., a white civil rights worker for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, and five Negroes from Albany, Ga.—Elza L. Jackson, Robert Thomas, Samuel B. Wells, Slater H. King and Thomas C. Chatmon. It also dismissed the indictments against them.

U.S. Sought Reversal

The two cases were appealed from the Federal District Court for the Middle District of Georgia, where Miss Rabinowitz and the Negroes were convicted of falsely testifying before a Federal jury about a civil rights demonstration in Albany in 1962.

In a two-day hearing in New Orleans last December, Justice Department attorneys sought reversal of the convictions on the ground that in four years "only four new Negro names" had been added to the jury list of the district court, headquartered in Macon, Ga. But the department opposed dismissal of the indictments, arguing for new trials instead.

The appeals court was unanimous in reversing the convictions but split, 5 to 4, in dismissing the indictments. The decision, which avoided constitutional issues, was based on the jury section of the Civil Rights Act of 1957. That act declares:

"Any citizen of the United States who has attained the age of 21 years and who has resided for a period of one year within the judicial district, is competent to serve as a grand or petit juror unless: (1) he has been convicted (of a felony) (2) he is unable to read, write, speak and understand the English language, and (3) he is incapable, by reason of mental or physical infirmities, to render efficient jury service."

Excellence Not Required

The court's unanimous opinion held that to qualify as a district court juror "a person need only be able to read, write, speak and understand English—he need not enjoy that degree of excellence found only among the more fortunate classes of our society."

The opinion was written by Judge Richard T. Rives of Montgomery, Ala. Its language appeared to strike at the heart of the long-established system of using outstanding citizens to nominate persons to the lists from which juries are selected.

The "key man" system has been practiced by jury commissioners and court clerks in many Federal jurisdictions, not just in the South. In the South, the court held, the system has virtually excluded Negroes from juries.

"The fruits of the harvest were clear to anyone who cared to look," the court declared.

The court noted that it was not considering whether Negro defendants had a right to demand a specified, proportionate number of Negroes on their juries. It said only that the standards applied in selecting jurors had been "grossly inadequate."

It directed the clerks of court and jury commissioners of the district to develop a selection system that would yield a fair cross-section of their communities.

Warning to Hanoi Urged

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 21—Two Republican Representatives, F. Bradford Morse of Massachusetts and Ogden R. Reid of New York, called on Congress today to adopt a resolution warning North Vietnam that any trial or execution of captured American pilots would be regarded as "an inhumanitarian act" and would "seriously diminish" the chances for peace in Vietnam.

IT'S FIRST TIME IN STATE

Boy, 12, in Prison Is Getting Transfer to Training School

~~PRISONS~~ JUSTICE AC 8/23/66

A 12-year-old convict, who cries himself to sleep in his prison dormitory every night, is expected to be transferred to a State Training School for Boys within the next few days.

It will be the first time that a convict has been transferred from a prison to a juvenile facility, say Welfare and Correction department officials.

Even after the transfer, Kirby McCoy will have to serve out his five-year sentence for burglary in the training school, said R. H. Burson, corrections department director.

McCoy cannot be released or paroled unless he is transferred back to the corrections department, Burson said.

Burson said a 1956 law allows such a transfer. He said it would not be given final approval until the law department makes certain that law has not been amended. That approval should come this week.

The transfer from the Alto Industrial Institute to a training school was arranged Monday after the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia prepared to file a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of the boy.

McCoy first gained state-wide notice last May when a Constitution reporter found the Negro boy languishing in the Carroll County jail awaiting transfer to a prison facility. He had been in the county jail two months and five days at the time.

Superior Court Judge Lamar Knight chose to handle McCoy as an adult criminal because the youngster had been in trouble repeatedly since he was 6. He had twice been sent to training schools, only to return

Continued on Page 8, Column 5

IT'S FIRST TIME

Boy, 12, in Prison Getting Transfer

Continued From Page 1

shortly and get into trouble again.

Burson said Judge Knight has declined to change his original order sentencing McCoy but has said he will not interfere with an administrative transfer of the youth.

THERE ARE HUNDREDS

McCoy was quoted as saying he cried himself to sleep every night at Alto but hid his face in his pillow so his fellow prisoners would no tease him.

Hugh Gibert, president of the ACLU of Georgia, said, "There are hundreds of Kirby McCoys in jails all over Georgia, and every night they offer the same anguished prayer. The answer to their cries lies not in individual legal action, although the ACLU of Georgia serves notice it stands ready to test each and every one. The answer lies in an aroused citizenry which will demand that the General Assembly pass a law that no child under the age of 16 can be incarcerated in an adult prison."—BILL SHIPP.

KKK

Klan Leader Is Convicted Of Contempt of Congress

9/15/66

Shelton Faces Jail Term For Refusing to Yield Data to House Unit

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Robert M. Shelton Jr., imperial wizard of the United Klans of America, was found guilty today of contempt of Congress for refusing to produce records for the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

A Federal District Court jury that included three Negroes announced the guilty verdict after deliberating for a little more than an hour.

Judge John J. Sirica said he would impose the sentence after a routine probation study was completed. These usually take about six weeks.

Shelton could receive as much as a year's imprisonment and a $1,000 fine. He was released on $500 bond pending the probation study.

Lester V. Chalmers Jr., Shelton's lawyer, told newsmen the verdict would be appealed to the Supreme Court if necessary.

Shelton, shedding his taciturn demeanor for the first time since the three-day trial began, denounced the trial as a "kangaroo court." He said it was

Continued on Page 28, Column 3

Associated Press Wirephoto

Robert M. Shelton Jr. before he was found guilty.

KLAN HEAD GUILTY IN CONTEMPT CASE

Continued From Page 1, Col. 6

dominated by the Government through the eight Federal employes on the jury.

Speaking to newsmen outside the courtroom," he accused the House committee of suffering insults from "beaniks, sex perverts and tennis shoe-wearing Communists" during hearings on Vietnam war critics. The committee chose to cite him for contempt, even though he behaved as "a Christian gentle-

The verdict "will help boost the Klan," he said. "Just as the declaration of war against the Klan by LBJ serves as a recruiter for the Klan."

Spectators in the half-filled courtroom showed no surprise at the guilty verdict, which came after the defense offered no evidence, and after Judge Sirica decided most of the case's issues against Shelton. There was little left for the jury to decide.

Judge Sirica ruled that Shelton did not cite legally acceptable reasons when he refused to produce Klan books, records and documents before a subcommittee hearing on Oct. 20, 1965.

Shelton had contended that the subpoenaed records would not help Congress in passing any valid anti-Klan law, and that they might tend to incriminate him.

Thus, the only important issue left for the jury's consideration was the defense contention that the subpoena was so loosely drawn that Shelton could not tell which records to produce.

In his statement after the verdict the 37-year-old resident of Tuscaloosa, Ala., said he "did not think the Negroes on the jury gave an unbiased verdict."

He predicted that his conviction would contribute to the "white backlash," which he said was apparent in this week's political elections.

Lawyers for both sides avoided emphasizing the case's racial implications during the trial. They concentrated instead on making legal points to be raised in future appellate court battles.

JUSTICE

12/25/66 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SU

POLICE IN ATLANTA GET RIGHTS BOOK

Told to Read Pamphlet on Advice for Citizens

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, Dec. 24—A booklet on the rights of citizens involved with the police has been made required reading in the Atlanta Police Department.

The booklet, a simply worded tract called "Know Your Rights," published by the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia and the Georgia Council on Human Relations, was written primarily for slum residents who have trouble dealing with the police.

Mrs. Florence B. Robin, executive director of the Georgia chapter of the liberties union, sent a copy to Atlanta's police chief, Herbert T. Jenkins, and was astonished when he telephoned the next day and asked for 1,000 copies.

Shortly thereafter, a notice appeared on the police bulletin board instructing each officer to read it.

Sent to Other Towns

Civil liberties groups and poverty program workers in other states have since heard of the booklet and asked for copies. Mrs. Robin said today that she had mailed 23,000 copies to about 20 other states and was preparing 8,000 more to be sent. Some have gone to leading universities, she said.

Copies have also been sent, on request, to police departments in four other Georgia towns, Augusta, Gainesville, Tifton and Alma, and to the Sumter County, Ga., sheriff's office.

Mrs. Robin said the booklet's somewhat surprising popularity among policemen apparently resulted from its dual approach. While stressing the citizen's rights, the booklet makes it clear that the police also have a right to expect cooperation.

"Fighting with a policeman is a serious crime," it warns. "It will only make things worse. Go with him quietly."

'Your Home Is Your Castle'

The booklet advises cooperating with the police in investigations and warns against running away from policemen, "even if you feel you are being wrongly arrested."

It also tells people how far they should go in answering questions.

"If you are under arrest," it says, "you do not have to answer any more questions. A policeman does not have the right to search you unless you are being arrested or he has a search warrant.

"If a policeman asks to come into your home, you do not have to let him in. The law says: 'Your home is your castle.'"

The booklet assures the reader that he has a right to a lawyer, a free one if he has no money, any time he is arrested.

"If you are not treated right by a policeman—if he calls you 'nigger' or 'nigger-lover' or 'boy', or calls you by your first name instead of Mr. or Mrs., or curses you or abuses you, you should complain about him," the booklet advises.

Mrs. Robin said many receiving the booklets had complained not of physical brutality but of "humiliations" such as being called "nigger" and "boy" by the police.

The liberties union and the Council on Human Relations have begun holding clinics in slum communities around Georgia to explain citizens' rights, using the booklet and slides.

The booklet was written this summer by Mrs. Robin and a committee of Georgia lawyers.

Blind Newsman Will Get '66 Handicapped Award

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—A blind radio-television newsman and jazz musician from Toledo, Ohio, who worked his way to earn three college degrees was named Handicapped American of the Year for 1966, it was announced today.

Art Edgerton, a 38-year-old news writer for WTOL radio and TV station in Toledo, was chosen by the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped. He will receive the President's trophy on April 27 at ceremonies at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

Mr. Edgerton earned a bachelor's degree in sociology from St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia in 1950, and went on to receive his master's degree from Fordham University in 1951. While working toward his second degree, he attended the Juilliard School of Music in New York where he earned a bachelor's degree in music.

In addition to his duties as a news writer, he is the station's music director.

Westerners in Moscow Hold Christmas Services

MOSCOW, Dec. 25 (UPI)—Russian Roman Catholics and Protestants and Moscow's foreign colony celebrated Christmas with midnight services, Christmas carols and public and private Christmas Eve parties.

Moscow was covered by heavy snow with a temperature of 14 degrees when the chimes of the Kremlin's Spassky Tower ushered in Dec. 25.

American and other Western Catholics attended midnight mass at Spaso House, the American Ambassador's residence, and Western Protestants attended midnight services at the British Embassy.

The official midwinter holiday in the Soviet Union is New Year's Day.

DO NOT FORGET THE NEEDIEST! TODAY IS CHRISTMAS DAY!

(copy + info.)

KENTUCKY

EXPLANATION AND DIGEST of the 1966 KENTUCKY CIVIL RIGHTS ACT covering EMPLOYMENT and
PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

ENACTED JANUARY 27, 1966

EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1966

INDEX

INTRODUCTION 1

Purpose of the Act 2

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY 2

Coverage 2

Equal Treatment Based on Individual Merit 3

Reasonable Provisions for Exemptions 3

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS PROVISIONS 3

IMPLEMENTATION AND ENFORCEMENT 4

Persuasion the Key to Compliance 4

Advantages of Commission Procedures 5

Protection of Employer's and Complainant's Rights 6

Avoidance of Record Keeping Burdens 7

Procedures for Subpoenas 7

LOCAL HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSIONS 8

MISCELLANEOUS 8

INTRODUCTION

Among the first considerations of the 1966 Kentucky General Assembly was a civil rights Act, with coverage in the areas of public accommodations and employment. This Act had the support of the Governor of Kentucky, the bi-partisan support of legislators around the State, the editorial support of leading Kentucky newspapers, and the support of individuals and groups recognizing the moral necessity for state civil rights legislation. This digest is written to help individual citizens become acquainted with the major facets of the civil rights Act.

The Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 emphasizes that its enforcement should be through state agencies which function under state laws compatible with the federal statute. When the state assumes its responsibility for the protection of the rights of its citizens, federal enforcement of the Civil Rights Act becomes unnecessary.

The Kentucky Civil Rights Act will meet the requirements of the Federal Law and will provide more sensitive, more efficient, and less remote enforcement procedures than the federal law. This act uses as a model the Uniform State Civil Rights Act which is being drafted by a special committee of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. This group is composed of outstanding judges, lawyers, and law professors from all sections of the United States including the South.

While the heart of the bill is contained in the three articles covering public accommodations, fair employment practices, and enforcement; there are seven articles in the bill as follows:

1. Declaration of Purpose; Construction; Severability
2. General Definitions
3. Discrimination in Employment
4. Discrimination in Public Accommodations
5. Enforcement; Judicial Review
6. Miscellaneous
7. Local Human Rights Commissions

Purpose of the Act

The purpose of this Act is to safeguard all individuals within the state from discrimination because of race, color, religion, and national origin in connection with employment and public accommodations. Discrimination is a matter of state concern because it involves an individual's personal dignity and freedom from humiliation. Such discrimination deprives the state of the full productive capacities of individuals, foments strife and unrest, menaces the democratic institutions of the state, and damages the interests, rights, and privileges of all persons within the state.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

Equal access to employment opportunities is the greatest need of minority persons today. Persons who are unemployed or under-utilized because of their race, color, religion, or national origin do not have the opportunity to contribute their full productive capacities toward a better life for themselves, their families, and for the whole society. Discrimination in employment practices is a continuing problem in Kentucky and is a problem which a Kentucky fair employment practices law can help remedy. Certainly, the continuation of Kentucky's business and industrial growth without racial friction is one reason for passage of the Act.

Coverage

Employment discrimination is covered by article three of the Act. Basically Sections 302 through 306 state that race, color, religion, and national origin are not lawful criteria for making employment decisions. Like the Federal Law, employers, employment agencies, and labor organizations will be covered by the Act. Employers hiring 8 or more employees within the State in each of twenty or more weeks in the calendar year will be covered. Thus, 80% of Kentucky's employees and 22% of employers will be covered.

The smaller employees of the state will not be covered by the Act. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 will cover employers hiring 25 or more employees, to be fully effective in 1968. This would exclude most of Kentucky's employers (93%) and a very large percentage of Kentucky employees (40%). Kentucky should act to protect as many employees from discrimination as possible.

Equal Treatment Based on Individual Merit

It is made clear in the Act that an employer can use seniority and merit systems and can make employment decisions on the basis of professionally developed ability tests. One section makes its doubly clear that nothing in the Act requires preferential treatment for any person or group; all that is required is equality of treatment based on individual merit.

Reasonable Provisions for Exemptions

Religious institutions, including church related or supported educational institutions, will be able to exercise a religious preference in choosing their employees where religion is a reasonable occupational qualification. However, race, color, and national origin will not be considered valid qualifications in these cases.

Similar provisions allow the exercise of preferences based on religion or national origin for an employer, employment agency, or labor organization where such qualifications are reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the enterprise.

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS PROVISIONS

The Kentucky Act will apply generally to places of public accommodation which serve the public. Its clear coverage will be fair to proprietors because it will apply equally to all businesses. This Uniform rule will help to eliminate anxiety and avoid incidents.

With certain exceptions it will cover places of public accommodation, including ". . . any place, store or other establishment, either licensed or unlicensed which supplies goods or services to the general public or which is supported directly or indirectly by government funds."

In Title II of the Federal Act of 1964, services, places of active amusement and recreational facilities such as bowling alleys, skating rinks, and driving ranges are not all covered. Under the state Act, these loopholes will be eliminated.

Experience with state public accommodations laws has shown that it is best to word coverage provisions in general terms. Earlier laws contained detailed lists of the kinds of covered establishments. No list can possibly name all of the changing forms of enterprise created by American business ingenuity. As a result, the detailed coverage sections have required frequent amendments.

Chapter Four of the Kentucky Act covers discrimination in places of public accommodation. The places which are required not to discriminate are defined in Section 402 (a). Exceptions are made in Section 402 (a) for barber shops, beauty shops, owner occupied tourist homes of 5 rooms or less, and bona fide private clubs (where policies are actually determined by members and admission is limited to members and their guests). These exemptions are provided in the light of practical, political conditions in Kentucky today and are similar to those in the Federal Act.

IMPLEMENTATION AND EMFORCEMENT

Persuasion the Key to Compliance

The legislation will emphasize efforts at persuasion and conciliation by the Commission on Human Rights. Only where these methods failed will the Commission be required to hold hearings. The whole enforcement procedure in Article 5 is based on the best available methods followed by other state agencies. Many of the procedures are taken from the Model State Administrative Procedure Act.

The duties and obligations of the Commission are spelled out in detail in Section 502. The procedure for complaint, investigation, and conciliation is covered in Section 503. Section 502 (a) states who may file a complaint and sets a limit of six months within which a complaint must be filed. Employment complaints have an even shorter time limit of 90 days.

Upon receiving a complaint, the Commission will conduct a preliminary investigation to determine if there is probable cause to believe that an unlawful discrimination has occurred. If probable cause is found, the Commission must proceed to encourage complaince by conference, conciliation, and persuasion.

Experience has shown that conciliation activities effectively settle nearly all cases. If these efforts fail, the Commission would serve a complaint upon the respondent (Section 504), hold a hearing, and subpoena witnesses and documents. All hearings are to be conducted in accordance with strict procedures specified by the Act.

Advantages of Commission Procedures

Based on experience in other states most of the Commission's work will continue to be devoted to educational efforts to encourage voluntary compliance. The Commission would facilitate smooth change by sharing with employers and proprietors the wide-spread experience of other Kentucky businessmen who have successfully desegregated. When complaints are filed, the preliminary investigations under the Act can help screen out baseless charges and protect businessmen from harassment, and from unjustified legal defenses. When the complaint is justified, a mandatory conference, conciliation and persuasion procedure must be followed. The conciliation efforts are strictly confidential, and the vast majority of complaints are settled at this stage without publicity.

Kentuckians who are familiar with problems throughout the State make up the Commission. They have been working for five years to encourage voluntary equal treatment and have built up a large body of experience in these matters. Four Commission members, including the Chairman, are to be appointed by the Governor in 1966, and the bill provides new language to insure bi-partisan representation of employers, proprietors, trade unions, religious groups, human rights groups, and the general public.

Protection of Employer's and Complainant's Rights

A member of the Commission who filed a complaint or who endeavored to eliminate the alleged discrimination will be barred from participating in a hearing or subsequent deliberation in that case (Section 504 b). This separation between the investigative and hearing functions of the Commission will assure the fairness of the procedure. After hearing, the Commission could issue a cease and desist order upon a finding that the law had been violated. The final orders of the Commission could be reviewed and enforced in the local circuit courts.

If, on the other hand, the Commission staff determines after investigation that there was no probable cause, then the complaint will be dismissed (Section 503 b and c). The complainant has a right to appeal this decision to the full Commission and to appeal a decision of the Commission to the courts. Safeguards to protect the rights of employers and complainants from arbitrary action by the Commission at any stage of the process are included in Section 507. The availability of judicial review is an integral part of the process and is available to any party who feels that he has been aggrieved by a decision of the Commission.

Avoidance of Record Keeping Burdens

To avoid undue burdens on persons subject to the Act, Section 508 (e) provides that necessary information keeping will conform to similar records and reports already required by federal law and government contract regulations. For the purpose of uniformity and in the interest of multi-state employers, the state could adopt the regulations of the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on this matter. A public hearing must precede adoption of such regulations. Under Section 508 (d) an employer who believed the provisions would result in "undue hardship" could ask the Commission for relief or bring an action in circuit court.

Procedures for Subpoenas

The Act provides subpoena procedures for the Commission in Section 502 (i) and upon application to parties to a Commission hearing in Section 509. Subpoenas are necessary to enable all parties to present their evidence. All the normal judicial safeguards surround this process. Careful limits on relevancy are written into the Act. Before a court would enforce a subpoena the Commission would have to prove that the witnesses or documents sought pertain to possible unlawful discriminatory practices. Thus, general fishing expeditions can not be made. In Kentucky, other state commissions which exercise similar functions, (such as the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, the Board of Agriculture, and the Department of Health), can issue subpoenas and they have proven necessary.

Article 6 makes retaliation and conspiracy to retaliate against anyone exercising rights guaranteed by this Act an unlawful practice punishable by a fine and/or imprisonment. The Act as a whole provides for civil remedies and this sanction is only for situations where a person is not otherwise covered.

LOCAL HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSIONS

All levels of government have an obligation to protect their citizens from the evils of discrimination. The Civil Rights Act of 1964 and this Act provide for local implementation of non-discrimination policies where local agencies have sufficient enforcement power and staff for good faith implementation.

Enabling legislation for the highly desirable local efforts to eliminate discrimination is provided in Article 7. It will supplement the Act passed by the General Assembly in 1962 to encourage establishment of local human rights commissions and permit local governing bodies to give them additional duties. Counties will be authorized to create commissions and cities and counties could then legally cooperate to eliminate discriminatory practices. Cities and counties could pass ordinances which will be enforceable in circuit courts of the state. Before the Act, a city could only use criminal sanctions in police courts.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Act contains several features which experience in other states has shown to be significant. The employment section applies to "the State, any of its political or civil subdivisions or agencies;" (Section 201). Discriminatory advertising is prohibited in employment, (Section 306) and in public accommodations (Section 403). Commission members can initiate complaints under the provisions of Section 502 (h) and 503 (a). The Commission can provide by regulation for the posting of notices regarding coverage of the Act, Section 502 (n). Efforts to weaken the Act by requiring a trial de novo, and a showing of "intentional" discrimination were not successful.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY

Edward T. Breathitt, Governor

COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS

Chairman
The Very Reverend Robert W. Estill
Louisville

MEMBERS

William F. Billingsley,
South Fort Mitchell
Mrs. Dann C. Byck,
Louisville
Robert M. Coleman,
Hopkinsville
Thomas Francis,
Henderson, Kentucky
Mrs. Paul L. Kraus,
Bardstown
Paul Oberst,
Lexington
Mrs. Warren P. Rash,
Middlesboro
Frank L. Stanley, Sr.,
Louisville
Charles T. Steele,
Louisville
David O. Welch,
Ashland

STAFF

Galen Martin, Executive Director

James C. Hickey,
Assistant Director
Pierre W. Jackson,
Assistant Director
Archie E. Allen,
Field Representative
Henry C. Tribble,
Field Representative

The 1960 General Assembly created the Commission and directed it, among its other powers and duties, to recommend ways of eliminating injustices occasioned by discrimination. On the basis of its five years of efforts to eliminate discrimination by voluntary methods, the Commission recommended the enactment of a public accommodations and employment law. This digest seeks to explain that law.

KKK

Klan's Craig and 6 Indicted in Capital

AC 3/4/66

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A federal grand jury here Thursday indicted Georgia Grand Dragon Calvin F. Craig and six other United Klan leaders on charges of contempt of Congress.

The indictments grew out of contempt citations voted by the House of Representatives because the Klan leaders refused to provide KKK documents subpoenaed by the House UnAmerican Activities Committee (HUAC).

HUAC completed last month an extensive investigation into Ku Klux Klan activities.

Others indicted are Imperial Wizard Robert M. Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Grand Dragon James R. Jones of North Carolina; Grand Dragon Robert E. Scoggin of South Carolina; Grand Dragon Marshall R. Kornegay of Virginia; Imperial Kludd (chaplain) George F. Dorsett and Imperial Kladd (conductor of ceremonies) Robert Hudgins, both of North Carolina.

The seven Klansmen constitute the top leadership of the United Klan, the most powerful of the multiple -KKK organizations.

Arraignment of the seven klansmen has been set tentatively for March 11 in U.S. District Coourt in the District of Columbia.

The klansmen will be tried in district court here.

Informed in Atlanta of his indictment, Craig said, "The

Continued on Page 6, Column 3

Associated Press Wirephotos

INDICTED KLANSMEN
Calvin Craig, Top, and Robert Shelton

Craig and 6 Indicted in Klan Probe

Continued From Page 1

only thing we're guilty of is just being good Americans."

Craig added, "There have been some 130 cases where persons have been cited for contempt, but only eight have been found guilty in the courts."

"I think the whole thing was rigged from the beginning," said Craig. He added he thinks the investigation was brought about because the klan didn't endorse President Lyndon B. Johnson in the last election.

Craig was critical of Rep. Charles Weltner, D-Ga., who proposed the original investigation. He said the klan had opposed Weltner in the last election and would oppose him again.

He also challenged Weltner to a public debate on the issues.

In Tuscaloosa, Shelton said the indictment is "just further harassment of the federal bureaucracy" and came as no surprise. He added "when we get into court I'm sure the issues will be quite different."

KKK AS 3/16/66

Associated Press Wirephoto

SUSPENDED
By HERSHEY

New Orleans, March 16—Jack M. Helm, member of the New Orleans local draft board, has been suspended on the basis of newspaper reports that he had been active in the Ku Klux Klan, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director has announced. Helm, 55, appeared before the House Committee on un-American Activities in January and refused to answer questions as to whether he was head of a klan unit in New Orleans and a state vice president.

KKK

Alabama's Klan Kicks Leader Out

AS 6/23/66

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—The Ku Klux Klan has ousted Alabama Grand Dragon William P. Brassell in the second major shakeup of the hooded order within a year, it was learned Sunday.

Brassell took over the Alabama klan when Robert Creel of Linden stepped down last November. Creel resigned after being arrested in Pascagoula, Miss., on charges of driving while intoxicated and carrying a concealed weapon.

Robert Shelton, imperial wizard of the klan, refused to comment on the latest shakeup in the robed hierarchy.

Brassell, who was ousted during a meeting May 13 in Linden, also refused comment. "Perhaps at a more appropriate time," he said.

A graduate of the University of Alabama and Birmingham Law School, Brassell is a salesman here. He has worked as a legal researcher and did legal work in the U.S. Air Force while in the service.

KKK AC 6/25/66

Fulton Bans Klan Vote Drive

The Ku Klux Klan and Fulton County clashed Tuesday over voter registration.

County Attorney Harold Sheats issued a statement denying that the Klan was authorized to conduct voter registration in the name of the Klan.

The question was raised after a Klan leader announced that the Klan was starting a voting registration drive this week.

Sheats conceded that some members of the Klan had been deputized as registrars, but that they were working under the supervision of the county and not a grand dragon.

"The registrar's office does not recognize the Klan or any other organization. We will suspend them as deputy registrars if they sign up voters in the name of the Klan," Sheats said.

Calvin Craig, grand dragon of the United Klans of America Inc., said Monday that 25 Klansmen are conducting the drive.

Craig's organization became interested in voting registration after the All Citizens Committee, a predominately Negro group, launched a voting drive last month.

Sheats said that no organization, including the Citizens Committee, is authorized to solicit voter registration under the guise of an organization other than the county.

United Press International

IN CONTEMPT: Robert M. Shelton Jr., Imperial Wizard of the United Klans of America, shown here at a Klan rally, was convicted of contempt of Congress last week for refusing to produce Klan records for the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

9/18/66

The Law

KKK

The Contempt Issue Overtakes the Klan

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 — "Beatniks! Sex perverts! Tennis-shoe-wearing Communists!" hissed the Imperial Wizard of the United Klans of America last Wednesday afternoon.

Robert M. Shelton Jr. was not referring to the jury that had just convicted him of contempt of Congress—even though the jury included three Negroes.

Nor did he mean the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which had initiated the charges against him for refusing to produce subpoenaed Klan records.

The Wizard's invective was directed instead against the young radicals who had "spit epithets in the face of Congress" during recent Un-American Activities Committee hearings into critics of the Vietnam war.

Christian Gentleman

None of them had been cited for contempt by the committee, he pointed out, while he had behaved as a "Christian gentleman" and now faces a possible one-year prison sentence and $1,000 fine for contempt.

The Wizard's explanation for this made little sense (he claimed the Federal Government coddles Nigras, and "pinks," but few observers would include the House Committee on Un-American Activities in such a charge), but his complaint did raise an intriguing point.

The committee had charged him and six lesser Klan figures with contempt (they will be tried here next month), while pointedly avoiding a legal confrontation with the left. Why?

It was not that the committee lacked adequate justification to move against the "Vietniks." Two war critics had simply ignored the committee's subpoenas, and two became so ill-mannered they were hauled bodily from the witness stand.

At one point, the committee members, momentarily losing their cool, did threaten to cite one witness for contempt. Delighted, he replied: "Do you wish to go for six on this?"

This was a backhanded reminder to the committee that it is in the throes of one of the most spectacular legal losing streaks in congressional history, and that a contempt citation might well become the committee's sixth consecutive Supreme Court defeat.

Actually, the committee's record in the past five years is even worse than that; 26 other contempt cases have failed in the lower courts, and no convictions have been upheld.

The battle began bravely for the committee in 1946, shortly after it was created. Seventeen officials of the Joint Anti-Fascist Committee and the entertainment industry's famous "Hollywood Ten" simply refused to answer the committee's questions about their alleged Communist connections.

They claimed that the House of Representatives' rule rule that authorized the committee to investigate "un-American propaganda" was so broad that its investigations threatened the freedom of speech and association guaranteed by the First Amendment.

They lost in the lower courts, and the Supreme Court, not then ready to cross Congress over anti-subversive investigations, affirmed the convictions.

For the next few years most witnesses who refused to talk relied on the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination!

This saved the witnesses from jail (75 were prosecuted for contempt and none were convicted), but the stigma of "taking the Fifth" became so strong that they began again to plead their First Amendment rights.

This paid off in 1957, when the Supreme Court sharply criticized the committee in Watkins v. United States and seemed almost ready to declare that its freewheeling mandate to probe "un-American propaganda" violates witnesses' freedom of speech.

The high Court retreated in 1959 when it upheld a committee contempt action in Barenblatt v. United States, but four dissenters—Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices Hugo L. Black, William J. Brennan Jr. and William O. Douglas—served notice that they would be prepared to crack down on the committee as soon as a fifth justice swung over to their view.

They have been in the majority in all the committee's contempt cases since 1961, but the reversals have been on narrow (some critics say nit-picking) grounds.

Now many civil libertarians believe a majority of the Court is merely waiting for the right case in which severely to limit the committee's power to compel testimony, if not to declare the committee unconstitutional under the First Amendment. This explains the Vienam war critics' bullying of the committee, many observers believe, as well as the members' forebearance.

Thus the Klan contempt cases might have offered an ironic forum for a legal showdown. The question as to whether the Klan, an indigenous institution born of Reconstruction, could be termed "un-American," placed in issue the constitutionality of the committee's mandate, and attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union eagerly offered to assist in Mr. Shelton's defense.

As Mr. Shelton put it this week, he turned them down on principle, saying that he considered the A.C.L.U. a "pink" organization.

But while the American left has become wise in the ways of constitutional litigation against the Un-American Activities Committee, the Klan indicated that it still has much to learn.

Mr. Shelton's attorney did not challenge the constitutionality of the Committee's broad authority, or claim that it had a chilling effect on free speech.

Instead, he contended that the subpoenaed papers were not relevant to any legitimate legislative purpose anl that the language of the subpoena was overly broad.

The trial judge ruled against him on both points, and Mr. Shelton vowed to appeal, if necessary, to the Supreme Court, where the beatniks, if nothing else, know how to play the game.

LABOR 3/2/66

THE NEW YORK TIMES, W

Wirtz Warns U.S. of a Serious Labor Shortage

Asks Coat and Suit Industry to Support Job Training

By HERBERT KOSHETZ
Special to The New York Times

MIAMI BEACH, March 1—The nation is facing a serious manpower shortage, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said here today. He said the impending shortage called for preparations to take care of the expanding needs in industry, and he asked for support of the on-the-job training program.

Mr. Wirtz said that the Department of Labor's figures on turnover, new hiring and length of the work week showed that the situation was notably tighter now than it was a year ago, although it was not as serious as during the Korean war. Reports from companies under survey reveal, he added, that there is a general shortage.

Mr. Wirtz spoke at a meeting of the national boar dof the Coat and Suit Industry an o rganization representing management and labor in the women's and children's coat industry in New York and other garment producing centers throughout the country.

The Secretary said that "industry reports showed that companies were having difficulty finding people with skills.

"In terms of fully prepared people," he said, "there is a shortage. In terms of potential workers the situation is not quite as serious."

'Emerging Shortages'

In January, when the nation's unemployment rate dropped to 4.1 per cent, the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Arthur M. Ross said that a "general labor shortage" did not exist. Instead, he said, there was "a mixture of emerging shortages in a few areas, occupations and industries."

Labor is currently in shorter supply in the Great Lakes area, the Midwest and New England. The industries most affected are construction and the metal trades.

Mr. Wirtz said there were no plans in government to put controls on wages or prices as a result of the Vietnam war.

"The American public, labor and management do not want controls," he said, "and every impulse is to stay away. No ifs, ands or buts about it."

At a news conference following his address Mr. Wirtz said he was confident that peace would not u pset the economy.

"Sudden peace" he said "does not scare me one bit. There is enough to do in the way of school construction beautifying of cities getting rid of slums and even flying to the moon to keep the nation's work force busy."

The New York Times
Willard W. Wirtz

Mr. Wirtz was asked if he envisioned a head-on collision with organized labor on the question of guidelines for wages. He replied:

"I've had a week of it and I'm sick of it."

He was referring to the union meetings he had attended in Miami Beach last week at which George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, said that labor would not adhere to guidelines limiting wages.

Mr. Wirtz said that recent surveys showed that turnover in employment was at a rate of 3.1 per cent as against 2.6 per cent a year ago.

He foresaw an increase in employment of about 2.1 million workers this year, to drop to the unemployment rate below 4 per cent. He said the available work force would increase about 1.3 million this year and that he expected that 300,000 workers not actively looking for jobs would return to the labor market. He said he also expected the unemployment total to decline about 500,000.

In his remarks at the meeting Mr. Wirtz said that if employers continued to bid for skilled workers who were fully trained rather than to undertake to train them it would push up wages and costs.

He asked for the support of the national board for the Government's on-the-job training program.

Mr. Wirtz said that the Fair Labor Standards Act had fallen short of achieving its goal. He said the present minimum wage applied to only two-thirds of the white population and one-half of the nonwhites and to only half of the women workers.

Asserts Government Has No Plans for Wage Controls

New minimum wage laws now before Congress, he said, should bring from five to seven million more workers under higher standards. He said he did not want to speculate on what the minimum wage would be but that the best estimates were from $1.40 to $1.60 an hour. The present rate is $1.25.

No Truce Meeting

MIAMI BEACH, March 1 (AP) — Mr. Meany and Mr. Wirtz went their separate ways back to Washington today without holding a truce meeting in organized labor's spat with the Johnson Administration.

"Of course I'll meet with him," Mr. Meany said, but Mr. Wirtz's reply before catching a plane back to the nation's capital was "I think not."

The labor leader had wanted Mr. Wirtz to come to him for a talk, but the Secretary of Labor went to Miami Beach today for his speech and did not go near Mr. Meany's headquarters at the Americana Hotel.

Neither was there any telephone conversation between the two, informed sources said.

Mr. Meany took a train back to Washington, where the dispute between the A.F.L.-C.I.O. and the White House will be continued in Congress over minimum wage legislation.

Mr. Wirtz's refusal to accept Mr. Meany's unofficial peace offer, informed A.F.L.-C.I.O. sources said, would not improve the soured relationship between the nation's top labor leader and the Democratic Administration.

"Meany won't knock on the White House door," said a high labor source.

Mr. Meany said he had no plans to ask for a conference with President Johnson when he gets back to Washington.

But, officials of the 13-million-member labor federation said, even without a truce meeting the Johnson Administration could patch up some of its differences with the A.F.L.-C.I.O. by backing labor's minimum wage demands in Congress.

The labor federation wants the minimum wage increased to $1.40, $1.60 and $1.75 in three annual steps. The White House reportedly has been leaning toward $1.40 this year and $1.60 in 1968.

LABOR

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, MARCH 6, 1966.

Texas Labor Council Breaks With the President

By MARTIN WALDRON
Special to The New York Times

HOUSTON, March 5 — The Texas American Federation of Labor - Congress of Industrial Organization Council, which has about 200,000 members has broken an 18-year political alliance with President Johnson, and promised a "political revolution" in Texas.

In a three-day convention that ended today at Houston's Sheraton Lincoln Hotel, the Committee on Political Education of the Texas Council of the A. F. L.-C. I. O. took these actions:

¶Repudiated two political allies of the President-Gov. John B. Connally Jr. and Attorney General Waggoner Car, both conservative Democrats.

¶Adopted a resolution expressing 'disappointment" in the President's handling of his Great Society.

¶Declared that it may start a third party in Texas to give liberal Texans a political base.

H. S. Brown, state president of A.F.L.-C.I.O., indicated that the break with the President was not irrevocable. The real dispute, he said, was with the state Democratic Party, which has been dominated by conservatives. Texas labor has supported Mr. Johnson since 1948.

One of the significant actions of the three-day labor convention was a private agreement that labor leaders in Texas would gather the 25,000 signatures needed to put Ronnie Dugger of Austin, an independent candidate, on the ballot for the United States Senate in November.

Most political observers in Texas have speculated that such a move would insure the reelection of Senator John G. Tower, the Republican who succeeded President Johnson in the Senate in 1961.

Defeat of Senator Tower has been viewed as the President's number one goal in Texas politics.

It became clear at the convention that labor would not support Mr. Carr, the leading Democratic candidate, despite what one top labor man called "pressure" from Washington.

Senator Ralph W. Yarborough, in a special appearance at the labor convention Friday, said the abolishing of the Texas poll tax by the Federal Courts last month had presented Texas with an unparalleled chance for a political revolution.

Mr. Yarborough, a liberal and an ardent foe of Governor Connally, urged Texas labor unions and liberal organizations to register at least 2 million additional voters during a current 15-day special registration.

Roy Evans, secretary treasurer of the A.F.L.-C.I.O. in Texas, had set a goal of 1 million additional liberals to be registered during the 15-day period, which was set by the state Legislature after the Federal courts threw out the Texas poll tax.

Unless the United States Supreme Court reinstates the poll tax, these newly registered voters will be able to vote in this year's elections along with the 2 million residents who registered by paying a poll tax before the January 31 deadline.

Senator Tower, Mr. Dugger and John R. Willoughby, a Houston advertising man who is running against Mr. Carr for the Democratic nomination as Senator, spoke to the convention this morning. Mr. Carr spoke Thursday. Governor Connally turned down an invitation to speak.

Senator Tower told the grim-faced labor audience today that he was opposed to most of the national labor goals — an increase in the coverage of the Minimum Wage Act, repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, and an extension in Federal unemployment benefits.

The only promise he would make to labor, he said, was that his door will be open for labor lobbyists who come to present their views.

Mr. Willoughby said that he would do whatever was necessary to get labor's endorsement and "COPE" money on which to campaign." He said he might even make labor "a hero" in a book he is writing.

"I am labor's man in this race," Mr. Willoughby said.

Mr. Dugger got a standing ovation from the audience as he declared in a speech sprinklered with literary allusions that the President's antipoverty campaign must be expanded.

Mr. Dugger, editor of a liberal Texas newspaper, The Texas Observer, denied that he planned to seek a place on the ballot this November as an independent because he wanted to disrupt the State Democratic Party, as has been charged by Mr. Carr.

"I am not seeking to beat one man," he said. "I got into this race to beat both of them."

Labor's voter registration drive, which ends March 17—unless the Federal Bureau of Investigation finds evidence that people have been prevented from registering — is being concentrated in areas with heavy Negro and Mexican-American population.

The F.B.I.'s monitoring of the registration has drawn heavy fire from Governor Connally and Mr. Carr and from Senator Tower. Mr. Connally called it "an insult" to Texas.

LABOR NYT 3/11/66

UNION FILES A SUIT TO END COLOR LINE

Chemical Workers First to Act Against an Employer

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, March 10 — The International Chemical Workers Union has become the first labor union to charge an employer with racial discrimination under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

William L. Mitchell, its president, said today that the 85,000-member union filed the suit yesterday against the Planters Manufacturing Company, a cottonseed and soybean oil producer in Clarksdale, Miss.

The suit charged the company with discriminating against Negro employes and refusing to agree to a nondiscrimination provision in a new labor agreement. A company official denied the charges.

Mr. Mitchell said that the union had filed the suit only after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which enforces the Civil Rights Act, failed to rule on its complaint against the company.

Civil rights organizations and others have many times charged organized labor with racial discrimination under the Civil Rights Act. But never before has a union filed a complaint of its own against an employer.

Bids Unions 'Take Offensive'

"The American trade union movement has too often been in a defensive position with respect to enforcement of the equal employment opportunity provisions" of the act, Mr. Mitchell said at a news conference.

Unions can use the law's provisions to forward their goals and will "make a mistake if they fail to utilize this weapon," Mr. Mitchell went on.

I believe that unions should take the offensive" in using the act, he said.

The union was certified as bargaining agent at the Planters facility last May. The plant employs 20 white workers and 95 Negro workers, the union said, but there are no white workers in the union.

The union said it had filed discrimination charges against the company October 19, after failing to achieve a contract. But it said that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission had refused to process the charges on the ground that only aggrieved individuals could take such action.

Members File Charges

Five Negro union members at the plant filed charges with the commission on Dec. 2, the union said, and on Feb. 17 the commission informed them that the charges had been processed and that they had 30 days within which to sue.

Mr. Mitchell expressed his "strong dissent" from the commission's position that a union could not file a suit. He said he would bring a suit to alter that rule unless it were changed.

The union suit, filed in the Federal District Court in Clarksdale, charges that Planters discriminates against Negroes on wages, vacations and seniority.

NYT 4/17/66

ABEL ASKS UNIONS TO ELIMINATE BIAS

LABOR

Steelworkers Chief Asserts There Is Much to Be Done

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

The head of the United Steelworkers of America called yesterday for more intensive efforts by trade unions to eliminate discrimination in their membership policies.

"Not all unions have a clean, admirable record in the field of human relations," I. W. Abel, the steelworkers' president, said at a luncheon of the League for Industrial Democracy at the Waldorf-Astoria.

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, received an award from the league for his long involvement in civil rights, union and progressive political movements.

Cites 'Honest Efforts'

Discussing the trade union record in civil rights, Mr. Abel said: "Many of the barriers still stand, but honest efforts are being made to remove them by the responsible and elected leaders of the trade union movement.

"But let's not delude ourselves. There is much to be done. The road to social and economic justice is a long one. And although we live in a world of 15,000 mile-an-hour missiles and a world shrunken by the speed of jets, our progress on that road remains slower than it should be.

"There is a restlessness and impatience among some segments of our society. There is seething indignation among others. Time is becoming more and more of an element and the longer we postpone realistic solutions, the more we invite violence.

"I see the role of the labor movement as one of making sure that we have an ever-increasing social revolution that gives top priority to the needs of man, a revolution that erases the seething indignation among minority groups, assures security and dignity to workers, eliminates the fear of the aged and meets the expectations of the young."

Leaders of the labor movement, old-time Socialists and members of the academic world joined to pay tribute to Mr. Randolph, an elder statesman in the civil rights and union movements.

Randolph Gets Ovation

When the 77-year-old Negro arose to receive the league's award from Mr. Abel, he was greeted by a long ovation. A dignified-looking man, he was openly moved by the reception.

Mr. Randolph made a brief acceptance speech, saying that Negroes were "breaking out of a history of slavery and serfdom" and that riots like those in Los Angeles and New York were inevitable.

At another luncheon, Harry Van Arsdale, president of the New York Central Labor Council, said that the labor movement was remiss in not having more women among its leaders.

At a meeting in the Commodore Hotel, held by the Community Services and Rehabilitation Institute, he said his male colleagues were "victims of custom and habit" in not giving women fuller representation.

Balancing Artist Injured In Accident at the Circus

A 21-year-old circus balancing artist suffered head injuries yesterday morning at Madison Square Garden when she failed to catch a pole after turning a somersault 20 feet in the air.

The performer, Alcija Mecner, was working in the act with her husband, Marek, at a performance of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus. He was holding the pole, and caught her by the elbows as she hit the ground and carried her out of the arena.

Many in the large audience were aoparently unaware of the accident as the spotlights shifted and the next act went on without a pause.

Mrs. Mecner was taken to St. Clare's Hospital, where her condition is listed as satisfactory.

Petrillo Quietly Battles Musicians' Segregation

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

James C. Petrillo, the warrior who led the nation's musicians as president of their union for 18 years, is back in the midst of the battle. But this time he is working quietly to compose old divisions in the union, the American Federation of Musicians, itself.

For almost two years Mr. Petrillo has been serving as head of the union's civil rights department. His duties are to bring about complete integration to a union that for many decades in all parts of the country had dual locals—chapters to which only white or Negro instrumentalists belonged.

Since Mr. Petrillo's return to action, the dual locals in more than a dozen cities have been merged, but there are still about 25 cities with segregated locals. In his home city of Chicago and in New York, where the 74-year-old Mr. Petrillo comes for occasional working sessions, the musicians' president emeritus is employing his practiced arts of argument and persuasion.

"I talk to each side, and then I bring them together," he said the other day at lunch at his favorite watering place, the Waldorf-Astoria, where he used to live while he conducted his stormy battles with record companies, radio, television and orchestras.

"It's not easy," said Mr. Petrillo, and there was a glint in his eye, as if he enjoyed again the savor of tough negotiations. "But I keep after them. They know they're going to have to merge. I don't want to push them, but we may have to."

Mr. Petrillo declined to name the locals and cities that were giving him the most trouble but indicated that they were in the North and Middle West as well as in the South. Resistance to integration, he added, comes from both sides.

The problem is not one of geography or even of ancient racial antagonisms. Small segregated locals, whether Negro or white, whether Northern or Southern, don't want to give up their prerogatives. These include autonomy, ownership of real estate, independent treasuries and the privilege of an annual paid trip for delegates to the national convention.

Mr. Petrillo does not complain about the difficulties of the assignment, but he is faced by constant complications. Lawyers, appraisers, actuaries and accountants have to be brought in to help heach agreement.

He does not expect miracles. He knows that his job will be slow and laborious. But he expects to wind it up after some months and resume the life of retirement that he sought when he voluntarily gave up the union presidency in 1958.

Mr. Petrillo's return to action came at the union convention in Portland, Ore., in June, 1964. Invited to attend a dinner honoring Herman Kenin, his successor as president, in Mr. Kenin's home town, Mr. Petrillo also was asked to address the convention.

He made a passionate, fighting speech. It has been preserved in a recording called "Jimmy Speaks!" In the words of the record sleeve, "one of organized labor's greats" returned "to thrill musicians with an eloquent plea for unity and confusion to all dissenters."

Mr. Petrillo so stirred the 1,200 delegates, that they unanimously voted to ask him to resume important duties.

The veteral of numerous labor wars clearly relishes the new activity, though he disclaims any desire to head the union again.

"The time had come for a change," he said. "There was a different atmosphere, and what was needed was a leader for a new era. Kenin is a lawyer, and I suggested him myself."

Mr. Petrillo's voice still rasps and his accents retain the clipped toughness of the Chicago in which he grew up and rose to union leadership. He speaks with pride of the victory he won in the long conflict in the nineteen-forties with the record companies for some sort of royalty payments and of the resulting Music Performance Trust Funds, which have provided so much employment to musicians and brought so much good music free to so many sections of the country.

He recalls without rancor the way he was attacked in his years of leadership. He conveys the impression of a man who regards it almost as a badge of honor to have been reviled like John L. Lewis of the miner's union. He shows you a booklet of cartoons poking fun at him and growls at the cartoonists who refused to give permission to have their drawings included in the collection, which the union printed as a tribute to him.

No labor leader relished a fight more than Mr. Petrillo. The zest for battle remains.

N.A.A.C.P. Aide Accuses Unions Of Stalling on Desegregation

LABOR

Hill Sees a Major Conflict If Bias Isn't Ended by Locals and on Seniority Lines

6/30/66

By DAVID R. JONES

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 29 —A civil rights leader said today that the movement was facing a major conflict with organized labor because unions were not moving fast enough to eliminate segregated locals and seniority lines.

Herbert Hill, national labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made the assertion in an interview after filing additional charges of such discrimination by two unions with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Mr. Hill said the N.A.A.C.P. would ask its convention next week to pass a resolution asking the labor movement to "reverse itself" on these issues and telling labor that the test of its commitment to civil rights would be "what they do and how fast they do it" on these questions.

Wilkins Sees Passage

Roy Wilkins, executive Director of the N.A.A.C.P., said in a telephone interview from New York that he believed a resolution would be passed at the convention urging labor to do more in this area. Segregated locals and seniority lines are "a very hot issue," he said.

Mr. Hill said the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations recently resisted a suggestion from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to meet with civil rights leaders and commission officials to discuss these problems.

He said separate meetings were arranged, and that the labor group resisted the idea of interfering with international unions in their handling of these questions.

Spokesmen for the A.F.L.-C.IO and the commission hotly denied that they were dragging their feet on these questions, and said labor did not veto a joint meeting with the rights leaders A commission spokesman acknowledged, however, that the civil rights groups in their meeting generally wanted to move faster in eliminating seniority segregation than those at the union meeting.

Donald S. Slaiman, director of the A.F.L.-C.I.O. Civil Rights Department, said that the federation's President, George Meany, had urged unions to eliminate such discrimination, and that the federation was promoting compliance.

The New York Times

Herbert Hill

A commission spokesman said there was no question that such discrimination was illegal, and that the agency was making efforts to bring laggards into compliance. He and Mr. Slaiman pointed out that there were practical difficulties in working out changes in complex seniority provisions, however, and labor sources complained that Mr. Hill was only seeking publicity.

Mr. Hill has played a key role in the filing by the N.A.A.C.P. of more than 1,400 complaints of racial discrimination with the commission. Most of these were against employers and employment agencies, but he said a large percentage was against unions.

In complaints Mr. Hill filed today individuals accused the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad of permitting segregated locals in Georgia, and the United Papermakers Union of similar actions in Virginia.

He also filed discrimination complaints by individuals against the Charlotte Pipe and Foundry Company, Charlotte, N. C.; the North Carolina Employment Security Commission, Charlotte, N. C.; the V. C. Chemical Company, Memphis; Aro, Inc., Tullahoma, Tenn.; the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, New York; and the Drake Memorial Hospital, Cincinnati.

LABOR

Eugene Patterson

AC 7/22/66

Needed: A Stake In This Society

A letter from Pennsylvania is signed "Fed Up." "I have been one who felt Negroes needed help and encouragement," the writer says. "Now I feel that they need to be controlled."

That is probably a standard reaction to the city riots. The revulsion will grow as they continue. Watts may yet make a reactionary movie actor governor of California. "Black power" is propelling the Negro race full speed astern with every window broken and bottle thrown.

The rioters must be controlled. But Negroes will still need help and encouragement. To take an either-or view is to miss the scene, and join the fringe of seg politicians who never lifted a hand to help the Negro but now howl for his control, or of black demagogues who'd rather run out of control than build a society.

* * *

To see the thing plain, look at riot-troubled Cleveland. Policemen and National Guardsmen have a clear duty to march into the grimy Hough district, pronounced Huff, and use whatever force is necessary to halt the animalistic looting and violence by Negroes there. A civilized society cannot put up with it. The rioters must be controlled, as "Fed Up" wrote.

That does not remove the obligation for Americans to look at the uncivilized conditions in which the uncivilized conduct arose.

The Negroes in Hough are dirt poor. Being poor, they can't shop for a house outside the slum and buy into fancy Shaker Heights where a few middle class Negroes have gone. Being poor, they can only pay through the nose for tiny subdivided warrens in rotted apartment buildings without bathrooms and raise their children in garbage-heaped alleys. The children go to largely segregated schools where standards stay low. To stop being poor and escape from Hough, the Negro must find work.

Yet Negro unemployment exceeds 8 per cent in a city where overall unemployment is less than 3 per cent. The Negro median family income is $2,500 a year below the Cleveland white. The employers say Negroes lack skills, which is true.

Can they turn for help to organized labor, and expect the building trades unions to help them gain skills?

As of last January, the pipefitters Cleveland local had 80 white apprentices, no Negroes (it had 1,519 white journeymen, no Negroes); the plumbers local had 162 white apprentices, one Negro (1,482 white journeymen, three Negroes); the electrical workers had 238 white apprentices, two Negroes (1,258 white journeymen, two Negroes); the ironworkers local had 61 white apprentices, one Negro (1,786 journeymen, no Negroes).

It is important to get that picture of a race being frozen out of U.S. society, as well as to "control" the rioters, or Americans will not even understand what's going on, much less know what's expected of society.

JULY 1966

The American Federationist

A Case History: Union Busting in the South

LABOR

King Pledges Help For Fire Strikers

By MARION GAINES

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. encouraged Atlanta's striking firemen Friday to "stand together that our city might be brought to realize the necessity of adequate wages for all public service employes."

Dr. King, in a telegram to Jack Martin, president of the Atlanta Firefighters Union Independent, expressed hope City of Atlanta officials will come to a "realization of your just grievances for higher pay and better working conditions."

"You may count on me for any help which my schedule permits," said the Negro civil rights leader.

INVITED TO SPEAK

Martin said he sent a return wire to King expressing a desire to "meet with him personally" and inviting him "to speak to our union."

"The mere fact that we dared negotiate seems to be the real issue that has placed so many innocent people in jeopardy," Martin told King.

Martin, a former Atlanta Fire Department captain, has been fired by the city along with most of his 500-man union which went on strike Sept. 3 for the second time in three months.

The constitutional right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," King said in his telegram to Martin, is rendered impossible "when a man makes barely enough to provide for his family and must work a 60-hour week for even the barest of subsistence."

FOR CITIZENS, TOO

"Atlanta must invest in the livelihood of its citizens with the same determination it has invested in the expressways, the stadium and other physical improvements," King said.

Martin said he was "quite pleased that someone with national status like Dr. King would take this interest in our cause."

Martin said his union is continuing its campaign to gather enough petition signatures to force the city to hold a public referendum to determine the fate of the striking firemen.

LABOR

Unions Look South for Growth

By ART PINE
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—Labor leaders are looking south for the next big growth of trade unionism.

The reason: Transplanted Northern industry and a just-sprouting middle-class economy make the Southland the nation's most fertile field for union seeding.

"There's more union organizing activity in Georgia now than ever before," says Alan Kistler, assistant director of organizing for the national office of AFL-CIO.

But Kistler is quick to point out that AFL-CIO isn't planning any all-out organizing campaign like the highly touted "Operation Dixie" which the CIO finally gave up in 1952.

Nor is it expecting overnight results.

"I don't know whether you'll encounter the kind of big sweeps anymore that we used to get in the North," Kistler says.

Since 1954, according to the National Labor Relations Board, the number of NLRB-supervised elections (to decide whether workers want a union) has more than doubled.

BUT AN NLRB spokesman credits much of the gain to the coming of northern industry, which already accepts the existence of unions as bargaining agents.

"Union expansion in the South still has not been very dramatic," the spokesman points out candidly.

Just the same, says Kistler, "I've noticed that we're getting a better response. The statistics don't verify this, but the gap is narrowing in the South."

To labor leaders, who set more realistic goals after the failure of "Operation Dixie," even gradual gains in the South are good news.

Only recently, they point out, has the southland begun to break down some of the barriers which have always been held up to unionists. "The turning-point just came about three years ago," Kistler says:

Before that, Kistler says, "Southerners saw little need for unions, and were even suspicious of them. There were hardly enough unions to serve as an example, and hardly enough industry in which they could function."

FURTHER, Kistler says, there was always the paternalistic relationship of employer to employe.

"The worker knew the boss would always take care of him in an emergency," Kistler says, "and he didn't want to seem ungrateful for past favors by supporting a union movement. There was a feeling of dependency rather than independency."

Perhaps most annoying to the unionists, southern workers always seemed to listen to the community leadership.

Recalls AFL-CIO spokesman Al Zack: "They used to say to themselves: 'If Mr. Stovall wants us to do it, it must be right.' And they did."

But Zack, Kistler and other labor spokesmen feel, that unionism is finally catching on in the South.

"Ten years ago," says Kistler, "anytime we made progress, it was mostly due to our own campaigning. Today, the initiative is coming from the workers."

Both men think the blossoming economy in the Southeast has made the big difference in the workers' response.

"Before this," says Zack, "it seemed as though the power structure had simply substituted renting for owning slaves. Now, there's a small middle class developing in the South, and that's what unions are made of."

Notes Kistler: "Collective bargaining isn't a very realistic thing to someone who isn't being paid a decent wage. A better-paid worker can see it as a goal worth the risk. He understands he needs it to raise his standard of living."

The two also point to greater social freedom of Southern Negroes as a significant factor in union hopes.

"It's a hometown example of what organized efforts can do," Kistler says. "Now we can say to the worker, 'Look at what the Negro accomplished by standing up. You can do it, too.'"

SAYS ZACK: "Negroes will also play an increasingly important part in the labor movement in the South."

Despite all their optimism, the two AFL-CIO spokesmen say union organizers still have a lot to overcome if unionism is to expand much in the Southeast.

Their biggest obstacle is the anti-closed shop laws which Southern states have adopted under Section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act.

"It creates the impression among the workers that unions are something outside the law," says Kistler. "It also forces us to spend far too much on maintaining existing membership rolls. We don't have much left to go after new people."

Also a thorn to union development, says Zack, is "the bond issue gimmick," which he says was "devised in the South several years ago."

A local community promises to build a manufacturing plant and rent or lease it if local industry will move South, "When the question of unions comes up then," Zack says, "where do we stand? The management and community leadership are allied against us."

THE THIRD MAJOR factor to hurt union efforts in the South has been organized labor's outspoken support of the civil rights movement.

In one series of antilabor ads placed in hundreds of Southern newspapers, Zack remembers, there was a photograph of former AFL-CIO vice president James Carey dancing with a Negro woman.

"They naturally neglected to point out," Zack says acidly, "that the woman was the wife of an African labor minister and that the photo was taken at a Washington embassy reception."

Zack says labor won't change its position on civil rights, but he thinks many Southern workers are changing theirs about unions.

The biggest response, he reports, has been from food producers, textile workers and government employes.

"They're being convinced," Zack says, "Our box-score is rapidly rising in the South."

Then how soon will the South become unionized? "Anyone's guess is good," says Kistler. "As soon as we can."

LABOR 10/21/66 AC

State AFL-CIO Won't Endorse a Candidate

SAVANNAH, Ga., (AP) — The head of organized labor in Georgia said Thursday the AFL-CIO will endorse no candidate in this year's general election for governor.

William H. Montague Sr., of Atlanta, president of the state AFL-CIO, said the convention here would end Friday without naming a preference.

Earlier, E. T. Kehrer, the Southeastern director of the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department, said race is the main issue in the Georgia gubernatorial campaign.

"When a political campaign is run on the race issue, you hold on to your pants, your shirt and your undershorts, because a first - class fleecing is about to take place," he declared.

POLITICAL 'FLEECING'
William H. Montague

Kehrer, also of Atlanta, said the late Tom Watson, leader of the Populist movement in the 1890s, noted that merchants and politicians had only to yell "Negro rule" to thwart any attempt to educate and organize Southern white tenant farmers and workers.

"The issue today is the same as in Tom Watson's day," he said, asking, "Shall the race issue divide us?"

Kehrer said, "Today, whether the cry be nigger, nigger, or state's rights, the alternate objective is to keep working people in a condition of servitude, to prevent union organization or to badly divide, cripple and weaken this only weapon workers have to protect themselves."

Although he did not mention the Democratic candidate for governor, Lester Maddox, by name, he said a "furniture dealer" was capitalizing on the race issue to cover an attack on oragnized labor.

Maddox operates a furniture store in Atlanta.

After his speech, a newsmen asked Kehrer why he made no mention of Callaway.

Kehrer replied, "Nobody here needs to be reminded that Callaway is no friend of organized labor."

OCTOBER 1966

LABOR
Papers + Briefs

The American Federationist

THE '66 ELECTIONS: Progress or Stalemate

NYT 8/23/66

Koota Says New Court Rulings Have 'Shackled' Police Officials

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Change in Position

Aaron E. Koota, the Brooklyn District Attorney, charged yesterday that "confusion and uncertainty" spread by recent court rulings had "effectively shackled" law enforcement.

Mr. Koota told 52 graduating Housing Authority policemen that new restrictions on police interrogations and older court decisions on searches and seizures had "contributed to the removal of an effective deterrent to crime, namely, the certainty of swift discovery, apprehension and punishment of the criminal."

Mr. Koota's remarks, particularly regarding confessions, were markedly different from statements he made last November. He said then that a person should have access to a lawyer "at the moment he comes into contact with the law."

"When a man intelligently waives his right to counsel, his confession should not be admitted [into evidence]," Mr. Koota said at that time.

Yesterday he called for a new

Continued on Page 23, Column 6

No Weakening Seen

By SIDNEY E. ZION

The commander of detectives in the Times Square area said this week that the recent United States Supreme Court ruling on confessions has not weakened law enforcement.

"They're not stealing the precinct out from under me, that's for sure," said Lieut. Joseph G. Calhoun, in the commander's office at the 16th Precinct station house on 47th Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues. "The city is not being run away with."

"We don't get as many confessions as before," the husky, bespectacled 58-year-old lieutenant said. "As soon as you say to them that they don't have to talk, many of them don't talk. But nobody walks out of here free. You've got to understand that in most cases we don't need a confession—we've got more evidence than is required to make a prima-facie case."

The Supreme Court's confession ruling, handed down on

Continued on Page 23, Column 5

NO 'HANDCUFFING' OF POLICE IS SEEN

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

June 13, requires the police to warn a suspect of his rights and to offer indigents free legal counsel before questioning. Only if the suspect freely and knowingly waives his rights may a subsequent confession be admitted into evidence.

Many Decry Ruling

The ruling has been decried by most enforcement officials, who say it will "handcuff" the police by making it difficult, if not impossible, to get confessions. These, they contend, are the backbone of law enforcement.

But Lieutenant Calhoun, who was born in the a station house and has been on the police force 34 years, said that in his precinct, one of the busiest in the city, arrests had not been affected and that "we've performed just as well."

"It's harder work, that's all," he said. "What has happened is that now we do our work before making an arrest, whereas, before the confession decision, we often went to work only after getting a statement from the suspect. We're doing more scientific work now, more legwork."

As an example, Lieutenant Calhoun, a detective for 29 years, pointed to a typical burglary case.

"Say there's been a burglary and we find out that there's a guy who was seen in the neighborhood who has a burglary record and doesn't belong in that part of town," he explained.

"Before this ruling, we would just pick him up and take him in for questioning. Now we check for fingerprints and, if we don't come up with anything, we put him under surveillance. So, while we might not get him for that particular burglary, we catch him on the next one."

Can Live With Decision

The commander of detectives said that while he did not like the Supreme Court decision, "we can live with it, we're surviving."

"If that's the times, the trend, the change, we have to abide by it," he said. "If it makes the job harder, so what? In fact, in some ways I favor the decision, because at least it gives the poor, unfortunate suspect, the guy you have to protect, the same rights as the hardened criminal, who has money for a lawyer and would never talk anyway."

How do the police elicit confessions from those other than hardened criminals?

"Well," Lieutenant Calhoun said, "some of them just want to get it off their chests. But most of them you have to con. You promise them you'll put in a good word with the D.A. [District Attorney], you make 'em like you, like that, you know?

Play Opposing Roles

"And you use techniques like the nice-guy, tough-guy deal, Mutt and Jeff, whatever you want to call it. You know, one detective acts tough and the other guy is the buddy, the friend who only wants to help," the lieutenant said.

Do the police still use these techniques if the suspect waives his rights to counsel and silence?

"It doesn't work that way now," Lieutenant Calhoun said. "Because those who are now willing to talk are the kind you don't have to con. They just want to talk."

The lieutenant said that one major reason for the police opposition to the confession ruling was that "You have to be almost humble to these suspects."

"When you read them their rights," he said, "it almost insults your intelligence. Often after you've read it once they'll stare at you and say they don't know what you're talking about, and then you have to read it again."

Koota Says New Court Rulings Have 'Shackled' Police Officials

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

rule under which "a confession or other evidence, even if illegally obtained, could nevertheless be competent and admissable at a trial, depending on all the surrounding circumsances in the reviewable discretion of the trial court."

Mr. Koota's suggestions in November, made in radio and newspaper interviews, were in large part adopted by the United States Supreme Court in June.

The Court ruled that suspects must be advised of their right to remain silent and offered legal counsel by the police before questioning. No statement may be admitted into evidence unless the suspect has been advised of these rights and has waived them.

Backing Is Promised

In November, Mr. Koota said: "If a man has a constitutional right to a lawyer, the mere fact that it might impede law enforcement or make it more difficult to prosecute is not a reason to deny him those rights. I think that is fundamental to our judicial process and our form of government."

Yesterday, he said: "The police officer today must patrol his post with a copy of the Penal Law under one arm and the latest decisions of the Supreme Court under the other."

He also told the new patrolmen that "so long as I am District Attorney . . . I and my office will stand by you and support you in your decisions and actions if they are made honestly and in good faith, even though it subsequently develops that they were not consistent with the latest pronouncements of the courts."

"Do not try to be lawyers," he continued. "Do not try to be judges. Do your utmost within the law to protect the innocent, peaceful citizens. Let us, the lawyers and the prosecutors, carry the cudgels for you in the courts."

Example Provided

Mr. Koota gave the Housing Authority policemen the following example of how he said the courts had undermined the morale of the police by sowing "uncertainty and confusion" in criminal law.

"A woman leans out of a window of a housing project, in the wee hours of the morning, screaming, 'Help, thief, murder, stop that man!'

"A Housing Authority policeman observes a man running out of the house at top speed. What is the patrolman to do? . . .

"Has the officer the right to arrest this man who may be completely innocent of wrongdoing? If he stops this individual, may he demand an explanation of the flight or may he search the person of the suspect?"

Mr. Koota said that whatever split-second decision the policeman made would ultimately be reviewed by judges, "sitting in cloistered towers, in a calm, detached amosphere."

Monday morning quarterbacking is a poor substitute for the immediacy of police decision and action necessary to protect the public," he said.

Comment by Professor

A leading expert in criminal law said yesterday that Mr. Koota's hypothetical case was one in which the policeman could "clearly" make a legal arrest.

The expert, Prof. Yale Kamisar of the University of Michigan Law School, said:

"There is no doubt that in such a situation, with a woman yelling, 'Stop that man,' an officer has probable cause to make an arrest. The Constitution does not forbid it."

Moreover, Mr. Kamisar said that under the New York stop-and-frisk law, which was recently upheld by the State Court of Appeals, "reasonable suspicion" was sufficient to justify an arrest.

Professor Kamisar, who is known as a liberal in legal matters and whose articles have been cited by the United States Supreme Court, said he was "very discouraged" over Mr. Koota's speech.

"It was refreshing to have him depart from the party line last fall," Mr. Kamisar said. "Evidently he has decided it is more politically attractive to return to the fold."

Mr. Koota could not be reached for comment on why he had apparently changed his position.

As to the effect the new confession ruling is having on law enforcement, Paul Kallman, a detective of the 48th Precinct, in the Bathgate section of Brooklyn, said yesterday:

"The ruling has made it harder for us, but we're still doing the job. In the great majority of cases we don't need confessions, although we like to get them because they cement the case."

Pearson Pays Off a Bet

OTTAWA, Aug. 12 (Canadian Press)—Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson has sent $5 to Prime Minister Wilson of Britain. When Mr. Wilson was in Ottawa two weeks ago Mr. Pearson offered to bet him that West Germany would defeat Britain in the World Soccer Cup championships "in order to help your balance of payments." Britain won.

Saigon Plans Bicycle Race

SAIGON, South Vietnam, Aug. 12 (Reuters)—The South Vietnamese Government said today it would stage a 300-mile bicycle race next week. About 150 cyclists will compete along a road frequently ambushed by the Vietcong. Troops are expected to guard the route.

COMMENTARY
WORLD'S BEST MAGAZINE?
SEE FOR YOURSELF
☐ 7 Mo. Trial $4.79
☐ 12 Mo. $8.00
COMMENTARY, NY-D
165 East 56 St., NY, NY
☐ Bill me.
☐ Check enclosed.
Name.....
Address.....
Zip.....
Outside USA + $1/yr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

E	I	L	E	E	N			A	L	L		A	M	B
S	C	A	R	L	E	T		X	I	I		F	I	E
P	E	G	G	Y	O	N	E	I	L	L		A	M	Y
	C	I	O			A	T	O	I		I	R	I	S
P	R	O	T	E	M		E	M	M	E	T
A	E	C		V	O	A		S	A	P	O	R
T	A	O		E	L	S	A		R	I	F	E
A	M	N	T		L	O	Y	A	L		F	D	R	S
		D	A	V	Y		R	H	E	A		H	E	T
		A	T	O	M	S		A	N	E		O	M	Y
			A	W	A	I	T		E	A	S	T	E	R
B	P	E	S		L	E	A	D			O	M	N
E	E	L		R	O	S	I	E	O	G	R	A	D	Y
S	A	L		A	N	T		B	L	O	O	M	E	R
S	U	E		P	E	A			S	T	R	A	D	S

8/13/66

18 IN HOUSE G.O.P. OFFER RIGHTS BILL

LEGISLATION

They Say Last Year Showed Stronger Law Is Needed

NYT 3/6/66

WASHINGTON, March 5 (UPI—Eighteen House Republicans moved today to steal a march on the Johnson Administration by proposing new civil rights legislation to bolster enforcement of the four major laws enacted since 1957.

The group, led by Representative Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland, announced that the new bill would be introduced Monday. In a joint statement, they said the civil rights laws passed in 1957, 1960, 1964 and 1965, "if enforced, will remedy many ancient wrongs."

"But events of the last 12 months demonstrate that the courts do not yet have all the legal tools necessary," the G.O.P. members said.

The Republican bill would do the following:

¶Set up nondiscriminatory methods of selecting juries in both Federal and state courts without regard to race, color or sex.

¶Toughen Federal criminal penalties for anyone depriving an individual of his guaranteed civil rights.

¶Provide Federal safeguards against either private or official violence for civil rights workers.

¶Make it easier to prosecute public officials involved in violence against civil rights advocates.

¶Subject state or local governments to damage suits in areas where officials violate an individual's civil rights.

¶Give the Justice Department authority to initiate civil rights law suits on its own.

Laws Called Insufficient

In their statement, the Representative said:

"It is empty to declare our commitment to equal rights if men and women can be persecuted for exercising those rights. It is insufficient to pass laws implementing the constitution if men can disobey the letter of those laws and subvert their spirit with impunity.

"It is futile to take civil rights controversies from the streets into the courts if he administration of justice lacks uniform equity and force.

"It is time for us to guarantee that justice will be done throughout the land."

The bill follows the general lines expected to be taken by the Administration in its request for civil rights legislation this year.

The G. O. P. group, in addition to Mr. Mathis, consisted of Alphonzo Bell of California, William T. Cahill of New Jersey, Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, Robert F. Ellsworth of Kansas, Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey.

Also, Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, James Harvey of Michigan, Frank J. Norton of upstate New York, Theodore R. Kupferman of Manhattan, William S. Maillard of California, Joseph M. McDade of Pennsylvania, F. Bradford Morse of Massachusetts.

Also, Charles A. Mosher of Ohio, Ogden R. Reid of Westchester, Howard W. Robison of upstate New York, and Robert T. Stafford of Vermont.

~~FEDERAL P~~ LEGISLATION

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1966.

NYT 4/28/66

House Approves Enforcement Power on Job Rights

By JOHN HERBERT

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 27—The House of Representatives passed with surprising ease today a bill to give enforcement powers to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the agency established by the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The vote was 298 to 94.

The bill would give the commission authority to issue cease and desist orders against employers and labor unions found to practice discrimination because of race, sex or national origin.

Under Title VII of the civil rights act, the commission, headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., has only conciliatory powers. If conciliation fails, the aggrieved party can file a lawsuit or the Attorney General can go into court against patterns of discrimination.

Despite the large affirmative vote, it was generally believed in Congress and in the commission that the bill would not pass the Senate this year. The Administration is not pushing it and many feel that the commission, in operation only nine months, has not yet established what can be done under its present powers.

Powell Plays Major Role

The chief force behind the bill was Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of Manhattan, who heads the Hous Education and Labor Committee.

Mr. Powell was reported to have insisted that the bill be considered ahead of some bills regarded as more vital by the Administration, including the minimum wage measure. The House leadership went along without much display of enthusiasm.

Republicans gave the bill strong support, but they objected to the method of administration it prescribes.

"This bill," the House Republican Policy Committee said in a statement, "would transform the commission into an agency that would rival the old National Labor Relations Board under the Wagner Act and before the Taft-Hartley amendments.

"As a result, the employer labor union or employment agency that is charged with an unfair employment practice, would find that the same commission that filed the charge, investigated the case, determined that there was merit to the charge, attempted conciliation issued a complaint, and conducted the hearing, would have the power to make the final determination of guilt or innocence and to issue the cease and desist order."

Amendment Defeated

A Republican amendment to split the power between an investigator and the commission, as was done with the N.L.R.B., was defeated by a voice vote. Representative James G. O'Hara, Democrat of Michigan, said the bill was based on "the tried system used in state fair employment practice laws."

Representative Powell said strong enforcement powers were needed if the nation was to end discrimination in employment.

The bill would also extend coverage of the law. Under present law, businesses with 100 or more employes are covered and this will be reduced to 25 or more by June of 1968. Under the bill, coverage would be extended to businesses with eight or more employes by June of 1967. It is estimated that on that date more than 37 million employes would be covered.

Since Title VII went into effect last July 2, the commission has received several thousand complaints. It has reported widespread voluntary compliance and some success with conciliation. Several law suits have been filed where conciliation did not work.

Mr. Roosevelt testified last summer that the commission needed enforcement powers to be fully effective.

Strikebreaking Alleged

Leaders of the Transport Workers Union appealed by telegram to President Johnson and Cabinet officers yesterday to halt the alleged use of Cuban women refugees for strikebreaking. The union charged that 20 refugee women were hired at premium wages to replace striking union members at United China and Glass Company.

TEN CENTS

LEGISLATION

PRESIDENT URGES CONGRESS TO BAN ALL HOUSING BIAS

4/29/66

Message Also Asks Stronger Criminal Laws to Protect Civil Rights Workers

CALLS FOR JURY REFORM

Housing Plan Is Expected to Meet Stiff Opposition—Ervin Criticizes It

Text of civil rights message will be found on Page 22.

By JOHN D. POMFRET
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 28—President Johnson asked Congress today to enact "the first effective Federal law against discrimination" on racial or religious grounds in the sale and rental of housing.

The request was included in the President's Civil Rights Message. It is expected to arouse more controversy and opposition in Congress than the other provisions proposed by Mr. Johnson in the message.

The other provisions, like most past civil rights legislation, would have their principal impact in the Southern states. Discrimination in housing, however, is widely practiced in all parts of the country and many Congressmen from the North as well as the South

PRESIDENT URGES CONGRESS TO BAN ALL HOUSING BIAS

4/29/66

Message Also Asks Stronger Criminal Laws to Protect Civil Rights Workers

CALLS FOR JURY REFORM

Housing Plan Is Expected to Meet Stiff Opposition—Ervin Criticizes It

Text of civil rights message will be found on Page 22.

By JOHN D. POMFRET
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 28—President Johnson asked Congress today to enact "the first effective Federal law against discrimination" on racial or religious grounds in the sale and rental of housing.

The request was included in the President's Civil Rights Message. It is expected to arouse more controversy and opposition in Congress than the other provisions proposed by Mr. Johnson in the message.

The other provisions, like most past civil rights legislation, would have their principal impact in the Southern states. Discrimination in housing, however, is widely practiced in all parts of the country and many Congressmen from the North as well as the South will be under pressure from constituents who want Negroes to continue to be excluded from their neighborhoods.

Rights Workers Protection

Mr. Johnson also proposed a far stronger law than anything now on the statute books to protect Negroes and others who work for racial justice from interference in the exercise of their rights.

He sought legislation to insure that Federal and state court juries are selected in nondiscriminatory fashion.

The President also asked Congress to broaden the Attorney General's authority to bring suit for the desegregation of schools and public facilities.

He asked the Senate to approve legislation that cleared the House yesterday to give enforcement powers to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the agency established by the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Lastly, he asked Congress to provide funds for 100 more agents for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in order to strengthen the bureau's capacity to deal with civil rights crimes.

Agency's Manpower Taxed

The bureau has 6,492 agents. Mr. Johnson said in his message that at times in the recent past as many as a third of them had been assigned to the investigation of civil rights matters.

Shortly before he sent his proposals to Capitol Hill, Mr. Johnson dismissed them with a group of civil rights leaders at the White House.

Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who participated in the meeting, described the reaction of the civil rights leaders as "extremely warm."

One of the civil rights proponents said that the group regarded Mr. Johnson's proposals favorably, but probably would try to strengthen them.

He said that the group would

Continued on Page 22, Column 5

Johnson Calls on Congress to Ban All Housing Bias

Continued From Page 1, Col. 8

probably try to get Congress to enact legislation to transfer state criminal trials to Federal courts in areas with "segregated systems of justice."

He said that the civil rights advocates might also attempt to secure passage of legislation to pay Federal indemnities to civil rights workers injured while attempting to secure rights for Negroes.

Not Disappointed

He emphasized that the civil rights leaders who met with the President were in no way disappointed with Mr. Johnson's proposals and intended to work for their passage in Congress.

Among those meeting with Mr. Johnson were the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Negro American Labor Council and a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations; Floyd R. McKissick, director of the Congress of Racial Equality; Miss Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Women; Joseph L. Rauh, general counsel of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, and David Brody, director of the Washington office of the Anti-Defamation League.

Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, who is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, also attended the meeting.

He said that his committee would begin hearings on the President's proposals on Wednesday with Attorney General Katzenbach as the first witness.

Mr. Katzenbach said that he thought the President's proposals would be passed by Congress, but added: "I'm not going to give long odds on it until I know how the Republican leaders are going to go."

The Attorney General said that the Republican leaders had not indicated that they were going to oppose the proposals, nor have they given their commitment to support them.

He indicated that he had kept in close touch with the Senate minority leader, Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, during the drafting of the legislation. Mr. Katzenbach said that the Senator had indicated that he liked some of the proposals, but had questions about others.

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, quickly attacked the housing provisions of Mr. Johnson's message.

"It's unconstitutional according to all decisions handed down by the Supreme Court during the first 150 years of its existence and it's unenforceable," he said. "It is not aimed solely at the South. Its impact may be felt more strongly in other areas of the country. It should be most interesting to watch the politics or the debate now that others' oxen are being gored."

The bill incorporating the intent of the President's message declares it to be the policy of the United States to prevent "discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin in the purchase, rental, lease, financing, use and occupancy of housing throughout the nation."

The bill would make it unlawful for anyone engaged in the sale or lease of a dwelling, including real estate agents or brokers to refuse to sell or rent because of race, color, religion or national origin. Nor could they discriminate in the conditions of sale or rental or represent for discriminatory purposes that any dwelling was not available for inspection, sale or rental when that was not so.

Damages Provided

The prohibitions would be enforced by civil actions in Federal or state courts brought by private individuals or, where a pattern of discrimination appeared to exist, by the Justice Department. Courts would be empowered to issue orders banning discrimination and, on a showing that discrimination had been practiced, award damages of up to $500.

At present, only Federally sisted housing is subject to Federal discrimination bans, under executive order.

The bill would leave in operation state and locad fair housing laws.

The new criminal statute proposed by the President is aimed at what he called "a relatively few racial fanatics" who would deny civil rights by violence.

The Federal laws covering this area were passed during the Reconstruction period after the Civil War, with maximum prison terms of 10 years. The Justice Department has found them inadequate.

The President proposed that any interference in the exercise of fundamental rights by threats or force by any person, acting individually or in a group, privately or officially, be made a Federal crime.

The rights specifically enumerated are voting, education housing, employment, jury service and travel.

Maximum penalties would be one year in prison and a $1,000 fine in cases where no bodily injury was done, 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine where there was bodily injury and life imprisonment when death resulted.

NEW LITTER BASKETS TO ADORN THE CITY

The city's streets will soon be adorned with chartreuse and green litter receptacles instead of plain litter baskets.

Sanitation Commissioner Joseph F. Periconi said 1,000 of the new baskets would go into use next month, 200 in each borough.

Christopher C. Gilson, executive director of the Citizens Committee to Keep New York Clean, annuonced the plan at a lunche on meetingof that committee yesterday. He said he hoped that New Yorkers would associate the chartreuse and green colors with cleanliness.

Also announced were a new float featuring Phil D. Basket, New York's "king of cleanliness," and a talking litter basket with Phil D. Basket urging persons to make use of the receptacles. The float will be exhibited at ball games, beaches and other places where there are crowds.

Some of the other new projects that the committee will undertake soon include new Clean City Digests to be distributed to schools, new teaching aids for schools, a garden to be planted on a city-owned lot in Brooklyn to snow what can be done with an unkept area and new clean-city advertisements for radio, magazine, newspaper and television.

Text of the President's Message to Congress Urging New Civil Right Legislation

WASHINGTON, April 28—Following is the text of President Johnson's today:

Last year I came before the Congress in an hour of crisis to recommend new and powerful guarantees of the right to vote.

Americans faced again the ancient questions:

Who shall take part in the process of democracy?

Shall it be only those born with white skins?

If a man's color should not be the sole criterion for determining his right to vote, how shall we make sure that Negroes are not denied the ballot?

I asked the Congress, on that March night in 1965, to strike down all restrictions to voting in all elections—Federal, state and local—which have been used to deny Negroes the right to vote.

Less than five months after I spoke, the Congress perfected and passed our Voting Rights Act of 1965.

I said then that the challenge of voting discrimination had been nothing less than a test of our faith in democracy. Congress met that test. The voting Rights Act of 1965 reaffirmed the equality of man and government by all the people.

The fruits of the Voting Rights Act and of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 are already impressively apparent.

Discrimination in places of public accommodation—perhaps the most unbearable insult to Negro citizens—has been made unlawful. The mandate of that law has spread faster and more effectively than its most optimistic supporters believed possible.

Discrimination in employment is now illegal. Opportunities closed to Negroes in the past have begun to open.

The discriminatory use of Federal funds has been prohibited. The effect of that prohibition—strengthened by new Federal procedures—is now being felt in schools, hospitals, welfare programs and in many other areas once blighted by racial bias.

The Community Relations Service has helped to bring new understanding to areas where community tensions have threatened to disrupt peaceful progress. Now that the service has been integrated with other civil rights facilities in the Department of Justice and is being enlarged, we expect it to be even more effective.

In the five states where voter discrimination was once most severe, Negro registration has increased by 50 per cent. Voter registration by local officials and Federal examiners appointed under the act has exceeded 330,000.

2-Year Registration Gain Cited

At the time of the 1964 national election, less than 25 per cent of the Negro citizens of voting age in those five states were registered to bote. We expect that by the time of the next elections in these states the figure will reach 50 per cent. It is already over 40 per cent.

or even unwilling to act against the most brazen violence.

So it is that new measures are essential if rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution to every citizen are to be protected.

Laws enacted a century ago to contain racial terror and Klan violence are now clearly inadequate. One of the most important of these statutes requires proof not simply of an act violating a person's civil rights. It also requires the often-difficult showing of specific intent to do so and proof of a conspiracy.

Further, no matter how brutal the crime and no matter what the motive of the criminal, it is possible that the courts will conclude that some degree of involvement by local officials may well be required by these ancient statutes.

And, finally, though offenses may range from threats to murders, only a single set of penalties is provided, and those may be inadequate to suit the gravity of the crime.

Law enforcement authority so restricted cannot be effective, and if that authority is lacking, so is justice. What gain is there for either conscience or country if we proudly affirm human rights and then permit those rights to be swept aside by lawless fanatics?

Accordingly, today I propose the enactment of legislation to make up our authority against civil rights violence clear and sure. The legislation I offer is designed to prohibit any interference with the exercise of fundamental rights by threats or force, by any person—whether as an individual or in a group and whether privately or officially.

Measure Enumerates Rights

The measure enumerates these rights, including voting, education, housing, employment, jury service, and travel. And it provides for graduated penalties, permitting our courts to make appropriate responses to differing degrees of interference or intimidation.

Further, we shall ask for expansion of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, specifically to permit it to increase its effective role in the enforcement of civil rights laws.

At times in the recent past, as many as one-third of the bureau's agents have been assigned to the investigation of civil rights matters. The number of civil rights complaints the bureau investigated in the last fiscal year was 143 per cent more than the figure for 1961. These responsibilities place a heavy burden on the bureau's field staff.

On the advice of Attorney General Katzenbach and F.B.I. Director Hoover, I recommend that Congress authorize an appropriation providing for another 100 F.B.I. agents and additional supporting personnel—to strengthen our capacity to deal with civil rights crimes.

In every city and town and rural community, law-abiding men and women must look for protection primarily to improved local law enforcement. But the Federal Government has its responsibilities to see that Federal rights are selection exists. Federal courts will have broad authority to grant relief.

IV

Ten years after the Supreme Court of the United States declared racial segregation in public schools to be unconstitutional, the Congress found it necessary to give new force to the court's decision.

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 provided that all programs receiving Federal financial assistance—including public education—must be administered on a nondiscriminatory basis. The act called for the withdrawal of funds where discrimination remained. It also gave the Attorney General authority to file and intervene in suits to desegregate schools.

Enforcement of the 1964 act has brought more progress in real integration in one year than in all the preceding nine years.

While there are still far too few Negro children in desegregated classrooms, the number has multiplied several times. It must and will grow substantially again in the fall.

In providing financial assistance, this Administration has insisted on an end to discrimination. But whether or not our assistance is accepted, the requirements of the Constitution must still be met. Segregated schools are still illegal. The law of the land must be and will be upheld.

Thus the Department of Justice has insisted, in more than 40 school suits under the 1964 act, that whether or not school boards receive financial assistance, desegregation must proceed.

Despite marked gains of the last two years, the fact remains that today—12 years after the Supreme Court's decision on segregation in schools—only one in 13 Negro school children in the South attends classes with white children.

Two amendments to the 1964 act are needed to strengthen the campaign against racial discrimination in the schools.

One would enlarge the Attorney General's initiative under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

That act authorized the Attorney General to file suits to help communities where severe local pressure and the poverty of aggrieved citizens made private suits impossible. Yet this authorization was qualified by the requirement that the Attorney General first receive a complaint from a parent unable to sue on his own before the Government's legal resources could be brought to bear.

Attorney General Is Limited

Although the Attorney General can move directly against discrimination in voting, in employment or in public accommodations, with respect to school discrimination he must first receive a complaint before acting. In communities where the atmosphere of intimidation and ignorance of the law's protection is most severe, the filing of a complaint is most unlikely.

Thus where the need of the Attorney General's intervention is the greatest, clear understanding that legal reforms can be counted only a small part of a national program for the Negro American.

We know that the more important challenges of racial inequality today are emphatically national.

Negro ghettos indict our cities North and South, from coast to coast. Hope of cutting back the severe unemployment rate among Negroes is tied directly to the expansion of our national economy. And the ultimate need in human terms — of a more generous idea of brotherhood and a more responsible conception of equality—are part of the unfinished business in every state.

The time has passed when we could realistically deal effectively with racial problems by the passage of what could be strictly defined as civil rights laws.

In fact, the most disturbing current measures of the impact of discrimination are economic facts that cover the entire nation:

Nonwhite Americans constitute only 11 per cent of the national labor force, but they make up 20 per cent of the unemployed. They take home less than 7 per cent of the total personal income of all Americans.

Racial Disparity in Poverty

One-fifth of the entire population lives in poverty. One-half of nonwhite Americans live in poverty.

In junior high schools across the country, 12 per cent of white children are in school grades below their age level—compared to 30 per cent of Negro children.

Poor housing, unemployment and poverty, while they affect racial minorities particularly, will not be defeated by new civil rights laws. Thus, the programs that Congress has adopted go far beyond the vindication of civil rights.

The Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 will enrich t he quality of our public schools.

The Housing Act of 1965 will provide part of the decent low-and middle-income housing our cities desperately need. Beyond this, adoption of the Demonstration Cities Act this year will launch a major attack on the blight of urban ghettos.

Amendments to the Manpower Development and Training Act adopted in 1965 will help unskilled Negroes, as well as whites, prepare for a role in the economies of today and tomorrow.

The Economic Opportunity Act of 1965—the Antipoverty Act—is reaching out with new hope for the disadvantage for those pre-school children, teenagers, and older men and women who have never before had cause to hope.

We do not call any of these civil rights programs." Nevertheless, they are crucial, and perhaps decisive elements in the Negro American's long struggle for a fair chance in life.

Sees a Chain of Discrimination'

It is self-evident that the problems freedom to live in the home and the neighborhood of its choice.

This year marks the hundreth anniversary of the first statute enacted by the Congress in an attempt to deal with discrimination in housing. It reads.

All citizens of the United States shall have the same right, in every state and territory, as is enjoyed by white citizens thereof to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold and convey real and personal property."

For 100 years this law has reflected an ideal favoring equality of housing opportunity. Acting under this statute and the 14th Amendment, the Supreme Court has invalidated state and local laws prohibiting the sale of houses to Negroes. It has prohibited the enforcement of racially restrictive convenants. It has struck down state legislation imposing undue burdens upon minority groups with respect to real estate transactions.

Previous Legislation Is Recalled

There is nothing novel about the Congressional concern with housing that I now ask you to expand. Programs enacted by Congress have, for more than three decades, stimulated the development of private housing, and directly financed hundreds of thousands of public housing units.

The historic Housing Act of 1949 proclaimed a national goal for the first time: A decent home and suitable living environment for every American family."

The great boom in housing construction since the Second World War is, in large part, attributable to Congressional action to carry out this objective.

Yet not enough has been done to guarantee that all Americans shall benefit from the expanding housing market Congress has made possible.

Executive Order No. 11063, signed by President Kennedy on Nov. 20, 1962, prohibited housing discrimination where Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration Insurance programs are involved. That executive order clearly expressed the commitment of the executive branch to the battle against housing discrimination.

But that order, and all the amendments that could validly be added to it, are inevitably restricted to those elements of the housing problem which are under direct executive authority.

Our responsibility is to deal with discrimination directly at the point of sale or refusal, as well as indirectly through financing. Our need is to reach discrimination practiced by financial institutions operating outside the F.H.A. and V.A. insurance programs, and not otherwise regulated by the Government.

Our task is to end discrimination in all housing, old and new—not simply in the new housing covered by the executive order.

I proposee legislation that is constitutional in design, comprehensive in scope and firm in enforcement. It will cover the sale, rental and financing of all dwelling units. It will prohibit discrimination, on either racial or religious

North and South, from coast to coast—represent fully as severe a denial of freedom and the fruits of American citizenship as more obvious injustices. As long as the color of a man's skin determines his choice of housing, no investment in the physical rebuilding of our cities will free the men and women living there.

he Fair Housing Law I pr opose this year is an essential part of our attempt to rejuvenate and liberate America's growing urban areas—and more importantly, to exapnd the liberty of all the people living in them.

A nation that aspires to greatness cannot be a divided nation—with whites and Negroes entrenched behind barriers of mutual suspicion and fear.

It cannot tolerate:

¶Overcrowded ghetto schools, producing new thousands of ill-trained citizens for whom the whole community must be responsible.

¶Rising health hazards and crime rates in the ghettos' ugly streets and homes.

¶The failure of expensive social programs, such as urban renewal, where there is no way out and up for Negro residents.

The truly insufferable cost of imprisoning the Negro in the slums is borne by our national conscience.

When we restrict the Negro's freedom, inescapably we restrict a part of our own.

Negro Americans compromise 22 per cent of the enlisted men in our army Combat units in Vietnam—and 22 per cent of those who have lost their lives in battle there. We fall victim to a profound hyprocrisy when we say that they cannot buy or rent dwellings among citizens they fight to save.

VII

No civil rights act, however historic, will be final. We would look in vain for one definitive solution to an injustice as old as the nation itself—an injustice that leaves no section of the country and no level of American life unstained. This administration has pledged that as long as racial discrimination denies opportunity and equal rights in America, we will honor our constitutional and moral responsibility to restore the balance of justice.

Yet no amount of legislation, no degree of commitment on the part of the National Government, can by itself bring equal opportunity and achievement to Negro Americans. It must be joined by a massive effort on the part of the states and local governments, of industry, and of all citizens, white and Negro.

Hundreds of thousands of Negro Americans in every part of the country are making that effort now. They know that the responsibilities of citizenship follow inevitably from the achievement of civil rights and economic opportunity.

They know that an obligation lies before them, to take full advantage of the improved education and training that is now becomingavailable to them in the public schools, in vocational tively than its most optimistic supporters believed possible.

Discrimination in employment is now illegal. Opportunities closed to Negroes in the past have begun to open.

The discriminatory use of Federal funds has been prohibited. The effect of that prohibition—strengthened by new Federal procedures—is now being felt in schools, hospitals, welfare programs and in many other areas once blighted by racial bias.

The Community Relations Service has helped to bring new understanding to areas where community tensions have threatened to disrupt peaceful progress. Now that the service has been integrated with other civil rights facilities in the Department of Justice and is being enlarged, we expect it to be even more effective.

In the five states where voter discrimination was once most severe, Negro registration has increased by 50 per cent. Voter registration by local officials and Federal examiners appointed under the act has exceeded 330,000.

2-Year Registration Gain Cited

At the time of the 1964 national election, less than 25 per cent of the Negro citizens of voting age in those five states were registered to bote. We expect that by the time of the next elections in these states the figure will reach 50 per cent. It is already over 40 per cent.

This achievement serves to renew our faith in the ultimate triumph of a government in which all free men can participate. It strengthens our resolve to extend the franchise to all who are eligible.

For a democracy cannot be fully realized, when in these five states more than a million eligible Negroes remain unregistered. The challenge to them—and to those in Government and private life who labor with them for their just share in the electoral process—is as critically important as the legislative need to enact today's civil rights laws. The statutes now on the books have given Negro Americans the key to freedom. Now it must be used.

I

Once more this year I am asking the Congress to join in an attack on the discrimination that still afflicts our land.

Four times in nine years the representatives of the people have labored through days and nights — through weeks and months—toward the passage of civil rights legislation.

I was part of each of those efforts. I know the fatigue and the triumph that accompanied them. Thus I do not ask for new laws lightly.

Yet discrimination, racial practices still exist in many American communities. They deny the Negro his rights as a citizen. They must be ended.

I ask the Congress:

First, to reform our Federal criminal statutes to provide Negroes and all who labor or speak for racial justice the protection of stronger and more effective criminal laws against interference with the exercise of long established rights.

Second, to establish detailed procedures of jury selection in Federal courts so that discrimination may be banished—and to create forceful guarantees that state court juries also will be selected without discrimination of any kind.

Third, to broaden the Attorney General's authority to bring suit for the desegregation of schools and public facilities—enabling him to commit the Government's legal resources where they are most critically needed.

Fourth, to declare a national policy against racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing, and to create effective remedies against the discrimination in every part of America.

II

Perhaps the most evident threat to civil rights in 1966 is the danger that recently secured rights may be violently denied by a relatively few racial fanatics.

Citizens who honor the law and who tolerate orderly change—a majority in even part of the country—have been shocked by attacks on innocent men and women who sought no more than justice for all Americans.

The effect of that violence extends far beyond individual victims. Every assault or murder that goes unpunished reinforces the legacy of violence—the knowledge that it is danagerous for a Negro to assert his rights, or even for others to stand up for those rights.

Our Federal system assumes that local law enforcement will extend protection to all. Yet the speed with which the fanatics strike has made the work of prevention extremely difficult—even for zealous local police authorities. In some areas, local authorities have been slow

Measure Enumerates Rights

The measure enumerates these rights, including voting, education, housing, employment, jury service, and travel. And it provides for graduated penalties, permitting our courts to make appropriate responses to differing degrees of interference or intimidation.

Further, we shall ask for expansion of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, specifically to permit it to increase its effective role in the enforcement of civil rights laws.

At times in the recent past, as many as one-third of the bureau's agents have been assigned to the investigation of civil rights matters. The number of civil rights complaints the bureau investigated in the last fiscal year was 143 per cent more than the figure for 1961. These responsibilities place a heavy burden on the bureau's field staff.

On the advice of Attorney General Katzenbach and F.B.I. Director Hoover, I recommend that Congress authorize an appropriation providing for another 100 F.B.I. agents and additional supporting personnel—to strengthen our capacity to deal with civil rights crimes.

In every city and town and rural community, law-abiding men and women must look for protection primarily to improved local law enforcement. But the Federal Government has its responsibilities to see that Federal rights are secured and their transgressors brought to justice.

We shall meet these responsibilities.

III

The fabric of law enforcement extends from the police patrol to trial and correction. Racial discrimination in any part of this fabric can spoil the rest.

It is necessary that we improve our investigative resources. It is necessary that we strengthen Federal authority against interference with basic rights and impose meaningful sanctions on those who violate them.

Yet if we go only this far—and permit racial discrimination to corrupt the selection of juries—we shall leave it at the center of our legal system a potential for injustice that mocks our hopes for a great and just society.

Trial by a freely selected jury of one's peers is not a new right. It has its roots in the Magna Carta. Blackstone described it as the "grand bulwark" of man's liberties.

Yet we have been reminded in recent months that in many areas the exclusion of minority groups from jury service remains systematic and complete.

Denying jury service to any group deprives it of one of the oldest and most precious privileges and duties of free men. It is not only the excluded group which suffers. Courts are denied the justice that flows from impartial juries selected from a cross section of the community. The people's confidence in justice is eroded.

Jury discrimination takes many forms, open and subtle, intentional and inadvertent:

Many jury officials may compile their basic list of potential jurors from membership lists, clubs and civic organizations that tend to exclude minority groups.

Some state laws require jury officials to make highly subjective judgments of a juror's "integrity, good character and sound judgment."

Even when the list of qualified jurors has been fairly compiled, officials in many areas are still free to exclude a particular class of citizens arbitrarily when they make assignments to particular juries.

None of today's civil rights laws gives sufficient protection against these practices.

An 1875 statute makes it a Federal crime for officials in either Federal or state courts to exclude jurors because of their race. But criminal sanctions operate only upon individuals—not upon an entire system.

Could Restore Integrity of System

What is required is not the punishment of individuals. It is the restoration of integrity in the system itself.

The time has come for new legislation redeeming the promise made to every American: a fair trial by a jury of his peers.

I recommend legislation stating explicitly for all our courts that the right to serve on grand or petit juries shall not be denied on the basis of race or color, religion, sex, national origin, or economic status.

For Federal courts, the legislation will carefully prescribe each step of the jury selection process.

In state courts, the Attorney General and private citizens will be empowered to sue wherever discrimination in jury years, the fact remains that today—12 years after the Supreme Court's decision on segregation in schools—only one in 13 Negro school children in the South attends classes with white children.

Two amendments to the 1964 act are needed to strengthen the campaign against racial discrimination in the schools.

One would enlarge the Attorney General's initiative under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

That act authorized the Attorney General to file suits to help communities where severe local pressure and the poverty of aggrieved citizens made private suits impossible. Yet this authorization was qualified by the requirement that the Attorney General first receive a complaint from a parent unable to sue on his own before the Government's legal resources could be brought to bear.

Attorney General Is Limited

Although the Attorney General can move directly against discrimination in voting, in employment or in public accommodations, with respect to school discrimination he must first receive a complaint before acting. In communities where the atmosphere of intimidation and ignorance of the law's protection is most severe, the filing of a complaint is most unlikely.

Thus where the need of the Attorney General's intervention is the greatest, his help is least likely to become available.

Accordingly, I propose that the act be amended to allow the Attorney General to file suit directly, without waiting for a complaint, against discrimination in public schools or public facilities.

The second amendment would give the Attorney General the tools to deal with interference against voluntary school desegregation—the same tools that he now has when school desegregation comes under a court order.

The Civil Rights Act of 1960 included provisions to protect court-ordered desegregation from interference. These provisions were reasonably adequate when the desegregation of difficult areas was begun under court order.

But today, principally because of wide acceptance of the Office of Education's desegregation standards, many school districts are desegregating for the first time without the direct compulsion of court orders.

This is a hopeful sign—and one that imposes a new obligation on the Government. We must provide adequate assurances against interference to parents and children eager to desegregate schools, and people siding with and encouraging them, in the exercise of their rights.

The criminal legislation I have already described dealing with intimidation would apply to any violent obstruction of school desegregation. But I also recommend civil injunctive procedures against violence, threats of violence or any other interference with school desegregation.

V

The day has long since passed when problems of race in America could be identified with only one section of the country. The social and economic toll exacted by discrimination in employment, for example, is felt in all sections.

The Federal Government has worked strenuously to bring leadership to a national effort against such discrimination through the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, Plans for Progress with Industry, and establishment of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Other specific legislative steps can now be taken to bolster this effort. The first year's experience of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission suggests that it should be endowed with enforcement power and that its coverage should be broadened.

Proposals focusing on these purposes are already before the Congress. I urge that these needs be given ghe fullest legislative consideration, and that the Senate complete action on the bill passed by the House of Representatives yesterday.

Freedom from discrimination is not enough. There must be freedom from the disadvantage that 200 years of discrimination helped create. There must be freedom of opportunity, freedom to work.

We look to those at the White House Civil Rights Conference this June and to private employers across America to help us find new ways to match t he nation's promise of civil rights by the fact of civil results—in full and equal employment opportunity.

VI

We undertake to expand and reform the civil rights laws this year with the Poor housing, unemployment and poverty, while they affect racial minorities particularly, will not be defeated by new civil rights laws. Thus, the programs that Congress has adopted go far beyond the vindication of civil rights.

The Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 will enrich t he quality of our public schools.

The Housing Act of 1965 will provide part of the decent low-and middle-income housing our cities desperately need. Beyond this, adoption of the Demonstration Cities Act this year will launch a major attack on the blight of urban ghettos.

Amendments to the Manpower Development and Training Act adopted in 1965 will help unskilled Negroes, as well as whites, prepare for a role in the economies of today and tomorrow.

The Economic Opportunity Act of 1965—the Antipoverty Act—is reaching out with new hope for the disadvantage for those pre-school children, teenagers, and older men and women who have never before had cause to hope.

We do not call any of these civil rights programs." Nevertheless, they are crucial, and perhaps decisive elements in the Negro American's long struggle for a fair chance in life.

Sees a Chain of Discrimination'

It is self-evident that the problems we are struggling with form a complicated chain of discrimination and lost opportunities. Employment is often dependent on education, education on neighborhood schools and housing, housing on income, and income on employment. We have learned by now the folly of looking for any single crucial link in the chain that binds the ghetto.

All the links—poverty, lack of education, underemployment and now discrimination in housing—must be attacked together. If we are to include the Negro in our society, we must do more than give him the education he needs to obtain a job and a fair chance for useful work.

We must give the Negro tse right to live in freedom among his fellow Americans.

I ask the Congress to enact the first effective Federal law against the discrimination in the sale and rental of housing.

The time has come for the Congress to declare resoundingly that discrimination in housing and all the evils it breeds are a denial of justice and a threat to the development of our growing urban areas.

The time has come to combat unreasoning restrictions on any family's antee that all Americans shall benefit from the expanding housing market Congress has made possible.

Executive Order No. 11063, signed by President Kennedy on Nov. 20, 1962, prohibited housing discrimination where Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration Insurance programs are involved. That executive order clearly expressed the commitment of the executive branch to the battle against housing discrimination.

But that order, and all the amendments that could validly be added to it, are inevitably restricted to those elements of the housing problem which are under direct executive authority.

Our responsibility is to deal with discrimination directly at the point of sale or refusal, as well as indirectly through financing. Our need is to reach discrimination practiced by financial institutions operating outside the F.H.A. and V.A. insurance programs, and not otherwise regulated by the Government.

Our task is to end discrimination in all housing, old and new—not simply in the new housing covered by the executive order.

I proposee legislation that is constitutional in design, comprehensive in scope and firm in enforcement. It will cover the sale, rental and financing of all dwelling units. It will prohibit discrimination, on either racial or religious grounds, by owners, brokers and lending corporations in their housing commitments.

Under this legislation, private individuals could sue in either state or Federal courts to block discrimination.

The Attorney General would be empowered to sue directly for appropriate relief, wherever he has reasonable cause to believe that a pattern of discrimination exists.

Department Studies Are Due

The legislation would direct the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make factual studies, and to give technical assistance to the Community Relations Service and all other public an private organizations working to eliminate discriminatory housing patterns.

The bill I am submitting to the Congress this year would leave in effect the many state laws that have preceded the Federal Government in the field of fair housing. We would hope to enact a law that will not only open the fight against discrimination where there are o state laws against it, but also strengthen the enforcement efforts of states which have fair housing programs now.

The ghettos of our major cities—profound hyprocrisy when we say that they cannot buy or rent dwellings among citizens they fight to save.

VII

No civil rights act, however historic, will be final. We would look in vain for one definitive solution to an injustice as old as the nation itself—an injustice that leaves no section of the country and no level of American life unstained. This administration has pledged that as long as racial discrimination denies opportunity and equal rights in America, we will honor our constitutional and moral responsibility to restore the balance of justice.

Yet no amount of legislation, no degree of commitment on the part of the National Government, can by itself bring equal opportunity and achievement to Negro Americans. It must be joined by a massive effort on the part of the states and local governments, of industry, and of all citizens, white and Negro.

Hundreds of thousands of Negro Americans in every part of the country are making that effort now. They know that the responsibilities of citizenship follow inevitably from the achievement of civil rights and economic opportunity.

They know that an obligation lies before them, to take full advantage of the improved education and training that is now becomingavailable to them—in the public schools, in vocational training, in the universities.

They know that it is their task to lead others in the quest for achievement and social justice—to inspire them with confidence, with preserverance, with the mutual forbearance on which our democracy depends.

VIII

We are engaged in a great adventure—as great as that of the last century, when our fathers marched to the Western frontier. Our frontier today is of human beings, not of land.

If we are able to open that frontier, to free each child to become the best that is in him to become, our reward—both spiritual and material—will exceed any that we gained a century ago through territorial expansion.

Whether we shall succeed is an issue that rests in the heart of every American. It rests in the determination of Negro Americans to use the opportunities for orderly progress that are now becoming—at last—a reality in their lives. It rests in our common willingness to expand those opportunities in the years ahead.

That issue can and will be decided in only one way. For we have not come this far to fail within sight of our goal.

of the American

One Good Thing In Bill

LEGISLATION

Sen. Ervin Likes Provision To Prevent U.S. Jury Bias

Greensboro Daily News 4/30/66

BY ROY PARKER JR.
Daily News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin whose subcommittee will hold the initial Senate hearings on the newest civil rights bill, has found one good thing in it.

For Ervin, this is somewhat of a record. The Tar Heel senator has been one of the most implacable and vocal foes of the series of rights measures voted by Congress in recent years.

The newest one, sent to Congress Thursday by President Johnson, heralds "the demise of the Constitution," except for one provision, Ervin said in a statement.

* * *

THE PROVISION Ervin finds "worthwhile" would establish jury commissions in each federal court district to assure nondiscrimination in selection of federal juries.

The North Carolina senator said that the rights bill was offered as "a natural reaction . . . to the activities of a few demagogic politicians and a few murdering criminals in the South."

"Without their illegal acts, many of the bills would never have been proposed," he said.

President Johnson promised to offer the legislation soon after a Southern jury failed to convict several men charged with the murders of civil rights workers.

But Ervin, whose constitutional rights subcommittee expects to hold hearings within a month, said federal law is now adequate to prevent racial discrimination in selection of juries in state courts.

"I have considerable misgivings over further intrusion of the federal government in the jury system of the states," Ervin said.

* * *

THE HOUSING TITLE of the bill, prohibiting racial discrimination in private housing, is interesting, Ervin said, because "it is the first major civil rights legislation in history not aimed solely at the South."

On the other hand, he said, "it is unconstitutional . . . and it is unenforceable."

Proposed authority for the U.S. attorney general to initiate school desegregation suits and criminal penalties for racial intimidation "are repugnant to the basic concepts of American liberty," Ervin said.

Ervin seemed to predict that the rights law may be passed despite his opposition. If Congress "capitulates" to "unpeaceful demonstrations and misplaced righteous indignation . . . we will be sharing in the demise of the Constitution," he said. "I am sad to think I may share in this demise as a member of Congress."

* * *

ERVIN, WHO has won his talking spurs in several state civil rights filibusters, said the debate should be "most interesting" this time because of the housing title.

That title, which would have major impact in large cities outside the South, is considered political dynamite by many who have supported rights bills in the past.

"It should be most interesting to watch the politics of the debate now that others' oxen are being gored," said Ervin.

LEGISLATION

AC 6/3/66

Russell Briefs Dixie Forces, Expects Dirksen Rights Aid

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Southern senators Monday braced to oppose an anticipated early attempt to fix a limit on the time allotted for the Senate Judiciary Committee to consider the 1966 civil rights bill.

Nine senators from seven Southern states met for 1½ hours in the office of Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell for what was described as an "informal chat" and "an exchange of views" on the civil rights bill, plus "some other matters."

The Southern senators quickly learned that they could expect support from Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen, a consistent advocate of civil rights legislation, who predicted that Congress would kill President Lyndon B. Johnson's latest proposal to ban discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

The Justice department, which drafted the proposal, based it on the government's constitutional right to regulate interstate commerce. This is the same argument it used successfully to underpin the public accommodations section of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as well as in desegregation of rail and bus terminals.

Dirksen balked at this approach. "If you can tell me what in interstate commerce is involved about selling a house fixed on soil or what federal jurisdiction there is I'll eat the chimney on the house," he said.

"In my opinion it is absolutely unconstitutional," Dirksen said. He indicated he would support a filibuster against the fair housing proviso of the President's legislation.

President Johnson's bill also is designed to end discrimination in the selection of state and federal juries, provide more protection from violence for Negroes and civil rights workers, and permit the Justice Department to initiate school and public facility desegregation suits.

Continued on Page 6, Column 4

Russell Briefs Dixie Forces, Expects Dirksen Rights Aid

Continued from Page 1

Both Dirksen and Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said they would oppose a move reportedly planned by Sen. Jacob K. Javits for Tuesday to set a time limit on committee consideration of the bill.

Supporters of the legislation want the time limit because the Senate Judiciary Committee is dominated by Southern leadership.

EASTLAND BOSS

Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi is chairman of the committee. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina is chairman of the constitutional righs subcommittee, to which the bill will be assigned initially.

The Southerners would be in position to stall committee action for a long time, even if not for the whole session, without instructions to report the bill back to the Senate by a specific date.

Sen. Russell, who leads a bloc of 19 senators from 10 states (Tennessee's two senators and Sen. Ralph Yarborough of Texas are not considered part of the bloc) did not meet with reporters after Monday's meeting.

NO FORMAL MOTION

Other sources said no formal strategy was laid out at the meeting, but added there is no doubt the Southerners would oppose a motion to limit time on committee action.

Sen. Ervin was the only member attending the Southern caucus to comment on the proposed civil right legislation.

He said with a smile, "This time somebody's ox is being gored besides mine."

He was referring to the bill's fair housing provision, which would affect other areas of the country as well as the South.

Other sections of the bill pertain to criminal violation of civil rights, jury selection and school desegregation, all aimed primarly at conditions in the South.

Ervin said in a more serious tone, "This is a bill to destroy the rights to property."

Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach is scheduled to be the first witness when the House Judiciary Committee begins hearings on the bill Wednesday.

3 Arrested in Savannah In Bogus Check Cases

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP)—Savannah police said Monday they arrested three men possessing bogus payroll checks during the weekend and were attempting to determine if other areas in Georgia had reported similar worthless checks.

Two Macon men, Clyde Robert Loftin and Bobby Childree, both 29, and Auturo Rodriquez, 42, of New Orleans were charged with cashing worthless checks, counterfeiting checks and forgery.

Officers said Loftin was arrested in a Savannah department store attempting to cash one of the checks and the other two men were captured after a chase by police in Chatham and Effingham counties.

Police said the three had a number of Georgia veterans drivers licenses, social security cards and cards identifying themselves as General Electric employes.

Officers said the trio also possessed $700 in cash and merchandise allegedly taken from Savannah-area businesses which cashed their checks.

According to police, most of the checks were drawn in the amount of $144.67 and made payable to fictitious Savannah residents. All checks had the same serial number and were printed on a check-writing machine, police said.

KATZENBACH ASKS HOUSING BIAS BAN

LEGISLATION

Calls New Civil Rights Bill Constitutional—Will Seek to Win Dirksen's Support

5/5/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 4—The Administration began today what is expected to be a bitter election-year struggle for its new civil rights bill.

Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, testifying before a House Judiciary subcommittee, made a detailed defense of the most controversial section, that calling for the first national prohibition against racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

"I have no doubts whatsoever as to its constitutionality," Mr. Katzenbach said, in an obvious response to a statement earlier this week by Everett McKinley Dirksen, the Senate minority leader, that the bill was "absolutely unconstitutional."

Has Had A Key Role

The Attorney General told reporters later that he would try to change the Illinois Republican's mind.

"We want Senator Dirksen's support," he said. "I think we will get Senator Dirksen's support. He is a very reasonable man."

In the past, President Johnson's civil rights bills have passed the Senate with bi-partisan support and with Senator Dirksen playing a key role.

Proponents of the bill said that the strategy would be to try to pass the bill in the House as soon as possible and get it to the Senate in time to defeat an expected filibuster before Congress adjourns.

Continued on Page 31, Column 2

KATZENBACH ASKS HOUSING BIAS BAN

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

Strong Republican support will be needed if this is to succeed.

As expected, Mr. Katzenbach and the bill reeeived a warm reception before the subcommittee, which is headed by Representative Emanuel Cellar of Brooklyn. Mr. Celler is also chairman of the full Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Celler said that the Administration had given the committee a "heavy burden" but every effort would be made to expedite its consideration by the House. He said the hearings would end later this month.

In addition to open housing, the bill calls for racially balanced state and Federal juries, a stronger Federal law against racial violence and intimidation and authority for the Attorney General to file school desegregation lawsuits without receiving a complaint.

'Problems of Racial Injustice'

Mr. Katzenbach said the full bill was needed to help combat "deep-seated, interconnected and complex problems of racial injustice which are immediate, apparent and not susceptible to effective treatment without action by Congress now."

Title IV of the bill prohibits discrimination because of race, color, religion or national origin by property owners, tract developers, real estate bokers, lending institutions and all others engaged in the sale, rental or financing of housing.

An aggrieved individual could seek injunctive relief in the courts, which could also award him damages up to $500. But Mr. Katzenbach said that he did not anticipate "hundreds of lawsuits" but widespread compliance similar to that achieved under the public accommodations section of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

He said that segregated housing was perpetuated by builders, landlords, real estate agents and those who provide mortgage money, not out of racial prejudice but out of fear of economic loss.

"If all those in the housing industry are bound by a universal law against discrimination, there will be no economic peril to any of them," Mr. Katzenbach said.

The Attorney General said that the proposal could be supported under the 14th Amendment and the interstate commerce clause of the Constiuttion.

"Are we to tell our Negro citizens that the Congress who has guaranteed them access to desegregated public schools and to swimming pools and to golf courses is powerless to guarantee them the basic right to choose a place to live?" he asked.

"To me it is clear that the 14th Amendment gives the Congress the power to address itself to the vindication of what is, in substance, the freedom to live."

Mr. Katzenbach said that the housing industry clearly came under the scope of interstate commerce, which Congress has the authority to govenr.

"The construction of homes and apartment buildings, the production and sale of building materials and home furnishings, the financing of construction an purchases all take place in or through the channels of interstate commerce," he said.

'A National Necessity'

"The ending of compulsory residential segregation has become a national necessity," Mr. Katzenbach said. "Law must lead and law must protect in this vital area as i thas in voting, public accommodations, school and employment.'

In response to questions on the jury proposals, Mr. Katzenbach said that they would 'do away with blue ribbon juries' and make it more difficult to obtain a conviction, but he believed the proposals were needed, nevertheless.

On Federal courts, the bill calls for selection of jury lists from registered voters within a district in order to obtain a cross-section of racial and economic groups. On state juries, the Attorney General would have authority to enforce racial balance through Federal Court injunction.

Mr. Katzenbach said that one of the most widely used methods of securing lists of names for Federal juries was through the "key man" system under which leading citizens were asked to furnish names of persons suitable for jury service. Names suggested frequently are white members of the upper economic and social classes. These are called blue ribbon juries.

"It is sometimes easier to get a conviction with a blue ribbon jury," Mr. Katzenbach said. But he said he saw no reason for concern, that all segments of society should be represented on juries.

LEGISLATION

Katzenbach Sees Okay Of Rights Bill by Dirksen

ac 5/5/66

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach said Wednesday he thinks Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen will support President Lyndon B. Johnson's 1966 civil rights bill.

However, the attorney general indicated the administration may have to make "reasonable" concessions to gain Dirksen's backing.

KEY TO PASSAGE

Dirksen, who holds the key to the bill's passage, has branded the housing proposal as "absolutely unconstitutional."

Katzenbach told a House Judiciary Subcommittee Wednesday that he thinks the housing provision is "clearly constitutional."

Newsmen were informed later by the attorney general that he plans to confer with Dirksen in hopes of bringing the Illinois Republican around to the administration's point of view.

'VERY REASONABLE'

Katzenbach was asked if he considers Dirksen's support crucial to passage.

"We want Sen. Dirksen's support," he replied. "I think we'll have it. He's a very reasonable man."

Administration sources have indicated there would be no hope of breaking a Southern filibuster in the Senate unless Dirksen agreed to join with Democrats to vote cloture.

Administration leaders acknowledged from the outset that the housing provision would have to be modified to obtain passage. Katzenbach conferred with Dirksen several times before the bill was drawn by the Justice department.

Continued on Page 12, Column 3

Katzenbach Thinks Dirksen Will Back Johnson Rights Bill

Continued from Page 1

Some Southerners view the housing provision as an instrument of compromise to be used by the Johnson administration to win support for three other parts of the bill.

Katzenbach, lead-off witness before the subcommittee, said two key intentions of the bill are to end "compulsory residential segregation" and to insure that jury selection reaches low income as well as minority groups.

Other sections of the bill would give the federal government stronger powers to deal with "Klansmen and other fanatics" in civil rights violence and to push desegregation of schools and public facilities where action is needed most, said Katzenbach.

Dirksen said earlier this week that fair housing legislation supported by movement of goods and finances through interstate commerce would not stand a constitutional test.

The attorney general told the subcommittee that the legality of the housing proposal is supported by both the interstate commerce clause and by a recent Supreme Court ruling in a Georgia case, which grew out of the highway slaying of Washington Negro educator Lemuel Penn near Athens.

Six of the nine Supreme Court justices declared in the Georgia decision that Congress has the power under the 14th Amendment "to reach such purely private misconduct if it chooses to do so," said Katzenbach.

The attorney general predicted there would be widespread compliance and few court suits over fair housing if the legislation is enacted.

One of the main purposes of legislation to forbid discrimination in federal and state jury selection is to eliminate widespread exclusion of Negroes, said Katzenbach.

However, Katzenbach said, jury discrimination frequently excludes persons of low economic status and other groups from jury duty.

Underground Test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission announced that an underground nuclear test of low yield was conducted Wednesday at its Nevada test site.

Katzenbach Yields on Rights Bill

LEGISLATION
5/6/66 AC

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach said Thursday he would not object to exempting "Mrs. Murphy's Boarding House" from the Fair Housing Provision of the 1966 Civil Rights Bill.

This was the first concession for President Lyndon B. Johnson's latest civil rights package.

The issue of "Mrs. Murphy's Boarding House" stirred congressional debate during passage of the 1964 act affecting public accomodations.

A provision was inserted in the 1964 law to exempt places which accomodate five or less persons, such as a boarding house that might be operated by a Mrs. Murphy or anyone else.

Rep. William C. Cramer, R-Fla., noted the congressional storm over "Mrs. Murphy" two years ago and asked why the administration had not included that exemption in housing provision.

"I don't think that the intent or the purpose here (of the housing provision) would be impeded

Continued on Page 6, Column 5

Katzenbach Yields on Rights Bill

Continued from Page 1

by exempting Mrs. Murphy's boardinghouse," replied Katzenbach.

Cramer, the only Southerner sitting on the House Judiciary Sub-Committee holding hearings on the bill, questioned whether the government should include vacant land under the fair housing section and how the interstate commerce clause applied to idle land.

"I think this is important," said Katzenbach. "The 15th Amendment applies here (to vacant land.)"

The attorney general said the law would apply only if the land was to be used for residential purposes.

Some House Republicans refused to join Senate GOP Leader Everett Dirksen in his opinion that the housing provision is unconsttutional. Rep. Clark MacGregor, R-Minn., a member of the Juduciary Sub - Committee, said Dirksen was wrong about the bill.

House Republican Leader Gerald M. Ford and Rep. William M. McCulloch, ranking Republicans on the sub-committee, withheld their opinions until the evidence is presented.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

Katzenback seemed more optmistic than ever that Dirksen would support the bill.

"We've had a number of dscussions," said Katzenbach. "He hasn't committed himself. I feel sure he will support it."

Dirksen holds the key to a Senate coalition of Democrats and Republicans which has broken Southern filibusters in the past on civil rights legislaton.

Cramer asked why the Justice department wants to strike a provision from the 1964 act that requires a written complaint before the federal government can file a school desegregation suit.

COMPLAINTS ADJUSTED

"I'll tell you why I want to strike that," declared Katzenbach. "We had one district that had 21 complaints. We went down to that system to adjust those complaints. They did adjust those complaints. They went around and got all 21 complaints withdrawn."

He later refused to identify the school system for a reporter. Katzenbach said language forbidding racial balance in schools and the bussing of students should be taken from the 1964 act because "I can not read anything in that language whatsoever."

He voiced no objection to replacing the section referring to racial balance with a much-fought-over definition of desegregation included elsewhere in the 1964 act.

Katzenbach also said he would not object to exempting private clubs under the fair housing provision so long as the bill was not changed to permit organizations to circumvent the open-occupancy intent.

Rep. McCulloch of Ohio differed with Katzenbach on eliminating the "key man" system of jury selection for federal courts. Community leaders recommend names for jury duty under the system.

Katzenbach argued, "I think the key man system in virtually every area has some built in bias."

GOPs Marshal All Strength To Head Off Rent Subsidies

LEGISLATION AC 5/9/66

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans conceded Sunday it would take all of their strength and a lot of Democratic help to fight off last-ditch White House efforts to win approval of rent subsidy funds this week.

At issue is an administration attempt to reinstate $22 million in rent subsidy money in the $14 billion appropriations bill that comes up for House action Tuesday.

Rep. Glenn R. Davis, R-Wis., led the fight last week when the House appropriations committee voted 25 to 21, to delete the subsidies for the big city needy.

But he was less than optimistic Sunday. "It's too close to guess," he said. "It'll be a real squeaker."

House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., thought chances of defeating President Johnson's proposal were good, but he admitted it would be close.

"I think it'll be a close battle because the White House will undoubtedly have all its troops up there to add to the appropriation," he said.

The $14 billion appropriations bill is to finance 23 federal agencies, including the new Department of Housing and Urban Development, for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The measure was cut by nearly $307 million in the appropriations committee.

After the committee whacked off the rent subsidy funds, administration leaders served notice they would bear down Tuesday in an effort to get the money reinstated on the House floor.

Both Ford and Davis said the key issue was the administration's obvious intent to widen the range of rent subsidies at a later date to include middle income—as well as low income—families.

If debate on the measure can be kept on that basis, Davis said he believed moves to reinstate the money would fail. But, he said, if debate wandered away on strictly money issues, the administration would have a good chance of winning.

Ford said the appropriations committee only deleted the rent subsidy money after Housing Secretary Robert Weaver let it be known that his agency would like to expand the program from families who earn less than $6,000 a year to those who earn less than $10,000.

As authorized by Congress last year, the program would permit low-income families — those eligible for public housing and who earn less than $6,000— to pay 25 per cent of income for rent, with the government paying the rest.

Davis charged that the rent program was under "an ethical and administrative cloud."

The administrative cloud, he said, was Weaver's effort to expand the program beyond the intent of Congress. He said the ethical cloud was the administration's tactics in mustering congressional support.

Earlier, both the House and Senate voted $12 million for rent subsidies in a supplemental appropriations bill for the current fiscal year. This was approved by a House-Senate conference committee, but changes still must be approved by both houses.

In the Senate this week, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara will testify again before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during hearings on the $3.4 billion foreign aid bill.

LEGISLATION

New Rights Bill Hits Senate Snag

AJ 5/9/66

WASHINGTON, May 9, (UPI). The first roadblock to President Johnson's new civil rights bill emerged Monday—a proposal aimed at curbing the government's authority to cut off federal aid in desegregation cases.

Sen. Sam Ervin Jr.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., planned to propose such a rider in the Senate today. He said that since the Civil Rights Act of 1964 the government had used federal aid "to enforce Washington's notion of acceptable integration progress" in violation of the intent of the law.

His amendment would prohibit a fund cutoff until those receiving the aid had a chance to answer the complaint. Proof of violation of the law would have to be based on "substantial evidence."

"Congress has meekly surrendered the control of the federal purse strings to the 'equal opportunity officer' of each agency which he may use to effectuate his own notions of sociological progress," Ervin said.

Since Ervin is chairman of the Senate judiciary subcommittee which will hold hearings on the 1966 rights bill, his proposed amendment is a very real hurdle for the President's measure.

On the other side of the Capitol, Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the House Judiciary Committee, who has sponsored and managed all four civil rights bills enacted since 1957, conceded that this year's bill appeared to be the toughest ever, with the fair housing provision the "stickiest" part of it.

"That's going to meet with opposition on the part not only of members from the South, but a good many members from the North, particularly in suburban areas where men won by small margins," he said.

But, he said Sunday, "We have every expectation that this bill will pass."

The bill would impose a national ban on discrimination in the sale and rental of housing; reform federal and state jury selection procedures; strengthen laws against civil rights violence, and set up new legal weapons against school desegregation.

Rights Bill Exemption Stirs Fight

LEGISLATION
AC 5/11/66

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, which is holding hearings on the 1966 civil rights bill, Monday declared opposition to exempting "Mrs. Murphy's boarding house" from the fair housing section.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., said, "I am not giving up readily on this matter. I want to go all the way—not part of the way —to prevent racial discrimination in dwellings."

When Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach was first questioned about "Mrs. Murphy's boarding house" by a judiciary subcommittee Friday, he said he did not think the exemption would impair objectives of the housing legislation.

"Mrs. Murphy's boarding house" came to prominence during debate over the 1964 bill forbidding discrimination in public accommodations. Boarding houses accommodating five or fewer persons are exempted under the 1964 act.

"If we are to strike down ghettos and raze slums," said Celler, "we cannot do it with half-hearted measures."

Katzenbach told the subcommittee Monday that the open occupancy section would not be a cureall for slums, but would be an "indispensable" factor in

Continued on Page 6, Column 1

Rights Bill Exemption Denounced

Boarding Houses In, Celler Says

Continued from Page 1

breaking up Negro ghettos and eliminating de facto school segregation in large urban centers.

The attorney general stuck fast to a provision that would apply the fair housing legislation to the sale of owner-occupied homes.

"If you have a section in which the homeowner does not come under this bill and he can deal with the real estate broker, I think you have gutted this bill," he told the subcommittee.

However, Katzenbach said, "There is absolutely nothing in this bill to keep you from selling to a friend."

Rep. Celler asked Katzenbach if intimidation and harassment of students who integrated white schools—such as was reported in Americus and Sumter County, Georgia, last year by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission—would be sufficient cause for the federal government to file suit under another section of the bill forbidding such acts.

Katzenback said he would consider this reason for federal suit and would hope court action would "create a climate of free choice" in school desegregation."

Celler also asked Katzenbach if the slaying of a Negro, who was in no way associated with civil rights activities in an area, to discourage activities of other Negroes, would be covered by the section providing criminal prosecution for violation of federally guaranteed rights.

Katzenbach replied, "Yes. I think that would be similar to Col. Penn." He referred to Lt. Col. Lemuel Penn, a Washington educator who was slain as he drove along a northeast Georgia highway. Penn was returning to Washington from Army reserve training at Ft. Benning, Ga. in 1964.

NEW RIGHTS STEPS ASKED BY WILKINS

LEGISLATION

House Panel Hears Plea to Strengthen Johnson Bill

NYT 5/18/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 17 — Roy Wilkins, speaking for a federation of liberal organizations, urged the House Judiciary Committee today to approve a civil rights bill much stronger than that requested by President Johnson.

Mr. Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, appeared before a Judiciary subcommittee on behalf of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, of which he is chairman.

The Negro leader called for adoption of four major amendments to the Administration bill

The New York Times

Roy Wilkins

as a "firm consensus within the Leadership Conference as to what civil rights groups should support as a minimum." The Conference is a federation of more than 100 civil rights, labor, religious and civic organizations.

The amendments would add the following features to the bill:

¶Provide for executive as well as judicial enforcement of the section banning racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

¶Establish an "automatic trigger" for bringing under Federal jurisdiction jury selection in state courts having a history of racial discrimination. (Under the Administration bill, the Attorney General would seek Federal standards on an individual basis, through the Federal courts, when state as a "firm consensus within the Leadership Conference as to what civil rights groups should support as a minimum." The Conference is a federation of more than 100 civil rights, labor, religious and civic organizations.

The New York Times

Roy Wilkins

The amendments would add the following features to the bill:

¶Provide for executive as well as judicial enforcement of the section banning racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

¶Establish an "automatic trigger" for bringing under Federal jurisdiction jury selection in state courts having a history of racial discrimination. (Under the Administration bill, the Attorney General would seek Federal standards on an individual basis, through the Federal courts, when state courts continue discrimination.)

¶Provide a system of indemnification whereby the victims of racial violence could recover monetary awards from persons or governments engaging in the violence.

¶Extend fair employment practices provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to local governments and agencies such as police departments and courts.

Strong Endorsement

"We believe it would be a national tragedy if Congress failed to enact the Administration bill," Mr. Wilkins said. "Our changes are advanced as a supplement, in the same manner that the Leadership Conference in 1964 and 1965 offered suggestions that were adopted by Congress—suggestions that went beyond the original bill as introduced."

The major civil rights leaders, including Mr. Wilkins, met with President Johnson at the White House on April 28, the day the bill was submitted to Congress. At that time, they expressed approval of the measure but said they would work to strengthen it in Congress.

Mr. Wilkins said today that the Administration's proposal for open housing was inadequate and out of date in that it would authorize aggrieved parties to go to court rather than set up an agency with power to move against discriminatory practices.

"Victims of discrimination are rarely in a position to initiate and carry through lengthy court proceedings," he said adding that "In state after state, anti-bias laws of the old-fashioned type have been amended to provide for administrative enforcement and most new laws contain that feature."

Case - by - case procedure through the courts also is not sufficient to end discrimination on juries, Mr. Wilkins said. He noted that the Voting Rights Act of 1965 contained an "automatic trigger" that suspended literacy requirements in areas where large numbers of Negroes were unregistered.

"We propose that a similar trigger, based on statistical evidence of nonparticipation of Negroes in jury service, be included in the bill, for the purpose of suspending state qualifications and appointing a Federal official to select state juries where discrimination exists," he said.

Mr. Wilkins's recommendations drew little response from the subcommittee. But some members expressed alarm at a proposal made by William L. Taylor, staff director of the United States Commission on Civil Rights, who also called for amendments to strengthen the bill.

In the open-housing section, Mr. Taylor said, there should be a provision for the withdrawal of Federal charters and insurance of banks and other lending institutions that fail to put a nondiscrimination clause in their loan agreements with builders.

The committee chairman, Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, asked if this would not require financial institutions to "go into the highways and byways to police the builders."

Dirksen Asserts Civil Rights Bill Should Be Put 'on Hook' for '66

LEGISLATION

He Returns to Senate Floor on Crutches — Housing Bias Ban Is Assailed

NYT 5/25/66

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP) —Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen said today he believed sufficient opposition had accumulated to put the Administration's Civil Rights Bill "on the hook next year."

Mr. Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, reiterated his position that a provision to ban discrimination in the sale and rental of housing is unconstitutional.

The Illinois Senator spoke out at a news conference after opposition witnesses had assailed the housing provision in House subcommittee hearings. The opponents called the bill unconstitutional and said it was potentially of little value to Negroes.

Mr. Dirksen, who broke a thigh bone in a fall May 10, returned to the Senate floor today walking on crutches. The 70-year-old Senator had fallen while getting out of bed at Walter Reed Army Hospital, where he had gone for a series of tests.

A Key to Passage

Mr. Dirksen has been the key to passage of civil rights bills in the Senate, where he has been able to provide the Republican votes needed to overcome Southern filibusters. His refusal to go along could stall the pending measure indefinitely.

The Republican leader took note of a May 18 statement by Chief Justice Earl Warren that a survey of 34 pending bills to change the method of jury selection indicated that "some of them go a very long way and would very radically change the relationship between our Federal and state governments."

Mr. Dirksen said he believed Justice Warren's remarks indicated that Congress needed more time to study this issue as well as the constitutionality of the housing provision.

The House Judiciary Subcommittee heard witnesses both for and against the bill, with much of today's testimony centering on the housing provisions.

Alan L. Emlen, speaking for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, called the housing proposal "an affront to the American tradition of freedom of contract."

Mr. Emlen said that giving a Negro the right to file suit against a home-ower on the grounds he was blocked from buying a house because of his race would be "destructive of home ownership."

United Press International Telephoto

Everett McKinley Dirksen, Senate Republican leader, at his office yesterday.

Another witness Alfred Avins, a law professor at Memphis State University, attacked the constitutionality of the proposed housing law, saying it would be a denial of the rights of freedom of choice and association.

Mr. Avins made a prepared statement on behalf of the Liberty Lobby, a conservative group.

Support for the measure came from Andrew J. Biemiller, representing the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. What opposition exists to the housing proposal, he said, is based on racial bigotry or ignorance of the facts.

LEGISLATION

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1966.

Ervin Plans Slow, Thorough Hearing on New Civil Rights Bill

By JOHN HERBERS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 6 — Senate hearings on the Administration's civil rights bill opened today under the chairmanship of Sam J. Ervin, who indicated they would be broad, thorough and unhurried.

The North Carolina Democrat kept the first witness, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, waiting under television lights for almost two hours while he enumerated scores of objections to the bill.

"I honestly fear," the white-haired Senator declared, "we may be witnessing the twilight of federalism."

Mr. Ervin, chairman of a Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights, said the hearings would cover not only the broad civil rights legislation submitted by President Johnson and six related bills, but also a measure he and J. W. Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas, have introduced to rewrite Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Under Attack in South

Title VI is intended to ban racial discrimination in any Federally assisted program. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is currently under attack by Southern school and hospital officials regarding the administration of the title, which Ervin said should be clarified to eliminate any requirement for achieving "racial balance."

For the hearings, the Senator said, the subcommittee has solicited the views of the governors of the 50 states, seven professors of law and the state education officers of the Southern and Border states. So far, witnesses have been scheduled through June.

The Administration bill is believed to be in trouble in Congress. One reason is opposition to a section that would ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

Procedural Trouble Possible

A House Judiciary subcommittee headed by Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, concluded hearings on the bill last month and is expected to report it out in a few days. However, even if the measure passes the house, it faces procedural trouble in the Senate.

Although the parent Judiciary Committee can be bypassed if it maintains its traditional hostility to civil rights legislation, Everett McKinley Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, has expressed opposition to the housing section and thus may not be available to help break a Southern filibuster.

Other than the housing section, the bill would be applicable largely in the South. It would attack racial discrimination on state and Federal juries, strengthen Federal laws against racial crimes and violence and give the Attorney General additional authority to initiate lawsuits for desegregation of schools.

An all-white audience packed the hearing room this morning when Mr. Ervin opened the hearings. The Senator said the section on jury reform had apparently been written by someone "who has little knowledge of the courthouse" and threatened to "sacrifice centuries of experience with the administration of criminal law merely because of a new-found infatuation with sociology."

He said it was "absurd" to think that the housing section could be maintained under interstate commerce clause of the Constitution.

"A house may be bought and sold," Mr. Ervin said, "but with the exception of the house trailer and in the absence of acts of God, it never crosses a state line, I fail to see how we can rely upon tornadoes and hurricanes as channels of interstat commerce."

Rights Bill Called Assault on Nation

LEGISLATION

AC 6/7/66

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—A Southern-led Senate subcommittee opened sharp debate Monday on the 1966 Civil Rights Bill amid growing signs that the Administration measure is in danger of being delayed in a House committee.

Sen. Sam Ervin, D-NC, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, called the bill "a drastic assault on 190 million Americans."

Ervin opened the Senate hearings with a statement which he required an hour and 20 minutes to read, setting the pace for lengthly hearings before the subcommittee.

The entire first day of hearings was taken up with statements read by Irvin and Atty. Gen. Nicholas de B. Katzenbach. The attorney general agreed to paraphrase his statement, but Ervin insisted that he take the time to read it.

Administration supporters do not expect the Senate Judiciary committee to report out the bill as proposed by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The administration strategy is to bring up the bill in the Senate after it is passed by the House without permitting the measure to fall into the clutches of the committee, which is headed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

However, there were indications that the bill was in trouble

Continued on Page 8, Column 7

Sen. Ervin Tags Rights Bill Assault on 190 Million in the House Judiciary Committee.

Continued from Page 1

A source close to the committee predicted the bill would not be voted out at this time if it contains the controversial fair housing provision.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-NY, chairman of the house committee and a strong supporter of past civil rights legislation, was quoted openly by a Negro leader at last week's White House conference on civil rights as saying the bill is in trouble.

The housing provision seems to be the main complaint in the House committee, which is reluctant to vote out a bill that some congressmen think is doomed in the Senate.

The proposed legislation would strengthen federal prosecution of civil rights crimes, provide open housing, reform jury selection and would permit the attorney general to file school desegregation suits without written complaints.

Sen. Ervin denounced federal civil rights proposals as innovations defying "constitutional proscriptions and common sense."

NOBODY CHANGES MIND

LEGISLATION

Sen. Ervin Knows His Law As Katzenbach Finds Out

AC Cons Hist

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 11 — White-haired Sam Ervin arched his eyebrows, peered over the top of his horned-rimmed glasses at his adversary and a classic, drawn-out debate on constitutional law began on Capital Hill this week.

No one was in a hurry. There was good reason not to be so.

Everyone directly involved knew that if the President's proposed 1966 civil rights bill, the instruments of discussion before Ervin's subcommittee on constitutional rights, was going anywhere, it would not be to the Senate floor.

Therefore, witnesses understood they could do more than testify and answer questions. They could debate the chairman, Sen. Ervin, and ask him questions and listen to his answers, and then debate some more.

THE TIME had to be spent—Sen. Ervin would see to that—so the participants whiled away the hours with lawyer-to-lawyer arguments and polite regional insults from one politician to another.

Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach was well aware of the arrangement. He spent three days in front of Ervin and the glare of eight bright television lights.

Katzenbach thrust more at Ervin's constitutional ideas than he testified in behalf of the civil rights legislation.

Ervin, who looks much younger than his 69 years, is a constitutional lawyer of enormous reputation. This goes back to the days when he sat on the Supreme Court of North Carolina before coming to the Senate.

A member of the Justice Department once said Sen. Ervin's reputation is acknowledged among the federal lawyers, although they most often disagree on civil rights affairs.

This justice official recalled that Sen. Ervin was asked why he never cites any U.S. Supreme Court cases after 1930.

The senator was supposed to have retorted, "Because I don't agree with them."

ERVIN AND KATZENBACH spent hours debating whether the power of the 14th Amendment is limited to prohibiting states from certain actions, or whether the authority is extended to Congress to pass legislation prescribing actions that the states must follow.

Neither had any hope of converting the other to his point of view. But it was something to do.

For illustration purposes, this is the way the debate went for a few minutes:

SEN. SAM ERVIN
Often Speaks in Parables

Ervin declared that the state courts could be prohibited from doing specific things under the 14th Amendment but Congress could not set forth judicial procedures for the states.

Katzenbach: "Suppose we drafted this (the bill section pertaining to state jury selection) and said that if the appropriate state or local official shall fail to furnish a written statement of jury selection information subscribed to under oath containing a detailed descripton of the following, then it will be in violation of the 14th amendment. That is just another way of saying it."

Ervin: "That would be trying to beat the constitutional devil around the stump, and I don't think you can do it."

Katzenbach: "No sir. I am just simply taking the approach that you took."

Ervin: "No, I didn't take that approach."

KATZENBACH: "You say these (jury selection proposals) are prescribing procedures and that approach is no good."

Ervin: "I don't take that approach. I take the approach that under the Constitution the federal courts have the power to invalidate state procedures which contravene the 14th Amendment. But I take the position that the federal government has no power that Congress has no power to take and go beyond that and affirmatively adopt laws which establish state procedures . . ."

The same argument was renewed later on.

Katzenbach: "Now it seems to me that when Congress enacts a statute under Section 5 (of the 14th Amendment), it can say in effect: 'If you don't do these things, you are in violation of the 14th Amendment. These are required practices and procedures for you.'

"If you feel better about this by saying, 'If you don't do this you can't proceed with the trial,' it seems to me that is not really different from stating the other."

KATZENBACH CITED a South Carolina case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court to drive home his point.

Sen. Ervin, a Southern gentleman as the word goes who often speaks in parables, replied, "Mr. Attorney General, I respectfully submit that the distinction between that case and the point we are discussing is about as wide as the gulf which yawns between Lazarus in Abraham's bosom and dives in hell."

Not everybody understood everything that was being said, and nobody was changing anybody's mind.

It was a great debate between an aggressive senator who said he knew what the law was and a patient attorney general who said he knows what the law is.

Liberals Ask Dixie Aid To Kill Housing Bill

LEGISLATION

AC 6/19/66

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—A liberal congressman from the upper-West approached a Deep South representative of moderate outlook at a recent cocktail party and pleaded, "You Southerners have got to save me from that housing bill."

The upper-Westerner had no second thoughts about voting for past civil rights bills aimed at correcting racial inequalities in the South.

But suddenly the matter of civil rights moved into his congressional district and, as the practical politician that he is, the non-Southerner had some qualms about his vote.

He now represents in Congress a predominantly all-white "bedroom" type district. If he votes for a civil rights bill with a strong open housing section, he fears political suicide between now and 1970.

If he votes against the bill, he is afraid of being defeated after 1970 when he anticipates reapportionment will place a large number of Negroes, some of them living in ghettoes, in his district.

So, the upper-Westerner discreetly called on a Southerner who sits on the committee now considering the civil rights bill, to save him from his dilemma.

This is an example of political quivering outside the South as the civil rights movement, and the effect of national legislation, edge above the Mason-Dixon line.

Crusty battle-scarred veterans of the long and losing war against legislation to protect Negro rights in the South get little comfort when a former down-the-line proponent of civil rights bills takes them aside in private and says: "You are right this time."

But the Southerners are greatly amused. Members of both the House and Senate who come from the South talk freely about such conversations with their Northern and Western counterparts.

However, when talking to reporters, the accounts are off the record, for no Southern gentleman wants to embarrass fellow lawmakers — even if they might be Yankees.

Continued on Page 18, Column 1

Liberals Ask Dixie Aid In Killing House Bill

Continued from Page 1

Non-Southern objectors to the civil rights bill don't like the two main sections of the five-part measure.

Open occupancy in housing would have a next-door application all across the country. This kind of legislation has proved unpopular with the voters whenever a referendum has been held, especially in large suburban areas.

JURY SELECTION

Jury selection reforms would have a major effect in the South, but will likely have an equal impact elsewhere. That section of the bill is intended to let persons of all strata play the game.

It would mean the janitor would share in the judicial power structure the same as a big businessman. This tends to upset community power structures which have carefully worked out a discriminating jury-selection system in the name of "blue-ribbon" panels.

Southerners can credit their present amusement to the person whom they cussed most for civil rights legislation, President Lyndon B. Johnson.

ON THE SPOT

The President, a Southerner, angered his home region by moving first against what he considered the most pressing civil rights problem.

Non-Southern areas with problems of discrimination are now being put on the spot. This year it is with proposed open housing and jury selection legislation.

Next year, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission will have completed a study of racial discrimination in education across the country, and no little part of that report will deal with de facto segregation in schools outside the South.

GOOD USED TVS
Completely Reconditioned TV
12" TV $19.95
17" TV $29.95
21" TV $39.95
TERMS: $1 DOWN ON ANY SET!
OPEN 9 A.M. 'TIL 9 P.M.
MORGAN TV CO.
469 W. P'TREE ST. N.E. 522-7466

FIDELITY FEDERAL SAVINGS
ACCOUNTS INSURED TO $10,000
TOP RETURNS
ON PASSBOOK SAVINGS
DIVIDENDS PAID QUARTERLY
300 W. PEACHTREE ST.
"Where the Peachtrees Meet at Baker"
LENOX SQUARE OFFICE
Plaza Level Park "Yellow 30"
ACCOUNTS FROM $1 UP
SAVINGS RECEIVED BY THE 20TH
EARN FROM THE FIRST

JOHNSON TO YIELD ON OPEN HOUSING TO AID RIGHTS BILL

LEGISLATION

Will Accept Exemptions to Bias Ban—House Panel Backs Other Sections

NYT 6/28/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 27—The Johnson Administration has agreed to accept some exemptions in the open housing section of its civil rights bill to increase the bill's chances of passing Congress this year.

The House Judiciary Committee tentatively approved all other sections of the bill today and will begin considering amendments tomorrow to the controversial provision that would ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who met with committee leaders last week, is said to agree with many members of Congress that the section will have to be watered down if widespread opposition is to be overcome.

Several amendments are under consideration, and representative Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn Democrat who is committee chairman, said after today's session that "no agreements of any sort" had been reached. He indicated there was wide disagreement in the committee over how far the exemptions should go.

Celler Standing Frim

Mr. Celler, sponsor of the Administration bill, said he was sticking by his resolve of a few weeks ago to oppose all amendments.

"Personally, I want to keep it intact," he said. It was understood, however, that there was strong support for going beyond the "Mrs. Murphy" type of amendment—exempting rentals in small owner-occupied housing—that was approved by Mr. Katzenbach several weeks ago.

This strong support is for exempting housing offered for sale or rental privately. This would permit the homeowner to sell to a friend or relative without putting his house on the open market and not run the danger of a lawsuit charging him with discrimination.

Real controversy, however, centers on proposals to exempt one- and two-family dwellings that are listed with real estate agents. Civil rights groups that have been lobbying for the bill are strongly opposed to exempting the real estate industry.

As the bill now stands, it would permit anyone seeking housing to bring suit against owners, real estate agents and lending institutions accused of discriminating because of race, religion or national origin.

Because of the broad coverage

Continued on Page 25, Column 1

JOHNSON TO YIELD ON OPEN HOUSING

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

in the bill as written there are several approaches to writing amendments that are said to be acceptable to the Administration. An example would be to exempt homeowners but to leave the real estate industry and other commercial interests covered.

The chief organized opposition to the bill has come from the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which represents about 83,000 agents dealing chiefly in the sale of single-family homes.

Mr. Celler said he hoped the committee could complete action on the bill by Thursday. It is now expected to come before the House for a vote by late July or early August.

The committee today wrote in one limitation to a section intended to strengthen Federal criminal laws. This section involves persons who harm or intimidate because of race or religion those engaged in civil rights activities sanctioned by the Federal Government.

The limitation, approved by a vote of 18 to 16, would make the section apply only to civil rights workers engaged in "lawful" activities. The amendment containing the limitation was offered by Representative George W. Grider, Democrat of Tennessee.

Civil rights groups opposed the amendment, saying that Southern officials and judges might use it as a technicality to thwart Federal prosecutions. They cited, for example, state law that might conflict with Federal law and policy.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, told a reporter that the amendment would make the law nonapplicable to marchers such as those who were tear-gassed in Canton, Miss., last week because they were on property in violation of local laws.

The committee made no changes in sections calling for a ban against racial discrimination in the selection of state and Federal juries and giving the Attorney General authority to initiate lawsuits for the desegregation of schools.

House Panel Votes to Keep Open Housing in Rights Bill

LEGISLATION 6/29/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 28—The House Judiciary Committee refused today, by a vote of 17 to 15, to strike the open housing section from the Administration's civil rights bill. Then, however, Southerners and other regular opponents of civil rights legislation voted with the more liberal Democrats against softening amendments that sponsors of the bill now consider necessary to pass it.

One by one, those amendments were defeated by a close vote and the result was confusion and despair among moderates who believe it is of tactical importance to report a less stringent housing section to the floor.

The committee will meet again tomorrow, and further attempts will be made to write in some exemptions to the provision that would ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

Celler Fears Changes

The 35-member committee met in executive session and the strange developments were pieced together late in the afternoon from members who were under instructions from the chairman, Emanuel Celler, not to disclose details.

Mr. Celler, who gave reporters a vague report of what had happened, apparently expressed the view of the Johnson Administration when he said he was personally glad to see the bill intact but feared for its future in its present form.

"Being practical I want to get something done," the white-haired, Brooklyn Democrat said. "From a practical standpoint the situation may become disappointing later. There may be some changes I don't like on the floor," he added.

Almost everyone says the housing section has little chance of passing the House and Senate in its present form. The Administration has agreed to watering-down amendments if necessary to get the bill through.

This is the first rights legislation concerning housing submitted by a President and one of the first pieces of civil rights legislation that would be applicable nationally as well as in the South.

Continued on Page 27, Column 1

HOUSE UNIT KEEPS HOUSING BIAS BAN

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

As a result, the traditional voting patterns in Congress have been thrown out of kilter and legislative leaders are not quite sure where they stand or how to proceed.

When the committee met this morning 14 Northern Democrats and three liberal Republicans supplied the necessary votes to keep the housing section in the bill.

But when bipartisan efforts were made to adopt amendments the strange coalition of liberal Democrats, Southerners and civil rights foes went into operation and defeated the amendments, usually by a narrow vote.

Northern liberals who generally express the views of the civil rights groups were said to believe they could not vote to water down the housing section, which many consider too weak already. Southerners were miffed at the fact that Congress seems capable of voting strong civil rights bills only involving the South and refused to modify the section.

One member said the traditional civil rights conservatives on the committee wanted to give it a "political burden" by keeping the housing section in unacceptable form.

So many amendments were offered, and defeated, that members lost count. The Department of Justice had a representative in touch with the committee grading the amendments according to their acceptability to the Administration.

One given a high grade by the Justice Department and narrowly defeated was a bipartisan effort sponsored by Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland and supported by James C. Corman, Democrat of California.

This would have had the effect of exempting owners selling their homes and leasing or renting small housing projects where the owner occupies one of the units. As the bill stands, all owners' real estate agents and lending institutions would be subject to lawsuit by those who felt they had been subjected to discrimination.

On a finding of discrimination, a court could award punitive damages up to $500. Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, however, told Congress he did not expect a rash of lawsuits but foresaw, instead, widespread, voluntary compliance.

The committee did accept a minor amendment offered by Representative William M. McCulloch of Ohio, the ranking Republican of the committee. It would exempt religious or fraternal organizations that operate homes for their own faith or membership.

Mr. McCulloch was silent, however, about the Republican position on the bill. Asked his opinion of the committee action, Mr. McCulloch said:

"I feel like the poet who wrote something about marching them up the hill, then marching them right down again."

Some Democrats grumbled that the Republican leadership was anxious to put Democrats on the spot by voting out the housing section exactly as President Johnson submitted it.

The committee has approved other sections of the bill, all applicable primarily in the South. They would strengthen Federal laws against racial crimes, seek to end jury discrimination and give the Attorney General more authority to file desegregation lawsuits.

LEGISLATION

Dixie Shift Toughens Housing

AC 6/29/66

By JOHN HERBERS

(Copyright 1966 by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee voted 17 to 15 Tuesday not to strike the open housing section from the administration's civil rights bill.

Then, in a tactical maneuver, Southerners and other traditional opponents of civil rights legislation voted with the more liberal Democrats against softening amendments that sponsors of the bill said they considered necessary to obtain passage of the measure.

One by one, the amendments were defeated by a close vote and the result was confusion and despair on the part of those moderates who feel it is of tactical importance to report a less stringent housing section to the floor.

MEETS TODAY

The committee will meet again Wednesday when further attempts will be made to write in some exemptions to the provision that would ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing.

The 35-member committee met in executive session. Details of what went on were pieced together late in the afternoon from accounts given by members of the committee. They were under instructions from the chairman, Emanuel Celler of Brooklyn, not to disclose details.

Celler, who gave reporters a vague report of what happened, apparently expressed the view of the Johnson administration when he said he was personally glad to see the bill intact but feared for its future in its present form.

LITTLE CHANCE

"Being practical I want to get something done," he said. "From a practical standpoint the situation may become disappointing later. There may be some changes I don't like on the floor."

The housing section is given little chance of passing the House and Senate in its present form. The administration has agreed to watering-down amendments if necessary to get it through.

This is the first civil rights legislation concerning housing submitted by a president and one of the first that would be applicable nationally.

As a result, the traditional

Continued on Page 10, Column 1

Dixie Shift Toughens Housing Bill

Continued from Page 1

voting patterns have been thrown out of kilter.

When the committee met Tuesday morning 14 Northern Democrats and three liberal Republicans supplied the necessary votes to keep the housing section in the bill.

But when bi-partisan efforts were made to adopt the softening amendments, the unusual coalition of liberals and Southerners went into operation and defeated them, generally by a close vote.

Northern liberals who generally express the views of the civil rights groups were said to feel they could not vote to water down the housing section, which many consider too weak already. The Southerners objected that Congress seemed capable of voting strong civil rights bill only against the South and refused to modify the section. One committee member said the conservatives wanted to give the bill a "political burden" by keeping the housing section in unacceptable form.

HOUSE UNIT EASES HOUSING BIAS BAN

LEGISLATION

Exempts Individual Sales—Bill Cleared for Floor

NYT 6/30/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 29—The House Judiciary Committee approved President Johnson's civil rights bill today after accepting a compromise amendment to the open housing section that would exempt the vast majority of individual home sales.

By a vote of 21 to 13, the committee adopted the amendment sponsored by Representative Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland.

This broke a two-day deadlock over the controversial section that would ban discrimination in the sale or rental of all types of housing.

The committee then approved the entire bill by a vote of 24 to 9 and asked that it be brought to a vote by the full House as soon as possible.

However, the committee also accepted an amendment sponsored by civil rights groups and offered by Representative John Conyers Jr., Democrat of Michigan, to establish an enforcement agency for open housing with power to issue cease-and-desist orders.

The vote on this amendment was 13 to 4, and there were indications that some members were not aware of how strong it was, although Mr. Convers announced that it would give the agency powers beyond conciliation, similar to those of the National Labor Relations Board.

It was the Mathias amendment that made the housing

Continued on Page 23, Column 4

HOUSE UNIT EASES HOUSING BIAS BAN

Continued From Page 1, Col. 1

section acceptable to the committee. Basically, it exempts the homeowner from charges of discrimination when he sells his property. Mr. Mathias said the exemption would also apply to the real estate agent when the owner stated racial preference of the buyer.

The amendment says an owner can discriminate in his first two sales of property during a 12-month period. Thus those who buy and sell for profit, builders and lending institutions would still be covered.

So would most apartment rentals. The Mathias amendment, however, also exempts buildings of four units or less when the owner lives on the premises — Mrs. Murphy's boarding house, as such units have come to be known.

What emerged from the committee was a housing bill similar to a New York State law that has strong enforcement powers but limited coverage. Most of the used homes sold in the suburbs would be exempt.

Celler Backs Revision

The committee chairman, Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, who is sponsor of the bill, predicted that the Mathias compromise would assure the legislation's passage in the House.

"I support the bill as reported out," he said. "All good legislation is the result of compromise. The bill without the Mathias amendment would be like having a wine celler without a corkscrew."

In addition to the housing section, the bill would seek to end racial discrimination in the selection of state and Federal juries, broaden Federal criminal laws against racial violence and give the Attorney General additional authority to file desegregation lawsuits.

By including a housing section, Mr. Celler said, "the bill, in effect, says civil rights must mean the same in the North as well as the South, the East as well as the West."

One factor behind today's action was a last-minute coagulation of Republican support. Both the House and Senate Republican leaders, Representative Gerald Ford of Michigan and Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, had branded the House Section unconstitutional.

Faced with this opposition, Mr. Mathias called Republican governors and other party leaders outside of Congress and tell them that the party could not afford to fail to support civil rights legislation this year.

Although there was no sign of change on the part of Mr. Ford and Mr. Dirksen, the ranking Republican on the committee, William M. McCulloch of Ohio, began working for a compromise on housing.

Mr. McCulloch, who has supported civil rights legislation in the past, would not say whether he would support the Administration bill on the floor. But he did indicate his approval when he said, "A man's castle is still his home" and he can sell it as he wishes.

10 Countries

966.

LIBERAL ON COAST FEARS RIGHTS BILL

LEGISLATION

Rep. Corman Concerned by Effect of Housing Fight

7/4/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 3—The 22d Congressional District of California lies on the edge of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley. It ranks among the top 10 districts in the nation in the affluence and education of its residents.

The district has a population of about 500,000, with 96 per cent white, 2 per cent Negro and 2 per cent Mexican-American. It is a stronghold of the John Birch Society, which is reported to have 10,000 members there.

In 1964 the district voted three to one for Proposition 14, the state constitutional amendment intended to nullify state legislation forbidding racial discrimination in housing.

Since 1961, the district has been represented by James C. Corman of Van Nuys, a 45-year-old former member of the Los Angeles City Council. In his five years in Congress, Mr. Corman has been a supporter of civil rights and most other liberal legislation sponsored by the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations.

1964 Rival Is Back

In the process, his support in the district has become more and more marginal. In 1964, Mr. Corman received 51 per cent of the votes in a contest with a conservative Republican, Robert C. Cline.

Mr. Cline is back again this year spending his full time in the district campaigning to unseat Mr. Corman.

Mr. Corman, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, has been upset by the open housing section of President Johnson's civil rights bill. This, Mr. Corman says, has put him on the spot like nothing else since he has been in Congress.

By JOHN HERBERS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 3—The 22d Congressional District of California lies on the edge of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley. It ranks among the top 10 districts in the nation in the affluence and education of its residents.

The district has a population of about 500,000, with 96 per cent white, 2 per cent Negro and 2 per cent Mexican-American. It is a stronghold of the John Birch Society, which is reported to have 10,000 members there.

In 1964 the district voted three to one for Proposition 14, the state constitutional amendment intended to nullify state legislation forbidding racial discrimination in housing.

Since 1961, the district has been represented by James C. Corman of Van Nuys, a 45-year-old former member of the Los Angeles City Council. In his five years in Congress, Mr. Corman has been a supporter of civil rights and most other liberal legislation sponsored by the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations.

1964 Rival Is Back

In the process, his support in the district has become more and more marginal. In 1964, Mr. Corman received 51 per cent of the votes in a contest with a conservative Republican, Robert C. Cline.

Mr. Cline is back again this year spending his full time in the district campaigning to unseat Mr. Corman.

Mr. Corman, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, has been upset by the open housing section of President Johnson's civil rights bill. This, Mr. Corman says, has put him on the spot like nothing else since he has been in Congress.

It would have helped his position back home considerably, Mr. Corman said in an interview, if he had opposed the housing section outright. As it was he took a leading role in working out a compromise that would exempt most homeowners.

Mr. Cormon said his support of the measure even in watered down form could cause his defeat in November.

"But I think civil rights is the most critical domestic issue of the day and I think it is something that is going to be with us for a long time," he said. "I think legislation in this field is necessary to reach a peaceful solution."

Typical Liberal Problem

Mr. Corman's difficulty with the housing section is typical of a number of other liberals in Congress who have had no trouble supporting strong civil rights legislation in the past.

The civil rights bill was approved by the Judiciary Committee last Wednesday after a two-day struggle on the housing section, which would ban racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housing. Other sections of the bill, applicable chiefly in the South, would strengthen Federal laws against racial crimes, ban discrimination on state and Federal juries and give the Attorney General more authority to file desegregation lawsuits.

A bipartisan compromise on housing — which Mr. Corman helped Representative Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland, sell to other members of the committee — exempts rentals of small buildings when the owners lives on the premises and exempts most owners who sell their homes.

Still covered are most commercial interests in the real estate market. Real estate agents are exempt when the owner, in listing his house for sale, specifies the desired race or religion of the buyer.

Much of the opposition to the housing section has come from real estate agents. Mr. Corman said he expected the compromise to diminish but not eliminate the strong opposition in his district. His opponent has been using Mr. Corman's role in the legislation as a campaign point against him.

Mr. Corman said he would depend on other factors to pull him through. One is the fact that he is a former Marine who has supported President Johnson down the line in Vietnam.

"We don't have many pacifists in out district," Mr. Corman said with a smile.

LEGISLATION

THE NEW YORK TIMES, WEDNESDAY, JULY 20,

KATZENBACH ASKS HOUSING ACCORD

Offers Compromise to Rights Bill to Senate Panel

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 19 — Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach today proferred a two-step compromise to opponents of the controversial open housing section of the Administration's civil rights bill, which is expected to come to a crucial debate in the House next Monday.

In an appearance before the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights, Mr. Katzenbach stressed that he hoped the "strongest possible" bill would emerge from the expected week-long House debate. He made a sometimes impassioned plea for an end to housing discrimination as an "absolutely essential" step in breaking the "isolation of the ghetto."

In an exchange with Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, who is the subcommittee chairman, Mr. Katzenbach criticized what he called "the conspiracy" of real estate brokers not only in seeking to exclude Negroes from white housing but also in starting "a massive lobbying and mail campaign" against the provisions of the civil rights bill designed to end such practices.

Chain-smoking, the Attorney General nevertheless clearly indicated his acceptance of either of two compromise levels of coverage for the open housing section, both of which are less broad than the Administration's original proposal.

In a tacit acknowledgement of the Administration's own assessment of its voting strength —or lack of it—on the open housing issue, Mr. Katzenbach told the Senators that "the process of legislation often involves differences of opinion and some compromise."

He described the open housing compromise drafted late last month in the House Judiciary Committee, principally by Charles McC. Mathias, Republican of Maryland, as "still effective in covering rental housing and in preventing real estate people from discriminating on their own hook."

"I would prefer the bill as the Administration introduced it," Mr. Katzenbach declared, "but at the same time the House version would be a tremendous help in solving a very serious problem."

According to one estimate by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Mathias compromise would leave nearly two-thirds of the 60 million existing housing units in the nation uncovered by the antidiscrimination terms of the housing section.

However, Mr. Katzenbach's testimony today sharply underlined the confusion here over the difference between the language of the compromise, adopted by the House Judiciary Committee by a vote of 21 to 13, and the intention of its drafters.

Mr. Katzenbach first defined the difference and then said he would be willing to accept either the "language" version or the "intention" version, in that order.

He later told a newsman that the language version was "really quite a strong bill."

"But I don't want to be fraudulent about it," he added.

"I think we have to make this clear."

To the Senate subcommittee the Attorney General explained that under the language of the Mathias amendment, it was his belief that a real estate agent, even though "instructed to discriminate" by a homeowner in the sale or rental of his property—a situation he said the compromise drafters intended to exempt from the bill's coverage —would nonetheless probably still be liable to its terms.

"I think a very good case could be made [in court] htat the agent is covered," he told the subcommittee. "The intention of the authors is not accomplished by the language and agents are still covered."

Mr. Kattenbach also said it had been the intention of the authors to exempt homeowners from charges of discrimination when they sold or rented their properties without an agent, and also to exempt real estate agents when the owner stated in advance a discriminatory preference about a buyer.

The crucial difference is in thd exemption or liability of real estate agents, through whom the great majority of sales and rentals are made. Civil rights groups supporting a strong housing section have predicted that real estate agents would "connive" with sellers to evade its provisions if allowed any exemption.

Either of the exemptions would apply only to owner-occupied dwellings of four units or less. This was an attempt to exclude both "Mrs. Murphy's boarding house and Mr. Murphy apartment house" as Mr. Katzenbach described it today.

Associated Press Wirephoto

SUPPORTS HOUSING BILL: Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach testifying yesterday before a Senate subcommittee on the Administration's open-housing measure.

LEGISLATION

Rights Leaders Assail Klan Bill

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House UnAmerican Activities Committee's proposed anti-Ku Klux Klan bill, which is co-sponsored by Atlanta Rep. Charles Weltner, was attacked Thursday by civil rights leaders as a fraud and a subterfuge.

Southern spokesmen for the Anti - Defamation League of B'nai B'rith endorsed the idea of legislation to eliminate KKK activities, but they objected to language in the bill introduced by Weltner and Committee Chairman Edwin Willis, D.-La.

Although not a single witness has fully endorsed the bill, during the first two days of hearings on the proposal, the committee is assured of a majority vote to recommend passage to the House of Representatives.

Rep Weltner

Rep. Willis

TO SUPPORT BILL

At least five of the nine HUAC members plan to support the bill in revised form.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., a Washington attorney, who spoke for the Americans for Democratic Action, told the committee that the "bill is unconstitutional, unworkable and unwise."

Rauh added, "If enacted, it would fail to protect individuals against the Klan activities of violence. Bluntly put, this legislation is a fraud on the American people."

The Rev. C. T. Vivian, a leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headquartered in Atlanta, said at a press conference that the bill would be "terrible" for civil rights organizations and would be unconstitutional.

PRESS CONFERENCE

Vivian participated in a press conference held by the National Committee to Abolish HUAC.

He said Negroes fear that the bill would be used by Southern officials to obtain membership lists of civil rights organizations, and members would be subject to intimidation.

Southern officials also could twist the proposed law to prevent Negroes from testing "unjust laws" by direct action.

The bill would permit prosecution of interstate conspiracies by "clandestine organizations" to deprive anyone of federally guaranteed rights.

TWISTED VIEW

Vivian said some Southern officials might interpret clandestine organizations to mean civil rights groups, not the KKK.

He said the HUAC bill would restrict prosecution of civil rights murders to state courts if the slaying did not involve interstate commerce.

The HUAC proposal is "in direct competition" with the section of the 1966 Civil Rights Bill which would make civil rights violence a federal crime, said Vivian.

He said the bill proposed by HUAC, which is dominated by Southern congressmen, endangers passage of the civil rights legislation this year.

INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

An original HUAC bill introduced by Rep. Weltner to provide only injunctive relief to individuals from conspiracies to violate federal rights was described by Vivian as "worse than this bill; it would have made it more difficult for civil rights organizations."

Clarence Mitchell, Washington bureau director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, opposed the HUAC bill and advocated passage of the Civil Rights Act.

Irving K. Kaler of Atlanta, a Southeastern board member of the Anti-defamation League, told the committee, "Our national conscience mandates" the elimination of the Klan.

GEORGIANS FAVOR

Almost all leading Georgians favor legislation to eradicate KKK activities, he added.

Kaler is vice chairman of the Georgia Democratic Executive Committee.

He is also state vice chairman of the Ellis Arnall campaign for governor.

The three HUAC members who have said they will join Weltner and Willis in supporting the anti-Klan legislation are Rep. John Buchanan, R.-Ala., Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R.-Ohio, and Rep. George F. Senner, D.-Ariz.

LEGISLATION

Missourian Breaks Tie In House

AC 9/4/66

Johnson-Backed Compromise Wins

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON The House approved by the barest margin Wednesday a Johnson administration compromise on the open housing section in the 1966 civil rights bill.

The vote came out 179 to 179 on an amendment to exempt two sales or rentals a year by owners and their real estate brokers in such transactions.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., who was presiding, voted in favor of the compromise in breaking the tie.

Johnson administration leaders put together an unorthodox combination to adopt the compromise on the hairline vote.

The crucial ballots came from a few Deep South congressmen, including Rep. Charles L. Weltner of Atlanta.

The democratic leaders still have a fight on their hands to keep the modified housing section in the bill.

A motion was pending to strike the entire section when the House adjourned Wednesday. The motion was made by Rep. Arch A. Moore Jr., R.-W. Va.

If a vote on Moore's motion failed Thursday, he plans another attempt to strip the housing section from the bill before a final vote is taken either late this week or early next week.

Georgia's other nine congressmen opposed the open housing compromise. When the Civil Rights Bill came up last week, they had discussed with other Southerners the possibility of voting for a strong housing section, hoping to kill the entire measure or set up a filibuster.

However, by the end of last week the Georgians had decided the risk was too great that their votes for an all-inclusive opening housing section might be misinterpreted back home as being "soft on segregation."

In fact, the nine Georgia congressmen, excluding Weltner, opposed a substitute motion by Rep. Clark MacGregor, R-Minn., proposing that the open housing law cover all homeowners.

None of Wednesday's votes was recorded in the House, but a reporter in the gallery counted how the Georgia delegation voted.

House Republican leader Gerald Ford of Michigan, who last week had declined to state his position and this week had refused to discuss the issue with reporters, led the majority of the 139 GOP House members in trying to kill the housing section this year.

The Democratic majority, which has settled on the compromise as the only way to obtain passage of any open housing legislation this year, picked up support from about 25 Republicans.

Continued on Page 14, Column 1

Open Housing Bill Passes As Tie Is Broken in House

Continued from Page 1

The compromise would permit owners to sell or lease two houses a year to anyone they choose; would allow these owners to instruct real estate brokers to discriminate in sales or rentals; would exempt from the anti-discrimination law owner-occupied apartment buildings containing no more than four family units; and would exclude from the law fraternal and religious organizations which provide housing to members to further the purposes of the institutions.

President Lyndon B. Johnson had asked Congress to pass open housing legislation covering all sales, leases and financing of housing.

Administration leaders came out on top in parliamentary maneuvering when the House began consideration of the housing section Wednesday afternoon. This advantage may have saved the section from defeat.

Rep. Moore first moved to eliminate the housing section. Rep. Charles Mathias, R-Md., immediately offered an amendment which he said was intended to clear up any doubt that homeowners with two transactions a year and their real estates brokers would be exempted under the law.

Rep. Bolling ruled from the chair that a vote on the Mathias amendment took preference over Moore's move to strike the section.

Rep. MacGregor then offered his substitute to cover all residential owners/and to exempt only owner-occupied with not more than four units.

Bolling ruled the House had to vote on MacGregor's substitute before deciding either Mathias' amendment or Moore's motion.

MacGregor's proposal was voted down 186-67. All 10 Georgia congressmen voted to defeat MacGregor's substitute.

A vote was then taken on Mathias' amendment, and the administration scraped up enough votes to tie and to win on Bolling's favorable vote.

Other Deep South congressmen besides Weltner who voted for the compromise included Rep. Sam Gibbons, D.-Fla., Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D.-Fla., and Rep. George Grider, D.-Tenn.

A vote on Moore's motion to eliminate the housing section was put off until Thursday.

CASTS DECIDING VOTE
Rep. Richard Bolling

Nixon to Visit Saigon Briefly

SAIGON (UPI) —Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon will arrive here late Friday for a brief look at the Viet Nam situation.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said Nixon would stay at the residence of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge during his visit here.

Nixon will remain in Saigon for the entire period of his visit. There will be no trips to the field.

HOUSE HOLDS FIRM ON HOUSING RIGHTS

LEGISLATION

Defeats Efforts to Weaken Curb on Discrimination in Sales and Rentals

NYT 8/6/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—The House defeated today attempts to weaken further the open housing section of the Administration's civil rights bill.

This action gave sponsors of the bill new hope that the controversial section would survive further assaults tomorrow and win final approval in the form tentatively approved yesterday. In its present form, most individual home sales are exempted from the bill's anti-discrimination provisions.

Only two chances were approved today in tedious and prolonged debate, and they strengthened and expanded the coverage of the housing section.

'Block-Busting' Opposed

One was to make it unlawful to refuse to sell or rent housing to persons with children. This amendment was sponsored by Bob Casey, Democrat of Texas, who has 10 children, and was supported by Hugh L. Carey, Democrat of Brooklyn, who has 14.

The other was the insertion of an "anti-block busting" amendment sponsored by Jonathan B. Bingham, Democrat of the Bronx. Block-busting is the practice by which real estate agents profit by changing the racial make-up of a neighborhood.

The House recessed tonight without voting on a crucial amendment to strike the housing section from the bill. It was agreed that this amendmend would be voted on tomorrow. If it is defeated, as is expected, further amendments will be in order.

Margins Are Substantial

Attempts to kill the entire bill and to render the housing section virtually ineffective were defeated by substantial margins today. Some opponents said their only hope of defeating the measure lay in the possibility that some of its backers would go home early for the weekend.

As the housing section now stands, it would forbid real estate agents, builders, lending institutions and other commercial interests to practice racial discrimination in the sale or rental of all housiing.

However, under a bipartisan amendment accepted yesterday, the individual who makes no more than two sales or rentals a year — and his agent, if so designated in writing — is ex-

Continued on Page 11, Column 2

NEWS INDEX

	Page		Page
Books	29	Music	15-20
Bridge	28	Obituaries	31
Business	37, 44-45	Real Estate	45
Buyers	44	Screen	15-20
Crossword	29	Ships and Air	46
Editorials	30	Society	34
Fashions	35	Sports	21-28
Financial	37-45	Theaters	15-20
Food	35	TV and Radio	47
Letters	30	U. N. Proceedings	3
Man in the News	10	Weather	46

News Summary and Index, Page 33

House, Standing Firm, Defeats Moves to Weaken Open Housing

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

empt. Also exempt is the person who rents an apartment or house with four or fewer family units while he, the owner, is living on the premises.

The effect of the amendment, sponsored by Representative Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland, is to exempt 60 per cent of the housing units in the nation. Still covered are large apartment buildings and tracts of individual homes constructed by commercial builders.

Enforcement would be through court order or by a Federal board with power to order persons to cease discrimination. There is a good chance, however, that that provision creating the enforcement board will be removed in either the House or Senate. President Johnson requested no such enforcement agency. The House Judiciary Committee added it in amending the bill.

The Mathias amendment was approved yesterday by one vote. It is still subject to a second roll-call vote on final passage of the bill, which may not come until next week.

Foes Hold Strategy Talks

Today, Southerners who oppose the entire bill held a strategy session in the office of Howard W. Smith, Democrat of Virginia, who is chairman of the Rules Committee.

It was a strange alliance of Southerners, Republicans and very liberal Democrats who voted against the Mathias amendment — the liberals because it weakened the bill and the others because they wanted no such housing law.

The Southerners decided to try to have more members on hand for roll-calls. Delay also emerged as part of the opposition strategy.

When a motion was made by Harlan Hagen, Democrat of California, to make the section applicable only to housing completed after enactment of the bill, Judge Smith, as he is called by his colleagues, came forward and opened debate about what is known as Mrs. Murphy's boarding house.

Mr. Smith, his coat pockets building with papers, argued that the old-fashioned boarding house was not exempt, even though sponeors of the bill insisted it was. Other Southerners agreed the language in the bill was not clear and the debate droned on until sponsors pointed out that the issue was not germane to the amendment.

Amendment Is Rejected

Later in the day, Mr. Smith moved to strike the enacting clause of the bill, one method of kiling a piece of legislation. This was defeated, 177 to 149, another indication that the bill probably will survive and be sent to the Senate pretty much in its present form.

Also defeated was an amendment by Basil L. Whitener, Democrat of North Carolina, to provide Government backing for housing loans that lending institutions might be required to make under the bill.

Chet Holifield, Democrat of California, noted that banks in his state had cut off credit to businesses in the riot-torn Watts district of Los Angeles and asked if they would be forced to make such loans under the bill.

Byron Rogers, Democrat of California, a sponsor, assured him that they would not.

Mr. Casey's amendment in

Associated Press Wirephoto

William H. Booth as he testified on the rights bill.

behalf of children brought laughter, but he assured the House he was serious.

"We who are attempting to propagate the race have trouble finding housing," he said. "Sometime they will accept pets before they do children."

The amendment passed, 99 to 50.

Mr. Bingham's anti-block-busting amendment was accepted by voice vote.

The amendment says it will be unlawful for any person to induce others to sell or lease dwellings on racial or religious grounds if their purpose is to lower values, increase antisocial behavior or cause a decline in the quality of schools.

HOUSE APPROVES STIFF RIOT CURBS

LEGISLATION

Would Make Federal Crime of Inciting Disturbance on Interstate Facility

NYT 8/9/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 — The House voted today to make it a Federal crime for any person using the facilities of interstate commerce to incite or carry out a riot or other violent civil disturbance.

Representatives, clearly impatient with violence that has occurred in several cities, accepted by voice vote a broad antiriot proposal that carries a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

In doing so, they overrode the recommendations of the Justice Department which had approved a milder version similar to existing conspiracy statutes.

Title V Amended

The successful proposal was in the form of an amendment to Title V of the Administration's civil rights bill, now in its third week of debate on the House floor. Title V was designed to broaden Federal criminal laws against violence and intimidation of minority groups and civil rights workers, primarily in the South.

The amendment was offered by an opponent of the bill, William C. Cramer, Republican of Florida, who said, "the people of this country are crying for Congress to take action" against "fires, looting, vandalism, violence and death that have become bywords of the American summer."

During a period of emotional debate on the proposal, Southern conservatives were urging Federal action under the 14th amendment to the Constitution while the most militant liberals were demanding local rights in law enforcement, a reversal of traditional roles.

Text of Amendment

The text of the amendment is as follows:

"Whoever moves or travels in interstate or foreign commerce or uses any facility in interstate or foreign commerce, including the mail, with intent to

(1) incite, promote, encourage, or carry on, or facilitate the incitement, promotion, encouragement, or carrying on, of a riot or other violent civil disturbance;

"Or (2) commit any crime of violence, arson, arming, or any other act which is a felony under Federal or state law, or a high misdemeanor under New Jersey law, in furtherance or during the commission of an act or activity specified in paragraph one;

"Or (3) assist, encourage, or instruct any person to commit or perform any act specified in paragraphs one and two; and therefore performs or attempts to perform any act specified in paragraphs one, two, and three, shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both."

Other than the antiriot amend-

Continued on Page 25, Column 4

ADOPTIVE PARENTS IN NEW YORK CITY: Free bibliography, recent books & articles. Primus Estate Planning Agency. Write to Z 7227 TIMES.—Advt.

HOUSE APPROVES STIFF RIOT CURBS

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

ment, Title V was approved essentially as it came out of the Judiciary Committee. Tomorrow, the House will take up Title VI, which gives the Attorney General authority to initiate school desegregation lawsuits without receiving requests to do so from the district involved.

Speaker John W. McCormack, Democrat of Massachusetts, said he expected a final vote on the bill no later than Wednesday. It is expected to pass by an overwhelming margin.

Weapon Against Klan

During the debate, Mr. Cramer said:

"This amendment is the result of evidence which supports the contention that this violence [in several cities this summer] is the work, in part, of well-trained, outside agitators who come into these communities for the express purpose of inciting violent civil disobedience."

Mr. Cramer said it could be used against the Ku Klux Klan; George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the American Nazi party; and other extremist white groups as well as militant groups that have been working in Negro communities.

He said it could be used to stop the distribution of inflammatory literature in this country by Robert Williams, the former Negro leader of Monroe, N. C., who fled several years ago and has been promoting racial violence from Cuba.

Asked if it could be used against such Negro leaders as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Mr. Cramer said, "not if he led peaceful demonstrations" as he was doing in Chicago last week when he was attacked by a white mob.

Southern Support

Mr. Cramer was joined in support of the amendment by both Southerners who have opposed any kind of civil rights legislation and some Northern members of both parties who have had a liberal voting record on civil rights.

Roman C. Pucinski, Democrat of Illinois, waved a pink leaflet that he identified only as a "scurrilous pamphlet" that had been distributed in Chicago before the riots "by people who have no interest in human dignity and human rights." He called for a strong Federal statute for "restoring law and order."

James C. Corman, Democrat of California, offered a substitute amendment that he said the Justice Department had approved as "easier to enforce." It would have made it illegal to conspire to incite a riot through interstate commerce and would retain state law enforcement.

But Mr. Cramer and his allies angrily argued down the Corman substitute, saying it went no further than the Federal conspiracy law that covers all Federal crimes.

"It cuts my amendment," cried Mr. Cramer. "It wouldn't deal with the intent of an individual."

Mr. Cramer said the Justice Department's position was, "if we have to do this let's do it lightly." John B. Anderson, Republican of Illinois, accused Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach of ignoring "the idea of a conspiracy" in the riots.

William F. Ryan, Democrat, of Manhattan, said the House had "lost sight of the purpose of Title V."

"It was drafted to protect those who are exercising their constitutional rights in Communities where law and order have broken down," he said.

The voice vote for the Cramer amendment seemed overwhelming. After that, the House defeated efforts both to weaken the section and to add a provision whereby local governments would have to pay indemnity for persons injured in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

The indemnification feature was supported by civil rights organizations and offered on the floor by Charles C. Diggs Jr., Democrat of Michigan. Sponsors of the bill pointed out it had been defeated in committee.

Saigon Students Assail G.I. Marital 'Escalation'

SAIGON, South Vietnam, Aug. 8 (UPI)—A group of Saigon University students called today for an end of the "escalation" of marriages between American servicemen and Vietnamese girls. They also demanded segregation of foreign troops and a deadline for their withdrawal from South Vietnam.

The demands were made in a statement issued after a meeting of the students. They also called for an end of the war and solution of the economic, political and social problems it has caused.

The students criticized the increasing number of Vietnamese women who are taking part in "the escalation of the marrying of U. S. men."

"Vietnam has a good tradition and high morals," the statement said. "No woman is proud when marrying an American."

The students attribute what they regard as a moral decline to social and economic problems resulting from the war. They said it was the responsibility of the Government to take immediate corrective measures.

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL PASSED IN HOUSE BY 259-157 VOTE

LEGISLATION
8/10/66

HOUSING COVERED

Measure Faces a Stiff Fight in Senate and Possible Filibuster

Excerpts from housing title, summary of bill, Page 29.

By JOHN HERBERS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—After 12 days of intense debate, the House passed by a comfortable margin tonight the civil rights bill submitted by President Johnson last spring.

The vote was 259 to 157.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where it faces opposition by Republican leaders and the possibility of a filibuster by Southern Democrats.

The main provisions of the bill would assure nondiscrimination in the selection of Federal and state juries, combat racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing, broaden the Federal laws against acts of racial violence or intimidation, and permit Federal court injunctions against anticipated violence or intimidation.

Title Watered Down

This afternoon, Southerners and Republicans were successful in rendering ineffective Title VI of the bill. It would have permitted the Attorney General to file school desegregation lawsuits without being requested to do so by citizens in the district involved.

Representatives, who began debating the bill in a committee of the whole on July 25, completed consideration of amendments at 6 o'clock this evening, reported the bill to the full House and took the first roll-call votes on key amendments and on final passage.

By a vote of 237 to 176, the House approved the Mathias amendment to the open housing section, which had passed by one vote earlier in the week. This was the amendment offered by Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Republican of Maryland, that exempted most individual home sales from the nondiscrimination provisions of the bill.

Riot Clause Voted

Next, Representatives voted 389 to 25 to make it a Federal crime for persons using interstate commerce to incite or carry out a riot, as provided in an amendment submitted by William C. Cramer, Republican of Florida.

Then, the amendment rendering ineffective Title VI of the bill was approved by a vote of 214 to 201. This amendment was offered by Basil L. Whitener, Democrat of North Carolina, and restored a provision in the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to require a written request before the Attorney General can initiate court action to desegregate schools and other facilities.

Finally, before the final roll-call, the House defeated 222 to 190, a motion by Arch A. Moore Jr., Republican of West Virginia, to strike the open housing section from the bill.

The housing section had been the chief center of controversy

Continued on Page 29, Column 1

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL PASSED IN HOUSE

Continued From Page 1, Col. 8

during the debate. Many Republicans and Democrats with strong voting records on previous civil rights legislation were opposed to legal restrictions against the sale or rental of housing.

As the section, Title IV, now stands, it would cover primarily large apartment houses and individual homes built or sold by commercial interests. The person who makes no more than two real estate transactions a year and his agent, if so designated in writing, are exempt. So is the owner who lives on the premises of his boarding or apartment house, provided it has no more than four family units.

Future Housing Covered

The Mathias amendment exempts 60 per cent of the housing units in the nation, but the vast majority of those to be built in the future will be covered.

Despite the softening action in the amendment, civil rights advocates were able to retain a strong enforcement provision. In addition to action in the courts, the victim of discrimination would be able to take his complaint to a Federal fair housing board that would have power to issue cease-and-desist orders against landlords, builders, real estate agents and financial institutions.

Chief opposition to Title IV had come from Southerners and the majority of Republicans, North and South. On the motion to strike the housing section tonight some Republicans rejoined civil rights supporters for the roll-call vote. Still, 86 of the 139 Republicans voting, including the minority leaders, voted to eliminate the housing section from the bill.

During debates Representatives were counted on the floor and no record vote was taken. Therefore, Democratic leaders, who had accepted the Mathias compromise as the strongest provision possible, were not certain until tonight that Title IV would survive.

Dirksen Renews Opposition

The bill faces even tougher opposition in the Senate. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican minority leader whose help on civil rights legislation has been crucial in the past, said today he remained opposed to the housing section. He also expressed reservations about the section designed to end racial discrimination on Federal juries.

Mr. Dirksen said Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Senate majority leader, wanted to place the bill directly on the calendar for early consideration, bypassing the Judiciary Committee headed by James O. Eastland, Democrat of Missis-

Excerpts From Open Housing Title of Rights Bill

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Following are excerpts from the open housing section—Title IV—of the civil rights bill before the House tonight:

Policy

SECTION 401

It is the policy of the United States to prevent discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or national origin in the purchase, rental, lease, financing, use and occupancy of housing throughout the nation.

SECTION 402

For purposes of this title, a person shall be deemed to be in the business of building, developing, selling, renting, or leasing dwellings if he has, within the preceding 12 months, participated as either principal or agent in three or more transactions involving the sale, rental, or lease of any dwelling or any interest therein.

But nothing contained in this bill shall be construed to prohibit or affect the right of any person, or his authorized agent, to rent or refuse to rent, a room or rooms in his home for any reason, or for no reason; or to change his tenants as often as he may desire .

Prevention of Discrimination in the Sale or Rental of Housing

SECTION 403

(A) It shall be unlawful for any person who is a real estate broker, agent, or salesman, or employe or agent of any real estate broker, agent, or salesman, or any other person in the business of building, developing, selling, renting, or leasing dwellings, or any employe or agent of any such persons—

(1) To refuse to sell, rent, or lease, to refuse to negotiate for the sale, rental, or lease of, or otherwise make unavailable or deny, a dwelling to any person because of race, color, religion, national origin, or number of childen or age of such children.

(2) To discriminate against against any person in the terms, conditions, or privileges of sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling, or in the provision of services of facilities in connection therewith, because of race, color, religion, national origin, or number of children or age of such children.

(3) To make, print, or publish, or cause to be made, printed, or published any oral or written notice, statement, or advertisement, with respect to the sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling that indicates any preference, limitation, or discrimination based on race, color, religion, or national origin, or an intention to make any such preference,

Provisions of Civil Rights Bill of '66

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 — Following is a summary of the civil rights bill before the House tonight:

Title I—Jury Duty

No person shall be excluded from jury duty in Federal courts because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or economic status. Selection of juries to be based on a cross section of those in the district—from voter registration tests or some other source if so directed by the judicial council for the circuit involved. Jurors must be literate, be a citizen of the United States, be physically and mentally capable of serving and be free of criminal charges or conviction.

Title II—State Juries

No citizen shall be excluded from service as a grand or petit juror in any state court on account of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or economic status. The Attorney General may institute suit in Federal court to achieve the purposes of the Title. The court may require the state court to comply with the law by using objective criteria for jury selection or appoint a master to oversee jury selection.

Title III—Civil Suits

Whenever there are reasonable grounds to believe that any person is about to deprive another of right, privilege or immunity granted, secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States because of race, color, religion or national origin, such other person, or the Attorney General, may institute a civil suit in Federal court for an injunction against such action.

Title IV—Housing

It is the policy of the United States to prevent discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin in the purchase, rental, lease, financing, use and occupancy of housing throughout the nation. Most individual home sales are exempted, as are apartment houses and boarding houses of four family units or less. Covered by the Title primarily are large apartment buildings and individual homes sold and rented by commercial interests. Enforcement is by lawsuit and by a special enforcement board that would have authority to issue cease-and-desist orders against real estate agents, builders, landlords and financial institutions found to have discriminated.

Title V—Intimidation

Broadens Federal criminal laws against harming or intimidating persons who are engaged in rights and activities guaranteed by the Constitution and Federal laws. Provides punishment up to life imprisonment if death is involved, 10 years if bodily injury is involved, and fines up to $10,000. Also makes it a Federal crime for persons using interestate commerce to incite or carry out riots.

Title VI—Schools

Permits the Attorney General to institute school desegregation lawsuits when he receives a written complaint from an individual saying he is being deprived of or threatened with the loss of his right to equal protection of the law, as previously provided in the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Title VII—Voting Records

Provides for the preservation of election records to permit enforcement of civil rights laws relating to elections and voting.

Title VIII—Annual Report

Orders the Attorney General to submit an annual report to Congress on the enforcement of civil rights laws, the first report due Sept. 7, 1967.

Title IX—Financing of Act

Authorizes appropriations for the act, estimated at less than $13-million a year.

---

tion shall affect, or be construed to affect, any liability for payment of a real estate or other commission by any person with respect to the sale, lease, or rental of a dwelling.

(E) Nothing in this section shall prohibit, or be construed to prohibit, a real estate broker, agent, or salesman, or employe or agent of any real estate broker, agent, or salesman from complying with the express written instruction of any person not in the business of building, developing, selling, renting, or leasing dwellings, or otherwise not subject to the prohibitions of this section pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) hereof, with respect to the sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling owned by such person, if such instruction was not encouraged, solicited, or induced by such broker, agent, or salesman, or any employe or agent thereof.

Prevention of Discrimination in the Financing of Housing

SECTION 404

It shall be unlawful for any bank, savings and loan institution, credit union, in-

atory housing practice which occurs in a state, or political subdivision of a state, which has a state or local law prohibiting such practice and establishing or authorizing a state or local authority to grant or seek relief from such practice, the court, upon issuance of a temporary injunction, restraining order, or other appropriate order preserving the complainant's right to obtain all relief, including the opportunity to buy or rent the specific dwelling with respect to which the alleged practice occurred, may stay proceedings in such civil action for a period not exceeding 30 days pending referral by the court or the complainant, as appropriate, to such state or local authority:

Provided, that, at the expiration of such 30-day period, the court may further stay proceedings for an additional period or pending the termination of then pending state or local enforcement proceedings, if it believes that such proceedings will proceed expeditiously and that such further stay will serve the interests of justice; in the event of such further stay, the court may continue or withdraw any orders it has previously entered in the case as the inother members at the rate of $25,000 per annum.

(4) Three members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

(b) The board may, in accordance with Civil Service law, appoint and fiv the compensation of such officers, attorneys, and employes, and make such expenditures as may be necessary to carry out its functions.

(c) The board shall make such rules and regulations as shall be necessary and proper to carry out its functions, including the conduct of hearings hereinafter authorized.

(2) The board is authorized to delegate to any group of three or more members any or all of the powers it may itself exercise. It is further authorized to delegate to any member or members, or to any agent or agency the authority to conduct hearings.

(D) The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (hereinafter referred to as the Secretary) is hereby authorized to direct and supervise, under such rules and regulations as he shall establish, investigations of violations of Sections 403, 404 and 405 of this Title, either upon the receipt of a written statement of a person alleging to be aggrieved or his rep-stating the facts upon which his determination is founded.

(2) A copy of such written complaint shall be served upon the person or persons charged with the violation.

(G) (1) Upon receipt of a complaint, the board shall set a hearing thereon, provided no such hearing shall be conducted prior to 10 days after service of the complaint upon the person charged.

(2) In any such hearing the Secretary shall designate a person or persons to present evidence in support of the complaint.

(H) Except as provided in subsections (F) and (G) of this section, the board shall conduct hearings and shall issue and enforce in the same manner and shall be subject to the same conditions and limitations and appelate procedures as are provided for the National Labor Relations Board under Section 160 (b), (c), (d), (f), (i) and (j) of Title 29, United States Code, and all parties to the hearing shall have the same rights as are therein provided: provided, the propositions of Section 160(c) of Title 29, United States Code relative to reinstatement of employes and to complaints under Section 158(a) (1) or (a) (2) of Title 29 United States Code shall be inapplicable: and provided further a violation hereunder shall be treated in the same manner as an unfair labor practice under said provisions of Section 160 of Title 29, United States Code.

(I) The Secretary may delegate any power or duty herein granted or imposed to a duly designated representative.

Assistance by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development

SECTION 409

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall—

(A) make studies with respect to the nature and extent of discriminatory housing practices in representative communities, urban, suburban, and rural, throughout the United States:

(B) Publish and disseminate reports, recommendations, and information derived from such studies;

(C) Cooperate with and render technical assistance to Federal, state, local, and other public or private agencies, organizations, and institutions which are formulating or carrying on programs to prevent or eliminate discriminatory housing practices;

(D) Cooperate with and render such technical and other assistance to the Community Relations Service as may be appropriate to further its activities in preventing or eliminating discriminatory housing practices; and of the 100 Representatives voting, including the minority leaders, voted to eliminate the housing section from the bill.

(E) Administer the pro-

During debates Representatives were counted on the floor and no record vote was taken. Therefore, Democratic leaders, who had accepted the Mathias compromise as the strongest provision possible, were not certain until tonight that Title IV would survive.

Dirksen Renews Opposition

The bill faces even tougher opposition in the Senate. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican minority leader whose help on civil rights legislation has been crucial in the past, said today he remained opposed to the housing section. He also expressed reservations about the section designed to end racial discrimination on Federal juries.

Mr. Dirksen said Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Senate majority leader, wanted to place the bill directly on the calendar for early consideration, bypassing the Judiciary Committee headed by James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi. Mr. Dirksen, however, said that no decision had been made as yet with regard to Senate procedure.

A Southern filibuster in the upper chamber is likely in the early fall, and if Democratic leaders are to be successful in breaking it they will need Republican votes.

The bill passed by the House tonight had to overcome several obstacles that had not confronted the landmark civil rights legislation of 1960, 1964 and 1965. The civil rights movement was split, militant groups opposing the bill on the ground that it is too weak to attack the basic problems still facing American Negroes and other minorities.

Although the more moderate civil rights leaders have been lobbying for it, some, such as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., have charged that the Mathias amendment virtually made the housing section worthless. Others say the housing provision, if it can clear the Senate, will at least provide national policy against housing discrimination and open many units besides.

Also posing difficulty for the bill was the fact that for the first time racial discrimination in the North was being attacked. Most bills in the past had been applicable chiefly in the South.

Some Representatives expressed reservations about further civil rights laws because of the emergence of "black power" among some Negro groups and increased rioting in urban areas.

Voting Patterns Affected

As a result, traditional voting patterns were shaken up. Administration leaders frequently did not know where they stood, and it turned out to be the most prolonged debate on any rights measure before the House.

During the afternoon, Southerners almost succeeded in seriously weakening a main provision of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that gives the Federal Government authority to withhold funds from any federally assisted program.

Mr. Whitener, the Southern leader on the Judiciary Committee, offered an amendment to prevent the Government from withholding funds until it had been proved that the local government involved was in violation of Federal law or the Constitution.

The amendment was defeated 136 to 127. Southerners charged that agencies such as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare were going beyond the law and attempting to "make over the South" although not imposing the same restrictions on the rest of the nation. School integration was the main issue.

Representatives did accept an amendment by Howard H. Callaway, Republican of Georgia, to prevent the provision on fund withholding from being used to achieve racial balance. This, however, is expected to have little effect because the Administration says present law forbids such practice.

building, developing, selling, renting, or leasing dwellings, or any employe or agent of any such persons—

(1) To refuse to sell, rent, or lease, to refuse to negotiate for the sale, rental, or lease of, or otherwise make unavailable or deny, a dwelling to any person because of race, color, religion, national origin, or number of childen or age of such children.

(2) To discriminate against against any person in the terms, conditions, or privileges of sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling, or in the provision of services of facilities in connection therewith, because of race, color, religion, national origin, or number of children or age of such children.

(3) To make, print, or publish, or cause to be made, printed, or published any oral or written notice, statement, or advertisement, with respect to the sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling that indicates any preference, limitation, or discrimination based on race, color, religion, or national origin, or an intention to make any such preference, limitation, or discrimination.

(4) To fail or refuse to show any dwelling which he is authorized to show to prospective buyers, rentors, or lessors, because of race, color, religion, national origin, or number of children or age of such children to fail to submit promptly to his principal any offer to buy, rent, or lease because of race, color, religion, or national origin, or to fail to refuse to use his best efforts to consummate any sale, rental, or lease because of the race, color, religion, national origin or number of children or age of such children, of any party to the prospective sale, rental, or lease.

(5) To represent to any person because of race, color, religion, or national origin that any dwelling is not available for inspection, sale, rental, or lease when such dwelling is in fact so available.

(6) To deny to any person because of race, color, religion, or national origin, or because of the race, color, religion, or national origin of the person he represents or may represent, access to or participation in any multiple-listing service or other service or facilities related to the business of selling or renting dwellings.

(7) To engage in any act or practice, the purpose of which is to limit or restrict the availability of housing to any person or group of persons because of race, color, religion, or national origin.

(8) To induce or attempt to induce any person to sell, rent, or lease any dwelling by representations regarding the present or prospective entry into the neighborhood of a person or persons of a particular race, color, religion, national origin, or economic status.

(B) Nothing in this section shall apply to an owner with respect to the sale, lease, or rental by him of a portion of a building or structure which contains living quarters occupied or intended to be occupied by no more than four families living independently of each other if such owner actually occupies one of such living quarters as his residence.

(C) Nothing in this section shall bar any religious or denominational institution, or any charitable or educational institution or organization which is operated, supervised or controlled by or in conjunction with a religious organization, or any bona fide private or fraternal organization, from giving preference to persons of the same religion or denomination, or to members of such private or fraternal organization, or from making such selection as is calculated by such organization to promote the religious principles or the aims, purposes, or fraternal principles for which it is established or maintained.

(D) Nothing in this section shall apply to an owner with respect to the sale, lease, or rental of a dwelling.

(E) Nothing in this section shall prohibit, or be construed to prohibit, a real estate broker, agent, or salesman, or employe or agent of any real estate broker, agent, or salesman from complying with the express written instruction of any person not in the business of building, developing, selling, renting, or leasing dwellings, or otherwise not subject to the prohibitions of this section pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) hereof, with respect to the sale, rental, or lease of a dwelling owned by such person, if such instruction was not encouraged, solicited, or induced by such broker, agent, or salesman, or any employe or agent thereof.

Prevention of Discrimination in the Financing of Housing

SECTION 404

It shall be unlawful for any bank, savings and loan institution, credit union, insurance company, or other person that makes mortgage or other loans for the purchase, construction, improvement, or repair or maintenance of dwellings to deny such a loan to a person applying therefor, or discriminate against him in the fixing of the down payment, interest rate, duration, or other terms or conditions of such a loan, because of the race, color, religion, or national origin of such a person, or of any member, stockholder, director, officer, or employe of such person, or of the prospective occupants, lessees, or tenants of the dwelling or dwellings in relation to which the application for a loan is made.

Interference, Coercion or Intimidation

SECTION 405

No person shall intimidate, threaten, coerce, or interfere with any person in the exercise or enjoyment of, or on account of his having exercised or enjoyed, or on account of his having aided or encouraged any other person in the exercise or enjoyment of any right granted by Sections 403 or 404.

Enforcement by Private Persons

SECTION 406

(A) The rights granted by Sections 403, 404 and 405 may be enforced by civil action in appropriate United States District Courts without regard to the amount in controversy and in appropriate state or local courts of general jurisdiction. A civil action shall be commenced within six months after the alleged discriminatory housing practice or violation of Section 405 occurred.

(B) Upon application by any party and in such circumstances as the court may deem just, a court of the United States in which a civil action under this section has been brought may appoint an attorney for such party or parties and may authorize the commencement of a civil action without the payment of fees, costs, or security. A court of a state or subdivision thereof may do likewise to the extent not inconsistent with the law or procedures of the state or subdivision.

(C) The court may grant such relief as it deems appropriate, including a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order, and may award actual damages to the plaintiff, or, in the alternative, if the defendant has received or agreed to receive compensation for services during the course of which the discriminatory housing practice occurred, the court may award as liquidated damages an amount not exceeding the amount of such compensation.

(D) In the case of a civil action brought under subsection (a) alleging a discrimin- state or local authority to grant or seek relief from such practice, the court, upon issuance of a temporary injunction, restraining order, or other appropriate order preserving the complainant's right to obtain all relief, including the opportunity to buy or rent the specific dwelling with respect to which the alleged practice occurred, may stay proceedings in such civil action for a period not exceeding 30 days pending referral by the court or the complainant, as appropriate, to such state or local authority:

Provided, that, at the expiration of such 30-day period, the court may further stay proceedings for an additional period or pending the termination of then pending state or local enforcement proceedings, if it believes that such proceedings will proceed expeditiously and that such further stay will serve the interests of justice; in the event of such further stay, the court may continue or withdraw any orders it has previously entered in the case as the interests of justice may require. The issuance or withdrawal of any temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order entered by the court pursuant to this subsection may be conditioned upon the posting of reasonable bond or other security as may be just. If, after direction by the court, a complainant fails to make reasonable efforts to initiate appropriate proceedings under applicable state or local law, the court may, in its discretion, and in the absence of a showing of good cause for such failure, dismiss the action.

Enforcement by the Attorney General

SECTION 407

(A) Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in a pattern or practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights granted by this title, he may bring a civil action in any appropriate United States District Court by filing with it a complaint setting forth the facts pertaining to such pattern or practice and requesting such preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order against the person or persons responsible for such pattern or practice, as he deems necessary to insure the full enjoyment of the rights granted by this title.

(B) Whenever an action under Section 406 has been commenced in any court of the United States, the Attorney General may intervene for or in the name of the United States if he certifies that the action is of general public importance. In such action the United States shall be entitled to the same relief as if it had instituted the action.

Enforcement by the Fair Housing Board

SECTION 408

(A) (1) There is hereby established a fair housing board (hereinafter referred to as the board). The board shall consist of five members, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President shall designate one member as chairman. No more than three members of the board may be of the same political party.

(2) The term of office of each member of the board shall be five years, beginning with the effective date of this act, except of those members first appointed, one shall serve for five years, one for four years, one for three years, one for two years, and one for one year. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term.

(3) The chairman shall be compensated at the rate of $25,500 per annum and the cordance with Civil Service law, appoint and fiv the compensation of such officers, attorneys, and employes, and make such expenditures as may be necessary to carry out its functions.

(c) The board shall make such rules and regulations as shall be necessary and proper to carry out its functions, including the conduct of hearings hereinafter authorized.

(2) The board is authorized to delegate to any group of three or more members any or all of the powers it may itself exercise. It is further authorized to delegate to any member or members, or to any agent or agency the authority to conduct hearings.

(D) The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (hereinafter referred to as the Secretary) is hereby authorized to direct and supervise, under such rules and regulations as he shall establish, investigations of violations of Sections 403, 404 and 405 of this Title, either upon the receipt of a written statement of a person alleging to be aggrieved or his representative, or on the basis of information available to the Secretary indicating that there are reasonable grounds to believe that a violation may have occurred.

(E) For purposes of investigation the Secretary shall have, and for purposes of hearing the board shall have, the same powers and shall be subject to the same conditions and limitations as are provided for the National Labor Relations Board under Section 161 of Title 29, United States Code.

(F) (1) If, upon basis of an investigation, the Secretary shall determine that a violation has occurred he shall file with the board a written complaint indicating that such violation has taken place and

Urban Development

SECTION 409

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall—

(A) make studies with respect to the nature and extent of discriminatory housing practices in representative communities, urban, suburban, and rural, throughout the United States:

(B) Publish and disseminate reports, recommendations, and information derived from such studies;

(C) Cooperate with and render technical assistance to Federal, state, local, and other public or private agencies, organizations, and institutions which are formulating or carrying on programs to prevent or eliminate discriminatory housing practices;

(D) Cooperate with and render such technical and other assistance to the Community Relations Service as may be appropriate to further its activities in preventing or eliminating discriminatory housing practices; and

(E) Administer the programs and activities relating to housing and urban development in a manner affirmatively to further the policies of this title.

Effect on State Laws

SECTION 410

Nothing in this title shall be construed to invalidate or limit any law of a state or political subdivisions of a state, or of any other jurisdiction in which this Title shall be effective, that grants, guarantees, or protects the same rights as are granted by this Title; but any law that purports to require or permit any action that would be a discriminatory housing practice under this Title shall to that extent be invalid.

Ervin Seeks a Law To Protect Privacy Of U.S. Employes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (AP) —A bill of rights for Federal employes was introduced today by Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, to protect them against what he termed unwarranted invasions of privacy and other "tyrannies" by Government agencies.

Mr. Ervin, chairman of the Senate constitutional rights subcommittee, said the group had received complaints showing that Federal employes' liberties "are being invaded and seriously circumscribed for reasons which have little or nothing to do with their jobs or national security."

Examples he gave at a news conference and in a speech included psychological tests probing into sexual and religious matters, pressures to make political contributions and to buy Government bonds, questionnaires about race, religion and national origin and limitations on off-duty activities.

He said that last Wednesday he had written to President Johnson that "the invasions of privacy have now reached such alarming proportions and are assuming such varied forms that the matter now demands your immediate and personal attention."

Mr. Ervin listed types of privacy invasion caused by coercion or intimidation that would be outlawed by his bill, including:

¶Race, religion and national origin questionnaires.

¶Indiscriminate requirements to disclose personal finances, assets, creditors and property interests of employes and members of their families.

¶Meetings to indoctrinate employes about matters unrelated to their jobs.

¶Requirements that employes take part in any activities not directly within the scope of their employment.

¶Requirements to make reports about personal activities and undertakings unrelated to their jobs.

The bill would also bar attempts to forbid patronizing any businesses or establishments.

Catholic Organists Confer On Congregational Singing

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Organists from 60 Roman Catholic parishes in the dioceses of Spokane, Yakima, Wash., and Boise, Idaho, diocesses have completed a series of workshops in accompanying congregational singing.

"We've been a silent group for too many generations," said Jean Anthony Grief of Spokane, church organist and hymn composer who conducted the sessions. "It's time that we caught up with our separated brethern. We are like children as far as singing in church is concerned."

The workshops concentrated on mastering the new liturgy ordered by the Vatican Council, playing for hymns sung by the congregation and selecting hymns laymen can sing.

U.S. Seeks to Avert Bar Criticism of Bill

LEGISLATION

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Special to The New York Times

MONTREAL, Aug. 9—Opposition to a key provision of the Johnson Administration's civil rights bill stirred today among delegates to the American Bar Association's annual convention.

In response, the White House decided to send Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach from Washington on a flying mission to argue personally for the bill.

Plans for the hurried flight developed after the Maryland delegation to the association's policy-making House of Delegates, acting at the request of a Federal judge in Baltimore, called upon the association to denounce the jury discrimination section of the bill.

The Attorney General's plans for a flying trip confirmed the feeling among observers here that a negative vote by the 122,000-member bar association would seriously damage chances of Senate approval of the jury discrimination part of the proposed Civil Rights Act of 1966.

Continued on Page 28, Column 6

U.S. Seeks to Avert Bar Criticism

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

Solocitor General Thurgood Marshall, who is a member of the House of Delegates, said this afternoon that Mr. Katzenbach planned to leave Washington on a White House jet as soon as the House of Representatives took its final vote on the bill.

Mr. Katzenbach was expected to argue for the Administration's proposal before the 275-member House of Delegates votes on the issue tomorrow afternoon.

The Attorney General's trip was reportedly planned this morning after it was learned that the four-member Maryland delegation, led by William L. Marbury of Baltimore, had filed a resolution yesterday asking the House of Delegates to denounce the civil rights bill on the ground that it did not comply with the standards for jurors approved by the Federal judiciary.

Letter From Senator

Mr. Marbury said he had filed the resolution at the request of Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen of the United States District Court for Maryland. He said Judge Thomsen had decided to ask the association to oppose the bill after having received a letter from Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, a leading opponent of the bill.

The resolution points out that the present system of selecting Federal jurors was initiated in 1960 by the Judicial Conference of the United States, a statutory group composed of senior Federal district and appeals judges. It is headed by the Chief Justice of the United States.

Under these standards, "jury lists should represent as high a degree of integrity, intelligence, morality and common sense as possible."

The Administration's bill would have jurors selected at random from voter registration lists. Only illiterates, felons, noncitizens, nonresidents and the mentally or physically infirm would be exempted.

A condemnation of the proposed system by the bar association would be particularly damaging in view of a statement by Chief Justice Earl Warren last spring that some unspecified jury proposals were "inadvised."

Chief Justice Warren has declined to elaborate on his remarks. But it is known that some Federal judges frown on the Administration's proposal because it was not submitted to the judicial conference for its comments, as are most proposals that concern the courts.

High-Quality Juries

Also, Federal judges have traditionally taken pride in the widely held view that Federal juries are of higher quality than are state juries. This is said to be necessary because of the complexity of many Federal trials.

Since state juries would not be significantly affected by the Administration's bill unless they were found to be tainted with discrimination, the bill would reduce the quality of Federal juries below that existing in most state courts.

Mr. Katzenbach's decision to fly to Montreal became known at noon today, after his office had already announced that a scheduled luncheon speech by him today would have to be canceled because of the crucial vote in Washington.

The speech had been billed as a progress report on the President's Commission on Law Enforcement in Administration of Criminal Justice. It was given for him by James Vorenberg, executive director of the commission.

In it, Mr. Katzenbach proposed the creation of a "law corps" composed of law students working during the summer in police forces, bail projects, prosecutor's offices, correctional institutions and lower criminal courts.

This would bring "new perspectives and impetus for reform" to these institutions, would produce full-fledged lawyers with knowlodge of the problems and would get needed work done, he said.

Urges Research

Mr. Katzenbach decried the fact that so little is known of crime and punishment and urged creation of a national institute to do research in this area, patterned after the National Institutes of Health.

Much of his criticism of the existing system was directed at "the plea-bargaining system," which he termed "a wholesale operation" to dispose of criminal cases without trials, particularly in the lower courts.

The commission is seeking to develop standards to give assurances that guilty pleas do resolve in sentences tailored to the correctional needs of the criminal.

The commission report is due next February. Although Mr. Katzenbach did not say these recommendations would be in it, he seemed to be hinting they would be.

Russell Spurs Forces For Last-Ditch Fight On Civil Rights Bill

LEGISLATION

AC 8/11/66

President Not Happy On Housing

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Southern senators are ready to make an all-out, last-ditch stand against President Lyndon B. Johnson's 1966 Civil Rights bill, Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell said Wednesday.

Russell, leader of the Senate's Southern bloc opposed to civil rights legislation, pledged: "We're going to put all we can into it to stop it."

The House passed the Civil Rights Bill Tuesday. Major changes in Johnson's original proposal made on the House side included weakening of the open housing section, deletion of permission for the attorney general to file school desegregation suits without a written complaint, and the addition of a federal anti-riot law.

CALLED MILESTONE

President Johnson praised the bill Wednesday as an important milestone in race relations and called for Senate action "without unnecessary delay."

The president, in a special statement on the measure, said he regretted omissions that House members "gauged were necessary" in the provision to bar discrimination in the rental or sale of housing.

Although the housing provision was "not as comprehensive as that we proposed and sought the President said that the significance of the House action was "large in both practical and symbolic terms."

"Practically, the House has barred bigotry in all new housing and in apartment houses," he said. "This opens major avenues toward fair and adequate housing for millions of citizens."

STILL FOR ORIGINAL

White House Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers told newsmen he was sure that the administration still wanted its original housing proposal. This indicated there would be determined efforts in the Senate to broaden the open housing section.

While the House was still considering the civil rights bill over the past 12 days, Russell said the Southern senators held several meetings to begin preparation for a long siege of debate.

The southerners look toward a coalition with northern Republicans to prevent a vote to limit debate on the bill.

A two-thirds majority is required to cut off debate in the Senate. This would require 67 votes if all 100 senators were present.

The southern bloc led by Russell has approximately 20 members.

Georgia's other senator, Herman Talmadge, serves as one of the chief strategists in the southerner's fight on the rights bill.

Senate Republican Leader

Continued on Page 14, Column 1

Russell Rallying Senate Force For All-Out Civil Rights Battle

Continued from Page 1

Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois is the key to whether enough GOP senators will refrain from voting to shut off debate.

Dirksen says the housing section, which is estimated to cover 40 per cent of existing housing, but would affect a much larger percentage of new homes, is unconstitutional. He said he will not support a motion for limited debate.

Good Old Days Are Here Again
"Free Lunch Counter"
RED DOG SALOON
3106 Peachtree Road NE

Russell, suspicious that Dirksen might change his mind as he has in past years, would make no prediction about chances of dooming the Civil Rights Bill in the Senate, which is the last major obstacle for the measure.

The Georgia senator sees the housing section as the greatest leverage for sustaining a filibuster of long enough duration to kill the bill this year.

The open occupancy proposal is the first piece of national civil rights legislation to come before Congress during his more than 30 years in the Senate, he said.

"That's caused a great concern by some of our brethren who wanted to direct the provision against the South," said Russell.

"It would be comic if it were no so tragic to see what's done here in the name of civil rights."

Sections of the bill other than the housing provision "do more violence to the Constitution," Russell declared.

He said "federalization of state juries" would be a step into the last area where the U.S. government has not intervened in local affairs.

Setting standards for federal court jury selections is as bad, said Russell, pointing out that not one federal judge has endorsed the proposal.

The bill is scheduled to be transmitted from the House to the Senate on Thursday. The Senate Democratic leadership is expected to attempt to place the measure on the Senate calendar without sending it to the Judiciary.

It is anticipated the bill will be called up for Senate action within 12 to 15 days.

Johnson Hails Rights Bill As 'Milestone' for Justice

LEGISLATION

8/11/66

By JOHN HERBERS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—President Johnson said today that the civil rights bill passed by the House of Representatives last night was "an important new milestone" toward racial justice He urged the Senate to approve the measure "without unnecessary delay."

Mr. Johnson said he regretted that the House had weakened the controversial section against discrimination in housing, but that the section nevertheless was important in both practical and symbolic terms.

"Practically, the House has barred bigotry in all new housing and in apartment houses," he said. "This opens major avenues toward fair and adequate housing for millions of citizens.

A Symbolic Victory

"Symbolically, the House has, in effect, declared to all Negro Americans that many of their fellow citizens believe it is wrong to deny anyone a decent place to live solely because of the color of his skin. The House also has declared that the law should be an instrument of justice in this cause."

[In Montreal, leaders of the American Bar Association killed Wednesday a resolution denouncing a key provision of the civil rights bill aimed at preventing discrimination in the selection of Federal juror.]

Representatives approved the bill by a vote of 259 to 157 after 12 days of debate. They defeated, 220 to 190, a motion to strike out the housing section. But they accepted, 237 to 176, a bipartisan amendment to exempt most individual home sales, or 60 per cent of the nation's housing units, from the antidiscrimination provisions of the bill.

President Johnson said those sections of the bill that combat discrimination in the selection of state and Federal juries and broaden the criminal laws and court action against racial violence and intimidation "are im-

Continued on Page 23, Column 2

KATZENBACH PLEA SWINGS BAR VOTE

LEGISLATION

Group Kills Move to Assail Juror Plank in Rights Bill

Antle

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Special to The New York Times

MONTREAL, Aug. 10—The American Bar Association's leaders declined today to criticize a key provision of the Civil Rights bill, after hearing a rousing defense of the rights proposal by Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach.

The 275-member House of Delegates of the association killed a resolution that denounced the Administration's proposal to prevent racial discrimination by selecting Federal jurors at random from voter registration lists.

Mr. Katzenbach contended that the present selection system confronts him with "a massive problem" because it does not produce the fair cross-section of the community the Supreme Court requires.

The situation became more critical last month, he said, when the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which encompasses the states of the Deep South, declared unconstitutional the "key-man" system of selecting jury veniremen.

This system, which is the one used in most Federal Courts relies on prominent citizens to recommend names for jury duty.

Thus many grand and petit juries in the Fifth Circuit cannot take valid action until a constitutionally acceptable selection method is available, Mr. Katzenbach said.

Challenge to Group

He challenged the association to come up with an improvement on the Administration's jury proposal. But, failing that, he said, "I don't know what you expect me to do if Congress doesn't act on this problem."

"I can't wait," the Attorney General stated, "I can't simply delay. I can't live with the present system."

Mr. Katzenbach's arguments appeared to register with the delegates who before he spoke had voted 103 to 78 against a motion to shelve the matter pending a lengthy study.

As Attorney General, Mr. Katzenbach is automatically a member of the House of Dele-

Johnson Hails Civil Rights Bill As 'Milestone' for Race Justice

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

portant steps toward resolving the great domestic strugge of our generation."

The President's remarks were in a statement released by the White House. Bill D. Moyers, the White House Press secretary, was asked if the President were asking the Senate to enact the housing section as it passed the House.

"I am sure," Mr. Moyer, replied, "that the original proposal is still desired by the Administration as it was." President Johnson had asked that racial discrimination be banned in the sale and rental of all housing.

Even in its present form, however, the bill is expected to have trouble in the Senate. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Senate Republican leader, has branded the housing section unconstitutional and the bill is also subject to procedural delays.

Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Democratic majority leader, said today that no decision had been made on sending the bill to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to return it at a specified date or to place it most of them Southerners, and 62 Republicans.

Of the 47 Democrats—fresh men and returning members—who unseated Republicans in the 1964 election, only six voted to strike the housing section. They were Earle Cabell and Richard White, both of Texas; Thomas S. Foley and Floyd V. Hicks, both of Washington; John A. Race of Wisconsin, and Walter H. Moeller of Ohio.

Eight Southerners, all Democrats, supported the Administration on the crucial vote to save the open housing section. They were Claude Pepper, Dante Fascell and Sam Gibbons, all of Florida; George Grider and Richard M. Fulton, both of Tennessee; Harry B. Gonzales and Jack Brooks of Texas, and Charles L. Weltner of Georgia. All represented urban areas and all voted for the bill.

The assistant majority leader, Hale Boggs of New Orleans, broke with the Administration by voting against the housing section and against the bill.

Thirty non-Southern Democrats voted to strike the housing section. Sixteen were from the border states of Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

The others were Wayne Aspinall of Colorado; Walter S. Baring of Nevada; Ronald B.

Juror Plank in Rights Bill

Auto

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Special to The New York Times

MONTREAL, Aug. 10—The American Bar Association's leaders declined today to criticize a key provision of the Civil Rights bill, after hearing a rousing defense of the rights proposal by Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach.

The 275-member House of Delegates of the association killed a resolution that denounced the Administration's proposal to prevent racial discrimination by selecting Federal jurors at random from voter registration lists.

Mr. Katzenbach contended that the present selection system confronts him with "a massive problem" because it does not produce the fair cross-section of the community the Supreme Court requires.

The situation became more critical last month, he said, when the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which encompasses the states of the Deep South, declared unconstitutional the "key-man" system of selecting jury veniremen.

This system, which is the one used in most Federal Courts relies on prominent citizens to recommend names for jury duty.

Thus many grand and petit juries in the Fifth Circuit cannot take valid action until a constitutionally acceptable selection method is available, Mr. Katzenbach said.

Challenge to Group

He challenged the association to come up with an improvement on the Administration's jury proposal. But, failing that, he said, "I don't know what you expect me to do if Congress doesn't act on this problem."

"I can't wait," the Attorney General stated, "I can't simply delay. I can't live with the present system."

Mr. Katzenbach's arguments appeared to register with the delegates who before he spoke had voted 103 to 78 against a motion to shelve the matter pending a lengthy study.

As Attorney General, Mr. Katzenbach is automatically a member of the House of Delegates and entitled to participate in its debates.

After his speech the delegates voted overwhelmingly to table the resolution that critized the Administration bill. Only 57 votes were mustered against a motion to table the resolution.

The attack on the Administration's jury provision was led by William L. Marbury, a Baltimore lawyer who said he was acting at the request of Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen of the United States Court for the Dictrict of Maryland.

Mr. Marbury contended that the proposed random selection system would lower the standards for jurors now approved by the Federal Judiciary. These standards call for jury lists that "represent as high a degree of integrity, intelligence, morality and common sense as possible."

Opposition to Provision

Special to The New York Times

Mr. Marbury said Negroes could be fairly represented on juries without "lowering the caliber in general of Federal juries."

John C. Satterfield of Yazoo City, Miss., a former president of the association, supported Mr. Marbury by citing a survey of Federal judges conducted by Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina.

According to the survey, none of the 45 judges who answered the polls favored the bill.

Among the other spokesmen backing Mr. Katzenbach's position were David F. Maxwell of Philadelphia, Edmund D. Campbell of the District of Columbia, Calvin H. Udall of Phoenix, Ariz. and Orison S. Marden of New York, the new president of the association.

Mr. Katzenbach flew here this morning and left shortly after the vote was taken at 4 P.M. His visit appeared to have paid handsome dividends. A rebuff by the 122,000-member association could have spelled serious trouble in the Senate for the jury discrimination provision of the Civil Rights bill of 1966, which passed in the House yesterday.

Johnson Hails Civil Rights Bill As 'Milestone' for Race Justice

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

portant steps toward resolving the great domestic strugge of our generation."

The President's remarks were in a statement released by the White House. Bill D. Moyers, the White House Press secretary, was asked if the President were asking the Senate to enact the housing section as it passed the House.

"I am sure," Mr. Moyer, replied, "that the original proposal is still desired by the Administration as it was." President Johnson had asked that racial discrimination be banned in the sale and rental of all housing.

Even in its present form, however, the bill is expected to have trouble in the Senate. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Senate Republican leader, has branded the housing section unconstitutional and the bill is also subject to procedural delays.

Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Democratic majority leader, said today that no decision had been made on sending the bill to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to return it at a specified date or to place it directly on the calendar.

But Mr. Mansfield and other Democratic leaders indicated they would try to have the bill placed directly on the calendar. Senator Jacob K. Javits said he would object to the bill's being sent to committee under any circumstances.

A Judiciary subcommittee headed by Senator Sam J. Ervin, Democrat of North Carolina, an opponent of the bill, has been holding hearings now and then on the original Administration bill since early June. The full committee is headed by Senator James O. Eastland, Democratic of Mississippi, another opponent.

Showdown on Friday

A shutdown on the procedural question is expected on Friday after the bill is received from the House. Mr. Dirksen said he would oppose by passing the committee.

House members have said their voting on the housing section may have strong bearing on their re-election efforts in November.

An analysis of last night's voting showed that the entire House Republican leadership, including Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, the minority leader, voted to strike the open housing section. But they subsequently voted for final passage of the bill.

Voting for the bill on final passage were 183 Democrats and 76 Republicans. Voting against were 95 Democrats, most of them Southerners, and 62 Republicans.

Of the 47 Democrats — fresh men and returning members— who unseated Republicans in the 1964 election, only six voted to strike the housing section. They were Earle Cabell and Richard White, both of Texas; Thomas S. Foley and Floyd V. Hicks, both of Washington; John A. Race of Wisconsin, and Walter H. Moeller of Ohio.

Eight Southerners, all Democrats, supported the Administration on the crucial vote to save the open housing section. They were Claude Pepper, Dante Fascell and Sam Gibbons, all of Florida; George Grider and Richard M. Fulton, both of Tennessee; Harry B. Gonzales and Jack Brooks of Texas, and Charles L. Weltner of Georgia. All represented urban areas and all voted for the bill.

The assistant majority leader, Hale Boggs of New Orleans, broke with the Administration by voting against the housing section and against the bill.

Thirty non-Southern Democrats voted to strike the housing section. Sixteen were from the border states of Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

The others were Wayne Aspinall of Colorado; Walter S. Baring of Nevada; Ronald B. Cameron and Harlan Hagen of California; Mr. Foley and Mr. Hicks of Washington, Mr. Moeller, Robert T. Secrest and Wayne Hays of Ohio; Kenneth Gray of Illinois, Clement J. Zablocki and Mr. Race of Wisconsin, and E. S. Johnny Walker and Thomas G. Morris of New Mexico.

Adam Clayton Powell issued a statement explaining why he had boycotted debate and voting on the bill. The Manhattan Democrat said he could not vote for the bill because it "holds out a phony carrot stick to black people meant to make them believe they are receiving nourishing food of equality when in truth we are continuing to starve them with empty promises."

Mr. Powell, however, was recorded as paired for the bill on the final passage. In pairing, an absent member pairs with an opponent who is present and neither vote is included in the vote tabulation.

CORE Attacks Bill

The Congress of Racial Equality attacked the civil rights bill yesterday as "worthless in some sections, racist in others."

Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of CORE, said of the housing section of the bill:

"'In essence the black man is being told by Congress that he only has constitutional rights in 40% of the nation's housing; in the other 60% he is not equal."

LEGISLATION

AC 8/19/66

Senate Puts Off Battle On Rights Until Sept. 6

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Senate set the stage Thursday for a long post-Labor Day struggle over the 1966 Civil Rights Bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he will not move to take up the bill until Sept. 6.

Mansfield's announcement that the bill will be placed on the Senate calendar and will not be sent to the Judiciary Committee set off a clash with Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., the committee chairman.

Mansfield called Eastland an obstructionist on civil rights legislation. The Democratic leader declared Eastland's committee would not report out the Civil Rights Bill in "two days, two weeks or two years."

Eastland replied the Senate leadership gives special treatment only to civil rights bills by refusing to refer them to his committee.

The Mississippi senator said a large number of amendments added by the House, which passed the bill Tuesday, need to be discussed at public hearings.

Continued on Page 13, Column 1

Senate Puts Off Battle On Rights Until Sept. 6

Continued from Page 1

The Judiciary subcommittee, headed by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., has been holding public hearings on President Lyndon B. Johnson's rights bill since June 1.

Mansfield said if Eastland's committee reports out a bill by Sept. 6, the Senate will proceed with it rather than the House-passed measure.

After the bill was read for the first time Thursday in the Senate, Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Eastland objected to an immediate second reading.

The objections put off a second reading until Friday.

An agreement had been worked out beforehand by Mansfield, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, and Russell, leader of the Southern opponents, to delay action until after Labor Day.

Any delay appears to put Southern opponents who plan to filibuster in a more favorable position to stop the legislation this year.

Many of the senators want to go home to campaign for reelection in November and it is already getting late in the legislative year.

STRONGEST
pain relief you can get without a prescription!
ST. JOSEPH® ASPIRIN

LEGISLATION

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ROY WILKINS, Chairman
ARNOLD ARONSON, Secretary
JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR., Counsel
CLARENCE M. MITCHELL, Legislative Chairman
MARVIN CAPLAN, Director Washington Office
J. FRANCIS POHLHAUS, Special Consultant

2027 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036 phone 234-4722 • New York address: 20 West 40th St. New York 18, phone BRyant 9-1400

MEMO: No.90
August 16, 1966

TO: Cooperating Organizations
FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary
RE: Civil Rights Act of 1966

THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL MOVES TO THE SENATE

After 12 days of debate, a longer time than it has taken to consider any previous civil rights measure, the House completed action on the Civil Rights Act of 1966 and sent it to the Senate. An analysis of the bill in its present form is enclosed with this MEMO.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Mike Mansfield announced that debate will start on September 6, the day after Labor Day. The bill, he said, would not be referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee but would, instead, be held on the Senate calendar until the time came to take it up. He was by-passing Judiciary, Mr. Mansfield said, with engaging frankness, because it has been considering a companion bill for three months without doing anything and because its Chairman, James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), "has repeatedly interposed his towering presence in the procedural corridor between the Judiciary Committee rooms and the Senate floor. Once in that position, he has proved time and time again that he is immovable." A civil rights issue, Mr. Mansfield observed, "seems always to bring out the resisting best or worst in the Senator from Mississippi, depending, of course, on one's point of view."

It is in the Senate that the shape and substance of the new law will be determined finally. And it is in the Senate that we must now concentrate our energies not merely to prevent any weakening of the bill but rather to have it strengthened to meet more fully the demands of the present racial crisis.

The Fight On The Housing Section

Major attention in the House and in the country at large centered, of course, on Title IV of the bill, the section designed to prevent discrimination in housing.

One of the great disappointments of the House debate was to see the broad coverage of the original housing section cut back. About 60% of the nation's housing would be exempted from Title IV as the House approved it, including most single-family homes.

On the other hand, the bill would still make available on an open occupancy basis an estimated 23 million existing units in large apartments and newly completed developments and in the future would cover most new housing.

The exemptions in the Housing section are a disappointment. But it is a disappointment at least matched by what the real estate lobby must feel, since its extravagantly-financed campaign to strike the whole housing section was defeated. What is more, the House went beyond the original bill and kept the provision by Rep. John Conyers (D., Mich.) that vests administration of the housing provisions in a Fair Housing Board. The real estate lobby bitterly opposed the Board and maintained it made the bill more onerous than ever.

Juries and Violence

The bill provides for other substantive advances in civil rights. It would authorize reforms in the jury system that should make for fairer trials. And it would afford Negroes and civil rights workers greater protection against violence in the exercise of their constitutional rights.

But having said that, it must be recognized that the House-passed bill falls short of the kind of measure justice and the times demand. Unless the bill is strengthened in the Senate, the nation will be offered a step forward when it needs to take strides.

A Disquieting Atmosphere

Quite apart from the substantive limitations of the bill, the atmosphere that surrounded the House debate was in disquieting contrast to the mood of Congress in 1964 and 1965. The sense of urgency so evident then, was noticeably absent. Neither the President nor the Justice Department provided the effective leadership they have demonstrated in the past.

In 1964 and again a year ago, Northern members of the House aggressively sparked the debate; the Southerners were clearly on the defensive. This time, there almost seemed to be a reversal of roles. The mood of many Northern members was one of apprehension and timidity. With the November elections coming on, their votes and speeches frequently reflected political anxiety about voter reaction to big-city riots, "black power" slogans and the pressures of the real estate lobby.

Southern Amendments Adopted

Two Southern-sponsored amendments were adopted and a third, which would have nullified Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the section that authorizes withholding funds from federally-assisted programs that discriminate, failed of passage by only 9 votes.

One of the successful Southern amendments, offered by Rep. Basil Whitener (D., N.C.), gutted a section of the 1966 bill that was meant to give the U.S. Attorney General power to speed the desegregation of public schools.

The teller vote for that amendment, when Congressmen march up the aisle and are counted, was 132 to 104. That means nearly 200 House members were not there when the vote was taken. Many of them were back in their offices oblivious to urgent phone calls from floor managers of the bill and from the Leadership Conference.

The second major Southern amendment that won House approval was offered by Rep. William C. Cramer (D., Fla.). It is meant to punish those who travel interstate with the intent of inciting or encouraging riot or other violent civil disturbance or committing any crime of violence, arson, bombing, etc. Although Mr. Cramer argued that his amendment was directed against the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party, many of the members who spoke up for his proposal talked of the outside influences at work in the recent Cleveland and Chicago disturbances. Northern Democrats and Republicans alike seemed eager to demonstrate their readiness to take a tough line with rioters. In contrast to the close votes on other amendments this one was overwhelmingly adopted on final roll-call, 389 to 25.

Was The Mathias Amendment Necessary?

Timidity was the key-note again in the House adoption of the principal amendment to Title IV. Proposed by Republican representative Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, it would permit real estate brokers to handle discriminatory listings where individual home owners who are exempt from the coverage of the bill, make a request in writing.

One of the unresolved questions of the House debate is whether or not adoption of the Mathias amendment was "necessary" to keep a housing section in the bill. Mr. Mathias and other proven friends of civil rights felt it was. Groups within the Leadership Conference were split on the issue. Still, the amendment was acceded to with disconcerting readiness. Having presented Congress with a housing section that admitted no exceptions, the Administration seemed content to take the Mathias cutback--which the U.S. Attorney General himself testified would have the effect of knocking out "most of the suburbs"--without making any real effort to line up the votes to make the concession unnecessary.

But if the Democratic leadership appeared to give in too easily, the record of the House Republican leaders was shameful. The debate had just gotten underway when the Republican Policy Committee undercut support for Title IV by coming out publicly against it and calling it "politically motivated and unrealistic." In spite of Mr. Mathias's attempts to remind the members of the party of Lincoln that the question of the Congressional right to pass a fair housing law was "settled one century ago," the Republican leaders voted against his amendment and went on to vote to strike the weakened Title IV.

Two Conference-Backed Amendments Lose

Attempts to strengthen the Title V protections against violence were beaten back. The House Judiciary Committee had previously restricted the effectiveness of that title by limiting its application only to civil rights actions that were "lawfully" undertaken, thus leaving demonstrators unprotected if they happened to violate local trespass or speeding laws. An effort by Rep. Don Edwards (D., Calif.) to strike "lawfully" failed. So did a move by Rep. Charles Diggs (D., Mich.) to add a provision establishing an indemnification board whose purpose it would be to award damages to the victims of civil rights violence. Both proposals were defeated by voice votes. There was not even enough support among House liberals to force a counted vote on them.

Clarence Mitchell, Legislative Chairman of the Leadership Conference, commenting on the defeat of these amendments, noted that several purportedly liberal members who supported the Cramer anti-riot amendment "with emotion that overrode logic" went on, the very same day, to vote against the Diggs proposal. "I shall always remember with bitterness," he said, that these "same lawmakers crushed the amendment which would have given meager compensation to the maimed, the penniless and the widows and orphans of the victims of violence and terror simply because they or members of their families proclaimed their faith in the Constitution of the United States."

Neither the White House nor the Justice Department gave any support to the efforts to strengthen Title V. A statement that he would not oppose the indemnification board was as far as the U.S. Attorney General would go.

Needed: A Stronger Effort In The Senate

Following House passage of the bill, President Johnson expressed regret that the housing section had been weakened and indicated he favored a return to the original prohibition against racial discrimination in the sale and rental of all housing. We share that sentiment and we are committed to that goal. But it will take more than statements to accomplish it. Nor will it be accomplished by acquiescence in Senator Dirksen's demands for further modification of Title IV. What is required is forceful and determined leadership by the President such as he has manifested on other occasions and other issues; the full strength of his office and his powers of persuasion in and out of Congress.

What else is needed? At least a much greater effort on the part of the organizations within the Leadership Conference.

Given this sort of all-out effort we are confident the House-passed bill will be strengthened in the Senate.

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1966

(An analysis of the provisions of the bill H.R.14765 as it passed the House, August 9, 1966)

TITLE I - Federal Jury Reform

The first title regulates the selection of federal juries. It prohibits discrimination in selection on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or economic status. It establishes the method of selecting jurors on a random representative basis. The basic source of jury lists will be voting lists, except that where such lists are not non-discriminatory, the judicial council of the circuit can require the use of additional sources. Literacy requirements can be met (according to the Attorney General's interpretation) by the filling out of a simple form.

TITLE II - State Jury Reform

Title II also prohibits discrimination on the grounds of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or economic status in the selection of state juries. The prohibition could be enforced through a civil action brought by the Attorney General, by a private person who suffers discrimination, or by a litigant in a civil or criminal case who raises the issue of jury discrimination. In any such case, the title provides discovery procedures under which it could be determined how juries are selected. If the court finds probable cause to believe that discrimination occurred or if the records are insufficient, the burden is shifted to the state to show non-discrimination.

TITLE III - Civil Action to Protect Civil Rights

This title protects all persons in all their civil rights against invasion by those who would deny them because of race, color, religion, or national origin. It authorizes courts to grant civil preventive relief in cases brought by persons whose rights are denied or threatened or by the Attorney General (where a pattern or practice can be shown). It also protects persons who advocate equal rights, extending protection to the exercise of rights of speech, assembly, petition and expression in some cases not now covered by federal law.

TITLE IV - Housing

Title IV outlaws discrimination in certain housing practices. It prohibits discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, or the number or age of children by real estate brokers, agents, salesmen or their employees or by builders, developers or those renting, selling or leasing property in any phase of their business activities. "Blockbusting" is among the prohibited practices.

These prohibitions do not apply to owner-occupied properties of four units or less or to brokers acting on written instructions from owners of such property.

Discrimination by banks, savings and loan associations and others in the business of financing real estate transactions is also prohibited where such discrimination is based on race, color, religion, or national origin.

The prohibitions of the title may be enforced by civil actions brought by aggrieved individuals or by the Attorney General in cases of a pattern or practice. In addition the title establishes a Fair Housing Board along the lines of the National Labor Relations Board, empowered to issue cease and desist orders prohibiting discriminatory practices. The Secretary of HUD is authorized to direct investigations and bring complaints before the Fair Housing Board.

It is estimated that the title will apply to 40% of the housing market, including almost all new housing and most rental units.

TITLE V - Prohibitions Against Interference With Constitutional Rights

This title makes it a federal criminal offense to injure, intimidate or interfere by force or threat of force with persons in the lawful exercise of civil rights because of race, color, religion or national origin, or attempt to do so. The rights protected are voting, running for political office, serving as a poll watcher, enrolling in or attending a public school or college, participating in or enjoying any federal or state program or benefit, seeking or working in any employment, engaging in housing activities, serving as a juror, using any common carrier, enjoying any benefit assisted by federal funds and enjoying the use of any place or public accommodations. Also prohibited is the injury, intimidation or interference with any person (or an attempt to do so) to discourage any person or group of persons from enjoying such rights or for having enjoyed them or assisted another to do so.

The title also contains a provision making it an offense to travel in interstate commerce with intent to incite a riot or to perform certain acts in furtherance of a riot.

Punishment under the title could be up to $10,000 or ten years imprisonment, depending on the gravity of the offense, or life imprisonment where death occurs. Existing civil rights statutes are amended to increase penalties.

TITLE VI, VII, VIII AND IX

Title VI makes little change in existing law because of amendments adopted in the House. It continues in effect the authority of the Attorney General to sue to desegregate public schools and public facilities upon receipt of a written complaint.

Title VII authorizes the Attorney General to allow destruction of voting records under certain circumstances.

Title VIII requires the Attorney General to render an annual report on his civil rights activities to the President and Congress.

Title IX is the miscellaneous title authorizing appropriations and providing that if any provision of the Act is held invalid the rest of it will not be affected.

Prepared by J. Francis Pohlhaus
Special Consultant

Deadlock Imperils Rights Bill

LEGISLATION
DC 8/22/66

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration leaders and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., have reached a deadlock over open housing which indicates there may be no civil rights bill passed this year.

Dirksen has notified Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach that the administration can expect no help from him toward breaking what Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., predicted will be a "very strong filibuster" against the measure.

Katzenbach, in return, has insisted there must be in any bill that passes an open-housing provision.

STAND STILL SAME

Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, has called this proposal to ban racial discrimination in the sale and rental of housing unconstitutional and has said House action to exempt home and small apartment owners hasn't changed his stand.

While Dirksen is tinkering with a proposed substitute which would call for a study of the housing situation for possible later legislative remedies, Southern opponents have notified him they will not support any modification of the measure which woud make it more likely to win majority support in the Senate.

DIXIE OPPOSITION

A direct move to strike the housing section from the bill would be opposed by the talkative Southerners on the same grounds.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, fully aware of this tight deadlock, said last week that if the Senate doesn't pass a bill this year it can try again next year.

Dirksen told a reporter: "That might very well be what will happen."

The housing section is the focal point of controversy but a

Continued on Page 22, Column 1

WON'T FIGHT FILIBUSTER
Everett Dirksen

Deadlock Imperils Rights Bill

Continued From Page 1

provision aimed at the frequent selection of all-white juries in the South also is under fire. Sens. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., and Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., are reported preparing strong arguments against it.

Javits said on a television-radio program taped for New York stations that it is essential to pass the open-housing provision to "establish the dignity" of minorities to live wherever they can afford to live.

"But it is going to be a hard, tough filibuster and very hard to break," he said. "And I hope very much the public will now be sufficiently aroused to realize that if you fail to break this filibuster, then you are endangering our civil rights progress and endangering the order and tranquility of our country in a very real way.

"This doesn't mean that we should be blackmailed into passing civil rights legislation because we are afraid of riots. It does mean that we shouldn't invite riots because we are unjust."

8/26/66 THE NEW YORK TIMES,

SENATE REJECTS WAGE RISE DELAY

42-40 Vote Backs Johnson on $1.60 Minimum by '68

LEGISLATION

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—The Senate gave President Johnson and organized labor an uncomfortably narrow victory today by defeating a move to delay an increase in the minimum wage to $1.60 an hour.

By a vote of 42 to 40, the Senate rejected an amendment to the Administration's minimum-wage bill that would have postponed the rise until Feb. 1, 1969.

The effect was to leave intact provisions for a two-step increase in the minimum wage of $1.25 an hour. As the bill now stands, the minimum would rise to $1.40 next Feb. 1 and to $1.60 on Feb. 1, 1967.

The amendment was sponsored by a Republican, Senator Paul J. Fannin of Arizona but drew much support from conservative Democrats.

Voting for it were 21 Republicans and 19 Democrats. The opposition consisted of 35 Democrats and seven Republicans.

An Easier Victory

Administration and labor forces won an easier victory tonight with the rejection of another amendment that would have continued the exclusion of farm labor from the minimum wage law.

In a major breakthrough, the bill calls for coverage of farm workers for the first time. About 390,000 of them would be guaranteed a wage of $1 an hour, starting Feb. 1, with increases to $1.15 the following year and to $1.30 on Feb. 1, 1968.

Senator Spessard L. Holland, Democrat of Florida, moved to strike out the farm labor provisions. His amendment was rejected by a vote of 51 to 37.

It was supported by 19 Republicans and 18 Democrats and opposed by 41 Democrats and 10 Republicans.

The rejection of the amendment assured the retention in the final version of the bill of provisions for coverage of farm labor. A companion bill passed by the House May 26 includes similar provisions. Differences in the House and Senate measures will be adjusted in conference.

Unlike the farm labor question, the effective date for a $1.60 minimum wage is an issue that still must be settled in conference.

This is because the House version calls for a $1.60 minimum to take effect a year later than does the Senate version. The House voted 205 to 194 on May 26 for an effective date of Feb. 1, 1969, instead of Feb. 1, 1968.

Senate voting also included the rejection by 64 to 22 of an amendment by Senator Thomas H. Kuchel, Republican of California, for further increases in the minimum farm-labor wage to $1.45 an hour in 1969 and to $1.60 in 1970.

The bill's floor manager, Senator Ralph W. Yarborough, Democrat of Texas, said he saw "much merit" in the proposal. He noted, however, that it had been rejected in committee so that Congress would have an opportunity to review the impact of agricultural coverage before raising the minimum wage of farm workers to the level of others.

Senator Yarborough expressed confidence that Congress would act in the meantime to increase the agricultural minimum further.

As the Senate recessed tonight, Administration leaders expressed confidence that all major challenges to the bill in the floor battle had been countered. They looked for passage tomorrow by a one-sided vote.

Roll-Call in the Senate On Wage Amendment

WASHINGTON, Aug 25 (AP)—Following is the roll-call vote by which the Senate rejected today an amendment to delay from Feb. 1, 1968, to Feb. 1, 1969, the effective date for a new $1.60 an hour minimum wage:

FOR THE AMENDMENT—40

Democrats—19

Byrd (Va.)	McClellan (Ark.)
Church (Idaho)	McIntyre (N. H.)
Eastland (Miss.)	Monroney (Okla.)
Ellender (La.)	Robertson (Va.)
Ervin (N. C.)	Russell (Ga.)
Fulbright (Ark.)	Smathers (Fla.)
Harris (Okla.)	Sparkman (Ga.)
Holland (Fla.)	Stennis (Miss.)
Jordan (N. C.)	Talmadge (Ga.)
Lausche (Ohio)

Republicans—21

Allott (Colo.)	Hruska (Neb.)
Boggs (Del.)	Miller (Iowa)
Carlson (Kan.)	Morton (Ky.)
Cooper (Ky.)	Mundt (S. D.)
Cotton (N. H.)	Pearson (Kan.)
Curtis (Neb.)	Saltonstall (Mass.)
Dirksen (Ill.)	Thurmond (S. C.)
Dominick (Colo.)	Tower (Tex.)
Fannin (Ariz.)	Williams (Del.)
Griffin (Mich.)	Young (N. D.)
Hickenlooper (Iowa)

AGAINST THE AMENDMENT—42

Democrats—35

Anderson (N. M.)	McGovern (S. D.)
Bayh (Ind.)	Mondale (Minn.)
Bible (Nev.)	Montoya (N. M.)
Brewster (Md.)	Morse (Ore.)
Burdick (N. D.)	Moss (Utah)
Byrd (W. Va.)	Muskie (Me.)
Cannon (Nev.)	Nelson (Wis.)
Clark (Pa.)	Neuberger (Ore.)
Dodd (Conn.)	Pastore (R. I.)
Douglas (Ill.)	Pell (R. I.)
Gore (Tenn.)	Proxmire (Wis.)
Hart (Mich.)	Ribicoff (Conn.)
Inouye (Hawaii)	Russell (S. C.)
Jackson (Wash.)	Tydings (Md.)
Kennedy (Mass.)	Williams (N. J.)
Kennedy (N. Y.)	Yarborough (Tex.)
Magnuson (Wash.)	Young (Ohio)
McGee (Wyo.)

Republicans—7

Aiken (Vt.)	Kuchel (Calif.)
Case (N. J.)	Prouty (Vt.)
Fong (Hawaii)	Smith (Me.)
Javits (N. Y.)

Not voting but paired for the amendment (Senators used pairs to show positions when one or both are absent): Democrats—Mansfield (Mont.); Republicans—Jordan (Idaho), Simpson (Wyo.), Murphy (Calif.), Bennett (Utah).

Not voting but paired against the bill: Democrats—Bartlet (Alaska), Long (La.), Symington (Mo.), Randolph (W. Va.); Republicans—Scott (Pa.)

Not voting or paired but announced as against the amendment: Democrats—Bass (Tenn.), Gruening (Alaska), Hartke (Ind.), Long (Mo.), McCarthy (Minn.)

$1.60 Minimum Pay Is Voted by Senate

LEGISLATION

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—The Senate passed tonight the high-priority Administration bill to raise the minimum wage to $1.60 an hour and to broaden coverage. The vote was 57 to 17.

The bill was the first major pro-labor measure to clear the Senate in the present Congress. Democratic strategists hoped it would improve the standing of the party and the Johnson Administration with organized labor.

Passage followed three days of debate in which Administration forces staved off all major weakening amendments with one exception.

With wide Democratic backing, Republicans won a battle this afternoon to reduce the number of workers to be brought under the minimum wage from 7.2 million to 7 million.

Continued on Page 15, Column 4

$1.60 WAGE IN '68 VOTED BY SENATE

Continued From Page 1, Col. 2

The amendment, which would liberalize exemptions for small business, was adopted by a vote of 41 to 38.

The final text of the bill is to be worked out in a Senate-House conference committee, which will have the task of reconciling it with a companion measure passed May 26 by the Houe.

The Senate version would raise the present minmum of $1.25 an hour for the 29.6 million workers now covered to $1.40 next Feb. 1 and to $1.60 a year later.

The House had voted to postpone the second-step increase, to $1.60, until Feb. 1, 1969. Its bill also differs from the Senate's in provisions for coverage. The House bill calls for the addition of about eight million workers instead of the Senate bill's of seven million.

The small business amendment approved today was sponsored by Senator Winston L. Prouty, Republican of Vermont, with the backing of the Senate Republican leader, Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois. It drew wide support from Democrats, including some who classify themselves as liberals.

A few minutes before its adoption, Senator Dirksen saw an even broader small business amendment of his own lose on a 41 to 41 tie vote. The Dirksen proposal would have removed nearly one million workers from the bill's coverage provisions.

The Dirksen amendment would have exempted the employes of any concern with an annual volume of gross sales or other transactions below $250,000. The Prouty amendment fixed a $350,000 volume of business as the cutoff for exemptions.

Senator Dirksen enlivened a drab debate, which began two days ago, by producing sheafs of minimum wage regulations with the pages tacked end to end to form streamers.

He had page boys stretch the streamers over the desks of Senators, from one side of the chamber of the other. One of the streamers extended about two-thirds of the way across the chamber.

Mr. Dirksen estimated that printed regulations and "interpretations," with the pages end to end, would reach a height 19 feet above Niagara Falls.

A Blanket for Jayne

He said he had been informed that one set would "go around Janyne Mansfield's ample figure 65 times." He gave no figures, however, on the buxom film actress's measurements.

Like its House counterpart, the Senate bill entails major breakthroughs in minimum-wage legislation by covering farm labor and employes of many retail establishments, including hotels, motels and laundries, for the first time.

For newly covered farm workers, both measures call for a minimum of $1 an hour next Feb. 1, with increases to $1.15 following a year later and to $1.30 on Feb. 1, 1969.

For nonfarm workers brought under the law by the bill, the minimum would also be $1 next Feb. 1, $1.15 the following Feb. 1 and $1.30 on Feb. 1, 1969. Further increases of 15 cents a year are provided for these workers until Feb. 1, 1971, when the minimum would reach $1.60.

Many Top Minimum Now

Of the 29.6 million workers now covered by the minimum wage law, the Labor Department estimates that 5.9 million would benefit by having their pay increased. The others already earn at least $1.60 an hour.

Of the newly covered workers, about 900 million are now paid less than $1 an hour and would benefit immediately.

The bill would extend coverage to about 390,000 laborers on farms with as many as seven full-time employes.

It would also bring under the act about 1.5 million workers in retail trade establishments, 1.5 million in hospitals and related facilities, 500,000 in laundries, 425,000 in restaurants and 275,000 in hotels and motels.

About 960,000 Federal jobs would be covered, although all but 161,000 of the job holders already are paid at least $1 an hour.

Other workers who would be brought under the law include employes of construction concerns, transit systems, taxicab concern, agricultural processing plants, cotton gins and logging establishments.

Among amendments rejected in the final day of voting was one by Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican of New York, for sharp restrictions on the use of child labor on farms. The vote was 51 to 31.

Senator Javits won approval by voice vote of another amendment to make it illegal for employers to discriminate against persons over 45 in hiring and other personnel practices.

LEGISLATION

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ROY WILKINS, Chairman
ARNOLD ARONSON, Secretary
JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR., Counsel
CLARENCE M. MITCHELL, Legislative Chairman
MARVIN CAPLAN, Director Washington Office
J. FRANCIS POHLHAUS, Special Consultant

2027 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036 phone 234-4722 • New York address: 20 West 40th St. New York 18, phone BRyant 9-1400

MEMO: No.92
Sept.5, 1966

TO: Cooperating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

RE: Civil Rights Act of 1966
The New Minimum Wage Bill
Home Rule for D.C.

SENATE SET TO START CIVIL RIGHTS DEBATE SEPTEMBER 6

For the Civil Rights Act of 1966, the next and crucial phase starts on Tuesday, September 6. That's when the Senators, coming back from their Labor Day weekend are scheduled to start debate on the bill.

Democratic Majority Leader Mike Mansfield will most likely summon up the House-passed measure (H.R.14765). He has kept it on the Senate calendar in an effort to keep it out of the hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee, particularly the hands of its Chairman, James Eastland of Mississippi.

A subcommittee of Judiciary has been working on a perfected version of the House bill. But though they have reported it to the full committee and though there is a liberal majority on that 16-member body, it does not look as if Judiciary will do anything with it.

A Filibuster Looms Ahead

The floor manager for the bill will be Senator Philip A. Hart, the Michigan Democrat, whose commitment to a good civil rights bill is beyond question. A lot depends on the kind of support he gets from us.

There is no doubt that the Civil Rights Act of 1966, like the 1964 and 1965 measures will be met by a Senate filibuster. Once again the first effort will be an attempt to limit the debate.

With summer over we ask all our organizations and friends to ask themselves a few questions. Have you written to your Senators yet? Have your urged them to stay on the Senate floor throughout the debate? To vote for cloture in order to break a filibuster? To vote against all weakening amendments?

A new effort faces us. We hope the questions will all be answered with a resounding YES.

A GOOD MINIMUM WAGE BILL COMES OUT OF CONFERENCE

The minimum wage bill that emerged last Thursday from the conference between Senate and House offers important improvements in the Fair Labor Standards Act. Conferees took good features from both bills and knocked out several limiting and dangerous ones.

Here are some of the highlights:

. The conferees kept the Senate schedule for the increases. The minimum wage that now covers some 29.6 million workers would be raised from the present $1.25 an hour to $1.40 on February 1, 1967 and to $1.60 by February 1, 1968. The House wanted to postpone the second increase to February 1, 1969.

. The conferees held on to the House test for covering business enterprises. Retail stores, motels, restaurants, etc. with an annual sales volume of $250,000 would be subject to the Act. The Senate sought to raise that to $350,000, thus cutting out some 200,000 employees.

. For the first time, farm workers, about 400,000 of them would be brought under the Fair Labor Standards Act. The conferees improved this section by knocking out a dangerous Senate provision that would have provided an average wage system for agricultural workers.

. The conferees restored to the bill a House provision that would extend the law to about 900,000 non-teaching employees of elementary and secondary schools.

. They also reached a compromise on nursing home employees. The Senate wanted to exempt them from overtime provisions. The conferees agreed they were to get overtime after 48 hours.

Altogether, about 8 million workers were added to the coverage of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Increases for the Newly-Covered

For newly-covered workers, the minimum wage would start at $1 an hour. Automatic increases for farm workers would stop when they reached $1.30 an hour on February 1, 1969. For non-farm workers the series of increases would continue until the $1.60 an hour level was reached in 1971.

What We Need To Do

First the House and then the Senate will receive the Conference report sometime this week. Critics of the bill will attack it. In the House the major attack will center on the proposal to reach $1.60 an hour in 1968 instead of 1969. In the Senate, conservatives will attack the improvements in the provisions covering farm workers.

We can help keep the conference improvements by wiring Senators and Congressmen at once, urging them to vote for the conference report and help millions already deprived of their rights to move closer to their right to a decent wage.

HELP WASHINGTON GET HOME RULE!

Nearly 1 million disfranchised Americans, the residents of the nation's capital, will get another chance this session to try and win self-government.

Although the President has given Home Rule for the District a high priority on his legislative list, any attempt to work out the differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill has bogged down. In one final effort to break this stalemate, Senator Wayne Morse (D.,Ore.) is proposing to add a modified version of the Senate bill as a rider to a bill for higher education.

The Senator's proposal, like the bill the Senate passed, would give District residents, voteless and voiceless for nearly one hundred years, a chance to elect their own mayor and city council. Then, as the Washington Post points out in the editorial we enclose with this MEMO, the proposal tries to meet the objections of House critics of Home Rule. "It changes the automatic federal appropriation from a formula based on unpaid taxes to a percentage of the District budget. It provides for nonpartisan elections and for an elected school board limited in its fiscal authority. It gives the President emergency authority to take over the police department."

Humphrey Urges "Revitalized" Drive

This new campaign to win home rule in the final weeks of the 89th Congress received a push forward from Vice President Hubert Humphrey in a telegram he sent to Senator Morse prior to a meeting of home rule backers. "Please be assured," he declared, "that under President Johnson's leadership I shall continue to work with you so as to enable all the citizens of this great city to enjoy their fullest rights as Americans..."

Please Write Your Senators

Senator Morse proposes to offer his rider shortly after the Senate finishes work on the Civil Rights Act. If the Senate endorses his proposal, it will then be sent to the House which will have its own opportunity to vote home rule up or down.

You can help by writing Senate members now, urging them to vote for the Morse rider.

Major Fight on Rights Bill To Resume After Holiday

LEGISLATION

AC 9/5/66

By ART PINE

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Senate will return from its Labor Day holiday to fight the last major battle over the 1966 civil rights bill.

The controversial measure, passed by the House just four weeks ago, is sure to receive strong opposition from a coalition of Southerners and Republicans.

Almost as soon as the five-part bill is brought up for consideration, it will be faced by a Southern filibuster designed to suffocate it on the Senate floor.

At the head of the filibuster effort will be Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell, the leader of the Southern bloc on civil rights matters and an acknowledged expert on parliamentary procedure.

With him will be 18 other senators from the South, including Georgia's Herman E. Talmadge, himself a veteran of four previous major struggles over civil rights measures.

TWO GOALS

There are two things the Southerners hope to accomplish by the filibuster.

First, they want to prolong debate on the bill until the Senate leadership decides the fight isn't worth continuing—a course that could tie up Congress for weeks.

Russell marshaled the longest filibuster in Senate history in 1964 by holding out for 83 days.

Second, the Southerners want to use the filibuster time to clarify exactly what the bill would do — or, more important, what it would not do—so that if it passed there will be a "legislative history" that would serve to narrow any future court interpretation.

With that in mind, Senate staffers have been busy for weeks gathering material and writing speeches to be used in the filibuster.

Ironically, however, whether the 1966 civil rights bill passes does not depend upon the carefully prepared filibuster effort, or upon the Southerners who mount it.

As everyone from Russell and Talmadge to liberal Republican Sen. Jacob Javits of New York is saying, it all depends upon Everett Dirksen.

The only thing that can stop the Southern filibuster is a successful motion to invoke cloture, a parliamentary device that would limit the time the Senate could spend in debate.

CLOTURE EFFECTED

Once cloture was effected, the bill would have to be brought up for a vote, and in practical terms this would pretty well ensure its passage.

And Dirksen, the Illinois Republican who is Senate minority leader, has the wherewithal to sway the critical GOP votes which could pass or defeat a cloture motion.

The Illinoisan has already said he would not support a cloture motion unless the controversial open-housing provision were stricken from the bill.

But Dirksen said much the same thing about the public accommodations section of the 1964 civil rights bill and later changed his mind, and the Southerners are conspicuously afraid he will reverse course again.

LEGISLATION

Lack of Quorum in Senate Aids Dixie Rights Bill Fight

(same day as Atlanta riots)

By MARGARET SHANNON
Atlanta Journal Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—The Senate marked time for 62 minutes Wednesday before it could round up enough members to keep it in session so that it could proceed with consideration of the administration's civil rights bill.

It was the second straight day that poor attendance aided the cause of Southern senators who are seeking to kill the measure. All they had to do was sit back and watch the leadership fret.

A quorum call started two minutes after the Senate convened, and 33 minutes later Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., asked for the sergeant at arms to go and bring in absentees.

One by one, members straggled in. Twenty-nine minutes after the sergeant-at-arms went to work, the 51st senator showed up. That made a quorum.

THAT SENATOR was Sen. Ernest Gruening, D.-Alaska, one of the most elderly members.

Once again, as on Tuesday, the Dixie bloc could not really be accused of trying to keep the Senate from operating. Twelve of the 19 members of the Southern caucus answered the quorum call.

But at least one Southerner, Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-NC, seemed to pull a disappearing act. He was seen in the Capitol shortly before the quorum call, but he did not answer it.

Both of Georgia's senators were present. Numerous Republicans were absent. There seemed still to be no plot to delay the civil rights bill exactly, but the effect was the same, plot or not.

Majority Leader Mansfield, naturally a long faced man, was particularly long-faced Wednesday about chances for passage of the civil rights bill.

"I think the prospects are not good," he said. "It's a matter of votes — you can add them and subtract them."

What they added up to was a combination of Southern Democrats and conservative Republicans not big enough to defeat the bill perhaps, but big enough to keep it from ever coming to a vote.

The only way to get it to a vote in the Senate, where debate is unlimited, is to impose cloture, which limits debate. That requires a two-thirds vote. Passage of a bill takes just a simple majority — one more than half.

The Senate opened debate on the House-passed measure Tuesday, although technically the bill hadn't even been called up. Senate rules abound with technicalities, some of which sometimes obscure what's really going on.

For instance, Sen. Ervin technically blocked proponent's efforts three times to get on with the bill:

1. When Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., asked unanimous consent to call up the measure, Sen. Ervin objected. One objection is all that's needed to block a unanimous consent request.

2. When Sen. Hart later asked Sen. Ervin to yield the floor so he could make a motion to call up the bill, Sen. Ervin refused. That was that.

3. When Sen. Ervin got through with his speech against calling up the bill, he noted the absence of a quorum. It was noticeable, all right. Almost nobody was there. For almost an hour the roll was called, and just 40 senators answered. It takes 51 to make a quorum. Sen. Hart consulted Sen. Mansfield and then asked for a recess until Wednesday. The Senate can't do business without a quorum.

THE MAIN reason a quorum couldn't be obtained was that many senators aren't in town. They left for a long Labor Day weekend and just hadn't come back.

All this maneuvering Tuesday made the Southerners look good and the proponents of the civil rights bill look sad. But it is all part of the way they play the game in the Senate, and the fact was that, technicalities or not, the debate was under way.

In fact, Sen. Hart, Sen. Ervin, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., of the Senate Judiciary Committee made speeches pro and con.

Sen. Ervin introduced 53 amendments. Sen. Eastland introduced 48 more. Sen. Hart offered some, too, mainly to meet objections of some federal judges to the bill's jury selection provisions.

SEN. RICHARD B. Russell, D-Ga., leader of the Southern bloc, was on hand Tuesday, but didn't enter into the debate. He consulted from time to time with Sen. Ervin on strategy.

The early recess Tuesday because of a lack of a quorum was an unexpected bonus for the Southerners.

The fact that it wasn't a premeditated delaying device is evidenced by 10 Southerners answering the quorum call. Sen. Russell and Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., were among them.

If the Dixie bloc had been deliberately trying to force Senate adjournment for lack of a quorum, more of its members would have made themselves scarce.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

NEW TEETH ARRIVES— HE'S JUST 74

MANZANARES, Spain, Sept. 7 (UPI)—Angel Novillo Torres is reported to have received a novel present for his 74th birthday—a bright, new molar that broke through his toothless gums.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Nondenomination Campus Group Is Formed

CHICAGO (AP)—A new religious national campus organization which lists Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox students as members was formed here Tuesday night.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Protestant-oriented National Student Christian Federation voted their organization out of existence. They joined leaders of Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox national campus organizations in forming the University Christian Movement.

Catholic organizations joining the new group were the National Federation of Catholic College Students, representing lay students at Catholic colleges and universities; and the National Newman Student Federation, representing Catholic students on secular campuses.

(Paid Political Advertisement) (Paid Political Advertisement) (Paid Political Advertisement)

York

DAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1966

DEBATE ON RIGHTS IS DELAYED AGAIN; MANSFIELD ANGRY

LEGISLATION

Quorum Lacking for 2d Day —Senate Leader Terms Conduct 'Disgraceful'

9/8/66

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 — For the second consecutive day the Senate failed today to muster enough members to begin conducting business on the Administration's civil rights and the majority leader, Mike Mansfield, termed its conduct "disgraceful."

The Montana Democrat said the Senate's inactivity "takes away from its dignity and decorum," adding:

"I think it's a disgraceful exhibition of doing nothing."

Mr. Mansfield, clearly gloomy over the bill's prospects, addressed himself to a small group of newsmen in his office after the Senate had finally recessed in mid-afternoon for lack of a quorum.

He refused to place the resposibility for the Senate's slow start entirely on Republican and Southern opponents of the measure.

Election Race Noted

"There's enough blame to go around on both sides," he said, noting that the desire to return home to campaign for the November elections had kept members on both sides of the aisle from performing their Senate duties.

Earlier in the day, it had appeared likely that the Senate might come to grips with the bill. A bare quorum of 51 members—the minimum needed to do business—was mustered an hour and a quarter after the opening bell rang at noon. At 2 P.M., Senator Philip A. Hart, Michigan Democrat who is floor manager of the bill, was able to make a formal motion to call up the measure for Senate consideration.

This motion in itself was vulnerable to endless debate, and both John G. Tower, Texas Republican, and Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the minority leader, had speeches ready. Both oppose the bill.

The Senate immediately turned to other matters, most of them routine except for the House-Senate conference report on the $3.5-billion foreign aid bill. The bill passed by a 35-to-25 margin, indicating that 58 members were present.

At this point, however, the quorum began to disintegrate as if in anticipation of a debate over Mr. Hart's motion. The Southerners who had been present for the foreign aid vote left in droves and Mr. Tower asked for a new quorum call.

Endless roll-calls and frantic attempts by the sergeant-at-arms to find missing members failed to produce more than 47 —four short of a quorum. Mr. Hart gave up and moved to recess until tomorrow.

Mr. Dirksen, who waited

Continued on Page 37, Column 1

DEBATE ON RIGHTS IS DELAYED AGAIN

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

slightly more than an hour while the search went on, was asked to explain the elusiveness of his colleagues.

"A cyclonic enthusiasm for something other than this bill," he replied.

Mr. Dirksen is regarded by the Administration, Mr. Mansfield and nearly everyone else as the key to the bill's success or failure. BBut he gave no indication today that he had wavered in his apparently unalterable opposition to Title IV of the bill.

This section, which Mr. Dirksen has denounced as unconstitutional would bar discrimination in the sale or rental of units in large apartments as well as new housing, but would exempt individual homeowners, boarding houses and apartments of four units or fewer.

These exemptions, written into the original Administration proposal by the House, would leave nearly 60 per cent of the nation's existing housing uncovered by the antidiscrimination provisions. The orginal proposal would have banned discrimination in all housing.

Democratic leaders have frankly admitted that without Mr. Dirksen's help it will be imposisble to impose closure—that is, shut off an expected Southern filibuster.

At present, opponents of the bill pan to filibuster against it in two separate stages. First, they plan to talk against Mr. Hart's motion to call up the measure for discussion. If this filibuster is broken—which requires the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting —then they will begin another round of talks aimed at delaying a vote on the bill itself.

However, as Mr. Manfield acknowledged unhappily, neither tactic is necessary as long as the Senate cannot muster a quorum, simply because no substantive business can be transacted without enough members on the floor. In effect, therefore, the absence of a quorum is just as useful to opponents as a filibuster—perhaps more so, since they need not wear out their legs and lungs by standing and talking.

The ultimate objective of this maneuvering is to keep the Senate in session so long that the bill's proponents finally grow weary and drop the measure to be able to get back home in time to campaign for the November elections.

There is always the chance, however, that the Democratic leadership will call a post-election session of Congress to deal with unfinished business. Mr. Mansfield raised this prospect when talking with newsmen this morning.

"I'm going to try and adjourn by the 15th of October," he said, "and stay out the rest of the year." However, he added, he might be forced to call members back after the Nov. 8 elections.

"It's a possibility," he said. "But I hope it does not become necessary."

The bill that Mr. Hart is trying to bring before the Senate was passed by the House Aug. 9. In addition to the housing section, it would also bar discrimination in the selection of state and Federal court juries.

Peking Says Crops Increase

HONG KONG, Thursday, Sept. 8 (Reuters)—Communist China has gathered increased harvest of rice, wheat, corn and millet this summer, the Peking radio said today.

DEBATE ON RIGHTS BEGINS IN SENATE

LEGISLATION

Southerners Open Filibuster After Delay Over Lack of Quorum Is Ended

9/9/66

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—The Senate finally mustered enough members today to begin debate on the civil rights bill of 1966. A Southern filibuster, postponed twice by parliamentary procedures, then began in earnest.

The South's opening gun was fired by Senator Strom Thurmond, Republican of South Carolina, who denounced the measure as "one of the most vicious, vindictive, politically inspired" bills ever brought before Congress.

Meanwhile, liberal advocates of the bill outside Congress served notice that they would not accept a measure that did not include Title IV, the controversial section barring discrimination in some types of housing.

Oppose Weakening Bill

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, an affiliation of more than 100 civil rights, labor, religious and civic groups, sent telegrams to Senate supporters of the bill asking them to fight for the full bill and oppose "weakening amendments."

"A bill without the existing housing provisions would be totally unacceptable to the civil rights movement," the telegrams said in part. "We strongly oppose purchasing closure by

Continued on Page 27, Column 3

Rights Debate Opens in Senate; Southern Filibuster Is Mounted

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

deleting or weakening the housing provisions."

The telegrams were signed by Clarence Mitchell, legislative chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Joseph L. Rauh Jr., a Washington lawyer, on behalf of the conference.

Conference officials indicated that a meeting had been held, and the telegram sent, in response to "rumors" that some Democrats were prepared to agree to a weakened version of the bill in order to shut off what is expected to be a vigorous filibuster by the measure's opponents.

The conference's fears are not entirely baseless. Although the measure's floor manager, Senator Philip A. Hart, Democrat of Michigan, has said that he would resist any attempt to weaken the bill, some liberals are said to feel that the Senate must produce some sort of civil rights measure even if it means deleting the housing provision.

Their reasoning is based, in part, on the belief that, even without the housing section, the bill would represent a respectable contribution to the history of civil rights legislation, especially Titles I, II, and V.

The first two sections would bar discrimination in the selection of Federal and state court juries. Title V would strengthen existing laws against intimidation of Negroes and civil rights workers engaged in constitutionally protected activities.

Any agreement among the Democrats to permit such a weakening of the bill would represent a victory for Senato Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican leader. Mr. Dirksen has said he is adamantly opposed to the housing section and will not support closure as long as that section is part of the bill.

For their part, Democratic leaders have acknowledged that without Mr. Dirksen's help it will be impossible to impose closure — that is, shut off the filibuster.

It will take the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting to shut off debate. The Democratic leadership estimates that it now has 53 to 57 votes, including several Republicans who would vote for closure regardless of what Mr. Dirksen did.

Mr. Dirksen, therefore, is seen as the key to obtaining the rest. Proponents of the bill would need 67 votes if all 100 senators were present.

Technically, the filibuster that began today with Mr. Thurmond's speech was directed not against the bill itself but against a motion made by Mr. Hart yesterday to make the bill the pending business before the Senate. Under Senate rules, a motion to call up a particular measure for debate is itself subject to endless discussion.

However, the mere fact that discussion on the Hart motion began represented a marginal triumph for the Democratic leadership. Twice before this week the Senate was forced to quit when not enough Senators responded to quorum calls to fill out the necessary majority of 51 members and permit debate to begin.

Even today it was not an easy matter to find the required members. The first quorum call took 55 minutes and the second a little over an hour. The absentees included not only Southern Democrats but also a few Northern liberals who have traditionally been among the first to appear when a civil rights issue is at stake.

Both New York Senators, Jacob K Javits, a Republican, and Robert F. Kennedy, a Democrat, were absent. However, both were attending important political conventions in their own state and had been given full permission by the leadership to leave town.

Mr. Thurmond was the opposition's only speaker. After he began, the chamber emptied quickly. A former Democrat turned Republican in 1964, Mr. Thurmond holds the Senate filibuster record, 24 hours 18 minutes, with a speech delivered in 1957.

Today he spoke for only an hour, attacking the bill as "a frontal assault on the Constitution."

Rights Bill Slips Closer to Grave

LEGISLATION

AC 9/10/66

By ART PINE

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Southern senators opposed to the 1966 Civil Rights Bill agreed not to demand another time-wasting quorum call Friday, but their charity was foiled by an irate Yankee.

As a result, the Senate spent two and a quarter hours trying to round up a quorum, failed for the fourth day in a row, and adjourned early, leaving the Civil Rights Bill that much closer to the grave.

The Southerners, anxious to begin making speeches after almost a week of quorum calls, had made a gentlemen's agreement with the House Leadership Friday not to use the parliamentary device.

REQUESTS CALL

Louisiana Sen. Allen J. Ellender routinely requested a quorum call early Friday afternoon, but only to give Sen. James O. Eastland D-Miss., time to get to the chamber to make a speech.

Ellender fully intended to ask the Senate to rescind his motion after Eastland made it to the floor — a frequent practice in such a situation.

But when he did, Delaware Republican John R. Williams objected, forcing the leadership to go ahead with the quorum call.

At 2:55 p.m., after only 48 senators showed up, the Senate adjourned. Fifty-one are needed to fill a quorum.

ANTI INFLATION

Williams, ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee, reportedly was miffed because President Johnson had neglected to tip him off in advance about the anti-inflation announcement the Administration made Thursday.

In the middle of a speech attacking the Johnson proposals, Williams asked unanimous consent for more time. But Sen.

Continued on Page 5, Column 1

New Rights Bill Nudged Closer To Grave

Continued from Page 1

William Proxmire D.-Wisc., objected.

Furious, Williams later objected to Ellender's request to rescind the quorum call.

For the Southerners, who had turned out en masse to honor their agreement with the leadership, the only disappointment was that Eastland never got to make his speech against the Civil Rights Bill.

But none of them was complaining: even the proponents of the controversial measure now seem in agreement that it is near death.

A Northern senator, one of the sponsors of the bill, was asked whether it was accurate to say that the measure was, in effect, dead.

"I guess you're safe to take that tack if you want to," he said sadly.

The only optimistic note came in a statement issued by White House Press Secretary Bill Moyers. It read:

"We have received no word that the bill is dead, and we're not going to give up on the hope or the effort to get the bill passed."

Senate leaders generally have attributed the failure to satisfy quorum calls to a lack of interest in the bill.

WHY BE TRAP
BY PLUMBING PROBLEMS

CALL
RELIABLE
STASCO
PLUMBING, INC.
2335 Adams Dr.
Marietta Blvd. at Bolton Rd.

THE NEW

DIRKSEN REFUSES RIGHTS BILL SHIFT

LEGISLATION

Says Neither Johnson Nor Senate Can Change His Mind

9/14/66

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 — Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen declared today that neither President Johnson nor a majority of his Senate colleagues could persuade him to reverse his opposition to the Administration's civil rights bill.

"I know nobody under the canopy of the bright blue sky who can say anything to change my mind," the Illinois Republican declared.

Accordingly, the prospects for shutting off a filibuster against the bill remained bleak. So did the prospects for Senate approval of any civil rights legislation in this session of Congress.

Criticism Is Widespread

Sensing, perhaps, that the bill's death was near, each side began criticizing the other. The Democrats sought to place responsibility on Mr. Dirksen. Liberal Republicans argued that Mr. Dirksen did not speak for all Republicans, and thus any effort to tar the party was unfair.

At least one Republican Senator—Robert P. Griffin of Michigan—suggested that much of the fault rested with Mr. Johnson for failing to put more White House pressure on the Senate.

A showdown vote on the bill is scheduled for tomorrow evening. Technically, the Senate will not be voting on the merits of the measure itself. Instead, it will be asked to decide the procedural question of whether to cut off debate on a motion to make the bill the pending business before the Senate.

A Test of Sentiment

But the bill's backers have made it clear that they regard the vote as a test of sentiment on the measure itself.

It will take the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting to impose closure—that is, close off debate on the motion. If all 100 Senators were present, 67 votes would be required.

There are likely to be fewer than 100 on the floor. Senator E. L. Bartlett, Alaska Democrat, has been ill, and several Senators have been traveling in Europe. Therefore a vote in the range of 64 to 66 might be enough.

However, Democratic leaders have long acknowledged that effort to tar the party was unfair.

At least one Republican Senator—Robert P. Griffin of Michigan—suggested that much of the fault rested with Mr. Johnson for failing to put more White House pressure on the Senate.

A showdown vote on the bill is scheduled for tomorrow evening. Technically, the Senate will not be voting on the merits of the measure itself. Instead, it will be asked to decide the procedural question of whether to cut off debate on a motion to make the bill the pending business before the Senate.

A Test of Sentiment

But the bill's backers have made it clear that they regard the vote as a test of sentiment on the measure itself.

It will take the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting to impose closure—that is, close off debate on the motion. If all 100 Senators were present, 67 votes would be required.

There are likely to be fewer than 100 on the floor. Senator E. L. Bartlett, Alaska Democrat, has been ill, and several Senators have been traveling in Europe. Therefore a vote in the range of 64 to 66 might be enough.

However, Democratic leaders have long acknowledged that without Mr. Dirksen's help they can get no more than 55 to 60 votes, and even these estimates are regarded in some quarters as excessively optimistic.

Housing Section Opposed

Mr. Dirsken's strongest opposition is to Title IV of the bill, which would ban discrimination in new housing developments and large apartments, but would specifically exempt about 60 per cent of the nation's housing, including most existing private homes. He has said he believes the provision is unconstitutional.

Other major sections of the bill would ban discrimination in the selection of jurors in state and Federal courts and would broaden Federal laws against violence or intimidation directed at Negroes and civil rights workers engaged in constitutionally protected activities. Mr. Dirksen, supported by many of his colleagues and a number of judges, has also criticized the jury provisions.

The majority leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, has indicated that he might try for a second closure vote if proponents obtain a simple majority tomorrow. But unless there is a sizable majority, according to sources on Capitol Hill, Mr. Mansfield and his lieutenants are not likely to make anything more than a routine effort to try to round up enough votes to impose closure the second time. And at this juncture the margin appears slim.

Some liberals had hoped that a majority vote would also make Mr. Dirksen more amenable to negotiation, on the ground that he might find it difficult to persist in his opposition when a majority of his colleagues had expressed interest in continuing discussion on the bill.

But Mr. Dirksen dashed these hopes at a news conference in the Senate press gallery.

Asked Two Questions

The minority leader was asked whether he would interpret a majority vote against closure as a legitimate expression of majority sentiment for the measure itself. He was also asked whether such a vote would change his views in any way.

He replied to both questions with a firm "no." Elaborating, he suggested that some Senators who might vote to shut off debate tomorrow would not vote for the bill itself if they understood its implications.

"Some of them don't know what's in the bill," he said.

Earlier, he had been asked whether there was anything the President could do or say to change his mind.

"Exactly, precisely nothing," Mr. Dirksen replied.

The President told reporters last night that the success of the measure depended on Mr. Dirksen, adding his hope that the minority leader would change his mind.

Senator Frank J. Lausche, Ohio Democrat who opposes the bill, charged on the Senate floor today that Mr. Johnson and the Democrats were trying to scare Mr. Dirksen into changing his mind. But the colorful minority leader, who was in a good mood despite the enormous public pressure placed on him, declared that he was not easily intimidated.

"I quit scaring when I was in the trenches, with a tin derby on my head and a gas mask on my snoot," the Senator said, apparently alluding to service in World War I.

Holds Out Little Hope

Mr. Dirksen refused to declare the bill dead. "There's something so absolute about that word 'dead,'" he said. But he held out little hope for the measure, and he agreed that it would "depend on the size of the majority" tomorrow whether the leadership presses for a second closure vote or abandons the bill altogether to begin work on other pending legislation.

The Illinois Republican said he did not think his stand was impairing the election chances of Republican candidates.

"It ain't hurting," he said.

LEGISLATION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

No, No, 1,000 Times No, Dirksen Says of Housing Bill

AC 9/14/66

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Senate minority leader Everett McKinley Dirksen sat on a small wooden table in the Senate press gallery Tuesday afternoon and sang, "No, No, a Thousand Times No."

Sen. Dirksen

It was a rather throaty, near-monotone performance, but it got the point across:

In spite of the criticism from President Lyndon B. Johnson Monday night, the Illinois Republican still has not changed his tune about opposing the 1966 civil rights bill.

Dirksen's position will be crucial Wednesday afternoon when the bill faces its first real test—a vote on a motion to invoke cloture and limit the Southern filibuster.

According to Senate rules, it will take the affirmative vote of two thirds of the senators present Wednesday to cut off debate on a motion to bring the bill to the floor.

CAN BLOCK CLOTURE

But Dirksen, speaking for those senators opposed to the civil rights bill, said simply: "We have the votes (to block cloture)."

The Republican leader, who first opposed the civil rights bill of 1964 and then reversed his position, said there was no chance that he would switch his stand again this year.

"There was a lot more work done on the 1964 bill," Dirksen said, noting that the Southern filibuster this year barely had time to get started.

Nor would the minority leader simply sign the House-passed bill on condition that it would be changed later in a Senate-House conference committee.

HUMPHREY NAMED

Dirksen pointed out that Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, as presiding officer of the Senate, would have the authority to appoint the Senate members of the conference committee if he wanted.

If that happened, Dirksen said, "there would be fuss and feathers galore and you would smell burning feathers from here to Alexandria, Va."

While Dirksen exchanged witicisms with reporters, south- said. "The day cloture can be invoked so cavalierly upon a minority by a majority will be the day we turn our backs on extended debate, our greatest bulwark against legislative tyranny."

Senate majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., has said he will shelve the bill, probably by the end of the week, if sponsors cannot muster at least a majority for cloture.

Meanwhile, Sen. Phillip A. Hart, D-Mich., is still predicting he will be able to produce a two-thirds vote for cloture.

Hart is one of 17 Northern and midwestern senators who signed a petition to invoke cloture Monday, automatically requiring the Wednesday vote. Another four senators added their names later.

So far, the filibuster has been an easy one for a bloc of 18 Southerners opposed to the measure, led by Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell.

Russell and Georgia Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, who worked weeks in preparation for the filibuster effort, spent most of last week behind the scenes while sponsors of the bill looked for enough senators to satisfy continual Southern demands for a quorum.

RIGHTS BILL DIES AS CLOSURE FAILS

LEGISLATION

Second Senate Move to End Filibuster Loses, 52 to 41 —Housing Key Issue

9/20/66

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE Jr.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 — The Senate killed today all hopes for fair-housing legislation in this session of Congress when it refused, for the second time in less than a week, to shut off debate on the Administration's civil-rights bill.

The votes was 52 to 41—10 short of the two-thirds majority required to end a filibuster. The first attempt to end debate last Wednesday fell short by the same margin.

[Civil rights leaders were critical of the Senate's failure to enact the measure. They described the action as a surrender to wrong, a blow to American Negroes and an incitement to racial trouble.]

Following the vote, and after some complex parliamentary maneuvering, the Senate majority leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, finally withdrew the measure from Senate consideration.

Will Automatically Die

This means that the bill will automatically die when Congress adjourns, even though it was passed by the House last month. It also means that if President Johnson wants a bill he will have to submit it again next year and be prepared to go through the entire legislative process in both houses of Congress.

Each side of the issue promptly tried to affix blame for the measure's defeat on the other. But in an eloquent and conciliatory speech following the vote, Mr. Mansfield declared:

"Whatever blame there is attaches to us all."

However, Mr. Mansfield singled out for special attention "demagogues" on both sides of the civil rights struggle. He sugsested that by their actions and attitudes they not only had "contributed nothing to the nation's most agonizing ier difficulties" but also had "stimulated situations which have made it difficult for legislature to be considered on an impartial and unemotional basis."

Continued on Page 35, Column 3

RIGHTS BILL DIES AS CLOSURE FAILS

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

In an apparent reference to Stokely Carmichael of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, an outspoken advocate of "black power," Mr. Mansfield condemned "those who, in the name of racial equality or perhaps more accurately in the name of a new racial superiority, have not advocated further civil rights legislation, but, in fact, have actively spoken and fought against measures such as the Administration has been trying to have enacted."

Opposition Made Public

Mr. Carmichael has publicly announced his opposition to the civil rights bill. He has said that he believes it is too weak and too limited to insure Negroes decent housing.

The bill, as passed by the House, would have barred discrimination in the sale or rental of units in large apartment buildings and new housing developments. The Administration originally intended to outlaw discrimination in all housing, but, as amended by the House, the measure would specifically exempt about 60 per cent of the nation's housing, including nearly all private homes, apartments with four units or fewer and boarding houses.

Other major provisions of the bill would have prevented discrimination in the selection of juries in Federal and state courts, and broadened existing Federal laws against the intimidation, harrassment or personal injury to civil rights workers engaged in constitutionally protected activities.

Mr. Mansfield's address was as much a warning as an appeal for peace and reason in racial matters. He said that if the prospects for passage of a civil rights bill next year "are to be improved, the question of rioting, marches, shootings and inflammatory statements which have characterized this simmering summer of 1966 in urban areas of the nation will have to be faced frankly and bluntly."

Extremists Are Warned

White extremists, the Senator went on, have no more "patience with the processes of the law" than black extremists. He accused them of "vicious demagoguery, and rioting, and violence against minorities," and urged them to remember that even though the 1966 bill had failed there were plenty of "civil rights bills on the books," that must be obeyed.

"They will stay there," he said. "They will not be withdrawn. They will not be reconsidered. They will not be ignored. The law is the law."

There was no immediate indication from the White House whether Mr. Johnson would send up a similar bill next year, but the assumption generally shared here was that he would. The bill's floor manager, Philip A. Hart, Michigan Democrat who fought long and hard for what appeared from the beginning to be a futile enterprise, promised another attempt. He said that a majority of the Senate clearly favored it.

"I interpret the 54 votes for closure as a vote for the 1966 Civil Rights bills," Mr. Hart said.

Last Wednesday's vote for closure was 54 to 42, also 10 votes short of the two-thirds required. Today's 52-to-41 margin resulted from a slightly different alignment of absentees.

The chief Republican proponent, Jacob K. Javits of New York, echoed Mr. Hart's sentiment.

"The civil rights advocates may have lost a battle, but I am deeply determined, and I think all of us are, that we will win the war."

Lackluster Oratory

The vote ended a two-week filibuster distinguished mainly by lackluster Southern oratory against the bill and Senate apathy that on occasion, made the oratory unnecessary. Four times during the debate the chamber was forced to adjourn or recess for lack of quorum—that is, there were not enough members on hand to conduct business. This meant that foes of the bill were able to achieve delay without a rigorous filibuster.

The vote also ended a long series of legislative successes for civil rights advocates dating to the civil rights bill of 1957.

Many reasons have been put forth for the defeat of this year's bill, and all were resurrected after today's climatic roll-call. One immediate target was Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican minority leader who made his opposition to the open occupancy section of the bill clear early and stuck to his position despite appeals from some fellow Republicans and the White House.

Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, who is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and who helped shepherd the bill through the House, said the failure was "the responsibility of the Republican leadership."

However, Mr. Javits and Hugh Scott, Pennsylvania Republican, insisted that neither Mr. Dirksen nor the Republicans should shoulder the blame. And Mr. Mansfield declared that the minority leader had "acted from conscience" and might not have been able to swing enough votes for closure even if he had changed his mind and agreed to support the bill.

Forty-two Democrats and 10 Republicans backed today's closure petition. Twenty-one Democrats and 20 Republicans opposed it. Those who hold Mr. Dirksen responsible believe that he controlled enough votes to make closure possible had he decided to use them.

Reaction Here Critical

The executive directors of the National Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reacted sharply yesterday to the death of the civil rights bill, and warned that its fate would heighten racial tension.

Roy Wilkins of the N.A.A.C.P., in a statement issued here, said:

"The Government is going to have to decide either to enact an open housing policy or to endorse by its inaction the unconscionable deprivation and the explosive threat of the racial slums."

Whitney M. Young Jr. of the Urban League said:

"It is tragic that Congress has not responded favorably to the desperately needed civil rights bill. Negro citizens continue to be hurt by flagrant discriminatory practices and violation of their rights as human beings. Today's action can only serve to worsen an already serious racial crisis."

Tear Gas Used to Disperse Rioting Students in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 19 (UPI) — National Guardsmen fired a tear gas barrage today to break up a riotous street demonstration by 1,000 rock-throwing high school students.

The demonstration was held to protest alleged Government repressive measures and to seek the release from jail of a dozen student leaders and better schools and educational materials.

The demonstration was called in defiance of a Government ban and the students marched through downtown Panama City to the Education Ministry when a small mob started shouting "to the firing wall" for President Marco A. Robles and the head of the national guard, the riot squads went into action.

RIGHTS LEADERS REACT BITTERLY

LEGISLATION

Denounce Vote in Senate as Incitement to Turmoil

9/20/66 NYT

Civil rights leaders denounced yesterday the Senate's failure to pass the 1966 civil rights bill as a surrender to wrong, a blow to American Negroes and an incitement to racial turmoil.

It "can only serve to worsen an already serious racial crisis," said Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League.

"It is tragic that Congress has not responded favorably to this desperately needed civil rights bill," Mr. Young said.

Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said the outcome showed a "trend of the Congress as well as the Administration to sell black Americans down the river of political expediency."

He criticized President Johnson, contending that he had failed "to supply strong and dynamic leadership" for the bill.

He said this, and the failure to muster enough votes for closure, indicates "the climate of racism prevailing in this country at this time."

The bill died for lack of votes to cut off a filibuster

Dr. King is Critical

"It surely heralds darker days for this social era of discontent," said the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., of Atlanta.

"The executioners of the 1966 civil rights bill have given valuable assistance to those forces in the Negro communities who counsel violence.

"Although I will continue to preach with all my might the moral rightness of nonviolence, my words now are bound to fall on more deaf ears."

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Associa-

9/20/66 NYT

Civil rights leaders denounced yesterday the Senate's failure to pass the 1966 civil rights bill as a surrender to wrong, a blow to American Negroes and an incitement to racial turmoil.

It "can only serve to worsen an already serious racial crisis," said Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League.

"It is tragic that Congress has not responded favorably to this desperately needed civil rights bill," Mr. Young said.

Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said the outcome showed a "trend of the Congress as well as the Administration to sell black Americans down the river of political expediency."

He criticized President Johnson, contending that he had failed "to supply strong and dynamic leadership" for the bill.

He said this, and the failure to muster enough votes for closure, indicates "the climate of racism prevailing in this country at this time."

The bill died for lack of votes to cut off a filibuster

Dr. King is Critical

"It surely heralds darker days for this social era of discontent," said the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., of Atlanta.

"The executioners of the 1966 civil rights bill have given valuable assistance to those forces in the Negro communities who counsel violence.

"Although I will continue to preach with all my might the moral rightness of nonviolence, my words now are bound to fall on more deaf ears."

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, Republican of Illinois, "led the axmen who killed" the bill, but had help from others in both parties.

"The problem is not going away," he said. "The Negro is not going away.

"The Government of the United States is going to have to decide either to enact an open housing policy or to endorse by its inaction the unconscionable deprivation and the explosive threat of the racial slums."

"Ducking quorums, staging filibusters and intoning opinions on constitutionality will not lay the Ghost of the grievous wrongs."

The Rev. Samuel B. Williams, president of the Atlanta chapter of the N.A.A.C.P., said open housing "is basic to the whole question of human rights," but the Senate has dodged responsibility on the issue, he said.

Should 'Lead the Nation'

He said legislators should "lead the nation before some violent outburst would disgrace us and then we would be forced to take action which in good conscience we already should have done," and added:

"Right cannot capitulate to wrong but I think the United States has capitulated. I had hoped that Mr. Dirksen would have gone to the mourners bench and become converted but this has not happened."

Dr. King also criticized Mr. Dirksen, noting that the Senator fought for civil rights legislation in 1964 and 1965, but the new act "would have affected him in his own Northern backyard and this was indeed too close to home."

"More succinctly, Senator Dirksen has engaged in sheer hypocrisy," he said.

Besides the housing section, he said, Mr. Dirksen and his colleagues also killed the section that would bar discrimination on Federal and state juries.

"This will serve to deepen the frustrations and despair of Southern Negroes who over the years have been victimized by whites," Dr. King said.

Mr. Wilkins said the Government still must decide "whether it will remove racialism from jury selection and protect those who, as in Grenada, Miss., seek to exercise their citizenship rights."

"We will be back in this or another Congress," Mr. Wilkins said, "because the issues will still be there, although some of the men may not."

He obviously referred to the coming Congressional elections.

LEGISLATION

Leadership Conference on Civil Rights

September 21, 1966

ATTACHMENT NO. 1

HOW THE SENATE VOTED ON CIVIL RIGHTS CLOTURE AND MINIMUM WAGE

Minimum Wage

Rollcall Vote in Senate On Minimum Wage Bill

The Senate on Sept. 14 approved the conference report on minimum wage improvements, thus clearing the bill for the President's signature.

The AFL-CIO strongly supported the bill and urged all Senators to vote to approve the conference report. The vote for approval was 55-38.

FOR APPROVAL

Democrats 45

Anderson (N.M.)	Hart (Mich)	Morse (Oreg.)
Bass (Tenn.)	Hartke (Ind.)	Moss (Utah)
Bayh (Ind.)	Inouye (Hawaii)	Muskie (Maine)
Bible (Nev.)	Jackson (Wash.)	Nelson (Wis.)
Brewster (Md.)	Kennedy (Mass.)	Neuberger (Oreg.)
Burdick (N.D.)	Kennedy (N.Y.)	Pastore (R.I.)
Byrd (W. Va.)	Long (Mo.)	Pell (R.I.)
Cannon (Nev.)	Mansfield (Mont.)	Proxmire (Wis.)
Church (Idaho)	McCarthy (Minn.)	Randolph (W. Va.)
Clark (Pa.)	McGovern (S.D.)	Ribicoff (Conn.)
Dodd (Conn.)	McIntyre (N.H.)	Symington (Mo.)
Douglas (Ill.)	Metcalf (Mont.)	Tydings (Md.)
Gore (Tenn.)	Mondale (Minn.)	Williams (N.J.)
Gruening (Alaska)	Monroney (Okla.)	Yarborough (Tex.)
Harris (Okla.)	Montoya (N.M.)	Young (Ohio)

Republicans 10

Boggs (Del.)	Fong (Hawaii)	Kuchel (Calif.)
Case (N.J.)	Griffin (Mich.)	Saltonstall (Mass.)
Cooper (Ky.)	Javits (N.Y.)	Scott (Pa.)
		Smith (Maine)

AGAINST APPROVAL

Republicans 23

Aiken (Vt.)	Fannin (Ariz.)	Pearson (Kans.)
Allott (Colo.)	Hickenlooper (Iowa)	Prouty (Vt.)
Bennett (Utah)	Hruska (Neb.)	Simpson (Wyo.)
Carlson (Kans.)	Jordan (Idaho)	Thurmond (S.C.)
Cotton (N.H.)	Miller (Iowa)	Tower (Tex.)
Curtis (Neb.)	Morton (Ky.)	Williams (Del.)
Dirksen (Ill.)	Mundt (S.D.)	Young (N.D.)
Dominick (Colo.)	Murphy (Calif.)

Democrats 15

Byrd (Va.)	Hill (Ala.)	Robertson (Va.)
Eastland (Miss.)	Holland (Fla.)	Smathers (Fla.)
Ellender (La.)	Jordan (N.C.)	Sparkman (Ala.)
Ervin (N.C.)	Lausche (Ohio)	Stennis (Miss.)
Fulbright (Ark.)	McClellan (Ark.)	Talmadge (Ga.)

Paired For: McGee (D-Wyo.), Magnuson (D-Wash.)
Paired Against: Russell, (D-Ga.), Russell (D-S.C.)
Announced For: Bartlett (D-Alaska), Long (D-La.)
Absent and Not Announced: Hayden (D-Ariz.)

First Cloture Vote

Sept. 14

How Senate Voted On Applying Cloture

Associated Press

Following is the vote by which supporters failed yesterday to muster the two-thirds majority required to apply the cloture rule to limit debate on the Civil Rights Bill.

FOR CLOTURE: 54

Democrats for: 42

Anderson (N.M.)	McGovern (S.D.)
Bass (Tenn.)	McIntyre (N.H.)
Bayh (Ind.)	Metcalf (Mont.)
Brewster (Md.)	Mondale (Minn.)
Burdick (S.D.)	Monroney (Okla.)
Church (Idaho)	Montoya (N.M.)
Clark (Pa.)	Morse (Ore.)
Dodd (Conn.)	Moss (Utah)
Douglas (Ill.)	Muskie (Maine)
Gore (Tenn.)	Nelson (Wis.)
Gruening (Alaska)	Neuberger (Ore.)
Harris (Okla.)	Pastore (R.I.)
Hart (Mich.)	Pell (R.I.)
Hartke (Ind.)	Proxmire (Wis.)
Inouye (Hawaii)	Randolph (W.Va.)
Jackson (Wash.)	Ribicoff (Conn.)
Kennedy (Mass.)	Symington (Mo.)
Kennedy (N.Y.)	Tydings (Md.)
Long (Mo.)	Williams (N.J.)
Mansfield (Mont.)	Yarborough (Tex.)
McCarthy (Minn.)	Young (Ohio)

Republicans for: 12

Aiken (Vt.)	Griffin (Mich.)
Allott (Colo.)	Javitts (N.Y.)
Boggs (Del.)	Kuchel (Calif.)
Case (N.J.)	Saltonstall (Mass.)
Dominick (Colo.)	Scott (Pa.)
Fong (Hawaii)	Smith (Maine)

AGAINST CLOTURE :42

Democrats Against: 21

Bible (Nev.)	Lausche (Ohio)
Byrd (Va.)	Long (La.)
Byrd (W.Va.)	McClellan (Ark.)
Cannon (Nev.)	Robertson (Va.)
Eastland (Miss.)	Russell (S.C.)
Ellender (La.)	Russell (Ga.)
Ervin (N.C.)	Smathers (Fla.)
Fulbright (Ark.)	Sparkman (Ala.)
Hill (Ala.)	Stennis (Miss.)
Holland (Fla.)	Talmadge (Ga.)
Jordan (N.C.)

Republicans Against: 21

Bennett (Utah)	Miller (Iowa)
Carlson (Kan.)	Morton (Ky.)
Cooper (Ky.)	Mundt (S.D.)
Cotton (N.H.)	Murphy (Calif.)
Curtis (Neb.)	Pearson (Kan.)
Dirksen (Ill.)	Prouty (Vt.)
Fannin (Ariz.)	Simpson (Wyo.)
Hickenlooper (Iowa)	Thurmond (S.C.)
Hruska ((Neb.)	Tower (Tex.)
Jordan (Idaho)	Williams (Del.)
	Young (N.D.)

Second Cloture Vote

Sept. 19

Roll-Call Vote in Senate On Rights Bill Closure

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Following is the roll-call vote by which supporters failed today to muster the necessary two-thirds majority to invoke closure to limit debate and force Senate action on the House-passed civil rights bill.

FOR CLOSURE—52

Democrats—42

Bartlett (Alaska)	McGovern (S. D.)
Bass (Tenn.)	McIntyre (N. H.)
Bayh (Ind.)	Metcalf (Mont.)
Brewster (Md.)	Mondale (Minn.)
Burdick (N.D.)	Monroe (Okla.)
Church (Idaho)	Montoya (N. M.)
Clark (Pa.)	Morse (Ore.)
Dodd (Conn.)	Moss (Utah)
Douglas (Ill.)	Muskie (Me.)
Gore (Tenn.)	Nelson (Wis.)
Gruening (Alaska)	Neuberger (Ore.)
Hart (Mich.)	Pastore (R. I.)
Hartke (Ind.)	Pell (R. I.)
Inouye (Hawaii)	Proxmire (Wis.)
Jackson (Wash.)	Randolph (W. Va.)
Kennedy (Mass.)	Ribicoff (Conn.)
Kennedy (N. Y.)	Symington (Mo.)
Long (Mo.)	Tydings (Md.)
Mansfield (Mont.)	Williams (N. J.)
McCarthy (Minn.)	Yarborough (Tex.)
McGee (Wyo.)	Young (Ohio)

Republicans—10

Aiken (Vt.)	Javits (N. Y.)
Boggs (Del.)	Kuchel (Calif.)
Case (N. J.)	Saltonstall (Mass.)
Fong (Hawaii)	Scott (Pa.)
Griffin (Mich.)	Smith (Me.)

AGAINST CLOSURE—41

Democrats—21

Bible (Nev.)	Lausche (Ohio)
Byrd (Va.)	Long (La.)
Byrd (W. Va.)	McClellan (Ark)
Cannon (Nev.)	Robertson (Va.)
Eastland (Miss.)	Russell (S. C.)
Ellender (La.)	Russell (Ga.)
Ervin (N. C.)	Smathers (Fla.)
Fulbright (Ark.)	Sparkman (Ala.)
Hill (Ala.)	Stennis (Miss.)
Holland (Fla.)	Talmadge (Ga.)
Jordan (N. C.)

Republicans—20

Bennett (Utah)	Morton (Ky.)
Carlson (Kan.)	Mundt (S. D.)
Cotton (N. H.)	Murphy (Calif.)
Curtis (Neb.)	Pearson (Kan.)
Dirksen (Ill.)	Prouty (Vt.)
Fannin (Ariz.)	Simpson (Wyo.)
Hickenlooper (Iowa)	Thurmond (S. C.)
Hruska (Neb.)	Tower (Tex.)
Jordan (Idaho)	Williams (Del.)
Miller (Iowa)	Young (N. D.)

Not voting, but announced as paired: Harris (D-Okla.) and Magnuson (D-Wash.) for, and Hayden (D-Ariz.) against; Allott (R-Colo.) and Dominick (R-Colo.) for, and Cooper (R-Ky.) against. (Pairs denote Senators' positions when one or more of them are absent. In this case, two had to be paired against one because of the two-thirds

Not voting or paired, but announced as favoring closure: Anderson (D-N. M.).

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ROY WILKINS, Chairman
ARNOLD ARONSON, Secretary
JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR., Counsel
CLARENCE M. MITCHELL, Legislative Chairman
MARVIN CAPLAN, Director Washington Office
J. FRANCIS POHLHAUS, Special Consultant

2027 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036 phone 234-4722 • New York address: 20 West 40th St. New York 18, phone BRyant 9-1400

MEMO: No. 93
Sept.22, 1966

TO: Cooperating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL STOPPED IN SENATE - BUT MINIMUM WAGE WINS APPROVAL

In the short space of an hour, the Senate last week, in two separate acts, dashed hopes for civil rights legislation this year and raised the hope of economic betterment for millions of Americans.

The occasion was two consecutive votes on the evening of September 14, the first on the adoption of the conference report on minimum wage, the second an attempt to break the filibuster and take up the Civil Rights Act of 1966. The minimum wage report was readily adopted. But the vote on cloture failed. And it failed again five days later. We attach the votes on cloture and minimum wage to this MEMO to show what is readily evident, that the same Senators who support civil rights tend also to support programs for economic and social advancement.

A Grave Defeat

The failure to impose cloture was grievous. It demonstrated once again the tragic inability of the United States Senate to surmount its own rules and let a majority express its will. Enough votes for final passage of the Act were clearly there. But the hope of passage was strangled by the requirement of Rule 22 that two-thirds of those present and voting must agree to limit debate. On September 14, cloture failed by a vote of 54 to 42; on September 19, by a vote of 52 to 41. Faced with the prospect of unlimited debate and a heavy calendar of legislation to dispose of by October 15, its target quitting date, the Senate gave up. In a speech immediately following the second unsuccessful cloture attempt, majority leader Mike Mansfield declared that "Whatever blame there is attaches to us all." While that is true to some extent, the unmistakeable truth is that the one person most responsible is Senator Everett M. Dirksen, the minority leader, who used all of his influence to defeat the bill.

When cloture was needed to break a civil rights filibuster in the two previous years, Senator Dirksen was able to marshal enough votes to supply a margin of victory. This time he brushed aside all efforts at accommodation and the legislation failed.

A Minimum Wage Victory

In spite of Senator Dirksen's bitter opposition, the Senate did approve the conference report on changes in federal minimum wage standards. The law will raise the minimum wage to $1.60 an hour by 1968 for workers already covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act and extend coverage to about 8 million new workers including some 390,000 farm workers. This must be counted a victory for the labor, civil rights and religious forces that worked for passage of the law.

It should be noted that the minimum wage report was approved by a vote of 55-to-38 and if Senator Dirksen had chosen to filibuster that, he could have blocked its passage, too.

Leadership Conference Urges Fight to Continue

Like Senator Mansfield, the Leadership Conference was also ready with a statement following the cloture vote. In our reaction to what happened we said:

"The Senate's failure today to vote cloture compels those of us who recognize the crucial importance of the Civil Rights Act of 1966 to the country's welfare to consider other ways of giving Congress a chance to vote on this bill.

"Although there is no question that Senator Dirksen's intransigence and subtle appeals to race prejudice have stopped the bill thus far, little is to be gained from recrimination. We believe the fight for this legislation should go on between now and the November elections and that, if necessary, the President should call Congress back after election in order to keep the issue alive and give the Senate another opportunity to vote.

"The disgraceful performance of delay and equivocation in the Senate demands that the first order of business next year should be a change in Rule 22, the cloture rule, so that a majority, rather than two-thirds, shall be enough to end a filibuster.

"The cloture votes last week and today show what we have always known: that a majority of the Senate is ready to join a majority of the House and pass the Civil Rights Act of 1966. That majority must not be thwarted. The present impasse will only cause millions of Americans to lose faith in the legislative process as the way of obtaining their constitutional rights."

THE LAST REMAINING CIVIL RIGHTS ISSUE: HOME RULE FOR D.C.

Congress still has a chance in these final weeks to make a contribution to civil rights. It can vote Home Rule for the District of Columbia and extend the franchise to nearly one million residents of the nation's capital.

Sometime in the next week or so, Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon will offer, as a rider to the higher education bill, a proposal for a mayor-city council form of government, similar to the plan the Senate approved earlier this session only to have it stopped in the House.

Senator Morse's proposal will not block the higher education bill. And if it succeeds, it will give Washingtonians the same right to choose their representatives that the rest of the country enjoys.

Please Write Now

Your organization can help the District win its freedom by having your members write or wire their Senators at once, urging them to vote for the Morse Home Rule Rider.

CONGRESS FACING 2 TESTS ON RIGHTS AS BILLS PILE UP

LEGISLATION

Key to Adjournment Tied to Votes on D.C. Home Rule and Model Cities Plan

10/10/66

By MARJORIE HUNTER

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—The racial issue is likely to flare anew as Congress struggles this week to break up a huge logjam of pending legislation.

The key to adjournment is likely to rest on the outcome of two tests, both involving measures caught up in the growing Congressional unrest over civil rights.

The first test comes tomorrow when the Senate decides whether to go through with a last-ditch effort of providing home rule for the District of Columbia, long the goal of civil rights leaders.

The second test comes later this week when the House acts on President Johnson's top-priority blueprint for upgrading city slums.

This demonstration cities bill, already passed by the Senate, faces real trouble in the House. Some of its backers say gloomily that the Administration does not have the votes to save it.

Ally for Southeners

Lined up in opposition are two formidable blocs, fiscal conservatives seeking to knock out all new domestic programs and segregationists who fear that the new program might speed up integration.

Southerners have found a vocal ally in Representative Paul A. Fino, Republican of the Bronx, who has charged repeatedly in recent weeks that the metropolitan planning section of the demonstration cities bill could be used to force busing of pupils to change racial balances in schools.

The Congressional mood of late has reflected a growing exasperation with racial riots and cries of "black power." Both the Senate and House have recently chipped away in moves curbing school and hospital desegregation guidelines.

Closure Petition

The Senate showdown tomorrow on home rule for the District of Columbia is certain to give some indication of whether there has been a drastic shift in sentiment on racial matters.

The Senate has passed home rule bills six times, the last time just a year ago by a vote of 63 to 29. The House turned down the Senate version last year and passed a measure that was not acceptable to either the Administration or civil rights leaders. It never became law.

Last week, seeking to revive home rule for the predominantly Negro district, Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat, of Oregon, moved to attach a home rule rider to the Administration's higher education bill.

Continued on Page 22, Column 1

CONGRESS FACING 2 TESTS ON RIGHTS

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

With Southerners poised to filibuster the home rule rider, Senate leaders quickly moved to cut off debate by filing a closure petition.

This vote to choke off debate will be taken tomorrow afternoon. To pass it would require a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

If the Senate refuses to impose closure, Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, the majority leader, has promised to move to table the home rule rider, thus killing the proposal for this session.

If, however, the Senate voted to choke off debate and accepted the home rule rider to the House-passed higher education bill, the matter would go to conference.

The Morse maneuver is designed to by-pass the House District Committee, which is hostile to home rule. Representing the House at conference would be home rule sympathizers from the House Education and Labor Committee, where the higher education bill originated.

In addition to the issuer of home rule and demonstration cities, Congress could become bogged down in numerous other issues in these waning days of the session.

House Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts has predicted adjournment on Oct. 22. Senator Mansfield has said that adjournment might come Oct. 20, but he has not ruled out the possibility that Congress might have to return after the elections on Nov. 8.

"By next Saturday, I think we'll have some idea of whether we can finish up the next week," the Senator said today.

LEGISLATION

Bills on Cities, Poverty Aid Clear Senate

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate passage of the demonstration cities and $1.75 billon war on poverty measures, coupled with conferees' agreement on two major education bills, pushed Congress Tuesday toward adjournment this week.

Another development was the apparent postponement of action this session on legislation to raise Social Security benefits. Also jettisoned were Sen. Mike Mansfield's resolution calling for a U.S. troop reduction in Europe and various anti-riot proposals.

But a threat to easy adjournment arose when the House wrote into its final money bill a prohibition against using Export - Import Bank funds for sales to any Communist nations. An identical measure delayed the 1963 adjournment drive.

A TOP ITEM

The demonstration cities bill, a top item on President Lyndon B. Johnson's legislative agenda, was approved by the Senate, 38 to 22. The bill, aimed at converting riot-torn ghettos into model urban centers, went to the House.

The Senate, by voice vote, also passed and sent to the House a compromise version of the $1.75 billion authorization for the war on poverty.

The agreement by Senate-House negotiators on the two education measures was a giant step toward sending the lawmakers home, possibly as early as Thursday and no later than Saturday.

OKAY SCHOOL AID

They first approved a two-year, $6.1 billion aid measure for elementary and secondary schools, and later agreed on a $4 billion college aid bill for construction of classrooms, libraries and other facilities.

The two compromise education bills still have to clear both the House and Senate. Other measures requiring action were Johnson's anti-inflation tax bill and labor-welfare appropriations.

MOVE SWIFTLY

Moving swiftly on voice votes, the Senate also approved and sent to the White House Tuesday bills providing for a $145 million one-year extension of public health services aid, a $27.9 million Indiana Dunes national lakeshore park and a permanent disaster relief program.

The Social Security proposals, sponsored by both Republicans and Democrats to raise benefits 8 to 10 per cent on Jan. 1, was one of several measures that went into limbo in the drive for adjournment.

LEGISLATION

JAVITS DEFEATED IN HOUSING FIGHT

Yields in Bid for Time Limit on Rights Bill Discussion

By JOHN HERBERS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 3 — Senator Jacob K. Javits yielded to overwhelming opposition today and gave up his effort to place a time limit on committee consideration of the Administration's civil rights bill.

In announcing his decision on the Senate floor, the New York Republican said President Johnson had made a "great mistake" by including open housing legislation in the bill when almost the same result could have been achieved by executive order.

"It must be made crystal clear," Senator Javits said, "that the Administration is inviting a bitter civil rights fight which could have been avoided if it had open extend antidiscrimination to 80 per cent of housing."

Having chosen the legislative [illegible] the Administration "will have to deliver" or be subject to charges of insincerity.

Everett McKinley Dirksen, the Senate minority leader, has joined Southern Democrats in branding the housing legislation unconstitutional. In the past, the Illinois Republican has supported the Administration in achieving passage of important civil rights measures.

Senator Javits said he could not agree with Senator Dirksen's contention that the sale and rental of housing had no connection with the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution.

"Housing is an interstate industry," Mr. Javits said. But he added that the constitutional question could have been avoided had the Administration extended an executive order issued by President Kennedy in 1962.

That order applies only to housing built under Government guaranteed loans. Civil rights groups have for some time asked that it be extended to housing financed by conventional loans. The Administration has said this would raise serious legal problems and would not be so effective as a law covering the sale or rental of all housing.

Hearings Open Today

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of a Judiciary subcommittee that will consider the bill, indicated that he would be in no hurry to report it out. In the absence of the time limit sought by Senator Javits, the Senate is expected to await House action and then, if necessary, bypass the Judiciary Committee.

Senator Mike Mansfield, the majority leader, who had joined Mr. Dirksen in opposing the time limit, said that when a bill was received from the House "all parliamentary options will be held open."

The House Judiciary Committee headed by Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, will open hearings on the bill tomorrow. Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach is scheduled to be the first witness.

In addition to the housing provision, the Civil Rights Act of 1966 would ban racial discrimination on state and Federal juries, strengthen Federal laws against intimidating or harming persons engaged in the exercise of their constitutional rights and permit the Attorney General to file lawsuits against school segregation without having received a complaint.

These provisions are appliable primarily in the South and are expected to win approval in both houses. But today's preliminary debate in the Senate pointed up the extreme difficulty facing the section on housing.

Senator Ervin reviewed his unswerving opposition to civil rights legislation and added:

"My sadness is not quite as deep this time because we now have a civil rights bill that will have an effect somewhere except on poor sinful Southerners. It will be interesting to see how others act when their ox is being gored."

LEGISLATION

Dixie Congressmen Ignore Rights Bill for Time Being

By REMER TYSON
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Southern members of the House of Representatives have decided to ignore the 1966 Civil Rights Bill for the time being, hoping it will go away.

The stategy, formulated at a meeting of congressmen from the South, is the reason behind the absence of southern protest during hearings on the bill before a House Jusdiciary Subcommittee.

Southern Congressmen in the past have flocked to the hearings to voice vigorous opposition to civil rights legislation.

Only one southern lawmaker testified against this year's bill submitted to Congress by President Lyndon B. Johnson. He did so with approval of the others.

Rep. Howard W. Smith D-Va., chairman of the Rules Committee, served as leader of the southern meeting to plan stategy against the civil rights bill, congressmen reported.

Southern congressmen usually do not form into a tightly knit group to oppose a civil rights bill since a filibuster is not allowed in the House.

However, reports are that the southern group in the House this year has taken on a resemblance to the Senate block — headed by Sen. Richard B. Russell—on civil rights legislation.

Congressmen, who admitted there was a southern meeting, did not say how many of the 115 lawmakers from 11 states in the South attended, but a consensus was reached on ignoring the bill during the subcommittee hearing.

Some southern congressmen, who said they did not attend the meeting, reported a consensus was reached not to oppose the bill at the hearing.

The idea was to prevent southern opposition from becoming the dominant force against this year's bill.

The congressmen feared if they raised the usual cry against the bill, proponents might use them as a "whipping boy" to build support for the legislation.

The southerners also hope that some other groups, particularly in the housing field, would put up strong opposition to the proposed legislation on open occupancy in housing, jury selection, civil rights crimes, and school desegregation.

Some leaders in the housing business did oppose the bill at the hearings, but others supported the open occupancy section.

The southerners, holding their criticism of the bill all through the subcommittee hearing this week, hope that the legislation can be bottled in the House Judiciary Committee.

STATEMENT OF THE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE SUPPORTING THE ANTI-POVERTY BILL AND THE EMERGENCY EMPLOYMENT ACT

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights gives its wholehearted endorsement to S.2388, the Economic Opportunity Act, as reported by the Senate Labor Committee, and particular endorsement to the Clark-Javits amendment establishing the Emergency Employment Act of 1967.

These proposals, together, would bring us significantly closer to the goal of the Conference, "an integrated, democratic, plural society in which every individual is accorded equal rights, equal opportunities and equal justice..." In our statement of purpose we recognize that civil rights cannot be considered in any narrow sense but must also mean "the realization of social and economic conditions in which alone the fulfillment of these rights is possible." The proposals that will be before the Senate shortly will help create the necessary conditions.

One of the most pressing concerns of our urban and rural poor is decent jobs. Without them, the rights that the Leadership Conference has fought to advance for nearly two decades can be virtually meaningless. President John F. Kennedy put it vividly when he said, "No one gains by being admitted to a lunch counter if he has no money to spend...No one thinks much of the right to own a good home and to sleep in a good hotel or go to a theater if he has no money and no work..."

In his Poverty Message to Congress this year, President Johnson observed that while many Americans have found employment during the three years of the War on Poverty, "economic policy and unprecedented prosperity have not reached thousands of men and women who live in the nation's slums."

The Clark-Javits Emergency Employment Act with its immediate promise of 200,000 new jobs the first year and 300,000 jobs the year after that, would begin to move thousands of the unemployed and unskilled poor into a position where they can become functioning members of American society, able to enjoy their constitutional rights.

The battle cry of the Civil Rights Movement in the March on Washington, August 28, 1963, was "Jobs and Freedom." The 112 national civil rights, religious, labor and civic organizations in the Conference believe we can help make that cry a reality by urging all members of Congress to vote for the Economic Opportunity Act in the form in which it is now before the Senate of the United States.

xxxxxxxx adopted by Washington Representatives

September 15, 1967

agency file

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ROY WILKINS, Chairman
ARNOLD ARONSON, Secretary
JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR., Counsel
CLARENCE M. MITCHELL, Legislative Chairman
MARVIN CAPLAN, Director Washington Office
J. FRANCIS POHLHAUS, Special Consultant
YVONNE PRICE, Executive Assistant

2027 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 phone 667-1780 • New York address: 20 West 40th St., New York 10018, phone BRyant 9-1400

AN EMERGENCY NOTE

MEMO NO. 18-67
September 22, 1967

TO: Participating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

MAIL CAN HELP PASS A GOOD ANTI-POVERTY BILL

The Senate may already be debating the Anti-Poverty Bill (S.2388) as you read this MEMO. However, actual voting on its various sections is not scheduled to start until at least September 26th, and may continue for several days.

That gives us some time in which to act.

We urge all of our organizations and individual supporters to redouble their efforts. Let Senators hear from you. This is another moment in which a flood of messages can make the difference between half-hearted legislation and a meaningful bill.

What To Say

In all messages, we suggest Senators should be urged to do three things:

1. Support the Clark-Javits Emergency Employment Act - Title II of S.2388. As we reported last week, this would create emergency public service jobs for the hardcore unemployed - 200,000 the first year; 300,000 the second. It would be a significant step toward finding work for those who need it most.

2. Fund the anti-poverty program at $2.26 billion, the figure approved by the Senate Labor Committee. Attempts to cut back on this should be resisted. In spite of all the talk of a tax increase and the need to cut Federal expenditures, the War on Poverty is certainly not the place to start economizing.

3. Keep OEO, the Office of Economic Opportunity, as the central antipoverty agency. S.2388 does this. Attempts at a "spin-off" the transfer of OEO functions to other agencies, should be voted down.

* * *

Please Remember: If mail, resolutions, statements are to have any effect they must be sent at once. Washington representatives to the Conference, at an emergency meeting on September 15, passed the statement we enclose with this MEMO. You are welcome to use it any way you wish, circulating it to your members, adding your own personal endorsement and sending it to your Senators, or getting local publicity for it. But Please Act Today.

"Cooperation in the Common Cause of Civil Rights for All"

Enclosure

LITIGATION (new file?)

Riot Act Doesn't Inhibit, State Replies

AC 10/19/66

Briefs on file in federal court here Tuesday declare that "Georgia's riot act does not inhibit free expression" and "riot is the antithesis of free expression."

Georgia Atty. Gen. Arthur Bolton filed the briefs in support of arguments made at a recent three-day federal hearing at which Stokely Carmichael and other officials of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) sought to have the state enjoined from prosecuting Carmichael in connection with a Sept. 6 riot here.

Bolton's brief contends that to suggest that Carmichael will "suffer a substantial loss or impairment of freedom by virtue of being charged with certain violent acts, i.e. riot, is to make a mockery of what is considered the right of free speech."

"Under no stretch of the imagination can . . . (the state) see how a violent act can be construed in any manner as free expression," the brief adds.

"It can be said with absolute certainty that there was, in fact, a violent disturbance in Atlanta on Sept. 6, 1966, and it can also be said with absolute certainty that those under indictment for riot were, in fact, at the scene of the riot and contributed to this disorder, for even that much was established by a viewing of the films" shown at the hearing.

If they did not participate in the riot, state trials would give them ample opportunity to prove that, Bolton argued.

Balton contends that no action or harassment by the city or state has been shown, and that all action against Carmichael and the others came after the riot and as a direct result of their actions at that time.

There are two causes for federal intervention in a state criminal proceeding according to U.S. Supreme Court decisions written by Justice Byron White: planned prosecutorial misuses of a statute regulating freedom of expression and a vagueness attack on such a statute, Bolton asserted.

LITIGATION

Vote Code Challenged In Court

AC 10/19/66

By BILL SHIPP

The American Civil Liberties Union filed suit in federal district court Tuesday asking that state officials be restrained from enforcing 15 sections of the Georgia Election Code.

The petition charges that the state's election laws deprive write-in voters and illiterates "of their right to cast a ballot in absolute secrecy." It contends the election code is in violation of the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965.

If successful, the suit would allow stickers with candidate's names on them to be placed on

Continued on Page 6, Column 1

**

Part of Vote Code Challenged in Suit

Continued from Page 1

ballots as write-in votes. The code now prohibits this.

The ACLU suit, asking a hearing by a panel of three federal judges, was filed shortly after a 12-man committee from the Write-In Arnall campaign headquarters appeared at Secretary of State Ben Fortson's office to ask for "clarification" of the Georgia Election Code.

After the meeting with Fortson, Joseph Jacobs, an attorney for the write-in group, said he was contemplating legal action against enforcement of parts of the election code. In a prepared statement, Jacobs and nine other attorneys charged that "the new election provisions of Georgia are so confusing, contradictory and vague, that it is impossible to determine how voters desiring to write-in the name of Ellis Arnall may lawfully and legally do so."

There apparently was no connection between the write-in group's activities and the ACLU suit.

The court action was brought on behalf of the Rev. John Morris of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, Mrs. Florence Robin, director of the Georgia ACLU, and two other persons who "are unable to spell the names" of possible write-in candidates.

The petition names as defendants Fortson and members of the Georgia Election Board.

The suit contends that to require a voter to write out the name of a write-in candidate is, in effect, a voter literacy test and is therefore illegal.

It also charges that the Georgia law which allows a literate person to aid an illiterate person in voting is unlawful in that it deprives the illiterate of his right to cast a ballot in "absolute secrecy."

It further contends:

"These voters who desire to cast their ballots for a person other than the nominees of a political party must request material necessary thereof, thereby depriving them of their right to cast a ballot in absolute secrecy . . .

"The requirement that stickers or other devices not be utilized in casting write-in ballots constitutes a literacy test in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 . . .

"The failure to provide each and every voter at the polls with envelopes or other paraphernalia and the practice of placing write-in ballots in a box separate and apart from that in which other ballots are placed . . . deprives those persons desiring to cast a write-in ballot of their equal rights to vote" in secrecy.

The suit was filed by Morris Brown, head of the Georgia ACLU lawyers' committee, and Charles Morgan Jr., Southern regional director of the ACLU.

LOUISIANA AJ 3/9/66

New Orleans Teachers Polish Plans for Walkout

NEW ORLEANS, March 9 (AP)—In its first Deep South test of strength, the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, polished final plans today for a strike.

The union said the "work stoppage," to start Friday morning, would shut down the New Orleans public school system. School officials disagreed.

Carl W. Dolce, school superintendent, said he doubts if the union has enough teacher support to seriously disrupt the schools and that classrooms would remain open.

The strike call backs demands for a collective bargaining election among the 3,600 teachers in the public schools.

"From all indications, it seems a majority of the teachers will join the work stoppage," said C. H. Hursey, a union national representative.

Local 527 claims 1,400 members, about 80 per cent of them Negro. Hursey said, however, that the union had gathered the signatures of 2,200 teachers on a petition for a bargaining agent election.

Donald Burton, assistant research director for the union, told a news conference Tuesday that, "race is not a significant factor. We seek to improve the lot of all teachers, black and white."

In a summary of teacher complaints, Burton said New Orleans ranks last among the nation's 20 largest cities in teacher salaries, fringe benefits and working conditions.

The New Orleans Schools Board agrees with many of the complaints. It has called a special election for May 3 to add one cent to the three-cent sales tax to raise money for schools.

The board rejected a bid by the city administration for a share in the increased sales tax,

PICKRICK FURNITURE Provides FREE DECORATOR SERVICE

LOUISIANA

McKeithen's Star Rises

4/14/66 WP

Polls Show Louisiana's Popular Governor Could Beat Ellender in Race for Senate

By William Lynch
Special to The Washington Post

Campaign '66

BATON ROUGE, La., April 13 — Gov. John McKeithen of Louisiana is a potent threat to end Sen. Allen J. Ellender's 29-year Senate career this fall.

The popular Governor repeatedly has disavowed any plans to run against Ellender, despite polls that show he would win in a head-to-head clash with the 75-year-old Senator.

Two major factors hold McKeithen back:

1. He wants to be Governor again, provided the people approve a constitutional amendment at the general election in November to permit Governors to succeed themselves for a second term.

2. He does not want to be the State's junior Senator playing second fiddle to Sen. Russell B. Long.

McKeithen's political ambitions stretch all the way to the vice presidency. He has nurtured a friendship with Vice President Hubert Humphrey and is eyeing the 1972 nominations.

If he can hold onto the Governor's office for a second term, McKeithen, who became Governor in 1964, would just be going out of office in 1972. The Louisiana mansion would provide him a base of power up to that point.

As junior Senator from Louisiana, McKeithen would have his base of support diminished considerably. And it is known that Sen. Long also has ambitons for higher office.

Camille Gravel, former Democratic national committeeman from Louisiana, an Alexandria, La., attorney, now is Ellender's chief opponent. Although he has not formally announced, Gravel is handing out cards proclaiming his candidacy in the Democratic primaries this summer.

Gravel is not expected to topple Ellender, even though he does expect to win a heavy Negro and labor vote.

There are some reports that Gravel is a stand-in for McKeithen, and that his candidacy is aimed at keeping Ellender off balance until the Governor makes his move.

Although polls show McKeithen's conduct of his office winning 70 per cent support, his two-term proposal is largely untested.

The Louisiana Legislature opens its regular 60-day session on May 9. Any major setback for the Governor could also bring down his amendment.

McKeithen came to power on a shelf of support from the remnants of the Huey Long-Earl Long State power structure.

Ellender, a former leader for Huey Long in the Legislature, was elected to the Senate in 1936 and has built a strong following among conservatives for his opposition to foreign aid and liberal legislation.

VOTE IN LOUISIANA INVOKES THE PAST

Kennedy and Huey Long Are Factors in Senate Bids

By ROY REED
Special to The New York Times

BATON ROUGE, La., April 24 — John F. Kennedy and Huey P. Long are among the major influences in this year's Senate race in Louisiana.

One advantage of Senator Allen J. Ellender, 75 years old, as he seeks a sixth term is his reputation among the voters as one of the original "Long Men."

In addition to being a personal friend of Mr. Long, Mr. Ellender was his legislative floor leader and Speaker of the State House of Representatives. He was presiding over a House session when Senator Long was assassinated in a statehouse corridor Sept. 8, 1935.

Challenging Senator Ellender in the Democratic primary on Aug. 13 is Camille Gravel, 50, of Alexandria, a lawyer and former Democratic national committeeman.

Mr. Gravel was a friend of President Kennedy. The friendship hurt Mr. Gravel politically while President Kennedy was alive and promoting civil rights for Negroes. But that has changed.

A poll taken this spring by John F. Kraft, Inc., of New York, showed that 69 per cent of the white voters of Louisiana look back with favor at Mr. Kennedy.

Attitude on Johnson

The same poll showed that 41 per cent like President Johnson. The voters' comments indicated that they approved of Mr. Johnson's Vietnam policy but disliked his stand on civil rights.

Mr. Gravel has freely identified himself with Mr. Kennedy in his campaign but as said nothing about Mr. Johnson.

No poll is necessary to determine how Louisianians feel about Huey Long. He is considered a martyr. Even though 67 per cent of the state's registered voters today are 49 year old or younger—meaning they were either unborn or too young to vote when he was alive—Mr. Long is still a force in the state's politics.

Mr. Gravel was too young to have been one of his cronies, but he still can refer to himself as a "Long Man." He was a friend of Huey's younger brother, Earl K. Long, whom many consider to have been the political superior of the two.

Mr. Gravel and "Uncle Earl" became enemies during the late nineteen-fifties, but Mr. Gravel says they were reconciled before Earl died in 1960.

Liberal Candidate

Mr. Gravel is a liberal, and his campaign will be aimed mainly at working people, Negroes and intellectuals. Among other things, he opposes "right-to-work" laws which forbid union membership being made the basis for holding a job. He also favors Federal aid for cities and education.

Liberalism can be safely espoused in Louisiana only by calling to it as the doctrine of Huey Long for he made "share-the-wealth" progressivism, with emphasis on welfare and public education, politically respectable.

Mr. Gravel has accused Senator Ellender of turning his back on the principles of Huey Long.

"Ellender has become the tool and the pawn of the ultraconservative political interests," Mr. Gravel told 200 labor leaders in New Orleans on Thursday night.

But although Huey Long's memory is important, time has changed some things in this state.

The top political figure in Louisiana this year is not named Long, for the first time since 1928. It is Gov. John J. McKeithen.

The Kraft poll showed that 86 per cent of the white voters liked Mr. McKeithen while 68 per cent liked Senator Russell Long, Huey's son.

Urban Shift in Politics

Both Huey and Earl used to run against the city of New Orleans, as many Southern politicians habitually run against the Negro. That has changed as the urban populations have increased.

Governor McKeithen spends more time and makes more speeches in New Orleans than anywhere else. His popularity, gauged by another recent poll, is higher there than anywhere else in the state.

Mr. Gravel, who is said to be receiving quiet support from the Governor, is following a similar pattern. He expects to do most of his campaigning in the cities.

His main areas of potential strength are in New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Alexandria, Lake Charles and Lafayette—all in southern and central Louisiana, roughly the French-Catholic or Cajun country.

Mr. Gravel is a Catholic and a Cajun. One of his tasks will be to make sure the voters of south Louisiana know that Senator Ellender is a Presbyterian and not, as is widely believed, a Catholic. The Senator's home is at Houma in the heart of the Cajun country.

Another issue confronting Louisiana voters this year is Governor McKeithen's proposed constitutional amendment to permit a Governor to succeed himself in office. The state Constitution now limits a Governor to one four-year term.

Polls show the amendment is favored by a large majority, but some newspaper reporters and politicians believe that may change by November, when the general election will be held.

Among those fighting it are former Gov. Jimmie H. Davis and former United States Representative Gillis Long, both of whom are preparing to run for Governor in 1967.

Mr. Long, a distant cousin of Huey and Earl, recently moved his home from Washington to Alexandria prepare for the race.

Rivals in Louisiana Senatorial Race

Senator Allen J. Ellender

Associated Press

Camille Gravel

LOUISIANA

CORE Official Charged in Murder Try

5/15/66 AC

BOGALUSA, La., May 14 (AP)—Police Saturday arrested three Negro men, including a ranking civil rights official, on charges of attempted murder here.

The men were accused of shoooting into a downtown cafe occupied by three white women.

Charged and held in the Washington Parish jail at nearby Franklin were Fletcher Anderson, 27; Layton Griffin Jr., 27, and Bruce Baines, 24 identified as state field secretary of the Congress of Racial Equality.

According to a statement which police said Baines gave to them the three men entered the Acme Cafe early Friday and placed their orders.

Anderson went outside to get something. The other two heard a commotion rushed out and found Anderson bleeding.

The placed Anderson in their car and Griffin drew his pistol fired twice into the ground and once in the direction of the cafe.

Commissioner of Public Safety Arnold Spiers said the three were charged with the attempted murder of Beulah Crockett and Ruby Lumpkin two waitresses and Patricia Wallace a customer.

The cause of the bleeding was not disclosed. The statement did not explain why the shots were fired toward the cafe.

Spiers said one bullet pierced the wall of the cafe. Judge Jim Warren Richardson set bond at $25,000 each for the men.

LBJ May Be Off Louisiana Ballot

LOUISIANA

AC 6/12/66

By M. GENE MEARNS

BATON ROUGE (UPI)—Unless things change between now and 1968, President Johnson will face Alabama Gov. George Wallace in a Louisiana party primary vote to see which one wears the Democratic label on the 1968 general election ballot for president.

Plenty of things could happen. Johnson could fail to win renomination, Wallace could decide not to run as independent or the Democratic State Central Committee could revise the decision it has made.

The committee, which meets every two years, voted 54-39 to adopt a resolution by Leander Perez, the segregationist political boss of Plaquemine Parish (County). It provides for slates of electors in the 1968 congressional primary for candidates of the national party and for any number of independent candidates up to 10.

THERE was some question as to whether or not any electors for Johnson or Vice President Hubert Humphrey could even get on the November ballot if they were defeated in a primary.

At one point in his address to the delegates, Perez said, "This would effectively control the election and once a man is defeated in a primary there is no way he could get on the ballot."

A number of delegates questioned if this were so, then Republican and independent voters could not vote for or against Johnson in the primary and would have no choice in November either.

At that point in the debate, Perez said all that was necessary was that 1,000 signatures be gotten "and any other slate could be run in the November ballot."

Later, Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr. agreed that 1,000 signatures and the filing of proper papers could put any set of electors on the ballot.

PEREZ was the only one to take the floor in backing his resolution and Sen. J. D. DeBlieux of Baton Rouge was the only one to speak from the rostrum against it.

Perez, a powerful orator, rolled into an eloquent tirade against the federal government.

"Our courts have been stripped of their jurisdiction, the powers have been taken away from our local police and by this we can show we resent what is being done to our people.

"Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing," Perez said, "for Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert Humphrey to come to Louisiana and account for their stewardship, explaining the voting rights act and how they have put FBI agents and secret police in every precinct?"

Associated Press Wirephoto

ND OF REGISTRATION MARCH: Voter registration marchers entering Franklinton, a., after their trek from Bogalusa. The two-day, 22-mile hike was free of incidents.

NEGROES FINISH LOUISIANA MARCH

Rally in Franklinton After Vote Registration Drive

FRANKLINTON, La., July 11 (AP)—Slowed by the sun and miles of marching, 242 Negroes tramped up to the courthouse here today in the climax to a voter registration march that has been termed a publicity stunt by Louisiana's Governor.

The two-day, 22-mile trek from Bogalusa was free of incidents. But it was an ordeal for the marchers—and their police escorts—with the heat in the high 90's.

The marchers disbanded after a rally on the courthouse grounds where the crowds, numbering more than 300 and including five or six whites, heard Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, say:

"Black power is on the march in New York, Chicago, Louisiana and Mississippi. And we won't stop until we get to the Pacific. We will not stop until we can walk straight and tall and free."

Six Negroes Register

Then six Negroes entered Washington Parish's (County) modern brick courthouse and registerd to vote.

The marchers left in cars to vote.

Gov. John J. McKeithen held a news conference, meanwhile, and said that "purposeless marches" such as this one are "as disgusting to Negroes as to whites."

He said A. Z. Young, president of the Bogalusa Voters League, which organized the march, could name no grievance and obviously was trying to prod authorities into mistreating the marchers.

Publicity on tear-gassing or some such mistreatment, he said, could be used by the Negro leaders "so they could continue to raise hell in Bogalusa."

The nearest thing to an incident on the march came last night when the police chased away four young men in a car cruising near the marchers' campsite in a pinetree-wooded roadside park.

"Get out of here right now and don't let us catch you around here any more," officers told the youths, ranging in age from 18 to 22, after confiscating a pistol, billy clubs and chains from their auto.

Another potential incident was averted by Thomas D. Burbank, the state public safety director, who commanded the state police assigned to the march. Mr. Burbank said he did not have authority to prevent the Negroes from camping in a roadside park.

The marchers walked 17 miles down a hot highway from Bogalusa yesterday, accompanied by 16 state troopers and sheriff's deputies on horseback.

They started walking the remaining three miles to the Franklinton city limits at midmorning. Earlier in the day a small group went into Franklinton, the parish seat, and failed in efforts to test cafe and restaurant segregation policies. The group said all the cafes they tried to enter were closed.

The theme of talks by speakers at the courthouse was that the march had put an end to fears of the Negroes in Washington Parish.

It broke up after the Rev. Bernie Davis, a Negro pastor from Bogalusa, prayed:

"Lord, we are tired, we need your help."

8/1/66 NYT

RACE ISSUE DENIED IN BOGALUSA DEATH

LOUISIANA

BOGALUSA, La., July 31 (UPI)—Police Chief Claxton Knight said today that the slaying last night of Clarence Triggs,a Negro, was "definitely not" a racial murder and said he expected an arrest in the case "within 48 hours."

Chief Knight withheld further information on the investigation of the death of Mr. Triggs, a 24-year-old unemployed bricklayer. His body was found yesterday beside a wrecked car. The automobile was registered to a Bogalusa white woman.

But civil rights leaders in this racially tense East Louisiana town criticized what they called a "police blackout" on information of the slaying. Robert Hicks, vice president of the Bogalusa Civic and Voters League, said Negroes would hold night marches this week unless the Triggs slaying was cleared up.

He said Mr. Triggs's widow had not been allowed to identify her husband's body. He said the Voters League had hired an attorney for her.

Lincoln Lynch, associate director of the Congress of Racial Equality, announced plans to address a rally.

As far as local Negro leaders knew, Mr. Triggs was seldom seen in civil rights demonstrations. He had attended a few rallies in Bogalusa since his discharge from the armed services and was present at the start of a 26-mile protest march earlier this month.

NYT 8/13/66

K

LOUISIANA VOTERS GO TO POLLS TODAY

Klan Issue and Court Ruling on Negroes Mark Primary

Special to The New York Times

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 12 — Louisiana voters go to the polls tomorrow to nominate party candidates for the United States Senate, eight seats in the House of Representatives, plus numerous candidates for posts as judges, district attorney and school board members.

Interest in the primary election has been increased by a controversy involving the Ku Klux Klan, a Federal Court decision ordering that 13,000 voters—most of them Negroes—be allowed to vote, and the scheduled presence of Federal observers at the polls.

Major interest is attached to Democratic races in which two long-time members of the House of Representatives, James H. Morrison of the Sixth District and Edwin E. Willis of the Third, face strong challenges.

The Ku Klux Klan controversy is the major issue in the Sixth District race, and Mr. Willis's health is foremost in the Third District.

Another heated battle has developed in the Eighth District, where a freshman, Speedy O. Long, has been accused of indifference in his Democratic campaign.

Opposition to the Johnson Administration is in the background, especially in the Sixth District race.

Ellender Victory Seen

In the Senate race, Allen J. Ellender appears almost certain to be nominated for his sixth term.

Mr. Ellender has two Democratic opponents, J. D. DeBlieux a liberal State Senator from Baton Rouge, and Troyce Guice of Ferriday, an automobile dealer who is a political unknown.

A third opponent, Camille Gravel, a former Democratic national committeeman withdrew some weeks ago, sayins he was unable to raise enough money for the campaign he wanted to put on. Mr. Gravel was generally regarded as a fairly formidable foe.

The hottest race has probably been waged in the Sixth District, where Mr. Morrison is seeking his 13th term. His chief opponent is a former state District Court judge, John Rarick of St. Francisville, a strong segregationist.

Mr. Rarick resigned the judgeship to oppose Mr. Morrison, who has charged Mr. Rarick with being a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Rarick has denied the charge and has filed a $500,000 libel suit against the Congressman.

There are four other candidates in the race, including another Jimmy Morrison, this one being James E. Morrison of Slidell. The others are James A. Edwards of Mount Hermon, John E. Jumonville of Plaquemine and Leslie C. Matheson of Port Allen.

2 Republicans in Race

For the first time in Louisiana's recent political history two Republicans are vying for their party's Congressional nomination in the Sixth District. They are Crayton G. Hall and John P. Cornette, both of Baton Rouge.

Two Democratic Representatives, Joe D. Waggonner Jr. of the Fourth District and Hale Boggs of the Second District, ha no opposition in the primary.

Representatives F. Edward Hebart of the First District and Edwin W. Edwards of the Seventh are opposed in the Democratic primary but have no Republican opposition. Mr. Hebert faces Alec L. Norris, a New Orleans businessman, and Mr. Edwards is opposed by Mervin J. LaBorde, of Sulphur, an automobile supply store owner.

In the FifthDistrict,Representative Otto Passman is opposed in the Democratic primary by Louis L. LaDart of Monroe, a retired grocer.

In the Third District four Democratic candidates seek the nomination. Mr. Willis, who underwent vascular surgery in Houston some months aso, is opposed by State Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc; State Representative Richard Guidry of Thibodaux and Ernest A. Kelly, a Houma lawyer. Hall M. Lyons of Lafayette, whose father waged a hard campaign for Governor two years ago, is the G. O. P. nominee.

In the Eighth District, State Representative Larry Parker contends that Mr. Long will not appear in the district.

More than 150 Federal observers have been ordered to Louisiana by the United States Justice Department.

On the voting rolls for the first time are 13,000 voters registered by Federal registers in five Louisiana parishes (counties). A three-judge Federal Court ordered that the 13,000 must be allowed to vote in the primary and ruled that illiterates among them must be helped by election commissioners.

NEW YORK TIMES, M

2 BITTER RUNOFFS LOOM IN LOUISIANA

LOUISIANA

Willis and Morrison Fail to Muster Primary Majorities

8/15/66

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 14 (AP)—Dudley Leblanc, a one-time patent medicine magnate, and John R. Rarick, an ardent segregationist who stumped as "the fighting little judge," forced two long-time Democratic Congressmen into runoff primary contest, according to unofficial returns from yesterday's election.

There was, however, cautious optimism today in the camps of the men, Representative Edwin E. Willis, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and Representative James H. Morrison, a 12-term Congressman in line to lead another House committee.

The two camps hope the official canvass of the results will give the incumbents a majority so they could avoid another five weeks of furious—and expensive—campaigning.

In the only statewide race—a Democratic contest — United States Senator Allen J. Ellender, 75 years old, forced to campaign for the first time in 18 years, triumphantl ydefeated two younger opponents. Senator Ellender got 489,653 votes, topping by 50,000 the record for a contested first primary set by the late Earl K. Long in the Governor's race 10 years ago.

He was opposed by State Senator J. D. Deblieux, of Baton Rouge, and Troyce Guice, a businessman from Ferriday.

Mr. Leblanc would face Representative Willis in a runoff contest for the 3d District Democratic nomination. Mr. Rarick will oppose Representative Morrison in the 6th District.

Mr. Willis, 61, who suffered what he describes as a "little stroke" last winter, polled 41,464 votes in his district, which is situated in the heart of the state's Cajun country. Cajuns are persons of Acadian French descent.

Mr. Willis was 4,448 votes short of a majority and renomination.

Representative Morrison, 57, due to head the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee if he returns to Washington in January, was 2,210 short of a first primary victory.

Mr. Leblanc, the Cajun, entrepeneur who once parlayed the tonic Hadacol into fame and fortune, received 22,561 votes in his third challenge to Representative Willis. The combined tally of the other two candidates pushed the 71-year-old Leblanc into his first runoff battle with Willis.

Representative Morrison and Mr. Rarick had waged one of the fiercest campaigns seen in a state where rough politics is commonplace.

Mr. Rarick, 42, called the incumbent "an LBJ rubberstamp" and "the black power candidate." Representative Morrison said a vote for him (Morrison) was a "vote against the Klan and a vote to destroy the Klan."

The 6th District, the state's most populous, includes industrialized Baton Rouge, plus Bogalusa — one of Louisiana's racial troublespots — and rural areas where the feelings of white residents are bitter against the Federal Government because of civil rights legislation.

John P. Doar, Assistant United States Attorney General, led a crew of 150 Federal observers who watched voting in six parishes—including two in the 6th district.

The eventual Democratic winners in both Congressional districts will face Republican foes in the fall.

The Republicans even held their first House primary in the 6th District, with Crayton G. Hall of Baton Rouge winning the nomination.

THEY BUILT THE FIRES LOUISIANA

Perez and His Style Are Fading Away

By REESE CLEGHORN AC 8/15/66

IT IS HOT, hot these days in Plaquemines Parish, La., an oil-rich little finger of sandy soil that straddles the Mississippi River where it flows into the Gulf of Mexico just south of New Orleans.

This is a unique place in America. It comes very close to being an oil sheikdom, where millions of dollars ooze out of the earth and the sheik rules with absolute power.

The sheik is Leander H. Perez Sr., 76, a stubby, dynamite stick of a little man with steel-gray hair and dark swatches of eyebrow that leap up and down as he speaks with perpetual animation. Just a few days ago "Judge" Perez was back in court battling an old enemy, the government of the United States. He is losing now, and that is history.

The matter before the court was desegregation of schools in the parish (county); Perez had just reaffirmed his intention to "fight to the last ditch." This time as he sounded his usual irrelevant insults a federal judge (another native of Louisiana) warned him that he was "close to contempt" and could talk himself into jail.

In Plaquemines school desegregation will end an extraordinary era in which every aspect of the old system of segregation has held fast. Plaquemines' success is a good example of why we now have federal guidelines.

Long after passage of a public accommodations law, public accommodations in Plaquemines remained rigidly segregated. Long after passage of two voting rights laws, Negro college graduates could not vote, though white illiterates did. Twelve years after the Supreme Court ruling, schools were still separate and unequal.

THE VIOLENT TONGUE

Plaquemines (with a population including "Creoles," "Cajuns" and Dalmatian Slavs) and Perez (who became a multi-multi-millionaire during four decades of political power) are in many respects very untypical of the Deep South, though in another way they do typify the set of official mind and the set of public affairs that predominated in our region for decades.

And what has that old set been? It frequently has been the violence of political tongues (while violence of other kinds took place in the bushes). Perez not long ago took to a statewide broadcasting hookup to call the President of the United States a "scavenger" and a "renegade" who was now carrying out "the Communist plan of registration of all Negroes in the Black Belt regardless of qualification." The ignorant say amen; after all, "the Judge" said it.

Perez in past years was a hero of the white supremacist speaking circuit. He was in Georgia, back before his approach came to be regarded as too vulgar and slicker tactics were devised.

He came to support the causes of our own breast-beating white supremacists such as Marvin Griffin, Roy Harris, James Gray, Peter Zack Geer, and, later, Lester Maddox, in fighting the courts and attempting to stop the law at the state line. He helped draw the crowds and raise the money.

There was a whole phalanx, across the South, of this kind of leadership in that not-so-dim past (not dim at all, for instance, in Alabama). They built the fires behind others of somewhat less extremism who fought the same battles in Washington and from the state capitols.

NOW, A CHANGE

In his own parish, Perez harangued the angry crowds, including the one that stopped the desegregation of a Catholic school there. Bombings at the school provided the background music.

This posture was accepted, in those days. (It was even accepted in Georgia when Peter Zack Geer commended the members of the mob who rioted when the University of Georgia was integrated.)

But there has been a change. The Perez approach has gone out of style, though not his uses of phony legal and constitutional arguments that any good constitutional lawyer recognizes as absurdity.

What is it that he represented?

In New Orleans not long ago, a lawyer gave his opinion. "He represents the logical extension of the views of the gentle people of prejudice," he said. "And so he has become a great embarrassment to them."

The Perez style has come to seem vulgar to most middle-class Louisianans, and so he has lost influence to others who know how to say the same things in subtler ways — how to codify people's prejudices in ways that sound more respectable. The style has changed in Georgia, too. (Why do we now hear about guidelines, instead of about "the niggers"?)

So the picture that came over the wires the other day of "Judge" Perez leaving the courtroom puffing his cigar and still looking as defiant as an angry bulldog seemed, in a way, forlorn. His phalanx across the South has broken. The Perez style now seems vulgar. A slicker political style has taken its place.

Reprinted from yesterday's late editions.

BOGALUSA NEGROES WIN SCHOOLS PLEA

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15 (AP)—A Federal judge Monday changed the school desegregation plan for Bogalusa, La., to the free-choice system and ordered teachers hired "without regard to race or color."

Amendments to the desegregation plan approved by Bogalusa last year were accepted by Judge Frederick J. R. Heebe at the request of Negro plaintiffs.

The original system was the so-called transfer plan, whereby a Negro pupil could apply to be moved to another school. Under the freee-choice plan, all pupils must make a choice annually.

Judge Heebe's order also said that bus routes must serve all pupils, so far as possible, and that remedial education programs must be conducted in an effort to overcome past inadequacies in Negro education.

In another case, Federal Judge Herbert W. Christenberry delayed his ruling but said he was bound by law to order Plaquemines Parish (County), a segregation stronghold, to integrate its public schools. He heard closing arguments in the case and gave both sides until Friday to file additional briefs.

Leander Perez, a segregationist and the parish political leader for decades, was warned that his arguments in the case were close to contempt of court. The judge told him he had better stop implying that all evidence in the case would not be considered before a ruling was made. Mr. Perez apologized.

LOUISIANA

NYT 8/17/66

NEGRO PUPILS SIGN IN PEREZ'S PARISH

LOUISIANA

White School Registers Five in Plaquemines, La.

NYT 9/1/66

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 31—Five Negroes registered today at a formerly all-white school at Woodlawn, south of New Orleans.

Thus school desegregation came to Plaquemines Parish (County), the domain of Leander H. Perez Sr.

Other Negroes are expected to enter all-white schools elsewhere in the parish, despite Mr. Perez's contention that no Negroes in the parish want to go to white schools.

The Negroes may register any time before Monday. Then school officials will have until Sept. 12 to assign them formally to schools.

As integration came to one of the last segregationist strongholds, whites responded with bitter withdrawal. White students boycotted the schools at Woodlawn and Belle Chasse. Attendance was slack at three other white schools where Negroes are expected to enroll.

Pickets March

Thirty white parents marched in front of the Belle Chasse school this morning. Each carried a picket sign lettered with a single word: "Don't."

White pickets also marched in front of the Woodlawn school. No white pupils appeared there. Only 124 of 2,000 white pupils showed up at the Belle Chasse school.

The five Negroes who registered at Woodlawn were not molested. They did not attend school today.

Parish officials, who have been ordered to desegregate the schools by a Federal court, will not reveal their plans, but there is speculation that integration of all the white schools will mean a total boycott by whites.

Mr. Perez hinted today that the whites of Plaquemines were ready to abandon the public school system and turn to private schools. He suggested that state money might be available to individual pupils to be spent on education as they saw fit. Such tuition grants have been tried in several states. They are now under attack in Federal courts.

The 76-year-old "white-maned warrior," as some call him here, dropped a note of pessimism. When a reported asked if he would be able to avoid integration in Plaquemines, he replied with uncharacteristic gloom.

NYT 8/31/62

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 31—Five Negroes registered today at a formerly all-white school at Woodlawn, south of New Orleans.

Thus school desegregation came to Plaquemines Parish (County), the domain of Leander H. Perez Sr.

Other Negroes are expected to enter all-white schools elsewhere in the parish, despite Mr. Perez's contention that no Negroes in the parish want to go to white schools.

The Negroes may register any time before Monday. Then school officials will have until Sept. 12 to assign them formally to schools.

As integration came to one of the last segregationist strongholds, whites responded with bitter withdrawal. White students boycotted the schools at Woodlawn and Belle Chasse. Attendance was slack at three other white schools where Negroes are expected to enroll.

Pickets March

Thirty white parents marched in front of the Belle Chasse school this morning. Each carried a picket sign lettered with a single word: "Don't."

White pickets also marched in front of the Woodlawn school. No white pupils appeared there. Only 124 of 2,000 white pupils showed up at the Belle Chasse school.

The five Negroes who registered at Woodlawn were not molested. They did not attend school today.

Parish officials, who have been ordered to desegregate the schools by a Federal court, will not reveal their plans, but there is speculation that integration of all the white schools will mean a total boycott by whites.

Mr. Perez hinted today that the whites of Plaquemines were ready to abandon the public school system and turn to private schools. He suggested that state money might be available to individual pupils to be spent on education as they saw fit. Such tuition grants have been tried in several states. They are now under attack in Federal courts.

The 76-year-old "white-maned warrior," as some call him here, dropped a note of pessimism. When a reported asked if he would be able to avoid integration in Plaquemines, he replied with uncharacteristic gloom.

'Second Reconstruction'

"It took 30 years to throw off the first Reconstruction," he said. "Now we're in the second Reconstruction, and it's even worse."

Asked if that meant the Plaquemines schools would be integrated quietly, he regained his customary defiance.

"I didn't say a damned thing of the kind," he thundered.

Mr. Perez was close-mouthed about his strategy.

"Self-preservation is the first law of nature," he said with a grin. "Our people are resourceful and courageous."

Plaquemines Parish, a rich trough of land that funnels the Mississippi River from New Orleans to the sea, probably has less racial integration than any place in America that has a Negro population. That is due almost solely to the craft and will of Mr. Perez, the undisputed ruler of the parish for the last 40 years.

Pressed by U. S.

But now the Federal Government is pressing him. Last year, he was forced to let Federal examiners register Negroes to vote. This year, Federal observers went into his domain and, over his angry fulminations, watched closely as Negroes and whites went to the polls and voted.

Then last week, the Federal Government, in the person of Federal District Judge Herbert W. Christenberry of New Orleans, ordered the Plaquemines schools desegregated.

Mr. Perez and his lawyers appeared before Judge Christenberry this morning, asking for a delay.

"All deliberate speed does not mean two days," argued Sidney W. Provensal, Mr. Perez's New Orleans attorney.

Louisiana NYT 9/3/64

PRIVATE SCHOOL SET IN PEREZ'S EX-HOME

POINT A LA HACHE, La., Sept. 2 (AP)—A leader of the Plaquemines Parish school boycott said today a private school for whites would be set up in Leander H. Perez's former home.

Ben Chauppete said the two-story home, now owned by Mr. Perez's daughter, was 2½ miles north of Woodlawn School, where five Negro boys registered Wednesday under a Federal court order.

Mr. Perez, parish council president and bitter opponent of school desegregation, said he had no knowledge of a move to convert the home into a private school. "If my daughter is letting the home for this purpose," he added, "more power to her."

Woodlawn's 250 white pupils have boycotted the school since the Negroes appeared. The school's 13 teachers were on duty today, but they had no one to teach, since the five Negroes have not been transferred formally to the school yet.

Enrollment at other white schools in the oil-rich parish below New Orleans remained far below normal. Belle Chasse had 10 pupils out of an enrollment of 1,800.

Times-Picayune
9/9/66

DEPARTMENTAL I

Amuse. S 3, P 4-5 Marine
Bridge Sec. 3, P 2 Oil News
Classified S 2, P 10-23 Radio-TV
Comics Sec. 3, P 2 Society S
Editorials S 1, P 10 Sports S
Finance S 3, P 10-11 State Ne

130th YEAR, No. 229 F

STRONG PRIVATE SYSTEM SOUGHT IN PLAQUEMINES

LOUISIANA

Public School Setup Appears Crumbling

While events were seemingly moving to crumble the public school system of Plaquemines Parish Thursday, an apparently strong private system was in the making.

Warren J. Barrois, chairman of the Citizens' Information Committee, announced that the School Investment Corp. has been set up to raise nearly $2 million to finance a private school setup.

Every teacher at Woodlawn School resigned. The principal, Miss Lois Watson, was the only Woodlawn staff member not to resign, and she has been ill.

Meanwhile, the superintendent of the public schools and his lone assistant resigned and a suit filed in a district court seeks to stop the parish Commission Council's financial contributions to the public schools.

Woodlawn had been completely boycotted by white students since it and other Plaquemines Parish schools were ordered to desegregate by Federal Judge Herbert W. Christenberry.

31 ASSIGNED

Thirty-one Negro students have been assigned to Woodlawn.

Sidney W. Provensal, special counsel to the school board, said the teachers at Woodlawn had notified the board they wouldn't teach at an integrated school and tendered their resignations en masse this week.

He added that he believes there will be enough teachers to teach all white and Negro students on the west bank of the parish.

Besides the 31 Negroes assigned to Woodlawn, 78 have been assigned to Boothville-

Cont. in Sec. 1, Page 14, Col. 4

PLAQUEMINES

Continued from Page 1

Venice, 34 to Port Sulphur, 13 to Buras and 18 to Belle Chasse.

Frank J. Patti resigned as acting superintendent Wednesday. He had taken over the job from Sam A. Moncla, who retired last week. Patti said "I sincerely believed at the time that I could keep the school system going, but the more I thought about it, the more I decided I couldn't."

AIDE ALSO RESIGNS

Patti's decision came in the wake of a move by the United States Justice Department to question 50 teachers, principals and school officials on the development of a private school system in the parish. Alba Guidroz, Patti's assistant, also tendered his resignation.

Barrois said the School Investment Corp. will provide independent school facilities for children in every area of the parish.

A. E. Zeverly is president, Gustave Bouzon is vice-president and Charles Brown is secretary-treasurer.

"An active campaign will get under way immediately to raise the nearly $2 million which will be necessary to complete the school facilities throughout the parish," Barrois said. "All funds will be raised from private sources—no public funds will be involved."

"School sites have been secured for virtually all of the schools. Agreements have already been made for the construction of buildings on most of these sites.

"The roofing and sides of the buildings will be constructed of material similar to that of the Ludwig or Butler type buildings, which are used extensively for school buildings by private and parochial schools.

"Construction has already begun on the school sites in the Buras and Belle Chasse areas. A full school year of 180 days is guaranteed to all students.

'ALREADY COMMITTED'

"The corporation has authorized capital stock of $2 million and the corporation has already received commitments for a substantial portion of its stock.

"In order to acquire the property, build and complete these buildings, stock in this corporation for a par value of $100 per share is being offered to residents and friends of Plaquemines Parish living in Louisiana to invest in the children of Plaquemines Parish.

"An office is being set up at

—Photo by The Times-Picayune.
FRANK J. PATTI
Resigns his post.

—Photo by The Times-Picayune.
MRS. JUNE WILLIAMS
Teacher praises school system.

—Photo by The Times-Picayune.
MRS. GLADYS GRESSETT
Teacher gives deposition.

"wait and see."

Provensal said all three teachers were asked if they had been pressured by anyone, including already been made for the construction of buildings on most of these sites.

"The roofing and sides of the buildings will be constructed of material similar to that of the Ludwig or Butler type buildings, which are used extensively for school buildings by private and parochial schools.

"Construction has already begun on the school sites in the Buras and Belle Chasse areas. A full school year of 180 days is guaranteed to all students.

'ALREADY COMMITTED'

"The corporation has authorized capital stock of $2 million and the corporation has already received commitments for a substantial portion of its stock.

"In order to acquire the property, build and complete these buildings, stock in this corporation for a par value of $100 per share is being offered to residents and friends of Plaquemines Parish living in Louisiana to invest in the children of Plaquemines Parish.

"An office is being set up at Port Sulphur. For further information about this corporation or stock, please contact the corporation at Port Sulphur. Branch offices will be set up in other areas of the parish in the near future.

"The shareholders may choose the school area in which they desire their investment to be used. School facilities will be ready for every area of the parish during the first week of November.

"West side schools will be ready in November; those on the East Bank will begin school Sept. 16."

Sept. 16 is also the date on which the parish council must show cause before District Judge Eugene E. Leon Jr., why it should not cease financial support of the public schools.

Wayne B. Vinson, a white resident of the parish, filed the suit on behalf of himself and "as a class action by other citizens and taxpayers."

The suit contends the council has violated state law by providing an estimated $750,000 a year for school operations over and above tax revenues raised for that purpose.

The legal action enjoins the council from further school contributions and demands the return of all funds and properties provided schools by the council in the past.

Government officials in Plaquemines said the loss to schools could run into millions of dollars if the suit is successful.

Plaintiffs claim state law prevents local government agencies from supporting each other without special legal authority.

Meanwhile, federal attorneys began taking depositions from some of the parish's teachers in a small room just to the left of the Buras post office.

The room was used last year by federal registrars to register voters under the Civil Rights Act of 1965.

Provensal said he feels the trend of questioning was a "waste of time." He said government attorney Hugh Fleischer was attempting to find out from the teachers if they were under contract.

DESCRIBED HESITANT

"We testified to this earlier in the court hearing, and we could have told them that," Provensal said.

He said the first three teachers to be questioned were all asked if they would teach in an integrated school, and said the teachers were hesitant and agreed they would have to "wait and see."

—Photo by The Times-Picayune.
MRS. GLADYS GRESSETT
Teacher gives deposition.

Provensal said all three teachers were asked if they had been pressured by anyone, including parish officials, to resign and they all answered no.

He quoted Mrs. June Williams, a veteran teacher who taught in California and Texas before coming to Buras nine years ago, as saying, "I had never been treated as well as I have in Plaquemines Parish."

Asked by a reporter who will sign the paychecks for the teachers now that Patti and Guidroz have resigned, Provensal replied, "The teachers know they will get paid, they're not worried."

He said that if teachers came to him as special counsel he would ask them to stay in the school system.

"I'll probably tell them that if they stay it would be appreciated, but if they choose to quit it's their perogative.

Pressed for further comment on the resignations, Provensal said, possibly half in jest, "I think we'll just have to ask Judge Christenberry to appoint a school superintendent."

VINYL CUSHIONFLOR®
PRESENTS!

A "NEW DIMENSION" DESIGN

The most exciting flooring since vinyl was invented! New Vinyl Cushionflor by Congoleum-Nairn is warmer, quieter, softer because it's cushioned. So springy it recovers from spike-heel dents. Even the pattern is a New Dimension. It's sculptured—in a lovely stone mosaic design!

Just 2.49 Sq. Yd.

Congoleum-Nairn

In 6, 9 and 12' widths

LOUISIANA JUDGE ACCUSES SCHOOLS

Charges Plot in Plaquemines to Scuttle Integration

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22 (AP) — A Federal District judge, Herbert W. Christenberry, has accused Plaquemines Parish county officials of trying to scuttle the desegrgated public school system.

After a two-day hearing, he signed an order yesterday regarding future operations and ordered contempt proceedings against two former public school educators.

"The officials of Plaquemines Parish, including the school board, have made pawns of the children and dupes of the teachers who have been led to abandon the public school program," he said.

The contempt proceedings were based of the board injunction Judge Christenberry issued in ordering the schools desegregated last month. It forbids interference with normal operations of the school system.

The parish straddles the Mississippi River south of New Orleans. It is rigidly segregated. Leander Perez, 76 years old, a fervent segregationist, has dominated the area politically for decades.

A Drive for Private Schools

A drive to set up a system of segregated private schools was started after the court's order opened all public schools to Negroes last month.

Judge Christenberry asked the Justice Department to bring contempt proceedings against S. E. Niles, former principal at Buras, and Allard V. Cousin, former Buras athletic coach.

He also asked the department to check whether the former Boothville - Venice principal, Raymond Shetley, should be included in the contempt proceedings.

All three men, now employed by the private school system, have been trying to recruit teachers from the public schools.

"We will now find out whether these gentlemen on the Plaquemines Parish School Board are men of integrity and courage or otherwise," the judge said.

The board, with one of the five previously all-white schools already closed, went before the court to seek permission to close Belle Chasse because the 53 teachers there quit last Monday.

Shutting down the school and transferring the pupils would be an economy move, it was argued.

"I might as well make it crystal clear right now," the judge said. "The question here is not one of money or finances. It is more important. It is the future of all these schoolchildren. This is something that the school board has apparently overlooked."

The order directed that Belle Chasse be reopened by Oct. 31 with at least 12 teachers. Because of a white pupil boycott, its normal enrollment of 1,800 is down to 134.

UPI Telephoto

PICKETS AT SCHOOL

BELLE CHASSE, La., Sept. 3—White pickets parade in front of the Belle Chasse all-white schools in Plaquemines Parish. They protested the opening of the parish school on a court-ordered desegregated basis. Less than 24 children showed up for classes at the school.

MATERIALS

National Education Association

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON TEACHER EDUCATION AND PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS

STUDENT NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION
FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES

1201 SIXTEENTH STREET, N.W.
WASHINGTON, D. C., 20036
ADAMS 4-4848

May 1966

MEMORANDUM TO: Directors of Summer Institutes and Workshops

FROM: Barbara Gladysiewicz, Program Assistant

Many of you will be working with teachers and administrators in programs this summer. We hope that you will find THE TEACHER AND INTEGRATION useful as a resource for your institutes and workshops.

How to make classroom integration work is the subject of a major new publication to be released in June by the National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards. The book, written by Gertrude Noar, is designed to assist teachers as they assume responsibilities in desegregated classrooms. It is published in the belief that teachers and administrators can and will make a significant difference in the lives of children of all races and ethnic backgrounds: Negro, white, Spanish-American, American Indian, and others.

Teachers who use it, will not need to ask, "Why didn't someone tell me?" the cry often uttered by both young and experienced teachers. This new book presents a positive point of view with respect to race relations and integration in education. It provides information and insights to help teachers meet real situations that will confront them as they work with children, many of whom are economically deprived and culturally disadvantaged.

The objective of the entire book is to help teachers meet the needs of all kinds of children, especially those needs which become evident in desegregation. Desegregation is not enough. To move to integration, teachers must place high value on the individual and strive for the full development of the potentialities of every child. This book is designed to help them achieve that goal.

THE TEACHER AND INTEGRATION will be a valuable resource for continuing discussion about teaching and learning. A selected bibliography contains references and sources from which publications and audio-visual aids can be obtained.

ORDER FORM

THE TEACHER AND INTEGRATION

Please send: _____ Clothbound copies @ $2.50 each
(Stock #381-11762)

_____ Paperbound copies @ $1.50 each
(Stock #381-11760)

Quantity discounts: 2-9 copies, 10%; 10 or more copies, 20%. All orders for $2 or less must be accompanied by payment. Orders over $2 may be billed; shipping and handling charges will be added.

Total $_____ Payment enclosed /_/ Bill me /_/

_____
(Name)

_____
(Street Address)

_____
(City)

_____
(State) (Zip Code)

Mail to: NEA Publications-Sales Section
1201 - 16th Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20036

adm MATERIALS

BROTHERHOOD WEEK

february 19-26, 1967
brotherhood equals democracy at work

7 concise pamphlets and a filmstrip for Brotherhood Week and year-round programs on intergroup relations in schools, churches and synagogues, offices, plants, unions, civic and social organizations.

_____ DIFFERENCES CAN ENRICH OUR LIVES: Helping Children Prepare for Cultural Diversity, by Ann G. Wolfe. No. 399. Guidance for parents and teachers on how to nurture children's respect for cultural differences. Mrs. Wolfe summarizes the contributions of many different peoples to the development of America, explains what binds people of one culture together, and offers specific ideas for helping children appreciate the richness of cultural diversity. (Ready Jan. 27, 1967)

12 FAIR PLAY IN HOUSING — Who's My Neighbor?, by Algernon D. Black. No. 396. This up-dated version of an earlier pamphlet analyzes typical fears and prejudices about open occupancy – fears about property values and upkeep, about effects on children, about "inundation." Mr. Black also presents convincing reasons why integrated neighborhoods not only are morally just but also can be more secure and more enriching for everyone.

12 HOW TO BRING UP YOUR CHILD WITHOUT PREJUDICE, by Margaret B. Young. No. 373. A guide for all parents who want to bring up children of good will. Includes detailed suggestions for what the family can do to achieve better human relations and greater harmony among all the American people.

_____ THE RACES OF MANKIND, by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish. No. 85. This world-famous classic is a popular exposition, cleverly illustrated, of the scientific facts underlying the concept that all men are brothers. A companion filmstrip is listed below.

12 THE NEGRO IN AMERICA, by Maxwell S. Stewart. No. 95. A revision of an important pamphlet based on Gunnar Myrdal's comprehensive study. This edition takes into account recent developments, including significant Supreme Court decisions.

_____ IF I MARRY OUTSIDE MY RELIGION, by Algernon D. Black. No. 204A. In this recently revised edition, Mr. Black takes a sensitive look at the problems and challenges of religious intermarriage. His discussion includes the latest information on church views and practices in relation to intermarriage.

_____ GROWING UP WITH UNICEF, by Ritchie Calder. No. 330. The story of the remarkable fight the United Nations Children's Fund has carried on against disease and hunger throughout the world.

WE ARE ALL BROTHERS — Filmstrip in partial color, adapted from The Races of Mankind. A script is included. 35 mm., 54 frames, 20 min.; $3.50.

Pamphlets are 25 cents each; lower in quantity:

Quantity	same title	mixed titles	Quantity	same title	mixed titles
1 to 9 copies	25¢ ea	25¢ ea	250 to 499 copies	17¢ ea	18¢ ea
10 to 99 copies	20¢ ea	21¢ ea	500 to 999 copies	15¢ ea	16¢ ea
100 to 249 copies	18¢ ea	19¢ ea	1000 to 4999 copies	14¢ ea	15¢ ea

DO NOT DETACH - - - - - - - - DO NOT DETACH - - - - - - - - DO NOT DETACH - - - - - - - - DO NOT DETACH

ORDER FORM

PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE, INC. • 381 Park Ave. South, New York, N.Y. 10016

_____ Please send me pamphlets in quantities indicated above.

_____ Please send me_____copies of We Are All Brothers (filmstrip, $3.50 ea.)

Amount enclosed $_____(Check or money order, please).

Name _____

Organization _____

Address _____ City, State, Zip # _____

Selected Readings on Intergroup Relations for Colleges and Universities

F 106/ABC's OF SCAPEGOATING. Gordon W. Allport. An analysis of the various motives, sources and forms of scapegoating and race prejudice, recommending education as a weapon against fear and frustration, and legislation as a means of protection for minorities. Gordon W. Allport is professor of psychology at Harvard University, and author of numerous other publications including "The Nature of Prejudice." 40 pp. 50¢.

FB 5/ANTI-SEMITISM: A CASE STUDY IN PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION. J. Milton Yinger. An analysis of the history of anti-Semitism from its inception to the present, by the well-known sociologist and author of "Racial and Cultural Minorities in the United States." In his concise and lucid manner, Professor Yinger analyzes the psychological, political and sociological meanings of prejudice in general and of anti-Semitism in particular. 80 pp. $1.25.

B 41/CHRISTIAN BELIEFS AND ANTI-SEMITISM. Charles Y. Glock and Rodney Stark. Examines to what extent, if any, Christian beliefs and churches contribute to anti-Semitism in the U.S. Conclusively indicates that certain patterns of Christian belief play a major role in the development and maintenance of anti-Jewish prejudice in this country. Based on a study conducted by the Survey Research Center of the University of California under a grant from the Anti-Defamation League. First book in the series "Patterns of American Prejudice." 266 pp. plus appendix. $8.50.

B 43/THE APATHETIC MAJORITY: A Study Based on Public Responses to the Eichmann Trial. Charles Y. Glock, Gertrude J. Selznick, Joe L. Spaeth. Second in the "Patterns of American Prejudice" series. The study was conducted at the time the Eichmann trial was in progress in Israel and while it was being given full coverage by mass media in the United States. 240 pp. $6.95.

FB 8/CHALLENGES TO DEMOCRACY. Murray Clark Havens. An assessment of the foundations of political unity in the United States. Examines the role and effect of extremist groups in American politics, past and present. 119 pp. $1.95.

G 460/CONDENSED INVENTORY OF PRESCHOOL PROJECTS. Prepared under the direction of Dr. Robert D. Hess. The purpose of this Inventory is to facilitate communication and exchange of information, material, and methods among existing preschool programs and to offer a resource of experience and information to persons planning such programs. 24 pp. 50¢.

B 12S/DANGER ON THE RIGHT. Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster. An in-depth study of the Radical Right in the America of the 1960's and of their more important extreme conservative allies by the authors of "The Troublemakers" and "Cross-Currents." Examines the facts, the figures and the leading personalities whose activity and support has made the Right Wing a noticeable force on the American political scene. 294 pp.—soft cover edition: $2.95.

G 464/DETERMINANTS OF ANTI-SEMITISM: A Social-Psychological Map. M. Brewster Smith. A highly specialized study of the social and psychological origins and effects of anti-Semitism. The work is designed to clarify the means by which researchers can deal with the study of this dangerous and all too present phenomena. 14 pp. 35¢.

B 22/DISCRIMINATION AND THE LAW. Vern Countryman, editor. Foreword by Erwin N. Griswold. Based on a Conference at the University of Chicago Law School, the book contains a series of articles by distinguished legal scholars on the general constitutional principles involved in determining the line of distinction between public and private action in the fields of discrimination in employment, education, housing, and places of public accommodation. 170 pp. Hard cover. $5.00.

G 415/EPITAPH FOR JIM CROW. Thomas F. Pettigrew. The author examines the historical, sociological, psychological and political forces which shape intergroup relations in the United States, and traces the development of race relations from the nineteenth century to the present. 59 pp. 75¢.

FB 7/EQUALITY AND BEYOND: Housing Segregation and the Goals of the Great Society. George and Eunice Grier. A survey of legal developments in the field of housing discrimination against the background of changing public opinion. The book emphasizes shifting occupancy patterns and some of the yet unsolved problems in housing facing all Americans. 116 pp. $3.50. FB 7s—soft cover edition: $1.45.

G 455/EQUALITY THROUGH INTEGRATION: A Report on Greenburgh School District #8. Naomi and Arnold Buchheimer. A report on a school integration plan which dramatically improved the scholastic achievement of the student body and won the wholehearted endorsement of the community. Included is a list of 14 successful steps to achieve educational integration which are applicable to school systems facing this problem. 72 pp. $1.50.

R 193/FACILITATING DEVELOPMENT IN THE PRESCHOOL CHILD: Social and Psychological Perspectives. Martin Deutsch. Indicates directions for action on the failure of our educational systems to reach the economically and culturally deprived children. 11 pp. 15¢.

B 45/FEIFFER ON CIVIL RIGHTS. Foreword by Bayard Rustin. An outstanding collection of Jules Feiffer's most perceptive, ironic and timely cartoons on all aspects of civil rights. Published exclusively by the ADL. 87 pp. $1.00.

R 174/GUIDELINES FOR TESTING MINORITY GROUP CHILDREN. Explains the conditions which prevent lower class children, most of whom are minority group members, from demonstrating their mental potentialities in school-administered I.Q. tests. 18 pp. 25¢.

G 461/HANDBOOK FOR PROJECT HEAD START. Prepared under the direction of Dr. Robert D. Hess, Urban Child Center, University of Chicago. A manual containing some of the most workable and promising teaching methods in the field of compensatory education. 24 pp. 50¢.

G 469/HOW TO LISTEN TO A JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY SPEAKER. Harvey Schechter. A handbook of the questions most often asked of Birch Society spokesmen, the answers usually given, and comments on the answers. 36 pp. 35¢.

FB 3/AN INVENTORY AND APPRAISAL OF RESEARCH ON AMERICAN ANTI-SEMITISM. Melvin M. Tumin. The only complete survey of its kind—an invaluable compendium of research, theories and hypotheses since 1930 on anti-Semitism in America, with appraisals and an analysis of implications for our society. Dr. Tumin is professor of sociology at Princeton University. 192 pp. $4.00. FB 3s—soft cover edition: $2.75.

FB 6/A NATION OF IMMIGRANTS. John F. Kennedy. The last book authored by President Kennedy before his death. An updated, expanded edition of the pamphlet, "Nation of Immigrants" written by him for ADL. A survey of the forty million people who have come here, why they left their original homes, what they did when they arrived here and how they became part of the American scene. Freedom Book. 111 pp. $2.95. FB 6s—soft cover Torchbook: 95¢. FB 6P—soft cover Popular Library edition: 50¢.

G 471/NEGRO AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE. Thomas F. Pettigrew. Thoroughly documented and researched study on evaluations of the intelligence of Negroes; on the biases of some of the tests and testers; and some of the factors that influence evaluation. 48 pp. 50¢.

RU 6/OUT OF MANY: A Study Guide to Cultural Pluralism in the United States. Oscar Handlin. A brief account of the pluralistic nature of Amercian democracy, by the eminent Harvard historian. Professor Handlin maintains that by retaining their tradition of pluralism Americans express their desire to remain a free people. 32 pp. 35¢.

F 120/PATTERNS OF MINORITY RELATIONS. Raymond W. Mack and Troy S. Duster. A systematic examination of minority group interaction in American society. Analyzes the changing roles of American minority groups; caste systems, old and new; group boundaries; dangers of prejudice and stereotypes; and the weaknesses of ethnic, racial and religious classifications. 61 pp. 65¢.

F 116/PREJUDICE AND SOCIETY. Earl Raab and Seymour Lipset. How individual behavior toward minority groups is influenced by prevailing social practices to which we unconsciously conform. The authors describe how these attitudes are shaped as well as how they can be changed. 40 pp. 35¢.

FB 1/THE PUERTO RICANS: Strangers—Then Neighbors. Revised edition. Clarence Senior. Examines the pattern, history and economic importance of immigration to the United States, with particular emphasis on recent Puerto Rican migration. Discusses behavior patterns of and toward immigrant groups. Dr. Senior is a former consultant to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and is currently a member of the N.Y. City Board of Education. Introduction by Hubert H. Humphrey. Freedom Book. $3.50. FB1s—soft cover edition: $1.45.

G 416/RACE AWARENESS IN YOUNG CHILDREN. Revised edition. Mary Ellen Goodman. Using case studies, an anthropologist investigates the complex processes underlying the culturally predominant pattern of "white over brown" that persists in our society. Contains a summary of relevant research since 1950. Introduction by Kenneth B. Clark. 352 pp. $1.50.

G 434/RACE AND INTELLIGENCE. Melvin M. Tumin, editor. Four distinguished social scientists examine in detail the charge that Negroes have a lower native intelligence than whites. They are in agreement that scientific evidence tends to indicate that race has no significant relationship to intelligence. 56 pp. $2.00. G 434s—soft cover edition: 75¢.

B 38/REPORT ON THE JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY—1966. Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster. Based on a documented, comprehensive year-long study of the Society's strength, organization and activities. Exposes its all-out war against the civil rights movement, its front groups, its contributions to anti-Semitism and its political programs. 128 pp. Index. $3.95. B 38s—soft cover edition—(List price: $1.45). Special ADL price: 95¢.

G 458/REPORT ON THE KU KLUX KLAN. Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster. This stark report tells who the Klansmen are; traces the Klan's origin and history; their strength today; and the effect the Klan has had on civil rights in the South and elsewhere. 40 pp. 50¢.

B 33/RESEARCH ANNUAL ON INTERGROUP RELATIONS: 1965. Prepared in cooperation with the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues (SPSSI), the Society for the Study of Social Problems (SSSP), and Phi Delta Kappa—the Professional Society for Men in Education. Abstracts of sociological and psychological research studies completed, currently under way or being planned both in the U.S. and abroad. 176 pp. Index. $6.00. B 33s: soft cover: $1.95. Previous issues: (G 422) 1963-64: 48 pp. 75¢. (G 393) 1962-63: 30 pp. 50¢.

F 105/SHALL CHILDREN, TOO, BE FREE? Howard A. Lane. A discussion of the stages of human development and the nine major "vitamins of personality," outlining the premise that "personality, too, can be malnourished." Dr. Lane, professor of education at San Francisco State College and former psychologist for the Detroit Police Department, is a specialist in the social and educational background of delinquent youth. 33 pp. 50¢.

F 121/SOCIAL CHANGE AND THE NEGRO PROBLEM. Arnold Rose. An analysis of the dynamic forces that have determined the changes in the Negro problem over the past fifteen years. The author gives greatest emphasis to forces involving social, economic and political power; smaller stress to changes in public ideologies; and least weight to factors usually singled out as "psychological." 24 pp. 50¢.

B 44/THE TEACHER AND INTEGRATION. Gertrude Noar. Presents specific, practical and positive aids with respect to race, race relations, integration in education as well as information to help new and experienced teachers apply facts and insights to the situations that will confront them daily as they work to achieve a truly integrated classroom. 112 pp. $2.50. B 44s—soft cover edition: $1.50.

G 444/TEACHERS FOR OUR BIG CITY SCHOOLS. Harry N. Rivlin. The Dean of the School of Education, Fordham University, discusses what can and should be done to end the desperate shortage of qualified and properly prepared teachers in schools in large urban areas, many of which are populated largely with educationally disadvantaged in-migrant children. 32 pp. 50¢.

G 417/TOWARD INTEGRATION IN SUBURBAN HOUSING. Eleanor Leacock, Martin Deutsch and Joshua A. Fishman. An analysis of one Northeastern community's attempt to face the integration of middle-class residential neighborhoods by forming an interracial community council. The problems, the benefits, the ultimate results are discussed thoroughly and are examined in the light of the community's experience. 47 pp. 75¢.

G 376/THE TREATMENT OF MINORITIES IN SECONDARY SCHOOL TEXTBOOKS. Lloyd A. Marcus. A study of 48 leading secondary history and social studies textbooks. In more than three-fourths of the books studied, the complex nature and problems of American minority groups are largely neglected or distorted, and Nazi persecution of Jews and other minorities is omitted or minimized. 64 pp. 50¢.

G 412/THE TREATMENT OF RELIGION IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL SOCIAL STUDIES TEXTBOOKS. Judah Harris. This study sheds light on the way in which American public elementary schools deal with religion, by analyzing the references made to religion in social studies textbooks. Dr. Harris is a lawyer, educator and rabbi. 72 pp. 65¢.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON: The Man, The Candidate, The Statesman. (Portrait through excerpts from his most memorable speeches.) 33⅓ LP recording. This recording was prepared as a memorial to Adlai E. Stevenson, so that the range and depth of his wisdom and wit would be available to the public. List price: $5.79. Special ADL Price: $3.50.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY. 33⅓ LP recording/not released for radio. Original soundtrack recording of the ADL and CBS-TV adaptation of Stephen Vincent Benét's Pulitzer Prize-winning poem of the Civil War. Starring Richard Boone and Douglas Campbell. Original music by George Kleinsinger, with the CBS Concert Orchestra under the direction of Alfredo Antonini. List price: $4.50. Special ADL Price: $1.50.

MATERIALS

ANNUAL MATERIALS SUBSCRIPTION SERVICE

To obtain discounts and avoid the inconvenience of placing separate orders for important new books and pamphlets, join the ANNUAL MATERIALS SUBSCRIPTION SERVICE. A fee of $5, covering January, 1967 through December, 1967, entitles you to almost all new ADL publications. Subscribers also receive special offers of publications at large discounts.

CHOICE OF BONUS BOOK OR RECORD TO ALL NEW 1967 SUBSCRIBERS

FEIFFER ON CIVIL RIGHTS. An anthology of Jules Feiffer's cartoons on civil rights. One of the finest satirists and social critics of his generation, Jules Feiffer's rapier wit scores more points in just a few panels than others can in pages of prose or hours of speech. Foreword by Bayard Rustin. 87 pp. Published exclusively by ADL. $1.00 list.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY. 33⅓ LP. Original soundtrack recording of the ADL and CBS-TV adaptation of Stephen Vincent Benet's Pulitzer Prize-winning poem of the Civil War. Starring Richard Boone and Douglas Campbell. Original music by George Kleinsinger; the CBS Concert Orchestra under the direction of Alfredo Antonini. A beautiful and moving record. $4.50 list.

Should you subscribe after January 1, 1967, you will still receive all materials included in the full 1967 subscription.

ORDER COUPON

Please send the following items: (specify quantity)

PAMPHLETS

_____F105 @ $.50	_____G417 @ $.75	_____G464 @ $.35
_____F106 @ .35	_____G422 @ .50	_____G469 @ .35
_____F116 @ .35	_____G444 @ .50	_____G471 @ .50
_____F121 @ .50	_____G458 @ .50	_____RU6 @ .35
_____G393 @ .50	_____G460 @ .50	_____R174 @ .25
_____G415 @ .75	_____G461 @ .50	_____R193 @ .15

_____copies Adlai E. Stevenson record @ $3.50

_____copies John Brown's Body record @ $1.50

DISCOUNT SCHEDULE on pamphlets—same or assorted titles:

1-9 copies: List Price. 25-49 copies: 15% discount.
10-24 copies: 10% discount. 50 or more: 20% discount.

BOOKS

_____B12s @ $2.95	_____B45 @ $1.00	_____FB3 @ $4.00
_____B22 @ 5.00	_____F120 @ .65	_____FB3s @ 2.75
_____B33 @ 6.00	_____G416 @ 1.50	_____FB5 @ 1.25
_____B33s @ 1.95	_____G434 @ 2.00	_____FB6 @ 2.95
_____B38 @ 3.95	_____G434s@ .75	_____FB6s @ .95
_____B38s @ .95	_____G443 @ 3.50	_____FB6p @ .50
_____B41 @ 8.50	_____G443s@ 1.45	_____FB7 @ 3.50
_____B43 @ 6.95	_____G455 @ 1.50	_____FB7s @ 1.45
_____B44 @ 2.50	_____FB1 @ 3.50	_____FB8 @ 1.95
_____B44s @ 1.50	_____FB1s @ 1.45

DISCOUNT SCHEDULE on books—same or assorted titles:

2-4 copies: 15% discount
5-9 copies: 20% discount
10 or more: 25% discount

$_____is enclosed for checked items above.

_____Enclosed is $5.00 for my 1967 subscription to the Annual Materials Service.

Send me either

☐ Feiffer on Civil Rights, or ☐ John Brown's Body.

$_____Total enclosed.

Orders for $2 or less must be prepaid.

Add sales tax where applicable.

The ADL Film Library includes the most comprehensive collection of films, filmstrips and records on prejudice, race, intergroup relations, extremism. For further information send for a free copy of our ADL Audio-Visual Catalog.

Please send FREE Catalogs:

_____Publications; _____Audio-Visual.

Name_____

(please print or type)

School/Organization_____

Address_____

City_____State_____Zip_____

Orders should be sent to the:

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE OF B'NAI B'RITH

315 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016

or your nearest regional office:

January 31, 1966

MEMORANDUM (CONFIDENTIAL

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Field report on Virginia and North Carolina councils

I was in Richmond from Thursday evening, January 20, until Saturday afternoon, January 22, to attend the annual meeting of VCHR. I was a house guest of Robert Combs.

The meeting was held in Schauffler Hall at Union Theological Seminary. There were only about 130 people at the banquet on Thurdday evening, although I am sure that more people participated in some part of the program. This struck me as low attendance for a council which claims nearly 3,000 members. I was told, however, that they seldom have a large attendance--that the chapters usually send twor or three representatives apiece.

One of my strongest impressions was that VCHR has a poor sense of values concerning expenditures. As you know, they moved their office into the rear of the Friends' meeting houses--in a relatively inaccessible residential neighborhood--in order to save money on rent. When I asked why the meeting was not held in some public accommodation, Bob said, "Well, the Virginia Council is funny that way..." but he did not elaborate. I suppose they think this saves money.

There seems to be a lack of imagination about fiscal matters generally. One of the attached sheets (yellow) indicates that the chapters contributed a total of $15,699.74 on quotas for 1965, and quotas for 1966 total $18,775.00. Both figures are considerably less than $10 per capita. But when I remarked that we hoped that the state councils would be able to underwrite their basic operation from memberships and small donations within three years, one woman (from Charlottesville) assured me that this was impossible. She explained that the chapters in the larger cities "are interested primarily in their local program, feel no need for the state council, and have little missionary zeal for the more rural areas of the state." I suspect that she is accurate. As you know, VCHR's finance chairman, from northern Virginia, ahs resigned -- and Bob tells me that she felt frustrated.

Combs seems to me to be "catching on." That is, he seems to be overcoming his ignorance of the field at a rapid pace, and he appeared to have a high level of commitment and energy -- whatever may be lacking in judgment. He seems to have a good relationship with reporters both locally and around the state. (In fact, he fumes when the council's stories get "Buried in the back pages," protesting his concern for "the organization.") He has, as you well know, a problem of competing ego on his board.

I might observe, in passing, that a great concefn in Richmond at present is city planning and integration of housing. Richmond proper is either already more han 50% Negro or is nearly so (depending on whom you talk to). And they seem unable to stabilize any neighborhoods into which Negroes move. (Someone asked me when the report on which Lloyd Elliott was working would be ready.)

**********'

Enroute back to Atlanta I stopped overnight in Raleigh to attend the annual banquet of the NCCHR, which was held in the student union at North Carolina State University. Since it consisted of a banquet, brief business meeting, and after-dinner speech (after which everyone scattered because the weather was bad), I had little opportunity to talk to T. Franklin Williams or other leaders.

The attendance was surprisingly good, considering the weather. There must have been about 200 people there. This was more than they expected and they had to set up an extra table.

The address by Dr. Mahlon T. Puryear of the Urban League was a lot of hocum. Unfortunately the crowd seemed to appreciate it.

As in Virginia, I came away from the meeting rather depressed. An audit report indicated that only $5,858.07 had been raised from membership fees and individual contributions during the year, with an additional $1,500.00 from organizations within the state. Yet the crowd attending seemed even better-off than the human relations council membership in other states.

Incoming

March 23, 1966

MEMORANDUM:

TO: Ed Stanfield

FROM: Paul Anthony PA

To send to our Executive Committee in early April, may I have a report from you of no more than one page, double spaced, of your work during the period January 1-March 31.

There may be little, if any, opportunity at the Executive Committee Meeting of April 18 for individual staff members to report on their work, but I am anxious that the Committee be brought up-to-date on the work of each of our professional staff and each of the departments.

Please mark April 18 on your calendar and plan to be here for the meeting.

March 28, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Louisiana School Desegregation Conference

About 750 people attended the school desegregation conference in Alexandria on March 26. All parishes except three were represented. Most participants were Negroes, but there were a few school officials, besides the usual white liberals.

Interest was high, evidenced by the fact that few wandered away from six hours of speeches and workshops--and 350-400 remained for an additional two hours on the techniques of organization for desegregation.

Sam Simmons and the rest of the Civil Rights Commission delegation (who worked hard and enthusiastically) were disappointed with the contribution of the E.F.O. people from the Office of Education. There were no top officials--not even the compliance officer for Louisiana. Most of those who came left early to catch a 3:30 plane. And they seemed confused and ill-briefed. The man who was to be chief spokesman for the O. of E. did not realize that this was expected of him until he arrived.

Thanks to the AFSC crowd and the C.R. Commission, however, it was a good conference and I think we shall see some results despite the disarray of rights forces in Louisiana.

Incidentally, we paid out $765.00 in travel money. This was not too much, but was not really necessary. They had agreed to pay six cents a mile on this one. We may be too late to kill a similar arrangement for Virginia, but will cut way down for the others.

Helen Mervis was there. She assured me that Jack Sisson shared her feeling that the Louisiana Council was boring. However, the New Orleans C.R.C. did vote to affiliate. I fear that this means little. Helen proceeded to tell me that the director of the New Orleans Community Action Agency was talking to her about staffing C.R.C. with O.E.O. funds--on the theory that their "public meetings" serve an important function of informing and educating in the community. Helen sees this as a way of obtaining "the professional direction that we must have to carry out the ambitious program that I think is necessary in New Orleans."

March 31, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Speaking engagement with the Charleston Council on human relations. 3/30/66

This meeting held in the public library, was not well attended. About 25-30 people were present. Mr. Cabaniss blamed a conflict with inter-faith Lenten Services in Charleston and a Democratic Party affair in Columbia.

I attempted, in reviewing new SRC projects and available aid to local program, to stress increased interest of foundations in problems of social change--together with the necessity of having a strong broadly-based basic organization to take advantage of project funds available.

Incidentally, I was told later that two members of the John Birch Society were present and taking notes!

Although I enjoyed this engagement, I felt a need for a longer stay. It might be better stewardship of our funds to plan, in connection with these local speeches, at least one day of knocking around--the offices of community action agencies, civil rights groups, MDTA programs--almost anything to help me get the feel of the situation. I let my schedule get scrambled this week.

April 4, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: NEGRO CANDIDATES IN ALABAMA DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY, MAY 3, 1966

FROM: J. GREENBERG, DIRECTOR-COUNSEL, NAACP LEGAL DEFENSE AND EDUCATIONAL FUND, INC.
V. JORDAN, DIRECTOR, VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT

Attached you will find (1) a form that is to be filled in in the places left blank and (2) a sample sheet showing how the form is to be filled in.

The purpose of these sheets is to aid you in notifying your County Executive Committee of your intention to have considered persons of your choosing to act as election officials. We hope that there will be no dishonesty in the tabulating of the vote in the Primary on May 3, 1966; but we cannot reasonably expect that there will be none. Accordingly, it will be to your advantage to have persons of your choosing act as election officials or at least attempt to have such persons nominated as election officials.

Election officials are these: Three inspectors, two clerks, and a returning officer. These six election officials will operate each of the polling places in your County. The persons you nominate for these six offices at each of the voting places within the precincts of your county must be qualified electors. The persons you select can serve as voting officials only at the polling places where they vote. (Ala. Code, Tit.17 SS120 and 349).

The County Executive Committee does not have to accept the people you suggest. However, the candidates have a right to suggest who should be voting officials and can be certain they will have no friendly voting officials unless names of individuals are submitted according to procedures set forth in this memorandum to you.

If you do not know the boundaries of the election districts within the precincts in your County, you can obtain a description of the boundaries of those election districts and an alphabetical list of qualified electors within each of those election districts from the office of the Judge of Probate of your County. Code of Ala. Tit. 17-584 requires that a description of the boundaries of a precinct or district, the names of places designated for voting, and an alphabetical list of electors divided according to election place be filed with the Judge of Probate and that these same details be posted on the courthouse door.

Please make a copy of each form you submit to the Executive Committee of your County and return the copy to:

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.
Director
Voter Education Project
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Ga.

PLEASE REMEMBER THAT THE FORM MUST BE SUBMITTED TO THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE BY APRIL 7, 1966, IF IT IS TO BE CONSIDERED.

SAMPLE FORM

TO THE COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY OF Dallas COUNTY,
ALABAMA

I, John Doe, residing at 110 Peach Street Selma, Alabama, and being a candidate for nomination by the Democratic Party for the office of Tax Assessor in Dallas County at the primary election to be held in Dallas County on May 3, 1966, do hereby present to the County Executive Committee for the Democratic Party of Dallas County in accordance with Code of Ala., Tit. 17 §349 the attached list of persons to be considered by the Committee as potential nominees to the positions of election officers for the primary election to be held on May 3, 1966.

Signature John Doe

Date April 6, 1966

TO THE COUNTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY
OF _____ COUNTY,
ALABAMA

I, _____ _____, residing at

_____, _____, Alabama,

and being a candidate for nomination by the Democratic Party for the office of _____ in _____ _____ at the primary election to be held in _____ on May 3, 1966, do hereby present

to the County Executive Committee for the Democratic Party of _____ County in accordance with Code of Ala.,

Tit. 17 §349 the attached list of persons to be considered by the Committee as potential nominees to the positions of election officers for the primary election to be held on May 3, 1966.

Signature _____

Date _____

ELECTION DISTRICT NO. _____ of PRECINCT NO. _____

of _____ COUNTY

1) Name _____ 2) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

3) Name _____ 4) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

5) Name _____ 6) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

ELECTION DISTRICT NO. _____ of PRECINCT NO. _____

of _____ COUNTY

1) Name _____ 2) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

3) Name _____ 4) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

5) Name _____ 6) Name _____

Address _____ Address _____

_____ _____

Signature _____

Date _____

April 5, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Lest I forget to mention it--Jean Fairfax wondered if we could appropriate some money for a small version of the school desegregation conferences for northern Florida.

I said yes. It appears that we are to have a surplus to return anyway. I agree that northern Florida needs such a conference, and it is surely in keeping with the purpose of the grant.

Do I need to clear this with Vernon Eagle?

SEA FOAM BOND

April 5, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony
FROM: Ed Stanfield
RE: School Desegregation Conference for South Carolina in Columbia, April 2.

There were about 600 people in attendance at the main meeting sponsored by the Advisory Committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission at Dreher High School. This was not as many as Sam Simmons had anticipated. There were more white persons who appeared to be school officials than there were at the Louisiana Conference.

About 200 remained for the organization session, which was held at the Masonic Lodge. Interest was sustained through this meeting, lagging only during the final speech by Benjamin Mack of SCLC, which was too long. Courtney included a very nice free dinner for this meeting.

As you know, Penn Community paid for travel, etc., for this conference with a separate grant; no expenditure from SRC's special grant.

Representation from the government agencies seemed much stronger at this one. Pete Libassi was there. So was Stanley Kruger, Director of the EEOP program for this district. And the Justice Department was represented by Terrell L. Glenn, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of South Carolina. (See attached programs.)

When we finally got around to listening to the people the comments were interesting:

> "I've never been able to see how freedom-of-choice makes sense as long as it makes it possible for a child with a school next door to 'choose' to ride a bust 22 miles twice a day because his parents must have a job."--a school principle from Kershaw County.

> "Freedom-of-choice was designed to create as much problem as possible for the Negro...The only solution is a 100% transfers--every Negro child in the county changing to white schools...I'm tired of this gradualism.--a man from Georgetown County.

"The problem is fear...We have to get workers from outside the county because local folks are afraid... In my county, which is one of the poorest, there are 4000 Negro students and about a third as many white students. But only 30 Negroes are in the white schools." --from Lee County.

"There is no desegregation in my county. The parents are afraid to even talk about it." --from Florence County.

SEATOAMBO

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Trip to Columbia, Aiken - May 4 and 5

As you know, Alice thought up a luncheon in Columbia on Wednesday, May 4, because I was to be in Aiken on May 5. She sent out invitations on the preceding Friday. Actually the number of people in attendance was surprising, but I got some reaction both in Columbia and in Aiken to the disorganized way of doing things of which this was considered one example. Both groups received well my speech on the need for shifting gears and increasing recruitment and financial support, but at least two persons realize that my appearances were not part of any orderly approach to the problem.

Alice seated me in the Wade Hampton immediately after the luncheon and talked at me for three solid hours! (2:30-5:30) Among other things she made it clear to me (eventually) that programs like "Speed-Up" designed for and with the Negro masses "who have the requisite sense of urgency and for whom the need is primary and immediate and not secondary and academic" have top priority on her agenda. She put it this way: "Ed you can be a big help to me on this fund-raising--which is something the white members of the council can and perhaps will do." I had the distinct impression that what she meant was: "If you want this done, you will have to do it, because I have more urgent business."

Memos - Incoming

July 8, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: Ed Stanfield

FROM: Paul Anthony PA

It would be highly desirable to have from you a six months report of Field Activities by July 15th. This must be submitted to the Ford Foundation and we may share it with a number of foundations and with our Members. A major portion of your report would be, I think, the reporting of all grants made to the state Councils and what is coming of it. For instance, new staff hired, Louisiana Council being reorganized, etc. A narrative report covering this should be nor more than several pages long, unless you have a strong urge to write more. Then the attachments for financial breakdowns and capsule descriptions of the relevance with the state Councils should be included.

Memos - Incoming

August 3, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: Pat Watters
Bob Anderson
Vernon Jordan
Emory Via
Al Ulmer
Ed Stanfield
Moreland Smith

FROM: Paul Anthony

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, long time associate of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, and one of the prime founders of the Southern Regional Council will be here during the week of August 8. I hope you will have an opportunity to meet her during that time.

Edith Barksdale, and perhaps others, of the Research Staff of the Civil Rights Commission will be here August 9, 10 and 11 to determine what we are doing that is overlapping, what we can do that will help each other, etc. I hope it will be possible for you to be available during that period also.

PA/km

memos - incoming

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM August 5, 1966

TO: MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL

FROM: PAUL ANTHONY

Enclosed are program reports prepared by the directors of the major departments and projects of SRC reflecting our programs and interests during the first six months of the year. It was necessary to prepare some of this as reports to our donors and we felt you might be interested. (There will, of course, be the Director's Report at the end of the year.)

One major project has not been reported on here. This is our project in Prison Reform and Criminal Rehabilitation. It has been difficult to find the proper director for this. However, we have been very fortunate to secure Mr. John O. Boone who joined the staff in mid-July. Mr. Boone has been employed by the Federal Bureau of Prisons for the past fourteen years and is uniquely qualified for this responsibility.

By SRC standards, we now have a very large staff. We have yet a great deal to accomplish in getting these highly specialized programs going well, and especially in having the various programs and projects properly coordinated for maximum results. But as a beginning, I can report to you with confidence that we have assembled here a remarkable group of people with a rare combination of professional skills and dedication to the purposes of the Council.

FIELD ACTIVITIES

Inauguration of the expanded grants-in-aid program for state councils, made possible by a grant from the Ford Foundation, has been the chief activity and achievement of SRC's Department of Field Activities during the first half of 1966. It has entailed staff changes in Arkansas and North Carolina; expansion of staff in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Virginia; and the beginning of staffed operation in Louisiana. Staff expansion is pending in Florida. Important new programs have been the result in Houston and Mississippi. (A copy of the grant schedule for the first year is attached.)

A grant to the Alabama Council made possible retention of Mr. Robert S. Valder as Associate Director on a permanent basis, upon completion of his year of internship with the Alabama organization. It also permitted filling the position of Executive Director with a very able man, Mr. Jerry Roden, who is a former Editor of the Auburn University alumni magazine and a Ph.D. candidate at the University. This simultaneous strengthening and expansion of a state council staff is the sort of result we have been working for in administration of the expanded grant program.

The grant to the Arkansas Council permitted significant improvement of the salary scale for the Director and Associate Director, as well as the clerical staff. It was greatly needed and past due. Unfortunately, the Arkansas Council has been plagued with problems. Their plan was to retire Mr. Nat Griswold as Executive Director, replace him with his long-time associate Ozell Sutton, and employ a new Associate Director. First, an able young minister who had agreed to accept the position as Associate Director felt obliged to accept, instead, a position dealing with race relations within his denominational structure. Then, while they were searching for another likely candidate, Mr. Sutton resigned to accept a position with the Community Relations Service. This is merely a coincidental series of setbacks and, under the vigorous leadership of their President, Father Walter Clancy, the Arkansas Council is moving quickly to remedy the situation.

Our increased aid to the Florida Council was designed primarily to stablize their operation. It has done so. They do plan, however, to employ an Assistant to the Director soon, on the schedule stipulated in the grant conditions. The Board and membership seem to be responding well to the call for membership recruitment and increased local support.

With their grant the Georgia Council has employed the Reverend Eddie Smith, a Southern Baptist clergyman, who will begin work August 1. He will concentrate on developing new chapters of the Council. (He probably will also take an interest in SRC's special project in prison reform and criminal rehabilitation. Mr. Smith is the author of a book on capital punishment.)

The Louisiana Council has employed an Executive Director for the first time since 1957. She is Mrs. Patricia B. Miller, a former business woman who has recently earned a master's degree in counselling at Southern University. The Council is in the process of setting up an office in Baton Rouge.

The Mississippi Council's grant is being used primarily for work with students and on the campuses of the state. Mr. William Silver, who was employed to do this work last September, resigned in June to become Director of the Young Democrats of Mississippi. The Council provided a dozen work scholarships for students to assist in this work during the second semester of the last school year, and they will do so again during the next semester.

North Carolina's grant was intended to stabilize their operation, and it has enabled them to employ a uniquely qualified Executive Director. Mr. William C. Allred, formerly with the Pilot Life Insurance Company of Greensboro, received this spring a M.A. degree in history from Emory University. His thesis was, "A History of the Southern Regional Council: 1943-1961." Allred began work July 1 and already shows promise of vigorous leadership.

The South Carolina Council grant has been used thus far to employ three student assistants, all of whom are interested in careers in the field of human relations. It is anticipated that a full-time assistant to the director will be employed in September.

The Tennessee Council combined their grant with good fortune to secure the services of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wiersema, a youthful husband-wife team, as Assistants to the Director. Both come to the Council after extensive experience as volunteers in the civil rights movement and as employees of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The Houston Council used a modest sum to secure the services of eight VISTA volunteers to work in slum areas of Houston.

Through our grant conditions and through emphasis in meetings and conversation we have stressed development of chapter organizations and programs, increased membership, and increased local financial support for all state councils. It is our intention that the resources provided by the Ford grant for this purpose shall be used to develop organizational strength and effectiveness, as well as to meet program needs.

Definite steps have been taken to upgrade the state council staffs, which was a second purpose of the Ford grant. Whereas it was previously impossible to bring state council staffs together more than once or twice each year, we have had two such conferences in this first half and plan two others. In addition to these, all of the Executive Directors except one will participate in a week-long Community Leadership Laboratory at Emory University, July 24-31. They were able to take advantage of this training opportunity because of the stipulation that the expanded-aid grants were to be used, in small part, for attendance at such "professionally edifying" conferences.

One of the most promising among other achievements of this first half of the year, was the staffing of Rural Advancement Projects in Alabama and Florida. (A similar project was begun in Georgia last fall, and one has been in South Carolina for several years.) Mr. Lewis Black has been employed by the Alabama Council and Mr. LaVert Taylor by the Florida Council. The work is carried out in cooperation with the National Sharecroppers Fund. In addition to administering grants which make it possible, SRC assists the Rural Advancement Projects through the work of Mr. Al Ulmer, Director of our Community Organization Project.

One interesting and helpful innovation was a meeting of the Presidents of the State Councils held on June 17 and 18 in Atlanta. This was the first time the Presidents had been brought together for discussions of the philosophy, purpose, and problems of State Councils -- and they asked that this be done annually.

Under the direction of Mrs. M. E. Tilly a significant meeting was held in Atlanta on March 24 at which time heads of 14 major national women's organizations came together to plan a joint program of encouraging court reform and related needs. Statewide meetings are planned with the objective of creating in most southern communities vigorous groups of women who will look intensively at the local law enforcement and court practices and seek means of improving them. We feel this program could have a considerable impact on the region.

Another major activity of the Field Director has been in connection with a series of conferences on school desegregation held in nine states this spring. Funds administered through SRC's Field Department brought community leaders from throughout each state to the conferences and an extra session on community organization for effective desegregation. The conferences were sponsored by the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights. Sessions were planned and carried out jointly with other agencies.

Still another Field Activities program was our Paperback Books Project. Just gathering momentum in May and June, the project will distribute about 40,000 paperback books throughout the South in an experiment to determine ways of encouraging book use and library services, as well as book ownership, among those who have not had much access to books.

There have been, of course, many other continuing and incidental tasks for the Director of Field Activities. Three meetings of the Southern Interagency Conference, which we serve as its Secretariat, were held during the period covered by this report. The Field Director participated as a consultant in a meeting of the Personnel Directors from the largest Post Offices in the South, sponsored by the Civil Rights Compliance Office of the Department's Personnel Bureau. Many meetings of State Council boards were attended, both to be of assistance where possible, and to learn more about each Council, its personalities, and its problems. And there were special events such as the Poverty Conference in Mississippi, a conference for local council officers and committee chairmen in Florida, and the White House Conference in Washington on June 1 and 2.

Plans for the remainder of the year include preparation of a manual for fund-raising, assistance with fund-raising and membership recruitment drives, and -- hopefully -- preparation of a program of education on race and race relations aimed at the moderate and indifferent white people of the South.

SCHEDULE OF REGULAR GRANTS-IN-AID TO STATE COUNCILS 1966

Alabama	$ 5,500
Arkansas	4,600
Florida	4,600
Georgia	4,600
Louisiana	3,200
Mississippi	4,800
North Carolina	4,800
South Carolina	4,600
Tennessee	4,600
Virginia	4.600
Houston	1,800
Contingency	2,000
George S. Mitchell Award	1,000
TOTAL	$50,700

* * *

EXPANDED GRANTS-IN-AID PROGRAM FOR 1966
TO STATE COUNCILS ON HUMAN RELATIONS*

Alabama	$ 9,000
Arkansas	8,000
Florida	7,000
Georgia	9,000
Louisiana	10,000

Mississippi	$ 16,750
North Carolina	8,000
South Carolina	9,000
Tennessee	11,000
Virginia	8,250
Houston (Tex.)	4,000
TOTAL	$100,000

*Made possible by a three-year Ford Foundation grant. Grants to state councils iill be revised for the second year, and again for the third, in the light of their progress toward attaining both substantially increased membership and financial support from the membership of the several state councils.

Edwin Standfield
Director of Field Activities

RESEARCH AND INFORMATION

1. Voter Book -- Most of the time of the Director of Information has been spent in the major part of researching and writing in collaboration with Reese Cleghorn of the Atlanta Journal on current political effects and the long-range implications of the entrance of Negro voters in full into the South's democracy. This is the book which SRC contracted with Harcourt, Brace & World to produce. It had originally been scheduled for publication in October, 1966. A recent decision has been to postpone this until February or March, 1967, in order to include a final chapter on the outcome of the fall elections this year. While not a history of VEP as such, the book draws heavily on the first VEP research, as well as other research materials of SRC.

2. New South -- The revamping of New South in its new quarterly format has been a major concern. The first two issues contained articles of substance by such writers as Leslie Dunbar, James Silver, Margaret Long, Robert Coles, August Meier, Finley Campbell and Vincent Harding. A news round-up section contains summaries of developments in each of the eleven states, a compilation not available elsewhere, and a permanent record of value to research. Efforts are made to find for each issue material close to the reality of what is happening in the South. A proposal for radical innovations in community planning in Mississippi and a report of a day in the life of a southern city ghetto resident are examples. The need for research-grounded, yet pertinent articles, is great; several, including a report on a study of the Negro family in Birmingham, are in the works. The summer issue, in preparation, will include coverage of the Meredith Mississippi march and discussion of black power. Many of the Council's information and research interests are reflected in the articles published and commissioned, and special distribution is given to issues of the magazine or to reprints from it.

3. Other publications have included a warning on the pitfalls of co-ops and credit unions by Al Ulmer, addressing himself to grass roots leaders looking for cure-alls; "Neighborhood Stabilization: A Program," by Moreland Smith, setting out how community organization can save a neighborhood from block-busting and develop racial balance; another study by Mr. Ulmer, a pioneering how-to approach on the all-important subject of community organization in southern Negro slums, based on his experience in Vine City; "The Continuing Crisis," a joint publication with the American Jewish Committee describing the range of racial and poverty problems in the South, and warning of the possibility of disruptions in the South similar to those in the northern ghettos; a handbook on appropriate actions to improve southern justice developed by Mrs. M. E. Tilly for use with women's groups throughout the South.

A press release has been issued urging compliance with new school desegregation guidelines. The Voter Education Project has issued press releases on the election results in Alabama and South Carolina, on voting effort violence as a commentary on the shooting of James Meredith, and an analysis of the effectiveness of federal registrars.

New South Managing Editor, Robert Anderson, processed the above reports editorially. He also contributed to the editing of the first new New South and development of the second, as did Margaret Long.

4. In preparation -- Dr. Robert Coles will develop a report on conditions in Negro communities where past major civil rights demonstrations have occurred. Wilson Minor is preparing a report on the Citizens Council, past and present, and Robert Sherrill is developing a report on other white hate groups, including the Klan. These are a part of a study, again jointly with the American Jewish Committee, of forces competing for the attention of the South. Also part of this study is a survey by Anthony Whitfield, an SRC summer intern, of intergroup relations organizations regarding their efforts to influence white Southerners. Dean B. R. Brazeal of Morehouse College is developing a series of studies on voter registration in selected Georgia counties, contrasting the situation today with that of 1956 when he did a similar survey. Other projects include a study of the South's portion of the 100 poorest counties in the nation (which is most of them); a study of welfare expenditures in the South; a plan for state government action in the various social problems of the South; a study of the mechanics of housing desegregation in Atlanta, a set of instructions for low-income families on how to buy a house or rent an apartment; a study of 1966 (including fall) school desegregation developments, and various other projects.

Samuel Adams, Director of Research

Pat Watters, Director of Information

LABOR EDUCATION PROJECT

Most of the work of the Labor Project falls into three broad categories: labor education, consultation and liaison, and employment problems. This report will attempt to summarize the activities which have taken place in each of these areas without detailing the on-going process of administration, preparation, informal materials development, and the interaction with the continuing programs of the Council.

Labor Education -- The Project's involvement in education activities has varied from participations of one day to one month in duration, and from an intense exploration of civil rights problems confronting southern unions to a rather tangential handling of such problems as they relate to the day-to-day concerns of a union.

In January the Director spent one month heading the National Institute of Labor Education's Southern Union Staff Institute. This Institute was held at the University of Georgia in cooperation with the AFL-CIO Departments of Civil Rights and Education. It was a useful and intensive educational experience providing tool courses, courses in social and economic understanding, and a fairly concentrated dose of subjects related to racial relations and civil rights.

The Virginia AFL-CIO conducted a weekend education conference in cooperation with the AFL-CIO Education Department. The Director of the Labor Project taught four classes and made one general presentation to the entire group. The Tri-State School, sponsored by the state AFL-CIO's in Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina in cooperation with the national AFL-CIO Education Department, provided another opportunity for teaching a class and holding a general session on the changing South.

The Labor Project participated in two conferences sponsored by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. One of these was held in Atlanta for the Union's regional organizing staff and the other at Daytona Beach for local union leadership from throughout the region.

Two further weekend institutes were worked out cooperatively with the Labor Project and the Education Department of the United Steelworkers of America and their District 36-G (Gulf Coast) Education Coordinator. One conference was held in Tampa, Florida, and the other in New Orleans. In each case the Project provided approximately one-half of the instruction.

The Director also taught in a one-week summer school for members of the United Rubber Workers of America who held a regional program at the Blue Ridge Assembly grounds at Black Mountain, North Carolina.

The Project participated in a one-day regional meeting of the American Federation of Teachers in Atlanta.

The Director has taken several opportunities to explore with institutions of higher learning the possibility of their developing some continuing interest in the area of labor education. This activity has been confined primarily to two states to date. Two Georgia institutions have been approached through members of the faculty and administration who were interested in such possibilities. These moves have been made in consultation with appropriate persons within the labor movement. This effort must be recognized as little more than an attempt to stimulate a beginning interest. Potentially, it is a useful way to expand labor education opportunities within the region.

Consultation and Liaison -- On a number of items which might be included under this heading the Labor Project has worked cooperatively with the Southern Office of the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department. Such items include assistance with a proposed program for the installation of the regional Equal Employment Opportunities Commission Director, a conference sponsored by the Southern Student Organizing Committee held in Durham on "Students and Labor" in which both the Labor Project Director and the head of the Southern Office of the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department participated. Assistance was offered in settling problems which had arisen between a local civil rights group and a union engaged in an organizing campaign. An assessment was made in Alabama of the impact of the primary election on the Alabama labor movement in regards to racial relations. Both of these latter two activities were in cooperation with the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department.

During the period of this report the Labor Project has had an opportunity to work with several Councils on Human Relations on a variety of problems. This activity has included work with state councils in Georgia, South Carolina, and Alabama, and local councils in Atlanta and Palm Beach. Somewhat similar work has been done in cooperation with the Urban League, the NAACP, Operation Breadbasket, and the American Friends Service Committee.

The Director spoke to a Southern Student Organizing Committee conference in Atlanta, to an American Friends Service Committee staff and advisory group, to the Daytona Beach Forum, and to the orientation conference for "Operation Speed-Up," sponsored by the South Carolina Council on Human Relations.

The Director was asked to serve on the Task Force on Economic Security for the White House Conference, "To Fulfill These Rights." This entailed several task force meetings in Washington and ultimately meant that the Director was involved as the spokesman for a panel appearing before four workshops at the White House Conference itself.

A few days were profitably spent in mediating between the union staff involved in organizing migrant laborers and an agency with which SRC has frequently cooperated, over differences that had arisen regarding approaches to migrant labor problems. This was an interesting and informative interlude. The outcome at this point seems to be a healthy one.

A few days were spent in Detroit attending conferences of the University Labor Education Association, the AFL-CIO Labor Educators, and Local 189 (Workers Education Local) of the American Federation of Teachers. This time was largely devoted to promotion and contact work and has led to further programs.

A regional conference sponsored by the U. S. Department of Labor, in cooperation with SRC and a few other agencies, involved the Labor Project directly. This conference was aimed at reaching civil rights and other groups who have contact with disadvantaged persons in terms of the program offerings of the Department of Labor. It was an effort on the Department's part to bridge the gap between their program proposals and policies and actually reaching the people who should be affected by those programs.

Employment Problems -- Although the Labor Project is not specifically committed to working in the area of employment discrimination, it is difficult, and unwise, to side-step these problems altogether. During the course of the past few months we have participated in a national apprenticeship study (our part was limited to the metropolitan Atlanta area) and have worked cooperatively with the Southern Office of the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department in exploring and promoting the idea of an apprenticeship information center. Similarly, with the Civil Rights Department, we have been able to give some assistance in a study which they are doing cooperatively with other organizations regarding discriminatory practices in employment services. Both of our programs have worked cooperatively with the Atlanta Council on Human Relations in their interest to report the difficulties encountered in getting reliable information about apprenticeship and other training programs in the Atlanta metropolitan area.

From time to time employment requests come to the Council and are channelled through the Labor Project. These range from individuals seeking employment to companies seeking individuals in a variety of classifications. In some cases, we are able to handle such requests fairly directly, but usually they are referred to other agencies such as the National Urban League, Operation Breadbasket, or one of the vocational schools. The Labor Project has involved the AFL-CIO Civil Rights Department's Southern Office in discussions with persons working with the Vine City Council in Atlanta regarding employment and training opportunities for disadvantaged youth.

The Director was asked to participate in a training program of Post Office Department personnel staff from throughout the region to discuss the problems of minority groups as they relate to employment both outside and inside the federal service.

The Project has been concerned with developing some of the background materials and locating outside staff for the conduct of an unemployment study. Unfortunately, this project has not been brought to fulfillment.

In Conclusion -- It is envisioned that the main lines of the Labor Project's work will continue to be in the three areas outlined above. Increasingly, the formal program will involve labor education activities. Some of these will be developed at the Labor Project's initiative and others will continue to be those developed by the labor movement with the Project being simply a participant. The Liaison and consultation work will continue and is a natural outgrowth of the Project's contact with unions and governmental and private agencies. Our concern with employment opportunities will not diminish but is likely to find expression largely in stimulating interest in public policy and in making referrals to those groups most actively involved in this work. At this point it seems fair to say that the activities of the Labor Project continue to grow and the prospects for the immediate future are good that its services will not only be needed but sought after.

Emory F. Via, Director

Labor Education Project

URBAN PLANNING PROJECT

Consultation Trip (Washington, D.C.) -- The primary purpose of this trip was to talk with Secretary Robert C. Weaver, Department of Housing and Urban Development. A previous trip to Washington in February had prepared the way for this conference. The meeting allowed the Urban Planning Project Director to explain to Dr. Weaver the purposes and plans of the Southern Regional Council's Urban Planning Project and to ask him how SRC might work with HUD in an informal manner to further equal opportunity in housing and equal treatment in and access to urban facilities. Our discussion was cordial and, I believe, meaningful. Afterwards, I spoke with others at HUD and was impressed with their interest in and openness toward our project.

While in Washington I contacted other groups such as Urban America, Inc., the American Institute of Planners, the American Institute of Architects, and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, which have programs related to our own. I spoke with the directors of organizations which have successfully stablized integrated or integrating neighborhoods. Each of these groups represents a different type of organization with individual goals and programs to realize them. It is my hope that we may draw together the experiences of Washington Neighbors, Inc., Baltimore Neighborhoods, Inc., and West Mt. Airy Neighbors, Philadelphia, and publish their stories in three separate pamphlets which could be distributed together. Mr. Robert Anderson, editor of New South, asked Mr. Edward Holmgren of Baltimore Neighborhoods, Inc., to write an article on housing in Baltimore for inclusion in an issue of New South.

Urban Planning Analysis (Charlotte, North Carolina) -- In March I talked with the Mayor and City Manager in Charlotte about urban renewal plans for their city and the problems engendered by rapid growth. I suggested that I could assess their plans as an impartial third party and give my opinion as to whether or not Charlotte was planning for an open city. Such analysis might be of value to them were they to apply for additional federal funds.

Urban Renewal and Confrontation (Fort Lauderdale, Florida) -- In February James Hibben, Executive Director, Urban Renewal Agency, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, consulted me about the problems of housing segregation and slums in Fort Lauderdale. Mr. Hibben appeared to want to improve the housing situation for Fort Lauderdale Negroes, but he did not believe that many changes were possible without pressure on the present city government power structure. He hoped for SRC's advice, but he particularly hoped to use us as intermediary between his office and the Negro community to inform the Negro community of the two urban renewal plans under consideration. By this means he expected to elicit an expression of opinions and desires from Fort Lauderdale Negroes, believing that if he had pressure from them he would be able to arouse support for at least some urban renewal by the city government.

The Urban Planning Project made this contact. At the invitation of the Fort Lauderdale NAACP I discussed with their Board the two urban renewal plans under consideration by the city. We talked with candor about the pros and cons of the plans and about the possibility of the city's carrying through on any urban renewal at all. I told them at that time they should make a careful documentation through newspaper clips, photographs, letters and records of phone calls first of the conditions in the Negro section as proof of the need for action, and second of the fight to persuade the city government to undertake rehabilitation and renewal in the present Negro section. This documentation, if the effort is successful, could serve as guide and encouragement to other cities which have similarly conservative leadership. If the pressure for urban renewal is unsuccessful, the documentation would be part of our contention to the federal government that the matter of housing for non-whites, especially low income non-whites, cannot be left in the hands of local officials or implemented according to the whim of local city government in the South.

Both Mr. Hibben and the Fort Lauderdale NAACP have kept the Urban Planning Project constantly informed of the progress and difficulties of the urban renewal proposal as viewed from their separate positions. Fort Lauderdale will be a test case for SRC-UPP involvement in a specific way with local urban planning projects.

Atlanta Study -- As part of a four-city study prepared for the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing the Southern Regional Council was asked to undertake a survey of the availability of sales and rental housing in predominately white areas of Atlanta.

The purpose of the NCDH study was to establish the need, housing availability and climate for acceptance for integrated housing in American cities in general and in the four study cities of Rochester, Denver, Providence and Atlanta in particular. Mr. Samuel Adams, Director of Research, compiled statistics and composed the report on availability in Atlanta for SRC's part of the coordinated report.

PROGRAMS UNDER CONSIDERATION:

Urban Planning Advisors -- request a group of top men from different academic disciplines and business and professional areas to serve as advisors for consultation in various urban problems in the South. With this in mind, I will meet with Dr. Constantinos Doxiadis, internationally renowned urban planner from Athens, Greece, in Aspen, Colorado, the last of July. Dr. Doxiadis will be in Aspen to receive the Aspen Award for achievement in the humanities.

Southern Demonstration Cities -- select carefully four southern cities to approach as "demonstration cities" with the hope of working with the city governments and minority groups for open housing and for involvement of the disadvantaged in planning similar to the Fort Lauderdale Project.

Federal Funds and Housing Segregation -- document the ways communities are using federal funds to buttress segregated housing with the idea of influencing future legislation.

PUBLICATIONS:

"Neighborhood Stabilization: A Program" -- a pamphlet prepared by the Urban Planning Project and distributed to certain SRC mailing categories as well as to those communities which request such information.

In process is a pamphlet on buying a house with particular emphiasis on the problems encountered by Negroes buying in "white" neighborhoods. In addition, we hope to publish a trilogy of experience papers on housing in integrated neighborhoods in Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia.

Education -- We are engaged in probing discussions with members of departments of planning in colleges and universities regarding a new orientation for the indoctrination of planners so that they would be planning with the high ethical concept of responsibility to the total community.

Resource Function -- There have been a number of inquiries about the problems of housing in Southern communities generally and about specific problems in certain cities such as Virginia Beach, Virginia, and Jacksonville, Florida.

A particularly exiiting and unexpected aspect of the Urban Planning Project has been the response of young planners and architects around the country. I am continuing a dialogue with several of these young men about basic philosophy in urban planning. Such interest could be the basis for a summer project utilizing these young men and their training either for survey and analysis of particular cities or for creating bold and innovative schemes to establish equal opportunity in housing in the South.

It will soon be necessary to evaluate our gains and successes and to analyze our failures and difficulties in some depth. An informal conference on urban problems in the South for SRC staff and others who share our interests might be the most economical and effective way to confront action with reflection and theoretical solutions with actual problems.

Moreland Griffith Smith, Director
Urban Planning Project

COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION PROJECT

The Community Organization Project is primarily concerned with the efforts of people, rural and urban, in organizing themselves in self-help programs, to learn from these efforts, to determine the extent to which such efforts can attract the support and assistance of public and private agencies, and to encourage that support. On a limited basis, the project itself offers staff, consultative and financial assistance to such efforts.

The observations have, to date, led to two publications both prepared by the project director and both aimed for the rather large group of persons and agencies interested in helping the poor. These publications, both issued as SRC Special Reports, are "A City Slum -- Poor People and Problems," and "Cooperatives, Credit Unions and Poor People."

Through the Project we have been able to support the program of the Rural Advancement Project in two additional states. This is a joint effort on the part of the National Sharecroppers Fund and the Southern Regional Council by which funds and technical assistance are provided the state Councils on Human Relations to enable them to employ a full-time person to work in rural areas. Earlier we were able to support this effort in South Carolina and Georgia. Now we are able to do so in Florida and Alabama also. All four state councils have acquired staff and are conducting programs similar to those reflected in the remainder of this report. They are, in addition, developing a number of programs reflecting the needs and interests of the four state organizations.

Much of the concern of this Project has been in attracting the interest of other agencies and/or in encouraging cooperative efforts. For instance, the Project helped set up a self-help housing conference in Lake Worth, Florida, tri-sponsored by SRC, the Florida Migrant Mission, and the American Friends Service Committee. We acted as convener for a planning conference to discuss cooperative training and education. Major participants were the Cooperative League of the U. S. A., the National Sharecroppers Fund, the Office of Economic Opportunity, and the Southern Consumers' Cooperative. SRC is co-sponsor with the Encampment for Citizenship of an Encampment program at Barbourville, Kentucky. We have assisted in planning the curriculum, recruiting students and the project director has spent one week with the group this summer.

Perhaps most important, the project has devoted substantial time in working with the staff of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., to determine the opportunities which may exist for that organization to be of help in this region. It is premature to report on the results, but at this point we are encouraged by the interest shown and excited by the possibilities of the involvement of that important agency.

The project director has consulted with officials of the Peace Corps on southern-based training programs and has been involved in training sessions with VISTA volunteers. Work has been done with oyster fishermen at Daufauski Island, South Carolina, and the Project bore the cost of travel expenses of representatives from that community for a trip to Washington to determine if the Economic Development Administration could provide a much needed boat for the community. In cooperation with Penn Community Center we have worked in Pritchardsville, South Carolina, on a self-help housing program. Assistance has been given the Vine City (Atlanta) Candle Cooperative in an application for a $1,000 loan from the United Presbyterian Church, USA.

Other technical assistance offered by the Project director and/or other consultants include:

(1) Wilcox County, Alabama -- Assistance to persons interested in establishing a credit union, a housing project, and a 600-acre cooperative farming experiment.

(2) Nottaway, Amelia and Prince Edward Counties, Virginia -- Participation in an orientation program for students who will work during the summer in these counties. The project director will spend a 10-day period during mid-summer working with this group.

(3) Pearl City, Florida -- Assistance to members of the Pearl City Civic League in preparing a community action proposal for OEO for recreation centers and civic education programs. A project grant of $150 was also made to help defray the costs of surveys needed for the proposal.

(4) Selma, Alabama (Inter-Religious Project) -- A consultant was provided to spend the summer with the Freedom Quilting Cooperative in Dallas and Wilcox Counties. Miss Lois Deslonde is attempting to improve the quality of the quilts, diversify the products of the Co-Op, and is conducting classes in Co-Op education. A project grant of $300 has been made, and an additional grant of the same amount is likely. This cooperative involved more than 125 persons.

(5) Jackson, Mississippi (Poor People's Corporation) -- For a three-month period two consultants are being provided for the areas of cooperative education and managerial skills.

(6) Sumter, Marengo and Wilcox Counties, Alabama -- A consultant has been provided to work with groups in these counties interested in organizing credit unions.

(7) Lee County, South Carolina -- The project director is working with a group in this county interested in establishing a credit union and a buying club.

Several work-scholarships have been awarded to students working during the summer under the auspices of local organizations. These scholarships, in the amount of $150 each have been awarded to:

(1) Miss Linda Baughn, a student from Fisk University, to work in a project in the Nashville slum area under the direction of the Tennessee and Nashville Councils on Human Relations.

(2) Miss Carol Edwards to work in Amelia County, Virginia in a program to establish a local newspaper which will attempt to train people to write and publish their own newspaper after the end of the summer through the Virginia Students for Civil Rights Committee.

(3) Miss Linda Maury to work with the East Alabama Council on Human Relations on a program concerned with Negro students who will enter the formerly white schools in September.

(4) Mr. John Reiman, a Morehouse College student, to work in Negro and white slums in Atlanta to determine if slum dwellers will respond to local self-interest issues and if so, what issues.

(5) Miss Jerrilyn McGee, a student from Clark College, is working in a slum area of Atlanta with 20 children ranging from ages 5 to 15. Purposes are to prepare a report on the life of a child in a slum area, to interest parents in seeking nursery and day-care facilities for their children.

The Project has hoped to determine ways to involve churches to the point of having them express an interest in and establishing programs with and for the poor. Thus far, the results are encouraging.

A large Negro church in Atlanta, Friendship Baptist, has developed a staffed program of work in several slum areas near the church. Work has ranged from attempting to get better recreational facilities and programs for the areas to a successful campaign to have local merchants stop the sale of glue to children. Recently, a large white church, Trinity Presbyterian, has become interested, has contributed $1,300 to the Project, and is working closely with Friendship Baptist in expanding the program.

We are convinced that the Project is showing that poor people want to help themselves, and can do so given proper guidance, technical assistance, and adequate resources.

Al Ulmer, Director

Community Organization Project

VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT

In the first six months of its existence, the current Voter Education Project has assisted a total of 76 different programs. The emphasis thus far has been on voter registration. However, several programs of citizenship education and leadership training have been funded.

As the state-by-state tables show, there is much to be done in the field of voter registration in the South, depsite the striking advances made in recent years. At present, barely half the Negroes of voting age in the South are registered. The white registration is nearly three-fourths.

Sizable increases still will have to be made in Negro registration if the level of democratic participation in the South is to be raised. So it is natural that local committees and citizenship organizations presently are stressing registration. But it is to be expected that emphasis will shift to citizenship education and leadership training as the registration totals move upward. The Voter Education Project will continue to take the initiative in stimulating programs of education and training.

Thus far, programs associated with the Voter Education Project have registered nearly 50,000 persons. However, there are a few projects which have not yet submitted final reports. And there are a number of projects, particularly in Georgia and Mississippi, which have not yet had time to submit reports.

Moreover, it should be noted that registration drives tend to have a snowballing effect. When one person who has never registered goes to the courthouse and does so, he tells his relatives and neighbors. A few days later, the relatives and neighbors may go and register. So 20 or more persons eventually may register because one person was reached in a registration drive.

We know this occurs. Our reports from rural counties tell us that some plantation workers will not go register until others do. So a breakthrough produces ever-widening circles of new voters.

A study we have just completed shows the impact of organized registration drives and federal examiners on Negro registration. The figures follow a predictable pattern, but we feel that they are nevertheless interesting. Registration figures are significantly lower in counties with neither examiners nor organized drives.

Where heavy new registration occurs, the question naturally arises: Will these newly registered citizens vote?

Our study of the Alabama primary indicates that they will. We estimate that nearly three-fourths of Negro registration voted in the May 3 primary.

Much depends, of course, on circumstances and issues, and the issues in the Alabama primary were sharply drawn. All the same, we felt that the Alabama turnout was remarkably high.

It is here that citizenship education and leadership training come into the picture. Before the Alabama primary, the Lee County League of Women Voters received from us a grant of $200. With this modest sum, the League transported voting machines throughout the county so that 2,500 new voters, of whom 1,300 were illiterate, could become accustomed to using this rather imposing device before the election.

Now we are granting another small amount -- $775 - to the same organization for the purpose of producing three television programs on citizenship education for showing in Alabama and, we hope, elsewhere. The programs will be produced in cooperation with the drama departments of Tuskegee Institute and Auburn University.

Another pre-primary program of voter education was conducted in Macon County. We hope this program will be the forerunner of similar programs in other rural areas.

In the field of leadership training, a one-day institute was held in Alabama in cooperation with the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. A similar institute was held later in South Carolina.

These institutes schooled candidates and poll watchers in election laws and election procedures. After the Alabama primaries, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund filed suits regarding Greene County and a legislative district in East Alabama growing out of instructions provided at the pre-election institute.

Also, we have allocated a small grant for a six-day leadership training workshop to be held later this month at Frogmore, South Carolina for Negro candidates and their campaign workers.

Another forthcoming project will be supported through the Southern Regional Office of the National Urban League. It will seek to train community leaders in both urban and rural settings -- Jacksonville, Florida, and Hobson City, Alabama.

We are also working to increase student participation in programs sponsored through the Voter Education Project. VEP has been fortunate during the summer in having the services of William R. Beardslee, a Haverford College student, who is directing our efforts in this area.

Many of our registration programs report that young people are the mainstays of such activities as door-to-door canvassing. As an example of our efforts to encourage the use of students in VEP-assisted programs, we recently made a grant to the Lynchburg, Virginia Voters League for five students and a coordinator.

We also assisted the National YWCA in a spring registration campaign conducted by 247 college students in six localities. These students registered 3,022 persons -- a figure not included in our state-by-state VEP total.

One of the better programs with which we are associated is being operated in Southside Virginia by the Virginia Students Civil Rights Committee.

Mr. Beardslee recommends that we expand the use of students in VEP. He proposes recruitment through deans of Negro colleges and through human-relations organizations.

It should be noted that not all of our programs are limited to a single county. The Virginia Students Civil Rights Committee works in nine counties. The Arkansas Council on Human Relations operates a program in 16 counties. Another program covers 19 counties in West Tennessee.

Thus far, for all programs, we have committed a total of $125,962.30. Grants to VEP total $325,000.

Our research department answers requests for information on registration and voting from sources ranging from the New York Times and television networks to local news media and candidates.

The research reports sent to us from VEP-assisted programs regularly provide some of the most interesting reading material available concerning the South and southern problems. Through these reports we watch directors of these programs -- for the most part, local people -- meet and conquer such oft-mentioned problems as fear, intimidation, suspicion, apathy, resignation, dissension and the hostility of white officials.

Is it worthwhile? For that answer we turn to the director of the registration program in Charleston, South Carolina. In pen-and-ink at the bottom of his final statistical report, he writes:

> "We tried as hard as we could to get as many to register as possible. We are not too happy. But 783 new registered voters would never have been if it were not for the Southern Regional Council, Inc."

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., Director
Voter Education Project

file

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

ROY WILKINS, Chairman
ARNOLD ARONSON, Secretary
JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR., Counsel
CLARENCE M. MITCHELL, Legislative Chairman
MARVIN CAPLAN, Director Washington Office
J. FRANCIS POHLHAUS, Special Consultant

2027 Mass. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036 phone 234-4722 • New York address: 20 West 40th St. New York 18, phone BRyant 9-1400

MEMO: No. 91
Aug.22, 1966

TO: COOPERATING ORGANIZATIONS
FROM: ARNOLD ARONSON, SECRETARY

MINIMUM WAGE BILL CLEARED FOR SENATE ACTION

The Senate may start considering by the end of this week an indispensable adjunct to the full enjoyment of civil rights: improvements in the federal minimum wage.

As unanimously reported out by the Senate Labor Committee, the bill (H.R.13712) contains one major improvement over the measure the House passed on May 26. Workers already covered by the federal minimum wage law would get the full benefits of the bill one year sooner. The present minimum of $1.25 an hour would be increased to $1.40 on February 1, 1967 and to $1.60 on February 1, 1968. The House, acting on a suggestion by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.), stretched out the final step so that the $1.60 an hour increase would not be reached until February 1969.

Coverage for New Workers

An estimated 7.180 million new workers would be covered by the bill. Many of them are workers in restaurants, laundries, hotels and hospitals--employers of large numbers of Negroes, Puerto Ricans and others of the working poor. For newly-covered workers the minimum wage under both the House and Senate bills would start at $1 an hour in 1967 and move upward in a series of 15 cent increases until the $1.60 an hour minimum was reached in 1971.

For farm workers who would be covered by the bill for the first time, the automatic increases would stop when they reached $1.30 an hour in 1969.

Sheepherders and Janitors Exempt

The Committee bill would extend coverage to about 390,000 farm workers. The House bill would have covered somewhere between 370,000 and 400,000. Exempt from coverage in the version before the Senate are about 10,000 sheepherders and other livestock range workers. But about 30,000 sugar processing workers were added.

The Senate Committee cut out of its bill about 900,000 school janitors and other blue-collar workers whom the House included.

However, the bill contains substantial improvements in wage and coverage and merits our full support. We urge our organizations now to write or wire all Senators urging them:

(1) to oppose any weakening amendments when the bill reaches the floor, and

(2) to support any efforts to broaden coverage.

"Only Half The Picture" Still Available

Copies of the Leadership Conference pamphlet, "Only Half The Picture," which discusses the civil rights implications of minimum wage, may still be obtained from this office. The price is $10 a hundred, $90 a 1,000 and the publication answers the questions of the opposition and presents the case for wage benefits that make many other rights meaningful.

DID YOUR PAPER COMMENT ON THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL?

The Leadership Conference is interested in collecting editorial reaction to House passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1966. If your local paper discussed the bill please send the editorial on to us. It helps give us some idea of the kind of opposition and support that exists for the bill outside of Washington.

* * * * *

file - Mimos - Incoming

PA - ds this too close to political activity? Ed L

Georgia Council ON HUMAN RELATIONS

52 Fairlie Street, N. W. • 404/525-6468 • Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Mighty close
PS

Date: 9/2/66

To: Negro Voters of the 2nd Congressional District

From: Hubert D. Thomas

Subject: Know How To Mark Your Ballot
On September 14, 1966

Paul Lawrence Dunbar said years ago, as he studied the plight of the Negro shortly after slavery, "The power to vote is the power to rule".

How well the Negro benefits out of the coming elections is going to depend on how much effort he puts forth to get to the polls and use his ballot on election day.

You are invited to attend a Voter Election Mass Meeting on Sunday, September 11, 1966, 4:00 p. m. at the First Baptist Church, corner of Madison and Calhoun Streets, Thomasville, Georgia.

Historical data will be presented on all candidates. From the information that you will receive at this workshop, you should know how to mark your ballot on September 14, and November 8, 1966.

MR. JOSEPH HENDRICKS, PRESIDENT
MRS. FRANCES PAULEY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
THE REVEREND AUSTIN FORD, FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT
REV. C. S. HAMILTON, SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT
MRS. HARRY V. RICHARDSON, SECRETARY
MR. JOHNNY GLUSTROM, TREASURER
THE REVEREND OLIVER W. HOLMES, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR

Ed. Stanfield

Memos - Incoming

Southern Regional Council Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

October 12, 1966

TO: PROFESSIONAL STAFF

FROM: JOHN O. BOONE

Request that you review the attached material which will be mailed to the Advisory Committee of the Project on Penal Reform and Criminal Rehabilitation. The Rapporteurs' Summaries will not be discussed at the Advisory Committee Meeting but hopefully, will provide the broad frame of reference that planners for a reform project need.

I would appreciate it if you would join us in a discussion of the project proposals for a short period this afternoon, before we make bold to present them to the Advisory Committee.

Thank you.

ADMINISTRATION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Examination of the functional structures of correctional systems in the United States is analogous to a trip through Europe where, in traveling relatively short distances, one may encounter many different languages, types of government, patterns of culture and artifacts. In the Southern Region one finds penal systems which range from the enlightened to the reactionary, from the progressive to the mediaeval, from the humane to the brutal. Even within a single state one may observe, on one level, trends toward a system in accordance with the most progressive correctional philosophy, while, on another level, one finds hangovers from the days of degrading stripes and chains. In the same way, law enforcement agencies and the judicial process will invoke, selectively, both primitive and modern practices, the choice of treatment reflecting, in the main, the social characteristics of the community officals and/or the economic resources of the offender.

Project on Penal Reform & Criminal Rehabilitation

It is particularly fortunate that, in an area which is almost exclusively the domain of public policy and administration, the Ford Foundation has provided an opportunity for a private agency to intervene and, perhaps, make a contribution toward advancing these crucial processes. Law enforcement agencies and correctional systems, as government agencies controlled by relatively rigid public policies, are understandably sensitive to the opinions of community groups. This tendency has often been demonstrated in the wake of exposed corruption and public disorder. As responsible arms of public policy, the systems are able to innovate only within the limits imposed by laws which govern their operations. A private agency that is not bound by official restrictions and the burden of tradition can offer assistance to correctional administrators and interested groups of citizens who desire to implement reforms, conduct pertinent research and institute programs designed to bring about constructive change in governmental systems and new approaches to dealing with crime and delinquency.

Advisory Committee

In order to develop a creditable three year program, reconciling philosophy and feasability as much as possible, we have convened a group of knowledgeable, persons broadly representative of society's institutions, who are acutely interested in the social task of coping with the problems presented by violations of societal mores.

The following propositions are submitted primarily to stimulate your thinking and give some direction to our meeting. They are not meant to imply that we are committed to carrying out any particular proposal, except for the initial survey that is already underway.

A. Southern Regional Council Special Report: The Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders in the Southern Region (to be published this year.)

This will be a state-by-state survey report describing the current situation of crime prevention and corrections in the South. Dr. Vernon Fox and associates at Florida State University's Department of Criminology and Corrections and SRC staff members are assisting us in this publication. The report will describe: racial integration; philosophy of corrections; manpower utilization and needs; comparative financial resources and expenditures; physical plants and facilities, including farms and industrial operations; treatment programs, both community and institutional; classification systems; parole policies and practices; facilities for post-release assistance and community treatment centers; institutional populations and patterns of recidivism; nature of professional staffs. Similar analyses will be made of law enforcement agencies and courts, to a limited extent, to determine any new developments stemming from recent legislation and court decisions. The survey will be based on official reports and inquiries, other publications, and observations of authorities in the field.

The survey will provide both a vehicle for public education and a basis for the project's programs.

B. Research Conference: While no one can be certain that any particular research project will produce practically useful results, we would like to be sure, at least, that our projects will be pertinent to the problems of the Southern Region. One means of providing this assurance would be to bring together a small group of academicians of the region, under the leadership of a nationally known social scientist, for the purpose of presenting papers and designing research that we could practically pursue. Such a conference would have the added advantage of providing a needed forum for ideas of regional rather than national interest. Such ideas are often neglected at more broadly based meetings. Another approach would be to select research without formally weighing its value relative to regional concerns, and some suggestions are proposed in this outline.

C. Other Research:

1. A study to determine whether underdeveloped correctional systems consistently make for a higher rate of recidivism than systems considered more progressive.

2. Up-date comparative sentencing study done by SRC in 1954 - referring to both the Garfinkle and Foley studies. Each of these studies pointed to significant disparities between the nature of sentences for Negroes and white persons. Have these practices changed during the period since 1954 - the year of the Supreme Court decision relative to school desegregation?

3. A candid review of industry's attitudes toward the employment of persons with records of crime and delinquency. Is there a need for a more concerted public or private project to encourage industry to use this manpower more appropriately, somewhat in the manner of the "Hire the Handicapped" program.

4. Study how Negroes use correctional services. (Could be part of study of underdeveloped systems.)

5. Study effectiveness of the North Carolina Plan (such a study may already be underway.)

6. Demonstration Project in an urban area, focused on crime and delinquency, and utilizing multi-method techniques involving public and private agencies and graduate schools. Such a project would be accompanied by a research and evaluation instrument.

7. Report on institutional visiting (prisons, jails, training schools, etc.) by small teams of women - utilizing a modified John Howard approach.

D. Public Education:

1. Supportive work with human relations groups and The Fellowship of the Concerned, throughout the southern region, as they demonstrate interest in the administration of criminal justice.

2. Prepare legislative handbook, summarizing the codes under which corrections operates, state by state, pointing out apparent weaknesses, making use of accepted standards by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency or the American Correctional Association. The book will be distributed to public and private agencies, legislators, and interested groups.

3. Prepare booklet on the administration of criminal justice for use in public schools, in order to encourage wider acceptance of this process as a normal function of social welfare. It has been proposed that this be done in cooperation with the Joint Commission on Correctional Manpower. (The approach would be to influence attitudes toward corrections as a career and as a helping agency, mainly through the creative presentation of case materials.)

E. Direct Action:

1. Consultation Service. Secure a panel of knowledgeable professional correctional workers and facilitate its use by systems in the region. Organizations and groups could secure our support through regional conferences and their own action groups. This program would provide for fees and expenses for consultants and technical advisors.

2. Technical Advice. As far as possible, the project staff would provide technical advice concerning correctional procedures, training, and new programs and policies.

3. Would a Regional Conference on Racial Integration in Prisons provide significant support for state efforts in this area? While a policy of racial integration would require the repeal of restrictive statutes in many states, a conference on the problems and processes of integration which are peculiar to correctional systems might serve to alleviate the anxiety of administrators concerning the effects of desegregation in their prisons. Would a sharing of experiences by those who have already effectuated integration be helpful? Another idea would involve an even larger conference, co-sponsored, perhaps, by such organizations as NCCD and ACA, for all interested managers without considering regional limitations.

4. Provision of resource material to public and private agencies, groups and individuals. For example, some Human Relations Councils will receive copies of Ferguson vs. Buchanan (which resulted in desegregation of the Dade County Jail). This will be used as the Councils urge officials to begin to desegregate. Also, films and other learning aids would be used in this program.

5. Cross-fertilization of ideas and programs. This program would facilitate an exchange of top-level and middle-management administrators of criminal justice in the region. Properly implemented, such a program could encourage the spread of progressive correctional principles in day-to-day operations.

6. Recruitment of Negroes for Correctional work. Studies reveal that very few Negroes are employed in correctional administration. (This could be an area for significant research). Would schools and agencies be benefited by a private recruitment service?

7. Training for correctional work. How could a private agency assist in this endeavor?

8. The procedures by which society deals with delinquent or criminal behavior are often themselves causative factors in later offenses. A study of the background and characteristics of men who have histories of Dyer Act violation (Interstate Transportation of a Stolen Motor Vehicle) should throw some light on this hypothesis.

General Observations

Preliminary observations through travel and correspondence would seem to indicate that, while there are many serious problems - including the continued commission of atrocities in some penal systems - the situation is somewhat more encouraging than anticipated.

Florida has integrated all of its institutions and has invited us to visit the system. Whether this alleged integration, however, is token or real, remains to be seen.

There has been some integration in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia (the Girls" Training School in Atlanta), and some degree of integration must be assumed in all institutions which have accepted Federal grants (including Draper Prison in Alabama.)

Personnel changes in the Arkansas Correctional System in the wake of the recent lashing publicity, while sadly belated and totally inadequate, nevertheless represents some small improvement.

Many top-level correctional administrators in the region privately reveal an unexpectedly progressive orientation. This leaves room for hope that state correctional systems will be willing to accept help and at least entertain suggestions for specific changes.

In sum, there is considerable reason to believe that this project, through the judicious extension of grants and technical assistance for specific projects; initiation and support of basic research in neglected areas; organization and encouragement of groups working for the passage of sound reform bills in state legislatures, and the wide dissemination of information about corrections and the processes of criminal law at meetings and through the mass communications media, can make a substantial contribution to the upgrading and increased humanization of all of the processes in which the criminal offender is involved, before, during and after imprisonment.

Memos - Incoming

October 21, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Professional Staff *
FROM: Emory F. Via

Mrs. Nadine Peppard, General Secretary, National Commission for Commonwealth Immigrants (England) will be in Atlanta from the evening of October 30, until some time on November 3.

She is scheduled to come by SRC on Monday October 31, at 10:00 a.m. and stay with us through lunch. She may well want to make a return visit to the office.

Among other things, she is a friend of Ben Segal, an old friend of SRC, currently working with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission as head of the Liaison for State and Local Groups.

I hope that you will be able to spend some time with Mrs. Peppard while she is in town. Would you be interested in having lunch with her on Monday?

Thanks.

* Anderson, Bob
Anthony, Paul
Boone, John
Jordan, Vernon
Long, Maggie
Smith, Moreland
Stanfield, Ed
Tilly, Mrs. M. E.
Ulmer, Al
Watters, Pat

(single space) 36 copies

October 24, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: The Special Committee to Study the Relationship between SRC and the State Councils

FROM: Paul Anthony

Ed Stanfield has shared with me the report on your meeting of September 27. I ~~deeply~~ regret that I was unable to attend at least a portion of that meeting. We do appreciate the time you have devoted to this matter and hope that we can ask you to continue serving on this ~~very~~ important committee. I particularly appreciate your decision to submit your recommendations to me to give us an opportunity for continued discussion and comment. I think this is a very sound approach to these deliberations and that we can hope for the greatest amount of progress at this point by following such a plan.

At the outset, let me assure you (although I hope it isn't necessary) that I have a deep commitment to the existence of the state councils and their growth. This is commitment which is shared without question by the Executive Committee and staff of SRC. I am ~~absolutely~~ certain that SRC can perform a valuable and essential service to the state councils through its regional operation. This ranges from services to the state councils and providing programs and specialists to continued regional and national fund raising efforts on behalf of the state councils. In turn, I feel it is essential for the operation of SRC to have this out-reach into the whole region, this structure, this identity with and information from the "grass-roots." It would be the most serious mistake, in my opinion, if we did not continue the closest possible partnership, insofar as we at the Southern Regional Council are concerned. We would hope the members of the Special Committee would always consider their worth in the context of not whether or not there should be a continued close relationship but on how the partnership can be most effectively continued. Your recommendations reflect that we are of the same mind on this.

Specific comments on your recommendations follow:

1. SRC and the councils on human relationships should share a regional identity.

I quite agree with this. To a substantial measure this is already the case, but I think it is something we should be positively aware of and work toward increasing. As a part of this recommendation, I think more thought has to be given to an idea which the state council directors have discussed for several years. This is the possibility of the state councils forming at least a more formal confederation which can on occasion speak as one voice or plan special programs for the entire region. The leadership of several of the state councils have expressed considerable enthusiasm for this idea. The leadership of several other councils have expressed some reservation about the extent to which this removes policy and program planning from the policy leadership to the state councils' staff. Since there is some remaining question about this, I think the committee should give thought to it and request that state council presidents and directors continue to think about it, preferably when they meet together. Incidentally, as a part of this regional identity I believe that the councils on human relations should consider themselves in a position to have a constant and strong voice in the planning of future SRC programs and projects. To a reasonable degree, we here consider this now the case but I think there is room for more emphasis on this. Certainly, we will be very responsive to the requests for needs, services, programs and direction from the state council leadership.

2. Representative membership of active people is needed for the ends of both SRC and the state councils.

Here again we are in complete agreement. Several years ago the members of SRC at an annual meeting voted that one of the considerations to be taken into account on the election of new members was the involvement of the persons under consideration in the council on human relations from their state. This policy has been followed regularly and each year. A majority of those persons nominated have been actively involved in the state council. This consideration will continue to be a part of the deliberations of future members of future nominating committees. It is unlikely at this point that the Executive Committee of SRC would look with favor on any proposal that would automatically give to the state councils the election of a certain number of SRC members. This procedure was deliberately abandoned in 1957 when the councils became autonomous, and at this time the Executive Committee strongly supports the concept of autonomy. There is no reason, however, while this cannot be a matter for continued consideration certainly the partnership referred to above cannot be most effective unless ways official and unofficial are continued to see that state council interests are foremost in the minds of the members of the Council and their deliberations.

3. Members of the Councils on Human Relations must feel that they participate in SRC.

4. SRC should regard the maintenance and extension of Council on Human Relations Membership as one of its objectives.

Again we are in complete agreement. For the past several years we have attempted to emphasize this and, for instance, toward that end the George Mitchell Award was instituted. (Incidentally this award with a cash value of $1,000 a year is a pretty heavy burden on SRC, but was deliberately chosen in that amount to be a real inducement.) In the future, I would like to see us give particular emphasis to suggestions, program assistance and financial resources, which will help to maintain membership and the involvement of Council members in the programs of the several state councils.

5. To this end its field services should be built with the idea of offering trained and professional advice to the staffs of the councils and in suggesting projects which involve members in active and significant participation.

Again we are in complete agreement. There is quite frankly a limit to which we can expand the field services but certainly they are inadequate at this time. I feel that Ed Stanfield is doing a remarkable job as Field Director and particularly in assisting the state councils. Quite obviously this is a job which one man, no matter how good, cannot adequately fill. There is already a policy within SRC that although the funds are not on hand and are not budgeted that at any time we find a highly competent individual to become Stanfield's assistant, such a person will be acquired. We are, however, determined that such an individual will have the qualifications to meet the needs you suggest.

6. There should be no interruption ~~out~~ of the projects of SRC, but a real effort to keep the councils on human relations informed about them and involved where possible.

All of the statements made heretofore in this memorandum refer to this. They do, of course, reflect complete agreement with you again. We have not done as good a job a possible in keeping the state councils informed about SRC projects and a real effort is underway here to improve that. Beyond that I would place more emphasis perhaps than this Committee has on the matter of involving state and local councils in SRC projects. It would be my hope that with rare exception there would be considerable involvement in SRC projects on the part of state and local councils and as mentioned before, indeed, substantial planning in them before they are initiated.

Beyond the above response to your several recommendations it might be good if you knew more of some of our thinking here as we go through what is in effect a period of significant transition for the Southern Regional Council. In the past year we have grown tremendously. (Incidentally, for the first time the rate of growth of our financial assistance to the state councils has been proportionate to the remainder of our growth.) While that opinion might well change because of the changing conditions, it is my strong opinion at this point that we have reached the "saturation point." I believe for a substantial further growth on the part of the Southern Regional Council in terms of number of staff, number of projects, or ~~a lot~~ of money available would be very questionable. We are not here interested in building an empire and the relatively modest staff and budget in comparison with the results gained over the past fifteen years gives me considerable pause before we undertake any additional substantial expansion.

Quite frankly, I would hope the trend is in the other direction. That to a gentle and gradual degree we begin to slowly cut back to a point where we are perhaps twenty percent smaller in staff and budget than we are at this time. You should know that in part I reached this opinion because in oversize fashion we share a particular problem with the state councils. Namely, we have great difficulty in finding adequate support for our general operations and we, like the state councils, must give this first priority and must be concerned that at no time do we over-extend ourselves ~~to the point of danger~~.

Further, we here at SRC are not anxious to become over-extended in field programs. There are certain functions such as our Voter Education Project which we have no choice but to undertake. These are, however, specific functions for a limited amount of time and they are not seen as a permanent part of the agency. In general, we feel state councils particularly, but other agencies as well, are in a far better position to undertake program work on the local level. Our unique function is on an entirely different level and I believe it would be a mistake not to recognize that uniqueness and the danger of considerable duplication if we become too involved in programs.

I hope it will be possible for this Committee to meet before or during the Annual Meeting and should you wish there will certainly be an opportunity for the Committee to report to the members of the Council on your thinking and deliberation at this point.

The Council now has a number of special committees at work on future SRC policies and programs. I am certain I speak for the full Council in expressing the opinion that this Committee is one of the most important. This will be discussed with the Executive Committee of SRC. I personally hope this Committee will contine to function indefinitely and that each of you will contine to be agreeable to serve.

We look forward to seeing you on November 16.

PA/km

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Edwin Stanfield

Miss L. Frances Jordan, 2411 Stafford Avenue, Raleigh, N.C., whom I met at the Mid-Decade Conference in Washington and who works for the N.C. Extension Service, is concerned about the impact of school desegregation on families in rural areas. Specifically, she would like a reassuring pamphlet to distribute to parents on dealing with what happens to the children in integrated schools. She thinks she could get funds to have such a thing published if we or someone else could help find factual material and help with the writing. Do you think this might be worth pursuing?

Incidentally, Miss Jordan has attended annual meetings of the NCCHR and she reads New South. She like the new format.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA 4-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

January 14, 1966

TO: Participating agencies, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Edwin J. Stanfield, Director of Field Activities

This is to remind you once again of the meeting of the Southern Interagency Conference on January 26-27. We shall begin in the SRC conference room at 2:00 p.m. on the twenty-sixth, and the conference should end by mid-afternoon on the twenty-seventh.

Enclosed is a copy of the proposed agenda.

I hope that you will have a representative here.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

March 4, 1966

TO: STATE COUNCIL DIRECTORS

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Exchange of materials

Enclosed are samples of recent materials put out by some of the state councils. I pass them along in the hope that program ideas for your own situation may be gleaned from them.

If you are not sending your stuff directly to the other state council offices, please send me 15 copies of all publications, including newsletters, and we will distribute them for you.

March 15, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Enclosed are copies of some forms devised by Roberta Blackwell of the North Carolina Council for reporting the statistical information we need (starting by April).

These appear to me to provide the data in an uncomplicated manner, and I pass them along with the thought that you might want to adapt them for your own use.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

March 16, 1966

TO: Participating agencies, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Secretariat

The next meeting of the Southern Interagency Conference will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 19 and 20, in the Southern Regional Council Conference Room, 5 Forsyth Street, Atlanta. The meeting will begin at 2:00 P.M. on the 19th and adjourn about noon on the 20th.

Please note the change from the planned dates of April 20 and 21. This change was made, after consultation with Jean Fairfax, in order not to conflict with a National Civil Liberties Clearing House meeting in Washington beginning on the 21st.

The Steering Committee will welcome suggestions for the agenda. A copy of the agenda will be sent to you about ten days before the meeting.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Atlanta 5-3364

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

March 17, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

We need to schedule another meeting of state council staffs. I would like to schedule a two-day meeting this time, beginning about 10:00 A.M. on the first day and ending no later than 3:00 P.M. on the second.

Let me suggest the following combinations and ask each of you to list the ones you have free in the order of your preference.

April 4 and 5
April 5 and 6
April 26 and 27

Please indicate those dates which you could not have free at all. Please hold the ones you do have free until you get a confirmation from me.

Let me hear from you at your earliest convenience.

P.S. -- This time SRC will pay expenses for one staffer, normally the director, plus the four Rural Advancement Project directors.

Other staffers are welcome.

_____ & got this May 2nd!
me too! ah

SRC ROUTING SLIP

RECEPTIONIST, Luesta Knox 22

****

ADAMS, Sam, Research 33

ALBRIGHT, Montez, Research 9

ALEXANDER, Ruth, Sec.-Treas. 5

Anderson, Bob

ANTHONY, Paul, Director 26

BARTLEY, Glenda, Research 31

~~BRINSON, Albert, Mail~~ 25

BROWNING, Joan, Sec. 37

COOK, Bernice, Mail 25

FRANKLIN, Pat, Sec. 24

GIMARC, Jerry, Sec. 38

HOWARD, Ruth, Sec. 8

JOHNSON, Mildred, Sec. 36

JORDAN, Vernon, VEP 6

LEWIS, Ed, Asst. Dir. 39

LONG, Margaret, New South 0

LUMPKIN, Ester, Research 31

MANDERSON, Marge, Research 31

MORGAN, Nobbie, VEP 4

MORRISON, Bernice, Research 31

PATTERSON, Barbara, Research 31

REED, Doris, Research 31

SHORTT, Janet, Research 31

SMITH, Janet, Circulation 5

SMITH, Moreland, Urban Planning 27

STANFIELD, Ed, Field Director 28

TILLY, Mrs. M.E., Women 29

ULMER, Al, Program Specialist 35

~~VIA~~, Emory, Labor 30

WATTERS, Pat, Information Dir. 32

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

March 25, 1966

TO: State Council Staffs

FROM: Ed Stanfield

This is to confirm the dates April 26 and 27 for our meeting of state councils staffs. We will begin at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday and try to conclude by mid-afternoon on Wednesday.

While this was not everyone's first choice, most seemed to find it possible to attend on these dates.

We especially urge the Rural Advancement Project directors to attend this meeting, in order to get acquainted with the SRC and state council crowd. In addition, Jac Wasserman asks that they stay an extra day, (Thursday) for a meeting with him.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

May 10, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Community Leadership Training Laboratory, July 24-31 1966.

I finally got in touch with Dean Charles T. Lester of Emory University to inquire about scholarship help for the training laboratory. He says that the laboratory must be operated on a largely self-sustaining basis, so that the amount of scholarship help available depends upon the paid enrollment. The result is that those who apply for scholarship aid must wait until enrollment is complete to find out whether it can be granted or not--with no assurance of attending. Also, the available scholarship aid is divided in order to get a wide variety geographical and agency representation. Thus the chances of getting a "block" of scholarships for any one agency would be slim.

For these reasons, Dean Lester agreed that the best advise we could give would be for each state director to apply without requesting scholarship aid, using the $150 offered by SRC. The Rural Advancement Project Directors could then apply for a scholarship with a reasonable hope of getting it. All applications should be sent directly to Dean Lester at the address in the brochure.

As indicated, SRC will provide $150 for each state council staff for this purpose. If you will notify me that you have applied, we will get the money to you during the week before the laboratory begins.

I also asked about the possibility of registration without room and meals. Dean Lester said that they have had several inquiries about this, but at this point they are still expecting everyone to "live in"--on the theory that this adds greatly to the "experience."

I hope that at least one person from each state council staff will be able to attend. If you need another descriptive leaflet, let me know.

Southern Regional Council Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. 30303
Jackson 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

May 12, 1966

TO: STATE COUNCIL DIRECTORS

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Harry DeLung has asked me to call your attention to the omission of SRC's address on the information mailed to you yesterday concerning the book distribution program. As you transmit these guides to local groups, please tell them how to send proposals to us.

Incidentally, in response to your suggestion of book lists for several subjects or categories, I am told that to prepare meaningful lists in any useful variety would be prohibitively difficult and time consuming. Hence the suggestion that books be requested by quantity and category wherever possible. However, specific titles may be requested, of course.

Memos - Outgoing

Southern Regional Council Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

LESLIE W. DUNBAR,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

May 13, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: STATE COUNCIL DIRECTORS

FROM: ED STANFIELD

There seems to be some confusion about the membership information needed on the monthly statistical report which is required before payment of the expanded-grant-in-aid quarterly installments.

What we are interested in is the number of people who have renewed their membership or joined your council by paying dues in this membership year. How many people have paid dues in or for 1966?

Some councils have all memberships due for renewal on the same date (as January 1). Others bill members for renewal on the anniversary month of their joining the council. Either way is quite satisfactory. What counts is the cumulative total over a full year.

For the purpose of these statistics, please do not report as members persons who have let more than a year pass without renewing their membership.

****

Some were also confused by the category "New Members" which appeared on the North Carolina reporting form which I sent out as suggestive of the month-by-month and cumulative information wanted. I apologize for failing to see that this could easily be interpreted differently from what is outlined above. Actually, it is unimportant whether a member is renewing or joining for the first time. Only two membership figures matter to us: How many renewed or joined during this month? And how many have done so to date for this membership year?

****

Please do not forget that monthly financial reports must show a breakdown of receipts into membership dues, individual contributions, corporate business contributions, SRC grants, foundation grants, and miscellaneous receipts.

****

Finally, those whose grants call for employment of additional staff as a condition of payment of the second and subsequent quarterly installments should notify us in writing when the new employee has begun work.

$500.00

YM-YWCA Scholarship Information Center

YM-YWCA, University of North Carolina

Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514

Research and information on scholarships available for Negro students.

Research #318

May 17, 66

J. Edwin Stanfield

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA-5-2764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

May 18, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: STATE COUNCIL PRESIDENTS

FROM: EDWIN STANFIELD, DIRECTOR OF FIELD ACTIVITIES

For some time we have been thinking of bringing together the chairmen of the policy boards of the state councils for a day (at SRC expense) to discuss common concerns, problems and objectives. We frequently convene the "professionals" and we think an occasional session "for lay leaders only" would be equally beneficial. The purpose of this memorandum is to explore that possibility.

Among the things I think we need to talk about are: (1) the philosophy and objectives of the human relations councils; (2) the kinds of policies, programs and procedures appropriate to our purpose and philosophy; (3) selection of effective Board members and the overall composition of state council Boards; (4) qualifications to look for when staff personnel are needed, where to look, and employment procedures; (5) the level and scale of staff salaries; (6) staff benefits, such as retirement plans, hospitalization, etc. I am sure there will be other things on your minds and topics that will grow out of the above.

First, please let me know whether you think this worth the while or not.

If it seems wanted, my feeling is that an afternoon, evening and morning would be most helpful--allowing time for an agenda, but also for informal conversation. The problem, of course, is to find days that would suit everyone. Let me suggest alternatives and ask you to check those that are possible for you on the extra copy of this and return it to me. I have tried to suggest schedules which would suit the clergymen, the teachers and the businessmen among you without taking more than one working day from any. If you would prefer weekdays, please indicate which pairs you have available between June 12 and June 25.

_____June 17 (Fri.), 2:00 P.M., until June 18, noon. (Two chairmen happen to be on a Special Projects Advisory Committee which will be meeting in Atlanta on the morning of the 17th.)

_____June 24 (Fri.), 2:00 P.M., until June 25, noon.

_____June 12 (Sun.), about 4:00 P.M., until June 13, about 3:00 P.M.

_____June 19 (Sun.), about 4:00 P.M., until June 20 about 3:00 P.M.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JAckson 2-5764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

May 20, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: State Council Executive Directors & Presidents

FROM: Edwin Stanfield

RE: Group Insurance for State Council Staffs

We have received a number of inquiries about the possibility of including state council staffs under SRC's groups insurance plans because of the high cost of carrying adequate plans with a small staff or on an individual basis. We have investigated and find that it can be done. Let me outline very briefly (and vaguely) what the SRC program provides and then refer you to Ed Lewis, Executive Assistant to the Director, for detailed information. (I understand that the insurance company will be able to supply some literature within a short time.)

SRC has just switched from Blue Cross-Blue Shield to Mutual of New York. We have very good policies (better than under BC-BS) providing complete medical care for $18.58 per month per family, or $5.64 per month for a single person. In the same package--and it is a package deal--there is life insurance at 89¢ per thousand per month. "Senior staff persons" may take a maximum of $10,000 in life insurance; "junior staff persons" may take a maximum of $4,000.

SRC carries accidental death policies on various individual staffers, varying the coverage according to the amount of travel required. The cost of this coverage is very low. Incidentally, the life insurance which is a part of the hospitalization-medical care coverage has a double indemnity clause for accidental death.

We urge that serious consideration be given this insurance plan by your Board. Ed Lewis tells me that the cut-off date will have to be September 1, so you should get in touch with him right away about details and procedures.

****

P.S. Ed Lewis says I should make it clear that it is not necessary for all state councils to come into the plan. Any single state council can put its staff under the plan--and sooner than September 1, if desired.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Jackson 2-4764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

May 26, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: State Council Presidents

FROM: Ed Stanfield, Director of Field Activities

RE: Meeting in Atlanta.

It appears that June 17-18 suits more of you than any of the other suggested dates for our meeting of state council Presidents. Therefore we shall be meeting on these dates.

The meeting will be held at the Atlanta Biltmore Hotel and will begin at approximately 4:00 P.M. on the 17th. (From 10:00 A.M. until 4:00 P.M. there will be a meeting of the Special Project Advisory Committee at the same hotel. You are welcome to sit in on all or any part of that meeting.) We shall have dinner together and work for a while that evening. We hope you will arrange to take a mid-to-late-afternoon plane back home on Saturday, but we'll try to have the bulk of our work completed by about 1:00 P.M.

If you cannot attend, please--please--arrange to have an appropriate member of your Board come in your place. If you happen to have a pretty good idea who the next president will be, get him to come if at all possible. But be sure, if at all possible, that we have one responsible representative of your council Board. (Send me the name and address of any proxy.)

I hope to send you , or your substitute, a few days before the meeting, a position paper which I hope you will read in preparation for this meeting.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JAckson 2-6744

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

June 3, 1966

TO: Members, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Secretariat

RE: June Meeting

The next meeting of the Southern Interagency Conference will be held in the conference room of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta on Wednesday, June 22, from 9:30 A.M. until 5:00 P.M.

Principal subjects of concern will be the progress of school desegregation and hospital compliance under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

In addition, there will be election of a Chairman and Secretariat for the next year.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Jackson 2-5314

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

June 6, 1966

TO: State Council Presidents

FROM: Edwin Stanfield, Director of Field Activities

RE: Meeting in Atlanta, June 17-18

Our scheduled meeting, about which you have received notice previously, will begin at about 4:00 P.M. on the 17th in the Biltmore Hotel, Atlanta. If you arrive early, you will be welcome to sit in on a meeting of the SRC Special Projects Advisory Committee, also meeting at the Biltmore.

This is to let you know that we are reserving a bloc of rooms at the Biltmore for the night of the 17th. Just tell the clerk that you are attending the Southern Regional Council meeting.

We do hope that the two or three who cannot come on these dates will send another member of the Board.

Incidentally, if you would like a travel advance for your airplane ticket, drop me a note.

We are looking forward to seeing you.

(Information copies to State Council Directors)

June 15, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Steering Committee, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Secretariat

Jean Fairfax has asked that the Steering Committee meet promptly at 9:00 A.M. on June 22nd at the Southern Regional Council offices, in order to prepare a slate of nominees for Chairman and Steering Committee Members for the next year. We hope that you can attend.

The regular Southern Interagency Conference Meeting will begin at 9:30 A.M. on that date.

June 15, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Mr. Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Carroll Brown called from Dallas right on schedule. Bethlehem Center, with which he has been working on various bases for ten years, is sponsored by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church. Brown says that he has resigned because the board, which he says is made up of women "between the ages of 45 and 65" and two or three Methodist preachers, will not let him do what he sees needs to be done. They want a settlement-house approach -- a youth center, baseball games, etc.

Brown apparently resigned with no other job ready. He has two job offers, however, one in Austin and one out-of-state. At least one is a very good offer, according to him, but not exactly what he wants to do. "I want to stay with the Negro community -- and others here in Dallas -- who want to do what needs to be done."

He had developed a scheme to finance a project under the city's auspices, but "Baxton vetoed that; said we would be too restricted."

He says that nothing is being done in Dallas. The NAACP chapter is weak and ineffective. There is no Urban League. A city bi-racial committee is meaningless.

Brown is 28 years old, has a wife and two children, and holds a B.D. degree from S.M.U.

He has a bit of Baxton's right now urgency, explainigg that he can't wait much longer and will have to take some job within a month. When I said that we simply had no uncommitted funds, he asked if I could tell him where he might find backing. I could not. Then he said something like, "If we cannot get funds from SRC or a foundation, perhaps you could tell me how to go about raising money here in Dallas. I've been a street man all along, and don't want to spend six months cultivating liberals who have money -- I'd rather get on with the job to be done. But I guess I could do it, if I had to." This might be indicative of something.

I had the impression from talking to him that he is an intelligent, articuàate, and capable fellow. He might not be a bad choice for a first "Dallas Council" Director, although he would be a lot like Baxton. In principle, however, I would be opposed to rushing into formation of a council in order to secure any given individual, even though a council in Dallas is a good idea.

Incidentally, I have no intimation of such a thing, but I'll give you odds that Baxton will have been in touch with Les about this by the time you read this memorandum.

Memos - Organizing

PROPOSITIONS FOR DISCUSSION BY STATE COUNCIL PRESIDENTS

Atlanta, June 17-18, 1966

NOTE: The following propositions are offered solely to stimulate discussion by the Presidents of the several state councils on human relations at the meeting indicated. They are for use only in this context and are not for publication, either formal or informal. They certainly represent no organization's policy.

1. Both logic and necessity require that the state councils as presently constituted become basically independent of the Southern Regional Council, as well as autonomous. They should stand vis a vis SRC as any other allied agency does, although a common history logically means uncommonly close cooperation and mutual helpfulness. Financial dealings particularly should be on a contractual basis. The alternative is a fundamentally different concept and structure -- perhaps field divisions of SRC.

2. The cornerstone of state council financing should be a fairly large number of relatively small gifts from individuals and businesses. Without this basic foundation significant program resources from foundations will likely be impossible to obtain on a sustained basis. Without it the use of government-financed programs, one solution which has been suggested, would be dangerous to a council's purpose.

3. Similarly, the cornerstone of state council program should be enlistment and involvement of a growing number of members. Program activities should be, to the extent possible, such as will require or allow volunteer participation.

4. In relation to all government agencies, including state and local human rights commissions, councils should stand as cooperating critics and innovators. They should guard against becoming surrogate public agencies.

5. Staff personnel should ordinarily have an informally limited tenure. An organization needs a variety of talents and emphases which no one person can supply, regardless of the worth of his particular contribution. For this reason a term of three to five years, particularly for a staff director, should be considered the norm. Some understanding about this should be reached at the time of employment. For the present more emphasis should be placed on organizational-administrative skill and academic training (techniques of research, knowledge of social dynamics, social and personal psychology, etc.). The basal function of the staff is to nurture and employ the concern and abilities of members toward effecting normal social change.

6. The program, officers, and staff of the state councils should not be crisis-oriented, although they should of course respond to crises. Human relations work can be done most effectively when and where problems are not at the crisis stage.

7. The middle class appeal of the state councils should be recognized and the most should be made of it. That a large percentage of state council members are of the middle class can readily be observed. This is cause for neither pride nor apology. But it is a fact that should be taken into consideration. Research, education, negotiation are techniques of the middle class and have no mass appeal. The membership generally includes many teachers (councils tend to strength in academic communities), clergymen, and others who neither have the powers of wealth or office in the community nor are among those most victimized by the misuse of power and wealth. Human relations councils should aim deliberately to provide an instrument for the exercise of social responsibility and concern by these people. Program and methods should generally be such as middle class folks can use. Mass-meeting techniques and street demonstrations, for example, are ordinarily artificial to a human relations council. On the other hand, attempts by councils to exercise the powers of government in lieu of responsible officials--as in extensive welfare or educational programs--are likewise ill-advised. The facts diligently sought and vigorously reported and response to the facts sensitively evoked -- these are the fundamental techniques of a council on human relations.

8. The state council Board of Directors will probably reflect automatically its middle class membership. Therefore it is of great importance that persons from labor organizations, civil rights groups, the poor, and (if possible) financial and managerial interests be deliberately and actively sought either as Board members (state and local) or as members of a functioning advisory group, as well as for membership in the organization.

9. Attention needs to be given to the need of local councils for modest financial resources. State council and local council (or chapter) fund-raising should be tied together. For example, chapters should be expected to participate in a state-wide funding drive annually and the state council board should annually set a "suggested percentage division" for all donations secured through the efforts of the local organization.

file

MEMORANDUM

June 27, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: J. Edwin Stanfield

We would like to have, at your convenience, current lists of (1) names and addresses of members of your Board of Directors and (2) names and addresses of chapter presidents and/or a key leader.

We are asked occasionally to supply the name of a human relations council leader in a particular city and we sometimes are unable to do so. Your help will be appreciated.

JES/km

June 30, 1966

TO: EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS, STATE COUNCILS

FROM: ED STANFIELD

Under separate cover I am sending each of you a number of copies of a bare outline of local council program ideas which you may find suggestive. This listing was prepared more than a year ago by Al Ulmer. I am sending enough copies to send one to each of your local counsels (I think). Just thought maybe you would find some use for these.

* * * * * *

Also enclosed is another copy of the brochure on the Community Leadership Laboratory at Emory University. So far as I know, Ken Dean is the only one other than myself who has actually registered. Jerry Roden, Patricia Miller, and Bob Combs have indicated a definite intention to attend. Please decide right away whether or not you will attend and let me know, in order that I may make plans about our next state counsils' staff meeting.

MEMOS - OUTGOING

July 1, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: State Council Executive Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

RE: Group Insurance

Enclosed is a booklet prepared by Mutual of New York to inform SRC staffers of their benefits under our group insurance plan. I think this will give you the exact information you need to help you and your Board decide whether you wish to participate or not. Please let us know as soon as possible. (The deadline is September 1.)

In case you have misplaced my memo of May 20, the cost of the medical care is $5.64 for a single person or $18.58 for an employee and his family -- per month. The life insurance is 89¢ per thousand. Thus the total cost would be $329.76 per year for each "senior staff person" (Executive Directors and Associate Directors) and $265.68 for each "junior staff person" (Secretaries).

(If in your situation part of the staff is covered under another plan, as would be the case when a secretary is covered under her husband's group insurance, you might wish to check the possibility of major medical insurance on an individual basis. Mutual of Omaha has a very good one, although I do not recall details of the benefits. You might just call the nearest Mutual of Omaha man and ask him what sort of policies he can give you for $300-$325.)

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W.
ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JAckson 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

August 2, 1966

TO: State Council Executive Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Meeting in Atlanta, August 9-10

Pursuant to the conversation which those attending the leadership laboratory had with Paul Anthony, we shall meet here in Atlanta on August 9-10. We shall start at 1:30 P.M. on the 9th and plan to adjourn about noon on the 10th.

The directors of SRC's special projects have been notified and asked to give us some time. Subject to schedule contingencies for one or two of them, they are willing to give us sufficient time to allow for give and take and a constructive ironing out of difficulties.

As agreed, we will have something on paper about the incidental aid available and the necessary limitations and conditions.

I have reserved a block of rooms at the Americana Hotel, corner of Spring Street and Carnegie Way. This was done at suggestion of some of you, who felt that such an arrangement would facilitate "group dynamics." If for any reason you will not use a room, please let me know so that I can cancel your reservation at once. When you arrive, tell the clerk that your reservaton was made by the Southern Regional Council.

Francis Pauley will have us out to her house for a cocktail hour and buffet dinner.

SRC will pay travel and expenses for directors. Other staffers are welcome at your expense.

Copies: directors, SRC special projects

Memos - Outgoing

August 3, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: PAUL ANTHONY AND VERNON JORDAN

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Ken Dean called me this afternoon about Dr. Russell Barrett of the Political Science Department at Ole Miss. I am sure that both of you know who he is.

Ken says that he discouraged Vernon from funding a proposal that Barrett sent to VEP on grounds that the man has emotional problems. On checking with Thad I note that Vernon turned him down on the legitimate ground that his was a research proposal which did not fit precisely either of the three emphases of the VEP.

Ken tells me that Barrett went ahead with his project, partly, according to Ken, on the strength of some assurance from Frank Smith that Smith would put in a good word for it. Barrett, and perhaps Smith, assumed that this would carry some weight. Anyway, he invested $600-$700, much of it in dictating or recording equipment. Ken wants to know if SRC can pull his chestnuts out of the fire, if not through VEP then perhaps through some other excuse.

Ken states that the man is doing a legitimate and worthwhile piece of research on Negro voting in Mississippi. He further states that the emotional problems about which he was concerned were more Mrs. Barrett's than Russ's.

Incidentally, Ken says Russ would be quite willing to bequeath the recording equipment to MCHR or SRC at the end of his research, -- for whatever that is worth.

Personally, I am disinclined to rescue chestnuts, but I pass this along just in case we really could use his information in some way -- and because Ken will be talking about it when he is here next week.

ES/km

Memos Oulgoney

August 4, 1966
11:45 A.M.

PA from ES

Jac Wasserman called a few minutes ago to inquire about the proposal from the farmers' group in Alabama to the Voter Education Project -- the one we hurried over at the end of last week. It was a leadership and/or citizenship education proposal.

As you know, time was of the essence on this. The ASCS election is scheduled for August 16 over there, having been moved up from November. Vernon was in the office Monday and Tuesday, but left town without taking action. I asked Thad to ~~ex~~ ask about it when Vernon called in. He called in this morning and Thad reports that he said he is considering it but will be able to take no action before next week.

Jac and Bob Valder tell me that money is needed to transport some farmers to Washington for a hearing with the Agriculture Department. As you may recall, there is a suite pending to force the ASCS officials in Alabama to move the election back to November, when it was originally scheduled. Jac says a couple hundred dollars is needed for this transportation.

I have no particular brief for this project. But we did indicate that we would consider it -- after consultation with Vernon -- and I thought Vernon understood the urgency of the case. Is there any way we can get a yes or no answer?

Sorry to write, but I have a lunch appointment.

Ed

Memo-outgoing

August 7, 1966

Memo to: Paul Anthony

From: J. Edwin Stanfield

Subject: Possible visit from Oron South

I mentioned to you the other day the possibility of getting Oron South of Vanderbilt University, a Consultant in Human Relations, to visit us during the week after Labor Day. This is to make further inquiry about that.

Mr. South was one of the more effective leaders at the leadership laboratory at Emory. He has worked extensively with church groups in Alabama, and has probably had much to do behind the scenes with what little leadership has been exercised by clergymen over there.

I am not at all sure that he could help us with our development of a project to reach white people effectively, but he is knowledgeable about what is being done in other parts of the country in the area of community leadership on human relations and other social problems. I think it would be worth our getting him in town to talk to the two of us and possibly to the special project directors on a day that would suit you.

JES:mlm

file
Memos
Antgomery

August 11, 1966

To: Steering Committee
Southern Interagency Conference

From: Secretariat

On the call of Al Kahrer, the Steering Committee of the Southern Interagency Conference, will meet in the conference room of the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, Atlanta, Georgia, on Friday, August 19, at 10:00 A. M.

The purpose of this meeting would be to plan a program and agenda for the SIC meeting scheduled September 20 and 21.

JES:mlm

Memos-Outgoing

MEMORANDUM

August 12, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Louise Cole

As I mentioned in the August 9-10th meeting in Atlanta, a group of federal agencies has asked the Southern Regional Council to help in making a directory of major southern cities and the most serious problems in race relations confronting each one. We would greatly appreciate your assistance in this matter.

First, could you simply list what you consider to be the major cities in your state. By "major" are meant those cities which you judge to be important because of their size or because they have special problems. You can base this list simply on your opinion as someone knowledgeable about your state.

Then, opposite each city, in a sentence or two, state what you feel are its most serious problems. You need not do any research on this as it is meant to be your evaluation in "capsule" form and should not take too much of your time.

We need this information as quickly as possible and hope to see your list within three weeks, if not sooner.

Thank you very much.

August 12, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: STATE COUNCIL EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

FROM: J. EDWIN STANFIELD

SUBJECT: RECRUITMENT OF NEGRO BOYS TO ATTEND TOP SOUTHERN PREP SCHOOLS

We have been asked to help find eighteen (18) Negro boys to integrate the top six prep schools in the South. (It happens that all of the schools, which were chosen on the basis of academic ranking only, were boys' schools.) All six have agreed to cooperate in order to break the color barrier at the same time. The program, including all necessary scholarship aid, is being financed by a wealthy individual.

The problem is to find eighteen boys who are both interested and qualified to enter the ninth grade of one of these schools in September of 1967. That means that they must be boys in the eighth grade this fall. Each must have an IQ of 115 or more and must be from the South.

The program will provide, as needed, up to full expenses -- including tuition, fees, books, room and board, laundry, and other incidental costs -- for completion of the student's secondary education at one of the prep schools. Applicants need not be from low-income families, however, and where the family is able to pay all or part of the cost complete expenses would not be offered.

Provision is also being made for two months of orientation and tutoring beginning in June of 1967.

All students recommended will be sent simple tests to be taken at home. The most promising will then be interviewed at their homes by a representative of the donor, and the choices will be made after the interviews are completed. For purposes of this procedure a good field of candidates is desired, but not a flood of candidates -- lest too many disappointments be caused. This is why we are being asked to recommend students instead of their being recruited through public announcement.

Those responsible for this program do not perceive it as primarily to help the eighteen students. It is frankly designed to help the prep schools come to terms with social change.

Could we have your first recommendations within three weeks?

Memos - Outgoing

August 18, 1966

TO: John Boone

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Mrs. Patricia Miller, Executive Director of the Louisiana Council on Human Relations, called me to say (among other things) that she wants to suggest Dr. A. C. Blanks of Southern University for the research on prisons and correctional institutions in Louisiana.

She says Dr. Blanks has a Ph. D. in Psychology, is Director of Special Education at the University and is on some state commission or committee on special education. She mentioned his being on a clinical team. I did not understand its nature, but apparently it took him into prisons and gave him a personal acquaintance with prison officials. She (and Dr. Ralph Dreger, whom she consulted about this) felt that his entre to the prisons is very important, because it is very difficult for anyone to get inside one of Louisiana's prisons (except as an inmate!) or to get information about them.

She assured me that Dr. Blanks would be both constructive and critical, which I guess means objective.

His address is :

Dr. A. C. Blanks
Southern University
Baton Rouge, Louisiana

Home telephone: (504) 775-7797
Office telephone: (504) 775-6300 (Ext. 258)

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

August 23, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Member Agencies, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Secretariat

SUBJECT: The next meeting

The next meeting of the Southern Interagency Conference will be held in Atlanta on September 20 and 21. It will be convened at 2:00 p.m. on the first day and will end at approximately 12:30 on the second. Please put these dates on your calendar.

Further details as to the exact place of the meeting and the agenda will be sent later. Tentative plans made by the steering committee include an overview of the national mood (covering black power, the riots, white back-lash, the significance of conservative strength in deep-South elections, the difficulty of the 1966 civil rights bill, etc.) We expect to have an expert analysis and a reactor panel. There will also be an analysis of primary election results and several other features.

Please, if it is impossible for you to attend this meeting, take steps to see that your agency is represented.

Mailed to each State Council Exec. Dir.

September 1, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Enclosed are a few copies of a complaint form which is available from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission - in case you didn't know.

Memos - Ostgomy

September 2, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Under separate cover I am sending you a number of copies of two pamphlets recently published by the Virginia Council in connection with their project on multi-ethnic textbooks. One is a description of their project and the other is a listing of intercultural textbooks available in the subjectaareas of English and the social studies.

You might want to send a copy of each to the appropriate person in each of your chapters. Further, you might consider a similar project at the state level. Most states have a list of approved texts prepared by the state board of education, so that the problem would need to be approached at that level as well as locally.

J$S/km

MEMORANDUM

September 6, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Miss Louise Cole

Many thanks to the directors in Mississippi, Arkansas, Virginia, Florida, and Houston for sending the lists of major cities and their most serious problems in race relations (my memo of August 12). We were gratified to get this information and will be even happier to hear from the remaining directors. So try to find a few minutes somewhere so that we can complete this brief report.

Here at last are the bibliographies that we will use for the paperback book project. I have enclosed three copies for your convenience. Applicants may either select books from these lists or order all books in specified categories. I have a supply of these lists to send to any interested group. The more the merrier!

One final piece of news--you will notice the bibliography on Negro history, culture, race relations, and African history. I have placed an order with the Atlanta News Agency to send each of you a copy of every book on this list, as you requested at the meeting in August. This should be quite a valuable set of books, and we hope that you will use it extensively to promote the paperback book project.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Atlanta 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

September 8, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Next Meeting of State Council Directors

As you know, our next meeting is to be September 21-22, starting at 2:00 on Wednesday and ending about noon on Thursday. We shall meet in the S. R. C. conference room.

The Southern Interagency Conference will be meeting from 2:00 on the 20th until noon on the 21st, and you are invited to attend that meeting also. It might be of considerable interest to you. Dr. Lewis Killian of the University of Florida will speak on the first afternoon on the role of white liberals in social change in the South. Other features of that meeting will be briefings on the political situation by Vernon Jordan and on school and hospital desegregation by representatives of the regional office of H. E. W. (The latter presentation will be on Wednesday morning, so you might catch that even if you can't come on Tuesday.)

For our own meeting, following the suggestion of some of you, I have invited two men from government agencies here to talk to us about program concerns and the role of their offices. They are Bob Thompson, Special Assistant for Intergroup Relations to the Regional Director of the Department of Housing and Urban Development; and Don Hollowell, Regional Director of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. In addition, we may have the H. E. W. representatives stay over from the S. I. C. meeting - in case some of you can't get here early.

As for expenses, let us try the following formula: S. R. C. will pay one-half of your expenses for travel, room and meals, plus all travel cost in excess of $50.00. In this way the distance some have to travel will not be an excessive burden. We can make any adjustments in this formula after trying it once.

I am going to leave it to you to get your own accommodations, so that you can order exactly the room you want. Since most seemed satisfied with the Americana Motor Hotel, let me suggest that one. Perhaps I'll arrange a dinner for us there on the evening of the 21st.

JES:mlm

cc: SRC Project Directors

Memos - Outgoing

September 12, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Helen Mervis inquires whether or not it would be worthwhile for her to prepare a request for funds to prepare and print an inventory of all do-gooding agencies and projects, public and private, in the New Orleans area. She has a young Tulane sociologist in mind to do it. (A Dr. Lloyd)

Ed

ES:mlm

We would consider a very modest grant - although I thought the CRC JND had money

PA

September 12, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Field trip to Louisiana

The occasion for this trip was a meeting of the LCHR Board on Saturday, 10 September. I flew over on Thursday in order to work with Pat Miller in New Orleans and in her office.

Pat met me in New Orleans and we visited Attorney Tureaud, Jack Sisson and Jim McGuire in the NCCIJ office, and Helen Mervis and a couple of other CRC leaders in Helen's home. I felt that Sisson and McGuire were especially helpful in suggesting contacts and program possibilities to Pat.

Friday morning: I first saw Pat's office and met here office manager, Mrs. Reynolds. The office is beautifully appointed and equipped at amazingly low cost. It is the most reputable-looking state council office I have been in. Mrs. Reynolds is about 45, white, a Presbyterian minister's wife, and - from my observation - unusually able, as well as personable.

Later that morning I visited Dean Harvey to discuss a better arrangement about check-writing and bookkeeping. Pat had been unhappy about Harvey's close run, but he was tractable and we worked it out and then got Board approval for a standard arrangement.

I lunched with Dr. Dreger at L. S. U. -- to get acquainted and obrain a knowledgeable reading of the situation. It was pleasant and I came away feeling that he will be an invaluable help with the new council.

Friday afternoon Pat and I drove to Lafayette to see Oliver and plan the Board meeting. The trip was uneventful, but we were interesting to a number of people, especially when we stopped for dinner in Apelousas. Great fun.

The Board meeting was better attended than usual. (The Board is too small and they took initial steps to enlarge it.) No one from N. O. was there, however. The more important items of business were plans for an annual membership meeting in Baton Rouge in November and a membership and finance campaign preceding it. Jim Oliver had done some homework and the meeting was harmoneous and fruitful.

Incidentally, there is a good chance they will ask you to speak at the membership meeting. I hope you can and will.

On the whole I am encouraged about the prospects for the Louisiana Council now. Pat is learning fast (although she still has a ways to go). She does provide an attention to detail and a sense of orderliness that is valuable. She is showing some imaginzation about program now, and I sensed a readiness on the part of the Board members to respond to her leadership. Dreger had remarked on Friday that he had misgivings about having a woman and a Negro as their first executive director in such a tough state (although he meant to back her fully), but I think he felt better after the meeting.

Some material from the meeting is attached.

JES;mlm

file - "Memos - Outgoing

September 12, 1966

TO: Thad Olive
FROM: Ed Stanfield

Mrs. Miller is gathering contacts in Louisiana. Could you supply her a list of VEP contacts in the state other than the two you gave me from Baton Rouge and New Orleans?

ES:mlm

file

September 12, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Helen Mervis inquires whether or not it would be worthwhile for her to prepare a request for funds to prepare and print an inventory of all do-gooding agencies and projects, public and private, in the New Orleans area. She has a young Tulane sociologist in mind to do it. (A Dr. Lloyd)

ES:mlm

Memos - Outgoing

MEMORANDUM

September 13, 1966

TO: Ruth H. Alexander

FROM: J. Edwin Stanfield

SUBJECT: Notice of employment of John A. Pecoul

John A. Pecoul has been employed on a temporary basis, effective September 6, 1966, at a salary rate of $8,000.00 per year.

Mr. Pecoul, who as a temporary employee is not to be enrolled in our retirement plan, is to receive four percent of his annual salary to apply to the plan in which he already participates. I understand that he has or will arrange remittance of this annuitie contribution in consultation with you.

We have also agreed to enroll him for our major-medical insurance and to pay premiums therefor, as though he were a permanent employee.

J. Edwin Stanfield

J. Edwin Stanfield
Director of Field Activities

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JA 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM
September 13, 1966

TO: Member Agencies, Southern Interagency Conference

FROM: Secretariat

SUBJECT: September 20-21 Meeting

This is to remind you that the Southern Interagency Conference will meet in the conference room of the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, Atlanta, at 2:00 P. M. on September 20. We will adjourn about noon on September 21.

The program for Tuesday afternoon will be a presentation by Dr. Lewis Killian of Florida State University on the role of white liberals in social change in the South. There will be a reactor panel following Dr. Killian's address. The panel will be made up of Randolph Blackwell of the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, Ruby Hurley of the NAACP, Emory Via of Southern Regional Council, Charles Morgan, LCSU, and a representative of the Labor Movement.

We have been invited to dinner at the home of Al Kehrer. Spouses will be welcome at this part of the meeting. Vernon Jordan will brief us on the southern political situation following the meal.

The program on Wednesday morning will be a briefing on hospital and school desegregation by representatives of the Regional Office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

JES:mlm

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JAckson 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

September 14, 1966

To: Directors of State Councils on Human Relations

From: Ed Stanfield and Emory Via

Listed below are three suggestions for possible State Council programs which could be run in cooperation with SRC'S Labor Program. Would you look them over and give your reactions or expressions of interest to one of us when you are in Atlanta for the Directors' meeting.

1. A project to assist in the enforcement of the newly amended minimum wage law. The coverage of the law and the benefits it guarantees will be improved. Many workers will not know that they are covered or will not know how to proceed in the enforcement of their rights. Many employers similarly will be slow in realizing the impact of the law on them. This project will have to await the final passage of the law and the preparation of a guideline for action. However, it could be of substantial benefit to low income people. It would be a direct and appreciated service. It could be a program run almost completely by volunteers and might be an excellent project for college youth looking for a beneficial project with tangible results. A briefing conference could be held with SRC arranging for the experts. Basically, such a program sould supplement federal efforts. But it could assume speedy and fair enforcement. It offers advantages in building some meaningful bridges between low income groups and human relations efforts.

2. A project to assist in ending discrimination in apprentice training. We could offer a variety of consultative services. A determination needs to be made of actual local practice and how many Negroes are involved in apprentice training. Similarly, some assessment is needed how the main institutional elements in apprentice training will respond to a project encouraging Negro entry into their programs. Remember, of course, that a good bit of law and administrative regulation is on the side of fairness. Thirdly, Negro youngsters who are qualified by age and education need to be located and motivated to participate in such training. A major part of such a program is to provide realistic, preparatory training so the youngsters (approximately 18 - 25) can score well on entry tests. A good bit of experience on this is available. Again, this is a program that can be carried out, with some expert advice, by volunteers. Not too many. They need to be qualified people. The main element in this proposal is the location-training-motivation component. The other determinations (extent of Negro participation and attitude of the institutions involved) are for background purposes. Assistance can be offered in developing that information, too.

   A specific proposal would be to convene a small working conference of people from one metropolitan area. It should include those knowledgeable in apprentice problems and training as well as persons from your organization and others who would be expected to take the lead in program execution. Emory Via would want to consult with you in detail prior to invitations being extended. SRC would provide the expert consultants for such a meeting and assist or cover the other costs for a one or two day program. We would not envision travel or room costs since the meeting would be restricted to one city.

3. An off-the-record conference between civil rights leaders and labor leaders. In some cases selected other leaders would also be involved. The format and invitees will have to be agreed on in advance between the Labor Program and the State Council. Such a conference would encourage individuals and their organizations to get acquainted on a serious level. It would uncover mutual, practical interests. It would air, constructively, the differences and misunderstandings that may have developed between civil rights advocates and the labor movement. The conference could be area or statewide. SRC would (a) advise on program, (b) work to secure labor participation, (c) provide outside expertise, and (d) underwrite much of the related costs to the meeting.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Jackson 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

September 15, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: State Council Directors and Chairmen

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: 1967 Schedule of Grants-In-Aid

We shall have to prepare our 1967 schedule of grants-in-aid in the near future. At present we plan to consolidate the regular and expanded grant program so as to eliminate the awkward distinction and simplify bookkeeping.

We would like to have by October 15 any statement or information with which you wish to supplement your regular financial and membership reports and quarterly program reports as we consider this schedule. It would be particularly helpful if you would summarize and point up (1) steps taken to increase membership, number of chapters, and indigenous financial support; (2) statistics showing actual results from these efforts; and (3) any definite plans you have along this line for this fall. Any new project to which you wish to apply any portion of a grant should be included. We will, of course, take into consideration the existing and continuing program of all councils as described in regular reports.

For purposes of our report to the annual meeting of the Southern Regional Council we need, either as a part of the above information or separately, comparative statistics on your membership and income from various sources for the year preceding September 30, 1965, and the year preceding September 30, 1966. We may be able to collect this information from your regular reports in most cases, but I personally would appreciate having your own reading as a check.

File

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N.W., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

September 20, 1966

Clearcopy Onion Skin

Memo to: Messrs. Hubert Beckwith, Jr.
H. Franklin Williams
Lucius H. Pitts
Joe Hendricks
T. Franklin Williams
Mrs. Martin Harvey

From: Ed Stanfield

This is to confirm that the special committee to study the relationship between SRC and the state councils will meet on Tuesday, September 27, at 10:00 A.M., as originally suggested, at this office.

JES:mim

bcc: Paul Anthony
Vernon Jordan
Emory Via
Al Ulmer
Moreland Smith
John Boone
Bob Anderson
Pat Watters

Sat. or Sun. would be good, ordinarily.

2712 Capers Ave.
Nashville, Tenn. 37203
September 18, 1966

Dear Ed:

I am here at Vanderbilt Univ. on a year's leave of absence from Chapel Hill, and your memorandum about the proposed meeting on Sept. 27 was slow in reaching me. I don't think I can make it on the 27th; would be glad to consider some other date. Or I could discuss this matter with you by telephone now or by letter or in person if you are to be here any time soon. Or will anyone from here be coming to that committee meeting? I can't remember for sure about that. If so I could talk with them.

My telephone number here is 297-9719 (home), 254-5411, ext 6636 (Dept. of Physiology at Vanderbilt where I am working). I will be away Wednesday afternoon and Thursday of this week.

Yours sincerely,

Frank

T. Franklin Williams, M. D.

UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI
CORAL GABLES, FLORIDA 33124

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE
P. O. BOX 8233

September 15, 1966

Mr. J. E. Stanfield
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Mr. Stanfield:

This is to advise that I can plan to be in Atlanta for the day on Tuesday, September 27, arriving at 9:39 a.m. via Northwest Airlines' #701.

Please confirm the date of the meeting.

Sincerely yours,

H. Franklin Williams

H. Franklin Williams
Dean

Essay - what should be the relationships?

September 2, 1966

~~C. C. Comillion~~
5 H. Franklin Williams — Miles College, Fairfield, Al.
4 Lucius H. Pitts — Mercer U., Macon, Ga.
3 Joe Hendricks -
6 T. Franklin Williams → 2712 Capers Ave. Nashville 37203
9 Mrs. Martin Harvey
11 Hubert Beckwith, Jr. — Congregational Christian Church of Fairfax County, P.O. Box 288, Annandale

You will recall that you were appointed last year, at the annual meeting of the Southern Regional Council, to serve on a committee to study the relationship between SRC and the state councils and to make recommendations to the annual meeting this year.

Could we meet for this purpose here in Atlanta on September 27 at 10:00 A.M.? Please let me know ~~if~~ at once whether or not you can come on that date. If for any reason you cannot attend on that day, please indicate what other days in that week would suit you.

I shall confirm or change the date as soon as I have heard from each of you.

Enclosed is a copy of a ~~resolution~~ pertinent resolution passed by the state council presidents at a meeting they had in June. I send it along with the thought that it might stimulate our thinking. It will be presented to the SRC Executive Committee at their meeting on September 12, so that we may have the benefit of their observations and possible action on this overture in our consideration of the over-all relationship.

Edwin Stanfield

Mrs. Martin Harvey
Businesswoman & Chairman
Womanpower Unlimited
415 N. Farish St.
Jackson 2, Miss.

Memos - OUTGOING

MEMORANDUM

September 26, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony
John Boone
Vernon Jordan
Moreland Smith
Al Ulmer
Emory Via Thad Olive
Marvin Wall

FROM: Ed Stanfield

The state council directors keep citing instances of their discovering only by accident that the S.R.C. is aiding a group or project within their states. They find this disconcerting because (1) people who do not understand the autonomous nature of the state councils assume that the directors have been informed by SRC and (2) the directors, stumbling across one project, suppose that there might be two or three others involving people they would like to know and be in touch with.

Could we make it standard operational procedure to inform each state council director when we are conducting a project, aiding a local group with a project, giving financial aid, etc., within his bailiwick? A carbon copy of a key letter, -- such as a letter of transmittal for a grant or a letter agreeing to a speaking engagement or the like -- marked "for information only," would be a big help. There will be times, of course, when some delicate matter will require, in your judgment, an exception to the standard procedure I am suggesting; I am sure council directors would have no objection to that.

For my part, I will ask the state council directors to remember that information concerning any such involvement of S.R.C. is only to keep them informed and, in some instances, to give them names for eventual contact and that it does not call for action on their part unless specifically requested. They will understand, I think, that in many cases (such as work with conservative labor groups or city officials) great discretion is required.

Copies to state council directors.

Memos - Outgoing

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Committee to Study the Relationship Between SRC and the State Councils -- Meeting on September 27, 1966.

The Committee to Study the Relationship Between SRC and the State Councils met in the SRC conference room on September 27, 1966. Those attending were Joe Hendricks, Franklin Williams (Florida), and The Reverend Hubert Beckwith, in addition to John Pecoul and I of the SRC staff.

To place our discussion in context, I read the statement which had been drafted by the state council directors and presented to the Executive Committee of SRC on June 3, 1965, and the action taken by the Executive Committee, including setting up the present special committee. (See attached copies.) Hendricks and Williams mentioned the meeting of state council presidents which was held in June of this year, said that some of the concerns expressed at that meeting were also pertinent to our subject, and expressed agreement that every effort must be made to put the state councils on a self-sustaining basis for their minimal general operations. Someone commented to the effect that the children should not only be weaned, but also should be set up as full partners.

The committee then proceeded to list the following objectives which they felt the relationship, whatever it might be, should be designed to pursue:

(1) A reginnal identity for the state councils and their memberships.

(2) A sizeable and representative membership body for both the state councils and SRC.

(3) Expanded and refined programs for the state councils; more technical skills on the state council staffs or available to them.

(4) Coordination of programs within SRC and between SRC and the state councils. This would mean better communication, but also consultation on program planning. The comment was made, "Something is being said in the fact that the SRC program money for state and local councils is not being gobbled up."

(5) Representation and participation for membership, including training for members to enable them to participate effectively.

Several ideas about specific steps toward these objectives were discussed. The principal ones were an expanded field department at SRC, a department of development, and a more integral relationship between SRC and the councils on human relations.

The committee felt that the Department of Field Activities needs to be greatly expanded, whether or not the formal relationship of the organizations changes. It should include a staff of specialists in the needs of state and local councils. (I took this to mean, for example, a specialist to help local councils organize and sustain affiliated student organizations; or someone who could stay for an extended period in a city to organize a fair housing effort; etc.) The committee mentioned the need for an advisory group for the field department.

In connection with field activities, the committee was concerned about the problem suggested in point four above, i.e., that there are many programs in the field not coordinated with "field activities." It was observed that the state councils were originally conceived as the agents for SRC's field activities; that the rapid growth and strength presupposed by this conception had not proven possible; and that, consequently, they are now -- in effect -- one of several SRC projects, all of which are field activities. It was felt that the state councils need more expert attention to enable them to attain strength to handle such needs as SRC must deal with, at present, through the special project apparatuses, although they are properly the concern of the state councils as well as SRC.

On the subject of mutual fund-raising, the committee felt the need for something like a "department of development" within SRC. It was stressed that they were not talking about a professional fund-raiser, but rather the need for one or more individuals, committed to the over-all purpose of SRC, who would develop programs as well as support for them and for the agency's general operations. "A department of development," someone summed up, "which is an integral part of the program -- not a fund raiser."

A considerable amount of time was devoted to the need for a more integral relationship between SRC and the the state councils, in order to achieve the objectives aoutlined above. One possibility would be to have each state council elect one SRC Board member each year, which would mean an eventual total of 40 out of the 100 Board members. Someone recalled a phrase Les Dunbar often used, "the SRC-human relations council movement." The committee felt that if there is indeed a movement, it needs to be structured and given leadership. They felt that the times and circumstances call for "a movement that is large, public, and regional." "In some way SRC ought to be connected with a membership -- a large constituency."

The committee felt that their discussion tended to point up the interpretation that SRC has gone through constant evolution as re-evaluation and restructuring was required by circumstances. They felt that they were not really suggesting a new departure, but only a return -- or partial return -- to the original concept. They asked me to describe their deliberations and wanted to have placed in the context of them a set of propositions drafted by H. Franklin Williams and unanimously agreed upon:

> S. R. C. and the councils on human relations should share a regional identity.
>
> Representative membership of active people is needed for the ends of both SRC and the state councils.
>
> Members of the councils on human relations must feel that they participate in SRC.
>
> SRC should regard the maintenance and extension of council on human relations membership as one of its objectives.
>
> To this end its field service should be built up with an eye to offering training and professional advice to the staffs of the councils and to suggesting projects which involve members in active and significant participation.
>
> There should be no interruption in other projects of SRC, but a real effort to keep the councils on human relations informed about them and involved, where possible.

The committee agreed that these propositions were not to be construed as conclusions to be proposed to the SRC Executive Committee, but rather to be submitted to the Executive Director for his response and comment. They asked that these comments be communicated to the special committee members. If it seems advisable, they will meet before or during the annual meeting to draft definite proposals.

Memos - Outgoing

October 11, 1966

TO: Pat Watters
FROM: Ed Stanfield

Pursuant to our brief conversation Monday afternoon:

It seems to me that we need to stress as an incidental part of many of our studies and publications or in a special report or -- preferrably-- in both ways the far-reaching, unfortunate implications of the emasculation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 which is now taking place. I think the subject would be worthy of a special report. (You might call it "The Life and Hard Times of Title VI" or the "Rise and Fall of the Federal Resolve.")

Among the points which need to be made:

(1) Administrative procedures against de facto segregation in schools was the strongest hope, if not the only one, Negroes had of overcoming the pattern and custom of segregated schools in the South.

(2) Much of what little belief Negroes had in the civil rights determination of the federal government was riding on Title VI. The administration stands to lose (further) the confidence of Negroes.

(3) While most of the furor has been over school and hospital desegregation policies of H.E.W., the loss of Title VI means the loss of what little leverage we have to secure equal participation for Negroes in agriculture extension services, ASCS (crop allotment) elections, and other programs of the Department of Agriculture (which is notoriously white-dominated and corrupt); in O.E.O. local policy boards; in housing programs (which probably means the loss of the one slim hope of overcoming segregated housing patterns).

See the article by Herbers in the NYT of October 7 or 8 which was excerpted in the Journal-Constitution, October 9. The gist was that Congress and the administration are slowly undermining Title VI.

Sen. Russell said when the 1964 C. R. Bill was being debated that its heart was Title VI -- and that segregationist knows his oats.

We or somebody ought to be raising hell about its demise.

Memo - Outgoing

October 12, 1966

PWatters from EStanfield

Paul thought that you should know about a recent increase of KKK activity in Virginia, for a report he said you had farmed out.

Bob Combs called last Friday (11/7/66) to say that he had received a threatening phone call from a Klansman. Apparently a Negro church had been bombed near Richmond. The NAACP and others alleged that the Klan was responsible. The Virginia Council put up a $100.00 for information leading to arrest and conviction -- and it was this which prompted the call. The man said the Klan was not responsible, that some nuts were doing it, so he was not threatening -- just warning -- that Bob might get hurt if he didn't keep his mouth shut!

Bob called back Monday to say that he had nevertheless spoken at a scheduled meeting at the burned-out church on Friday evening. About thirty Klansmen showed up and made vulgar noises, but the Henrico County police did a good job of keeping order.

Combs reports an initiation of $ 1,000 Klansmen at South Hill recently. (See attached newspaper.) He says John Gunn, State Editor of the Richmond News Leader, estimates there are 2,000 members of the Klan in Virginia now and 7,000 to 10,000 "close sympathizers."

He also quotes Henry Marsh as saying that a movement for self defense, apparently something like the Deacons for Defense and Justice, is being considered among Virginia Negroes.

Combs believes that the Virginia State Patrol are trying to do a good job of keeping the Klan in line.

October 17, 1966

MEMORANDUM

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Committee to Study the Relationship Between SRC and the State Councils -- Meeting on September 27, 1966.

The Committee to Study the Relationship Between SRC and the State Councils met in the SRC conference room on September 27, 1966. Those attending were Joe Hendricks, Franklin Williams (Florida), and The Reverend Hubert Beckwith, in addition to John Pecoul and I of the SRC staff.

To place our discussion in context, I read the statement which had been drafted by the state council directors and presented to the Executive Committee of SRC on June 3, 1965, and the action taken by the Executive Committee, including setting up the present special committee. (See attached copies.) Hendricks and Williams mentioned the meeting of state council presidents which was held in June of this year, said that some of the concerns expressed at that meeting were also pertinent to our subject, and expressed agreement that every effort must be made to put the state councils on a self-sustaining basis for their minimal general operations. Someone commented to the effect that the children should not only be weaned, but also should be set up as full partners.

The committee then proceeded to list the following objectives which they felt the relationship, whatever it might be, should be designed to pursue:

(1) A reginnal identity for the state councils and their memberships.

(2) A sizeable and representative membership body for both the state councils and SRC.

(3) Expanded and refined programs for the state councils; more technical skills on the state council staffs or available to them.

(4) Coordination of programs within SRC and between SRC and the state councils. This would mean better communication, but also consultation on program planning. The comment was made, "Something is being said in the fact that the SRC program money for state and local councils is not being gobbled up."

(5) Representation and participation for membership, including training for members to enable them to participate effectively.

Several ideas about specific steps toward these objectives were discussed. The principal ones were an expanded field department at SRC, a department of development, and a more integral relationship between SRC and the councils on human relations.

The committee felt that the Department of Field Activities needs to be greatly expanded, whether or not the formal relationship of the organizations changes. It should include a staff of specialists in the needs of state and local councils. (I took this to mean, for example, a specialist to help local councils organize and sustain affiliated student organizations; or someone who could stay for an extended period in a city to organize a fair housing effort; etc.) The committee mentioned the need for an advisory group for the field department.

In connection with field activities, the committee was concerned about the problem suggested in point four above, i.e., that there are many programs in the field not coordinated with "field activities." It was observed that the state councils were originally conceived as the agents for SRC's field activities; that the rapid growth and strength presupposed by this conception had not proven possible; and that, consequently, they are now -- in effect -- one of several SRC projects, all of which are field activities. It was felt that the state councils need more expert attention to enable them to attain strength to handle such needs as SRC must deal with, at present,through the special project apparatuses, although they are properly the concern of the state councils as well as SRC.

On the subject of mutual fund-raising, the committee felt the need for something like a "department of development" within SRC. It was stressed that they were not talking about a professional fund-raiser, but rather the need for one or more individuals, committed to the over-all purpose of SRC, who would develop programs as well as support for them and for the agency's general operations. "A department of development," someone summed up, "which is an integral part of the program -- not a fund raiser."

A considerable amount of time was devoted to the need for a more integral relationship between SRC and the the state councils, in order to achieve the objectives outlined above. One possibility would be to have each state council elect one SRC Board member each year, which would mean an eventual total of 40 out of the 100 Board members. Someone recalled a phrase Les Dunbar often used, "the SRC-human relations council movement." The committee felt that if there is indeed a movement, it needs to be structured and given leadership. They felt that the times and circumstances call for "a movement that is large, public, and regional." "In some way SRC ought to be connected with a membership -- a large constituency."

The committee felt that their discussion tended to point up the interpretation that SRC has gone through constant evolution as re-evaluation and restructuring was required by circumstances. They felt that they were not really suggesting a new departure, but only a return -- or partial return -- to the original concept. They asked me to describe their deliberations and wanted to have placed in the context of them a set of propositions drafted by H. Franklin Williams and unanimously agreed upon:

> S. R. C. and the councils on human relations should share a regional identity.
>
> Representative membership of active people is needed for the ends of both SRC and the state councils.
>
> Members of the councils on human relations must feel that they participate in SRC.
>
> SRC should regard the maintenance and extension of council on human relations membership as one of its objectives.
>
> To this end its field service should be built up with an eye to offering training and professional advice to the staffs of the councils and to suggesting projects which involve members in active and significant participation.
>
> There should be no interruption in other projects of SRC, but a real effort to keep the councils on human relations informed about them and involved, where possible.

The committee agreed that these propositions were not to be construed as conclusions to be proposed to the SRC Executive Committee, but rather to be submitted to the Executive Director for his response and comment. They asked that these comments be communicated to the special committee members. If it seems advisable, they will meet before or during the annual meeting to draft definite proposals.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N.W., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

MEMORANDUM

October 18, 1966

TO: H. Franklin Williams
Joe Hendricks
Hubert Beckwith
T. Franklin Williams
L. H. Pitts
Mrs. Martin L. Harvey

FROM: Ed Stanfield

The Special Committee to Study the Relationship between SRC and the State Councils, meeting here on September 27, asked me to prepare a memorandum summarizing its deliberations and to discuss them with Paul Anthony.

Enclosed is a draft of that summary. I apologize for the delay.

Please let Paul and me have any comments which you wish to make--particularly from those of you who were here, any corrections concerning the mind of the committee. While I have tried to do a faithful job of reporting, I am always afraid that I might have read something into or out of the conversation that does it an injustice.

If I don't hear from you in a week or ten days, we shall assume that your memories and mine are substantially in agreement and I will ask Paul to respond to the memorandum "as is."

MEMORANDUM

October 24, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: SRC's Relationship with the State Councils and the Future of the Grant-in-Aid Program

We should recommend to the SRC Executive Committee that they announce at once SRC's intention to discontinue the grant-in-aid program at the end of 1968 and to seek no more foundation grants for the general operations of state councils on human relations. Several considerations make this policy desirable and even necessary:

(1) The weightiest reason is that such a policy is the logical one and perhaps the only really viable one under the existing structural relationship of the organizations. SRC is in the position of seeking and being responsible for funds for organizations over which we have and desire no control except that of persuasion. We cannot really be responsible under this arrangement; it is very "unbusiness-like."

(2) Related to point one is the fact that the councils can and do seek direct aid from foundations. This tends to put us in competition with them for funding from the same sources. (They are, after all, other agencies.) Moreover, the largesse of a foundation, which certainly we would not oppose, has the effect of nullifying what little pressure we are able to exert to influence state council policy in directions required by our responsibility to donating foundations--as in the cases of Tennessee and South Carolina.

(3) By adopting straightforwardly such a policy, we might pave the way for any necessary changes in the structure of relationships. The state council staffs and knowledgeable members of their boards feel keenly a need for regional identity and fund-raising. They want SRC to provide these values, yet--as you have said--are reluctant to surrender any autonomy. My guess is that a forthright announcement of the kind proposed would generate serious thought and effort to effect a regional association. If at a later date we were approached to help in that, we would have clarified the issues and would be in position to come to some clear understandings.

(4) Meanwhile, the proposed announcement would give force to our campaign for local funding. We are now saying that we do not think we can find substantial funding for general operations among the foundations. This seems to be heard in the state councils as "there may be reduced help in 1969." Much more incisive would be the clear statement, "SRC will not continue its grant-in-aid program after 1968." At present, I think, they are presuming on our customary sense of responsibility. As long as we accept--or seem to accept--responsibility for the existence of the councils, there is the unconscious supposition that their survival is not their responsibility. But we can say, in effect, "We have secured for three years substantial general support for you. We think that is enough help to set the councils on their feet--a final boost, as it were. With that we have done, we think, all that we can do toward launching autonomous organizations. We consider that we have succeeded in giving the aid necessary. We are not going to fail to find support for you in 1969 and thereafter--because we are not going to try!"

(5) We could still commend the councils generally to the foundations as needed and worthwhile agencies. But the burden of evaluating them and their programs would be on the foundations--not us. Obviously the foundations do now and will continue to dislike multiple requests and proposals. The fact remains that we are not in a viable position to be the umbrella agency. It seems to me strategic to let the councils come to terms with that factt--and honest to let the foundations do so.

(6) Mississippi and Louisiana could be dealt with as special cases because they have been organized and staffed for a relatively short time and because they may not have, even after two more years, a tax-exempt certification. We could declare our intention to seek a terminal grant for two or three years for each of them, to begin in 1969.

MEMORANDUM

October 24, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Florida Council Annual Meeting

There was evidence at this meeting that the Florida Council is responding positively to our emphases on local support, increased membership, and local council programming. VandenBosche is pushing these things, as can beeseen from the prominence given them in the program and in the two mimeographed pieces attached hereto. He is backed up by Dr. Williams, of course, and by Herbert Davidson, who clearly stated to the Board--without prompting--the temporary nature of our current aid to their general operation and called for increased support from the locals.

It seems likely that donations will equal or exceed those of last year. The budget for next year calls for a 50% increase. (Also announced in Augie's report was the intention of major emphasis on forming new councils and assisting existing ones with program.)

There are no remarkable statistical results, as yet, in terms of contributions. Yet it seems to me that a solid basis is being laid--a strong Board, administrative emphasis and procedures, etc.--and the attitude of the membership is positive. Some of them are rather precious liberals, but they are involved.

Note especially the neat, orderly packaging of information in Augie's mimeographed program booklet.

One interesting incident: There was an attempt at the business meeting to block re-election to the Board of Bishop Louttit of the Episcopal church because of his attempts to get Bishop Pike tried for heresy. Dr. Williams, Caxton Doggett, and others persuaded the majority that the FCHR did not need to take up a denomination's doctrinal disputes.

Unfortunately, I had to leave to catch my plane just before Vernon spoke, but am sure it was a "save" for the meeting as far as speakers are concerned. Frank Sloan cancelled and sent DuPree Jordan instead. Jordan is a deputy director of O.E.O. He departed not one iota from the official line--strictly a canned public relations speech.

Memos - Outgoing

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N.W., ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

MEMORANDUM

October 27, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: A Contact at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

Ben D. Segal, longtime friend of SRC, has written to Emory Via to say that he is now Director of the Office of Liaison, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and is anxious to have a close working relationship with state and local councils on human relations. Mr. Segal is a labor union leader and, Emory tells me, was responsible for the funding of SRC's first Labor Project back in '57 and '58.

His letter reads, in part, as follows:

> "I would appreciate if you, for the SRC, could send them a letter saying that our Office of Liaison for federal, state, and local agencies is especially interested in working closely with the SRC chapters. You might want to tell them that we are very anxious to work with them. Feel free to indicate that we would be happy to send them speakers, literature, and work with them in any and all ways possible."

His address is:

Ben D. Segal, Director
Office of Liaison
Equal Employment Opportunity Commission
1800 G Street, N. W. Room 1229
Washington, D. C. 20506

November 2, 1966

Confidential

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Field Trip to Alabama

I was in Alabama Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week. Primary purposes were to look into the problem with Jerry Roden and Bob Valder about which I talked to you briefly and to visit Lewis Black to check on the continuing dissatisfaction of Jac Wasserman and NSF with his work.

In Auburn I was relieved to find, first, that Bob Valder is in much better spirits about the whole thing than he was when I talked to him here. He described himself as having "re-entry problems," meaning that he was suffering from disappointment at having the office load to carry again when he had thought himself free of it, finally. Now that he knows where he stands again, he says, he has readjusted.

Second, Jerry brought up on his own initiative the subject of his being unable to fulfill to his satisfaction the obligation he had undertaken. He said he felt that the Alabama Council was "drifting." He felt that Bob had grown a great deal just in the four months that he has been working with him and that Bob's relationship with Dr. Gomillion had become one of greater mutual respect. In view of this he proposed the possibility of naming Bob Executive Director, bringing in a new Associate Director, and having himself put back on the Executive Committee with special responsibility, on a volunteer basis, for organizing new local councils. I agreed to explore the possibility tentatively with Bob and with Dr. Gomillion.

Bob thought it over for a few hours, then answered (with a good-natured demeanor) that he simply did not wish to consider or to be considered for the post of Executive Director. He commented that Jerry had discussed his idea with him already and that he thought it inappropriate that it should come from Jerry. He added that he felt little in common with executive directors of the other state councils and, also, that he would not wish to continue as Associate Director under Jerry, if Jerry does a accept the position on a permanent basis in June. He is content to fulfill his obligation under the present setup, but at this point is of a mind to seek another position starting next June.

(He suggested that he would like to consider a position with SRC, if one suitable to his abilities and interests should open.) He also commented that he is under some gentle pressure from Jan (his wife), who just wants to get closer to her "home" in Iowa.

I reported his reaction to Jerry and said that I would nevertheless put the matter before Dr. Gomillion. I felt that if Dr. Gomillion had indeed changed his mind about Bob's inclinations to the extent that he would be willing to urge Bob to consider the Director's job, Bob might be persuaded.

I talked to Dr. Gomillion on Thursday. He responded that he still was concerned, not about Bob's ability--for which he expressed admiration--but about certain individuals toward whom Bob seemed to be drawn and about his inclination toward staff-oriented program and corresponding disclination to work with local council volunteers. Under the circumstances he favored keeping the present arrangement over naming Bob Director or bringing in another Director. The only thing that might make him favor a change at this time, he said, would be an indication that Jerry did not intend to take the position permanently after completion of his graduate study.

The decision has been made, then, to let the matter rest for the time being. Jerry has promised to make some decision about his future intentions after the first of the year.

I discussed with Bob and, in Greensboro, with Lewis Black Wasserman's chronic complaints about Lewis' work, which boil down to two: (1) he does not respond to NSF's satisfaction to requests for investigation of complaints; (2) he is too involved as a leader in Hale and Perry Counties and does not work over a wide area, evoking leadership elsewhere in the state. (Jac describes what he calls "a leadership syndrome" by which there seems to be one Negro leader in each county--Lewis Black being the one in Hale County--so that it appears to be bad form to encroach on another's bailiwick without specific request or approval.)

It was apparent that Jac had not discussed these complaints with Lewis. Except for his problem about sending in written reports, Lewis was unaware that Jac had any major complaints. He was appreciably disturbed about them. (I have subsequently mentioned this to Jac. He claims that he felt obliged to work through Jerry and Bob. I tried to suggest that there is a distinction between giving directions and offering constructive advice and criticism.)

For his part, Lewis thinks that the NSF program is too complaint-oriented. If they did not have the Department of Agriculture to nag, he says, they wouldn't have a program. He has, indeed, devoted much time to trying to secure a CAP agency in Hale county, to school desegregation efforts, to a local credit union and a local cooperative supermarket. But he has done so deliberately and with forethought. He says Negroes have been disillusioned with the promises of the Civil Rights Act about their "rights." Many have been forced to revert to "the Man" out of sheer economic necessity. Unless there are long-term, substantive programs to provide a way of living other than the white man's paternalism, Lewis argues, there is no use talking to Negroes about legal "rights."

As for the "leadership syndrome," there is a large measure of truth in Jac's analysis. However, there are compensations. One is that Lewis Black is manifestly in the Black Belt to stay, and, while the process might be slower, the influence of successful leadership might very well spread more surely through his approach than through that of wide-ranging do-gooding. Besides, he claims (and Bob Valder confirms) that he does in fact get around more than he gets credit for.

I suspect that much of the difficulty lies in the fact that writing is difficult for Black and therefore he does not satisfy Jac in the matter of reports. I think that he does more than enough good to justify his salary. And the Alabama Council Board and staff are clearly more than satisfied. Consequently, I am suffesting to Jac that he give Black more time in field visitation, trying to build up a mutual confidence. Black just is not going to fit the NSF mold, but he has--of course--a profound understanding of the realities of life for Negroes in the Black Belt which could be unusually fruitful if NSF could see itself providing technical assistance to his program instead of seeing him as a leg man for theirs.

I stopped in Selma overnight and got a most interesting "Cook's Tour" from Cap Swift, the city councilman and business man whom I met there during the demonstrations. Cap pointed out the paved streets in the Negro sections of town, the new lighting, the improved sanitation service, the 35 Negro children now attending Parrish High, the fact that there are now 400 city employees compared to 200 two years ago, the fact that he and other city fathers had secured a surplus food program by putting pressure on the county commission via an official of Hammermill Paper Company. He pointed out the Negro cop that the city has hired. And I confirmed personally (what he had bragged) that the town was so booming that there were no rooms available except on weekends. (I got one of the last two left even in the ramshackle Hotel Albert.) Besides Hammermill, Dan River is building a plant nearby. And Hammermill already has on the drawingboards and expansion of the $65 million plant they have not yet finished.

Wilson Baker dropped into Cap's drug store while I was there and confirmed Cap's statement that his prospects look good. About half (more or less) of the whites in the county will vote for Baker and, they claim, virtually all of the Negroes, who now match the whites in voting strength.

I had no opportunity to talk to anyone in the Negro community, and there are a lot of questions I would like to have answered. Is it true that Hammermill is hiring on a non--discriminatory basis? At what levels are Negroes hired by the city? Are the improved services costing the town anything, or is it all federal money? It seemed to me that the improvements made thus far (and they are improvements) are still in the paternalistic mold and that Selma white people still little comprehend the root of the community's problem.

If it is not already in the works, I would like to suggest a "special report" on the aftermath in several cities which have been the scenes of direct action campaigns--St. Augustine, Albany, Birmingham, Selma, and perhaps others. I think I would enjoy doing Selma, Watters could do a couple of them, etc.

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
STEPHEN J. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, VICE-PRESIDENT
RAYMOND M. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
PAUL ANTHONY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

November 3, 1966

TO: Members of the Special Committee on the Relationship between SRC and the State Councils

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Enclosed is a copy of Paul Anthony's response to the ideas which came out of the meeting of the committee which was held in September. Although you have already been sent my summary of the meeting, another copy is attached for easy reference.

I would appreciate having some expression from each member of this committee about the desirability (or lack thereof) of meeting during the SRC Annual Meeting. My own thought is that you ought to get together, if for no other reason than to decide how to proceed from this point.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

November 3, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: State Council Presidents and Executive Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Herewith, for your information, are copies of a summary of a meeting of the Special Committee to Study the Relationship of SRC to the State Councils and Paul Anthony's response to the ideas coming out of that meeting.

I believe that the committee is to meet again during SRC's Annual Meeting to decide on next steps.

The members of the committee are:

H. Franklin Williams
T. Franklin Williams
Joe Henricks
Lucious Pitts
Hubert Beckwith
Mrs. Martin Harvey

M E M O R A N D U M

November 10, 1966

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

I called Helen Mervis between planes in New Orleans today. We discussed our proposition in reference to John Pecoul.

It is a sticky proposition for her. Not only is she on the Personnel Committee of Urban League (Chairman, in fact), but she also says that some Leaguers have accused her of using Urban League programs for CRC activities--in competition, so to speak. She is going to an Urban League meeting in New York next week and was going to discuss the situation with Whitney Young. This, she says, will make her situation even stickier. (She claims, indidentally, that the job openings for John in New Orleans are there because he had talked to her about his wish to "return" about a year ago, she had been impressed, and had spoken to the OEO director and Urban League in his behalf.)

Anyway, she tells me that you are expecting her Tuesday night and can then go into the matter, including her relationship to the state council, to Pat, to SRC, to Urban League, etc. I told her I would leave a message for her at the hotel. Perhaps the three of us could have dinner.

I had previously talked to Pat and Dr. Oliver about it. Dr. Oliver's initial reaction was that it seemed like a good idea, although he would need time to think it through. Pat seemed to have reservations about it. She claims no doubts about her ability to work with John--only about the effect on the LCHR. I had difficulty in getting her to see that the move would have benefits for the rest of the state as well as for New Orleans. She was afraid, for example, that the LaFayette area crowd would resent the hiring of staff for New Orleans after "losing" the office to Baton Rouge.

There is always the possibility, of course, that Pat still feels too insecure to take on additional staff, preferring to try to stabilize to existing operation first. That is understandable.

All things considered, I have to recommend--reluctantly, and subject to change after our talk with Helen--that we let this idea rest.

First, I don't think it could be done in time to get John without our "selling" it pretty hard. There are too many complications, hesitations, etc., to be worked through, and it would be hazardous to brush them aside or push the principals to a hasty decision.

Second, I begin to feel that Pat's instincts might be good, even if defensive. If she had sufficient experience and confidence, adding John to the staff would be superb strategy. As it is, I myself am afraid that John's presence might weaken Pat, who has a feminine tendency to lean on any strength available. So, while it might mean losing John from the SRC network temporarily, maybe it would be better to let LCHR have a longer shakedown cruise.

We certainly ought to keep this in mind as an experiment we need to try, and we should continue to incubate the idea with CRC and LCHR and Pat--hoping to get a John Pecoul and better circumstances to arrive at the same time. I definitely do think we have to plan something creative about New Orleans within 12 to 18 months, lest we lose LCHR entirely.

MEMORANDUM

November 21, 1966

TO: Joe Hendricks
Mrs. Martin Harvey
H. Franklin Williams
T. Franklin Williams
Hubert Beckwith
L. H. Pitts

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Enclosed is a copy of the resolution proposed at the annual meeting of the Southern Regional Council by Dr. Ralph Dreger. It was referred to the Special Committee on the Relationship of the State Councils to SRC, of which you are members.

It appears that the committee should plan another meeting sometime after the first of the year. As you failed to designate a chairman at your meeting in September, I will undertake to convene the group once more. If it will be satisfactory, I will consult Paul Anthony about the desirability of having it before the next meeting of the Executive Committee (in January).

It seems to me that you would want to aim to have some specific recommendations, in addition to this one, after your next meeting. Accordingly, let me suggest that each of you write a memorandum to me covering any recommendations the committee should make. I will undertake to pass these ideas along to other committee members. In that way, perhaps some of your thinking can be done, in the interest of time, prior to the meeting.

cc: Dr. Ralph Dreger

M E M O R A N D U M

November 21, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Trip to Birmingham, Saturday, November 19, 1966

This trip was to assist with a briefing session for local-council chairmen for the 1967 finance and membership campaign of the Alabama council.

Only the two smallest chapters (Talladega and Montgomery) were not represented. Goals were set--with consent of local council representatives--totalling $25,000 and 1600 members.

We had a careful review of the campaign plan and there was good interest and response. I think there really is a good chance of success, provided they can find an additional $3,000 to $4,000 in business or big-donor contributions.

Gomillion and I had a session with Ruden, and Jerry committed himself to accept the Executive Director's post, if offered and barring unforeseen circumstances.

In view of Valder's outstanding work on this meeting--as on so many other things--I am frustrated over being not quite able to suggest him for South Carolina or elsewhere (he does know USDA and ASCS ropes, and he does work well with a policy board). Somehow I still hope he will come around. Once during this meeting he commented about what the Huntsville Council had accomplished and remarked that it "shows how much a chapter can do with the right people--which sort of belies my theories." Maybe a down-to-the-mat conversation with him would be in order in a couple of months.

James and Kathy Wood send their regards.

M E M O R A N D U M

November 22, 1966

TO: Southern Interagency Conference Steering Committee--
Al Kehrer, Ted Freedman, John Morris, Jean Fairfax, Jack Sisson, Bruce Hanson, Clarence Coleman, Courtney
Siceloff, Edward Brown, Oscar McCloud

FROM: Secretariat

At the call of Al Kehrer, Chairman, the Steering Committee is to meet at 10:00 A. M. Friday, December 9, 1966, in the Southern Regional Council Conference Room to plan the agenda for the January meeting of the SIC.

The January meeting was tentatively scheduled for January 17-18 (possibly January 18-19 at our last meeting.

M E M O R A N D U M

November 30, 1966

TO: H. Franklin Williams
Hubert Beckwith
Mrs. Martin Harvey
L. H. Pitts
Joe Hendricks

FROM: Ed Stanfield

As requested by T. Franklin Williams, I am sending herewith a photo copy of a letter of his expressing his response to the memoranda on our September meeting and to Dr. Dreger's resolution at the SRC Annual Meeting.

I hope to be in touch with you soon relative to another meeting.

cc: T. Franklin Williams

M E M O R A N D U M

November 30, 1966

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Conference on "People, Religion, and a Changing Virginia"

The conference was well-planned, the speakers first-rate, and the crowd large and responsive. It was as good as such a conference could be and, as Samuel Proctor remarked in his address at the concluding banquet, was the ultimate accomplishment in the realm of talkfests, short of hard work on the stubborn problems. (Proctor, incidentally, is a notably effective speaker.) The "sponsors" who met several times during the conference announced plans for area conferences throughout the state.

I suppose one never know how much or little is accomplished by such programs as this. Clearly it had educational value--and it was not, certainly, at a superficial level. Also, the Virginia Council got some good P. R. mileage out of it as the visible-but-unobtrusive originating organization.

The Board elected Mr. M. C. Martin, a Negro banker from Danville as their new president.

Bob Combs, who is exhausted from chasing klansmen and reporters, says they do need more money to print copies of their textbook publications. The Norfolk school system wants 2,000 copies for distribution to teachers. He will write.

Attached: Copy of schedule
VCHR resolution
Newsclips
Turner address

M E M O R A N D U M

December 7, 1966

TO: Moreland Smith
John Boone
Marvin Wall

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Thank you for agreeing to attend the Virginia Council's annual meeting on Saturday, January 14, 1967.

I have ordered roundtrip tickets via Eastern Flight #350, departing Atlanta 7:10 A.M., nonstop to Richmond, and United Flight #653, departing Richmond 7:20 P.M., one stop to Atlanta. Meals will be served on both flights. The tickets will be mailed on January 6.

I will ask Bob Combs to give you details on what you are to do at the meeting.

cc: Bob Combs

MEMORANDUM

December 8, 1966

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Ed Stanfield

SUBJECT: Paperback Bobks Project

The Paperback Books Project is gathering momentum rapidly. The word seems, at last, to have drifted down to community organizations and local councils, as well as to all kinds of schools with weak libraries or no libraries, and we are getting so many requests that Louise and I are afraid there will soon be a lot of disappointments.

Although it is too soon to expect evaluations of the various local projects, we ought to begin thinking about a request for renewal of the grant and, perhaps, an enlargement. I have asked Louise to give us a report on current status as soon as possible.

A lot of questions arise. Should we encourage the donor to consider the need of the many schools, public and private, which simply need to augment their libraries--without a sponsoring citizens' group? Should we consider the possibility of decentralizing the operation, with the next grant, so as to make the state councils the source of the books for local groups within their states? (This might be done either by having them develop a working arrangement with a local distributor or by standardizing the ordering procedure and having them send orders direct to Atlanta News Agency, which would also bill them direct.)

(Louise just came in. She calculates that we have ordered some 53,000 books thus far and that theyvhave billed us for only about $6,000 worth. Allowing for $4,000 backlog, it appears that the books are costing only about half as much as we expected on the basis of the rule of thumb that Elson gave us. I will try to check this more carefully.)

Memos - Outgoing

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
PHONE 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

MEMORANDUM

December 8, 1966

TO: State Council Director

FROM: Ed Stanfield

I notice that the National Education Association's Commission on Professional Rights and Responsibilities is sponsoring a conference on the treatment of minorities in American textbooks. It is to be held in Washington on February 9 and 10, 1967. I have asked them to send you an announcement of the conference and information about it, if they have not already done so.

As you know, the Virginia Council has pioneered for us along this line. It seems to me that this is a project that all of us might want to take up, studying and acting upon the conditions prevailing in each of our respective states. It would be a worthwhile endeavor, would provide opportunity for particularized service by each state council, yet would help mold a "regional identity" as a South-wide program.

In this connection, please let me know (rather soon) what you think of the idea of our convening for our next state council directors' meeting in Washington--say, on the evening of February 8th. This would provide us opportunity to draw on different brains for one or two other concerns, as well as giving our meeting a specific focus on the textbook problem. The additional cost would be nominal: we could follow our new formula of splitting the costs except that SRC would pay all travel costs in excess of $50.00. Registration costs for the conference could be paid by each individual council, I suppose, although I don't know at this point what that cost will be.

I will try to nail down this or some other date for our next meeting as soon as I hear from each of you.

Memos - Outgoing

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ... 30303
... 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

M E M O R A N D U M

December 19, 1966

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Response to the idea of having our next meeting in Washington in conjunction with the N.E.A. Conference on Treatment of Minorities in American Textbooks seems to be unanimously favorable. So mark January 8, 9, and 10 in your date books, please, and let's do it.

We do not know yet where the N.E.A. conference will be held, so we shall have to iron out details at a later date. But let's plan to convene around noon or immediately after lunch on the 8th, in order to have some time together and still participate in the conference.

Memos - OUTGOING

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
Madison 2-8764

PAUL ANTHONY,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

M E M O R A N D U M

December 20, 1966

TO: All concerned with subject

FROM: Edwin Stanfield, Director of Field Activities

SUBJECT: Proposal for an addition to the Louisiana Council Staff

As some of you will have heard by the time you receive this, John Pecoul has found it necessary to withdraw his name from consideration for the staff position in question. Unanticipated complications in his family situation will make extensive travel impossible for him for some time, and he has concluded that he could not in the immediate future fulfill the obligations outlined in the job description. This is a disappointment, of course, as John seemed an exceptionally likely prospect for the proposed job and his availability was an extra incentive for expedition of our planning.

John's situation may be such that he could reconsider the position after a year's lapse, if that should be the wish of all concerned. He has asked me to make it clear, however, that he does not wish his personal involvement or potential involvement to be a primary consideration in the planning or timing.

In view of this development, it seems to us here that we should continue active planning on the basis of the job description, budget and structure which have been developed -- but at a slower pace, aiming at a later date for beginning the operation. We think the idea intrinsically sound and worthy of pursuit. The necessary delay can be used to good effect toward both stabilizing the existing Louisiana Council operation before expanding the staff and securing the necessary backing for the expansion.

As a basis for this continued planning I attach hereto a copy of (1) our original note on the idea, (2) the "Outline for an Addition to Louisiana Council Staff" (comprised of adoption of the basic idea, a job description, a section on staff-board relations, and a section on financial arrangements) prepared by the planning group in Louisiana, and (3) a revised minimum budget. In addition, I want to make a few comments and clarifications growing out of a discussion of these with Paul Anthony and John Pecoul.

First, Paul and I want to commend all involved in the planning that has been done for the entire outline submitted, and most especially for the job description. We think this indicates the sort of careful thought and cooperative spirit which is necessary to the success of the proposal.

As for the Southern Regional Council's financial participation, we are prepared to commit ourselves for $5,000.00 for the first full year of operation, whenever it might begin. Payment would have to be distributed over a full twelve-month period; that is, we cannot provide $5,000.00 for an operation during part of a calendar year. We arrived at this figure in the light of our commitments to the state councils for 1967 and implied commitments for 1968 -- and, indeed, can make this amount available only because of the importance we attach to experimentation with an arrangement of the kind under consideration.

The budget roughed out by the planning group and shown to us by Mr. Pecoul totalled $22,500.00. The attached revision totals $17,667.80. This lower figure is, of course, not the ideal, but we feel that it is sufficient to make a beginning and is more realistic in terms of potential funding. Most of the reduction is effected by budgeting for a half-time secretary instead of a full-time one, planning a more modest office at a rental of about $100.00 per month instead of $200.00, and reducing the item for expendable office supplies from $1,200.00 to $600.00.

I would suggest as our next step a meeting of appropriate persons from the CRC and LCHR boards with Paul Anthony and me either just before or just after the Louisiana Council's annual meeting on February 25. At that time we can attempt to set up a new timetable, assuming that interest continues. Meanwhile the planning which has been done thus far could be used in sounding out general interest and potential support for the project.

AN IDEA FOR AN ADDITION TO THE STAFF OF THE LOUISIANA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Metropolitan areas have unique and intense needs in the field of human relations which require the special attention not only of interested citizens but also of professional staff. The needs of a southern state like Louisiana require additional staff personnel in human relations at the state level.

These facts suggest the desirability of an associate director of the Louisiana Council on Human Relations who would serve both statewide functions, but particularly the New Orleans area.

It is proposed as an idea for consideration that an Associate Director of the Louisiana Council be employed and that he reside in New Orleans, working out of a small office there. His job description would include three principal parts:

1. to give special service to New Orleans and the Community Relations Council, which would be facilitated by his location there;

2. to carry out research and writing projects in consultation with the Executive Director;

3. to help organize and service local human relations councils in other sizeable cities in Louisiana.

His salary and support for his work would be underwritten entirely by a special grant from the Southern Regional Council and by the New Orleans Community Relations Council, utilizing initially whatever foundation assistance may be secured.

It is obvious that the special needs of New Orleans and the C.R.C. would thereby be recognized and served. Assuming that a properly qualified person were chosen, his location and job description would assure attention to these needs. Volunteer support and participation would be encouraged by this arrangement.

Hardly less obvious are the benefits to the Louisiana Council as a whole if this idea is accepted. First, additional staff time and talent would be made available for research and aid to local councils. Second, additional staff resources would be available to the state as a whole by virtue of the release of the existing staff's attention from the special problems of the New Orleans metropolitan area.

The net effect would be to increase tangible interest in and support of the Louisiana Council as a whole from the New Orleans group -- and vice versa -- through the vehicle of a state council staff more nearly adequate to the total needs of the whole state and with a unified structure at the state level.

We estimate that $15,000 per year will be needed for this addition to the staff. An initial grant of $5,000 from the Southern Regional Council would need to be matched with approximately $5,000 from the Community Relations Council and $5,000 from a foundation grant or combination of grants. It is anticipated that support of this latter portion of costs of the operation would be gradually assumed over a period of two or three years by the New Orleans community as its worth to that community is proven.

OUTLINE FOR AN ADDITION TO LOUISIANA COUNCIL STAFF

I. SRC proposal adopted, revised in financial section and stressing metropolitan areas more.

II. Job Description

A. Aid to Executive Director in organizing new councils and consult with existing councils in metropolitan areas on research and program, such as media, interagency councils, and jobs and unions.

B. Research and Resources

1. Establish resources and information center to include the following:

a. Newspaper and magazine clips on race relations, human resources, and politics for Louisiana and New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and Shreveport.

b. Compile manuals, handbooks, etc., on federal, SRC, and other program resources.

c. Move toward establishment of an inter-agency human resources data center with universities, BGR, PAR or others.

2. Special research projects to facilitate council work in metropolitan areas to be determined by the associate director in consultation and cooperation with the executive director on the basis of state program priorities and local council needs. In most instances, such projects should be of sufficient generality to be of use in all metropolitan areas although they would normally be conducted from the associate director's New Orleans office, published through the state office.

C. New Orleans area program (Assist officials - not run program)

1. Evaluation of current CRC program to establish one or two specific goal priorities from among the following possibilities and others:

a. Housing and neighborhood stabilization.

b. Economic opportunity (jobs, coops, credit unions) possible program aid in doing this.

c. Community issues forum (Grant)

d. Voter education

e. Administration of justice (police, courts, legal aid, etc.)

f. Media and race

g. Religion and race

h. Inter-agency coordination

i. Youth and student affairs (program for help of population under 30 years)

j. Education

k. Organize Greater New Orleans branches

2. Maintain flexibility to deal with unforeseen needs which arise in addition to basic goals.

3. Become completely familiar with the dynamics and personalities of the New Orleans public and quasi-public sector.

III. Staff-Board Relations

In order to maximize effectiveness of the above professional functions the following relationships are proposed:

A. Part A above:

In consultation with the Associate Director, and sufficiently in advance to allow planning and to avoid schedule conflicts, the Executive Director will arrange visits by the Associate Director to state cities other than New Orleans for no more than an average of one week per month. It is understood that this time would more efficiently be spent in blocks where possible rather than on frequent short trips, though short frequent trips may sometimes be necessary in special circumstances.

B. Part B above:

In consultation with the Executive Director and representative of local councils, the Associate Director will select, design and conduct special research or information collection of significance to Louisiana state metropolitan areas. It is understood that this function will require varying amounts of time in any given month but that it is important enough to justify the use of as much as one week per month, sometimes more and sometimes less.

C. Part C above:

The Board of the New Orleans Community Relations Council will set policy for the work of the Associate Director with the CRC. It is understood that, depending upon demands from the state travel and research functions, work with CRC by the Associate Director might involve as many as three or as few as two weeks per month.

D. Staff relations committee representing state, research, and CRC interests should be established to resolve any conflicts arising under the foregoing arrangements and to report periodically to their respective constituencies. It cannot be emphasized strongly enough that the suggested time allocations are guidelines to prevent disproportionate emphasis being given to any one of the three job functions. They should not be altered unilaterally by any party involved but in special circumstances they could be altered by mutual agreement of both staff members with the consent of the Presidents of CRC and LCHR.

IV. Financial arrangements for additional staff.

A. Responsibility for all costs over and above SRC grant for Associate Director will be borne by CRC. All funds for the staffing and operating of CRC will be directed through LCHR and accounted for by LCHR auditor.

B. Any funds secured by CRC over and above the minimum of $ _____ required for New Orleans staff and office will be deposited with state LCHR for general state program needs which might include further New Orleans programs.

C. Present contributions of CRC membership pro-rata to state will continue.

REVISED BUDGET

Salaries
Associate Director	$ 9,000.00
Secretary	2,100.00	(1)
Janitorial Services	300.00	(2)
Benefits
FICA taxes	382.80	(3)
Major Medical Policy	325.00
Retirement Policy	260.00
Office
Rent	1,200.00	(4)
Telephone and postage	1,200.00
Equipment (typewriter, furniture)	600.00
Expendable Supplies	600.00
Travel
All travel	1,800.00	(5)
TOTAL	$17,667.80

NOTES ON BUDGET

(1) Although a full time secretary is certainly desirable, we anticipate that a secretary half-time would be sufficient, at least for the first year.

(2) Assumes that someone could be employed for an average of three hours each week at $1.50 per hour.

(3) This figure (382.80) is 4.4% of the first $6,600.00 of the Associate Director's salary and 4.4% of the Secretary's salary.

(4) We consider it necessary that the office be a very modest one for the time being. $1,200.00 should be sufficient for this purpose, especially with an additional $300.00 in case janitorial service should be included in the rent. It might be possible to secure adequate space for even less.

(5) $150.00 per month, average, for travel is minimal. It will require careful planning of trips to make them maximally productive. It might also require limiting out-of-state travel mostly to expense-paid opportunities.

December 22, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: State Council Directors

FROM: Ed Stanfield

Under separate cover we are sending you a copy of the "Directory For Citizens Information Service" prepared by the Council on Human Relations of Greater Atlanta. It occurred to us that it might be suggestive of program possibilities to some of you.

La	- c.	1,000
S.C.	- c.	800
Va.	- c.	600
Miss	- c.	1,200
N.C	- c.	600
Ark	- c.	550
Ga	- c.	700
Ala	- c.	1,200
Fla	c.	70
TOTAL	c.	6,720

MEMOS - OUTGOING

REPORT TO THE NEW WORLD FOUNDATION ON SOUTHERN SCHOOL DESEGREGATION CONFERENCES, 1966

Conferences on school desegregation were held, as proposed, in eight southern states and the border state of Maryland under the sponsorship of each state's Advisory Committee to the U. S. Civil Rights Commission. Following each of these, except the one in Maryland, a brief after-meeting was held to discuss the problems of achieving desegregation and to give practical guidance to Negro community leaders on the processes necessary. Such a meeting was also held in Tallahassee, for North Florida, although there was no Civil Rights Commission conference there. These meetings were sponsored jointly by the Southern Regional Council, the American Friends Service Committee, the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, the human relations councils of the several states and civil rights groups active in each.

Schedule and Attendance

The Louisiana conference was on March 26 at the Bentley Hotel, Alexandria. Approximately 1,000 people attended the conference and about 400 were at the after-meeting.

In South Carolina, April 2, at Dreher High School, Columbia, there were 800 at the conference, 250 at the second meeting.

The Virginia conference on April 9 was at John Marshall High School in Richmond and was attended by about 600. 200 remained for the after-meeting.

An estimated 1,200 people turned out for the Mississippi conference at the Heidelberg Hotel in Jackson on April 16. At least 450 stayed for the community organization meeting.

The North Carolina conference was at the University's Greensboro campus on April 30. Some 600 people attended, with about 150 at the second session.

On May 7 the Arkansas Conference was held at Philander Smith College, Little Rock. About 550 attended, with 200 staying for the after-meeting.

The Georgia Conference was held in Atlanta, at the Biltmore Hotel, on May 14. Approximately 700 were at the main meeting and about 250 at the second meeting.

The Alabama Conference was on June 11 at the Dinkler-Tutwiler Hotel in Birmingham. About 1,200 attended, with some 500 staying for the second meeting.

On April 23, while the U. S. Civil Rights Commission staff was engaged in the Maryland Conference, a small meeting was held for Negro parents and leaders in Tallahassee. About 70 people attended. The American Friends Service Committee, assisted by a staff member of the Florida Council on Human Relations, planned that extra conference, and the Southern Regional Council paid some travel expenses for participants.

The Programs

The conferences followed very similar patterns. Copies of the schedules for two of them are attached. It can be seen that the same basic program was used for both, and it was used for the others also. Speakers and other leaders varied, of course.

The organization meetings were also much alike. Ordinarily the entire group stayed together for a briefing, usually by Miss Jean Fairfax of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund or a member of the American Friedds Service Committee staff (which has been working intensively on school desegregation for a number of years). This briefing included the key points of the new guidelines, techniques of organization to secure transfers to formerly all-white schools, dodges to watch for, etc. There was also time for specific case-problems and questions and answers.

By April 30, when the North Carolina Conference was held, the transfer period was supposed to have been over. There was an extension. Nevertheless, the after-meetings of the last four conferences dealt more with what happened - instances of guidelines violations, difficulties, and the like - than with organization and planning. There was wide-spread frustration and an often-expressed feeling that "freedom of choice" plans would never do away with the dual school systems.

The Response

Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and South Carolina had the largest attendances and, as it seemed, the greatest interest. This was no doubt due to the fact that these are the states in which there has been least progress toward school desegregation and most frustration. (The attendance in Georgia was a little smaller than in the other Deep South states. Georgia and Alabama had had good conferences on school desegregation a couple of months before -- and Georgia did not have the widely-publicized, total opposition of the state administration to the guidelines that Alabama had.)

In Louisiana, where only six parishes had "voluntary" desegregation plans and five times as many were under court order, the interest was remarkable. There was little organization in Louisiana, the civil rights groups not having concentrated on that state, and the people seemed to feel the need keenly.

The Mississippi and Alabama Conferences had the added attraction of an address by Commissioner Howe himself. The challenging circumstances and considerable civil rights leadership also contributed to the greater interest shown.

However, the response in Arkansas, Georgia, North Carolina, and Virginia was not at all disappointing.

Costs

A statement showing expenditures for transportation state by state is attached.

Virtually all of the money expended from the New World Foundation grant was for transportation expenses of participants. Since most of the experts used were either from government agencies or the staffs of private organizations, only one or two consultants had to be utilized. Thus there was less expense for this purpose than we anticipated.

In addition, there was general agreement among representatives of the sponsoring agencies that we should not try to pay the entire cost of operating a car to the conference, but only the cost of gasoline and oil. At the first conference, Louisiana, we paid drivers at the rate of six cents per mile. We noted that many who collected were school principals, teachers and others who were not in the low-income group. Subsequently we reimbursed drivers at the rate of three cents per mile, which we calculated to be enough to buy gasoline and oil for the trip. (Except that in Virginia werwere already committed, by a letter of invitation to the after-meeting, to six-cents per mile.)

Evaluation

We feel that the conferences and after-meetings were very valuable and that the provision for participation by the poor greatly increased the value.

At all of the conferences a large number of counties were represented. (See attached partial listings of participants in the community organization meetings.) As a result information about the regulations, the rights of minority-group pupils, the specific steps required of school boards (including copies of required letters and forms), and the techniques of organization for school desegregation was widely disseminated. The staff of the Civil Rights Commission provided literally tons of government publications -- and they were taken eagerly by participants. Sponsors of the second sessions provided kits of material on organization to secure transfers and to monitor procedures of the local school board.

A second value of the conference was that they gave people opportunity to see, perhaps to meet, employees of government and private agencies who could be called upon for assistance. We feel that it was encouraging to community leaders to see what and who was available to help.

We also think that it was valuable for government officials to be confronted with people from remote counties and with their fears and difficulties concerning school desegregation.

The conferences provided a platform for reaffirmation by government officials of the validity of the guidelines and the determination of the administration to achieve desegregation. Commissioner Howe's speeches in Mississippi and Alabama, for example, were widely publicized. This kind of thing was valuable at a time when governors and senators and school officials from these states were publicly decrying the guidelines as illegal and calling for resistance to them.

MEMOS - OUTGOING

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

EXPANDED GRANT-IN-AID PROGRAM FOR 1966

General Conditions

Duration

The Southern Regional Council's expanded grant-in-aid program is made possible by a three-year Ford Foundation grant. Commitment to the 1966 grant schedule, however, is for one year only. Grants to state councils will be revised for the second year, and again for the third, in the light of their progress toward attaining the general purpose of the expanded aid program.

Purpose

The general purpose of the expanded grant-in-aid program is to enable the state councils to increase their membership and program and to become self-sustaining in their basic, staffed operations. As a means to this end, grants for the first year are mostly to make possible adequate or more stable staffed operations.

Evaluation and Revision

The Southern Regional Council will consider this expanded program to be attaining its purpose only if it results in significant increase of both membership and financial support from the membership of the several state councils. Therefore it should be clearly understood that performance in these two respects will weigh more heavily than need in the annual revisions of the grant schedule.

No "matching funds" provision is attached to the 1966 grants. It is expected, however, that each state council will make during 1966 a planned, systemmatic effort to enlist new members and new chapters and to raise funds from a broad base of individual contributors. The success of such an effort will weigh heavily in the annual evaluation. (This may be interpreted frankly to mean that failure of the membership to support the state council will result in less aid, not more, from the Southern Regional Council.)

It is probable that larger portions of the 1967 and 1968 grants will be designated for particular projects, and that support of staffs made possible by the 1966 grants will be proportionately reduced. For this reason policy boards of the state councils should consider both their determination and the possibility to assume rapidly support of whatever staffing is made possible by their 1966 grant. Should determination be lacking or the possibility doubtful, they should seriously consider rejecting the grant because of this condition and in fairness to employees and potential employees.

Payment Schedule

Except where noted, the annual grant will be paid in equal quarterly installments, due February 15, May 15, August 15, and November 15.

The first quarterly installment of each grant will be paid as soon as possible administratively. Where one of the purposes of the grant is to employ additional personnel, expenses incurred in finding and moving the employee may be considered a part of the overhead expense. The second quarterly installment of grants for additional staff will be withheld, if necessary pending actual employment of the staff person.

Reporting Requirements

Quarterly payments will be made only if (1) the last-due quarterly program report has been received by the Director of Field Activities of the Southern Regional Council and (2) monthly financial and membership reports have been received regularly (beginning with a report for April, 1966). Quarterly installments due on the fifteenth of the months mentioned above will be paid upon receipt of the statistical report for the preceding month, plus any past-due reports.

Monthly statistical reports, in order to be acceptable, must show the following:

1. A breakdwon of receipts into membership dues, individual contributions, corporate business contributions, S.R C grants, foundations grants, and miscellaneous receipts. The report must show for each category the amount received during the month and the total for the fiscal year to date in that category.

2. A chapter-by-chapter breakdown of membership growth for the month and each chapter's total for the membership year to date. (This may include out-of-state and at-large categories.

3. A separate accounting for funds received from the expanded (Ford Foundation) grant-in-aid program, with a breakdown of each category of disbursement into expenditures for the month and the year to date. (We recommend, but do not require, a similar reporting for the disbursement of other funds.)

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

JOHN EDWIN STANFIELD

Born in Warren, Arkansas, Mr. Stanfield attended public schools in Mansfield and Shreveport, Louisiana, and completed high school in Hot Springs, Arkansas. He attended Arkansas College, Batesville, Arkansas, for two years, then transferred to Hampden-Sydney College, Virginia, where he received his B.A. degree in 1953. He was awarded a Bachelor of Divinity degree by Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, in 1956.

He was ordained a Presbyterian minister and served the First Presbyterian Church of South Charleston as Assistant Pastor for more than two years. Subsequently was Pastor of the Fayetteville (West Virginia) Presbyterian Church for nearly five years. During this time he was Stated Clerk (or principle executive officer) of the Presbytery of Bluestone.

After earning a Master of Theology degree from Union Seminary in Richmond, Mr. Stanfield joined the staff of the Southern Regional Council for a three month training period in the summer of 1964. In September of that year he became Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations. He resigned that position to become Director of Field Activities for the Southern Regional Council in January, 1966.

Mrs. Stanfield (Joyce) is a native of West Virginia. They have one son, Mark.

Golf and dramatics have been among Mr. Stanfield's hobbies, although these interests are now dormant. More current is an interest in flying. He is a Private Pilot.

TO: Nathan Greene, Intern Program Consultant, National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials.

FROM: J. Edwin Stanfield, Director of Field Activities, Southern Regional Council.

RE: Supervisor's Report on Robert S. Valder, Eleanor Roosevelt Intern.

I. During this quarter Mr. Valder has carried all of the responsibility of acting as Director of The Alabama Council on Human Relations--and he has carried it well. From frequent conversations with him and from comments by officers and members of the ACHR, I continue to be highly impressed with his maturity, thoughtfulness, energy, imagination, administrative ability, and dedication to justice and equality.

In the course of his work in this capacity Mr. Valder has had opportunity for administrative responsibility--including supervision of a secretary; writing newsletters, reports, memorandums, etc.; preparing for and taking the executive's role in Executive Committee meetings; supervision of a field staff person (Mr. Lewis Black, Director of ACHR's Rural Advancement Project); administering a fund raising and membership enlistment program; consulting with local officers of the council concerning programs and local problems; direct involvement in civil rights and welfare problems. And this listing is only a partial one--the prominent features of his three month's experience.

II. Mr. Valder has many strenghts, as I have indicated, and all in such measure that it is difficult to rank them. I would say that his greatest strength is a single-minded commitment to justice, equality, and relief for the oppressed.

His weakness--if it can be called that--is perhaps an unavoidable implicate of his strength: a simplistic dualism of right and wrong, of justice and injustice. Thus the quality of his mercy toward the white majority in Alabama is somewhat strained. This is a very undamaging weakness, of course.

III. Future Employment

A. Mr. Valder has accepted a permanent position as Associate Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

B. Yes, I would recommend him for employment in the intergroup relations field.

C. It seems to me that Mr. Valder is better suited, both by talent and by temperament, to work involving investigation of violations and enforcement of the law than he is to work involving conciliation as a means of securing compliance. (This is not to say that he does badly at the latter.) If he were inclined to work in a government agency, for example, I think he would be much happier and more effective in the Civil Rights Commission or as a compliance investigator for HEW than as a Community Relations Service field man.

cc: Robert S. Valder

RESOLUTION

Whereas the Southern Regional Council has wisely established state Councils on Human Relations to effectuate the purposes of the Southern Regional Council;
And whereas the Southern Regional Council has continued to affirm its strong support of the State Councils by continuing grants-in-aid, by maintaining a Department of Field Activities, and by repeated statements of confidence and support;
And whereas it is necessary in most states, both for the continued existence of the state Councils and especially now for the continued existence of the Southern Regional Council as a popular-support organization, to establish and maintain local Councils affiliated formally and functionally with state Councils;
And whereas it has been the case in several instances that Southern Regional Council projects have been carried out in the several Southern states without the cooperation of and in some instances without even the knowledge of the state or local Councils;
And whereas the present methods of materials distribution by-pass the state Councils in many instances, making the state Councils appear useless as materials resource centers to local Councils and other groups who feel no need for affiliating with a state Council as long as they can be served directly by Southern Regional Council;
Be it therefore resolved:
That, insofar as professionally practicable, all projects carried out within the Southern states be done in cooperation with the state Councils as represented by their Executive Directors;
And that, again insofar as professionally practicable, materials distributed from the Southern Regional Council within the several Southern states be channeled through the state Council offices, with the exception of the NEW SOUTH, materials going directly to members of the Southern Regional Council, news releases of a general regional nature, and such other materials as the Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council deems inappropriate for state Council distribution;
And further, that the sense of this resolution carries with it the implication that at the very least the Executive Director of a state Council be informed that a program is to be undertaken, unless the project director, with the advice and consent of the Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, makes a specific decision that the information and/or further cooperation would be detrimental to the program or other interests of the Southern Regional Council.

Respectfully submitted

Ralph Mason Dreger, Ph.D.

Ban on Interracial Marriages Upheld by Virginia High Court

MISCEGENATION 3/8/66

Special to The New York Times

RICHMOND, March 7 — The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals unanimously upheld today the state's ban on interracial marriages.

The court said it saw no reason to overturn its ruling in an earlier, similar case, and noted that the United States Supreme Court had never invalidated any state's antimiscegenation law.

At issue before the Virginia court was the marriage in 1958 of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Perry Loving of Caroline County, a rural county north of Richmond in central Virginia. The couple were married in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Loving, 32 years old, is a white construction worker. His wife, 26, is part-Negro and part-Indian. Under Virginia law they are forbidden to marry.

Statute Challenged

When the couple returned to Caroline County from Washington in 1959, they were arrested, charged with committing a felony and sentenced to a year in jail. The sentence was suspended on condition they leave the county and the state.

The Virginia Supreme Court overruled the lower court on that condition. It said the Virginia law does not prohibit partners in a white-Negro marriage from living together in the state, so long as they do not cohabit. It ordered that the Lovings be resentenced, though not retried.

The litigation leading to today's decision was begun in 1963, when the couple said they had complied with terms of their suspended sentence but that the statute under which they were convicted was unconstitutional.

A ruling on the issue by the Federal District Court here was postponed until the State Supreme Court reached a decision.

The Lovings were represented by lawyers associated with the American Civil Liberties Union. The lawyers could not be reached today for comment, but with the adverse Virginia decision, they could decide to return to Federal Court for a ruling.

The decision by the Virginia high court was written by Justice Harry L. Carrico of Fairfax in northern Virginia.

The Lovings sole contention, he wrote, was that Virginia's antimiscegenation law is violative of the Virginia and United States Constitutions.

In a Virginia case 11 years ago—involving a white person and an Oriental—the Virginia law was "fully investigated," and upheld, Justice Carrico wrote.

Basis of Ruling

To upset the Virginia law on the subject, he added, would be "judicial legislation in the rawest sense of that term," in that sociological arguments against the racial marriage ban should be more properly directed to the Legislature.

MISCEGENATION

Race Marriage Bans Upheld in Virginia

High Court Backs Law Involving Negroes, Whites

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals, citing "an overriding state interest in the institution of marriage," upheld Monday a state law forbidding Negroes and whites to live together as man and wife.

In a unanimous decision, the court refused to reverse a similar decision it had made in 1955, and again held that the so-called anti-miscegenation laws violate neither the constitution of Virginia nor that of the United States.

The suit against the state had been brought on behalf of Richard Perry Loving, 32, who is white, and his wife Mildred Jeter Loving, 26, who says she is part Indian and part Negro.

YEAR IN PRISON

They were married June 2, 1958, in Washington, D.C., but were convicted under the anti-miscegenation law the following month after returning to their rural home in the north-central Virginia county of Caroline.

Judge Leon M. Bazile of Caroline County Circuit Court sentenced them each to a year in prison, but suspended the sentences on condition that they leave Virginia and not return together or simultaneously for 25 years.

The Lovings left the state but returned in 1963, and with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union, began an attack on the constitutionality of the law in question.

VOIDS SENTENCES

Monday, although upholding the circuit court decision in substance, the State Supreme Court struck down the sentences imposed against the Lovings.

The opinion, written by Justice Harry L. Carrico of Fairfax, said it was "unreasonable to require that the defendants leave the state and not return thereafter together or at the same time.

"Such unreasonableness renders the sentences void, and they will, accordingly be . . . set aside."

REMANDS CASE

The high court remanded the case to the circuit court for resentencing of the defendants in accordance with "conditions not inconsistent with the views expressed in this opinion."

The ruling left the Lovings with a somewhat uncertain future.

Bernard S. Cohen of Alexandria, one of their lawyers, said the couple "definitely will appeal."

"The only question is which way to go," he added.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, MARCH 13, 1966.

The Law

NYT 3/13/66

Miscegenation Nears Test in High Court

By FRED P. GRAHAM

Since 1661, at least, Americans have tended to resolve racial issues into the ultimate question: "Would you like to have your daughter marry a Negro?"

In that year, the residents of colonial Maryland became sufficiently concerned about intermarriage between whites and slaves to pass the first antimiscegenation law, prohibiting marriages between the races.

The laws flourished during the 18th and 19th centuries, and at one time or another 38 states had one. All prohibited marriages between whites and Negroes, and some added Malayans, American Indians, Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Asian Indians, mulattoes, Ethiopians, Hindus, mestizoes and half-breeds. A few even banned marriages between Negroes and other nonwhite groups.

With the Civil War such laws began to disappear, and today only 19 states—the 17 Southern and border states and Indiana and Wyoming—have laws against interracial marriage.

Although the United States Supreme Court has long since struck down all other types of laws that create discriminatory racial classifications, it has never ruled directly on an antimiscegenation law, and so has not yet gotten around to declaring them unconstitutional.

Significant Exception

This delay is significant. These laws do seem to express the white man's ultimate objection to equality with the nonwhite, and it is understandable that they have been left standing, long after less basic segregation laws have been swept away.

In his classic study of segregation, "An American Dilemma," Gunnar Myrdal wrote that "the whole system of segregation and discrimination" is designed to prevent eventual inbreeding of the races.

But antimiscegenation laws strike deeper than ordinary segregation acts, and the legal theory behind them leads to chaos in other facets of law whenever they are invoked. This is because they make any affected marriage absolutely void from its inception—thus children are illegitimate, "wives" have no inheritance rights and heirs cannot receive workmen's compensation and other death benefits.

All this has resulted in litigation in the state courts [illegible] until California's Sup[illegible] struck [illegible]

In 1883 it upheld an Alabama law which punished fornication between the races much more severely than that between members of the same race, on the ground that it punished equally severely the members of both races who were involved. But in 1964 it unanimously struck down a Florida law that made it a crime for persons of different races to cohabit. The Court ruled that the desegregation decisions of the past 10 years had swept away the rationale of the 1883 case, and that the Florida law denied the defendants the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the 14th Amendment. It left no doubt that the result would have been the same if a law against interracial marriages had been at stake.

Recent Conviction

The stage was set last week for a final decision by the Supreme Court. The highest court of Virginia unanimously upheld the conviction of a white man and his part-Indian, part-Negro wife for violating that state's ban on interracial marriages.

In 1958, Richard Terry Loving and Mildred Jeter Loving had been sentenced to one year in jail under the law, but the prison term had been suspended upon the condition that they leave the state for 25 years and not return to it at the same time.

They left for a time, but in 1963 returned to fight the conviction. On Monday the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia ruled that nothing in the Federal courts' decisions of the past 15 years has infringed upon the "overriding state interest in the institution of marriage." To upset the law in the courts would be "judicial legislation in the rawest sense of that term," the court said. It suggested that any change would have to be made by the Legislature.

The decision left the conviction in effect, but said the Lovings may return to Virginia at the same time, as long as they do not cohabit.

Lawyers for the Lovings immediately announced that they would appeal, giving the Supreme Court a clear chance finally to rule on the issue.

Associated Press

MIXED MARRIAGE: Richard P. Loving and his half-Negro, half-Indian wife, Mildred, whose conviction of violation of a Virginia law banning marriages of whites and nonwhites is expected to reach the Supreme Court. Eighteen other states have such laws.

KENTUCKY FACING RACE CUSTODY SUIT

MISCEGENATION

Mother Seeks the Return of 5 Children in U.S. Court

NYT 3/25/66

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

Special to The New York Times

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 24 — A divorced mother of five goes into Federal Court here tomorrow to seek the return of her children from the foster homes and juvenile institutions to which the State of Kentucky has committed them because she married a Negro.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Eiler Anderson, a native Kentuckian, is a neatly dressed, attractive waitress in her late 30's. She and her children by her first marriage — two girls and three boys, six to 13 years old — are white.

It is against the law in Kentucky for a white person to marry a Negro, and County Court records here make clear that Mrs. Anderson's marriage in 1964 to Marshall C. Anderson, 28, a semiemployed Negro musician, was the reason she lost custody of the children.

Under an order by Judge Lyndon R. Schmid of the Jefferson County Circuit Court, Mrs. Anderson and her children have been separated for a year to protect the children's "health, morality and general welfare."

For 'Best Interests'

According to Judge Schmid, Mrs. Anderson's marriage to "a colored man" is "detrimental to their best interests."

KENTUCKY FACING RACE CUSTODY SUIT

MISCEGENATION

Mother Seeks the Return of 5 Children in U.S. Court

NYT 3/26/66

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

Special to The New York Times

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 24 — A divorced mother of five goes into Federal Court here tomorrow to seek the return of her children from the foster homes and juvenile institutions to which the State of Kentucky has committed them because she married a Negro.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Eiler Anderson, a native Kentuckian, is a neatly dressed, attractive waitress in her late 30's. She and her children by her first marriage — two girls and three boys, six to 13 years old — are white.

It is against the law in Kentucky for a white person to marry a Negro, and County Court records here make clear that Mrs. Anderson's marriage in 1964 to Marshall C. Anderson, 28, a semiemployed Negro musician, was the reason she lost custody of the children.

Under an order by Judge Lyndon R. Schmid of the Jefferson County Circuit Court, Mrs. Anderson and her children have been separated for a year to protect the children's "health, morality and general welfare."

For 'Best Interests'

According to Judge Schmid, Mrs. Anderson's marriage to "a colored man" is "detrimental to their best interests."

The custody dispute thus raises — apparently for the fitst time in a Federal Court — a civil rights issue involving equal protection of the laws in domestic relations cases.

The question is whether Kentucky's law and custom against intermarriage transcends the legal rights of divorced parents of good character to retain custody of children.

The case here is indirectly tied to a pending Federal Court appeal in Virginia against that state's antimiscegenation law. Kentucky, Virginia and 16 other states still have such laws on the books. All of them, however, are expected to be invalidated by the Federal Courts.

Mrs. Anderson will attempt tomorrow to have Judge Henry L. Brooks of the United States District of Western Kentucky take jurisdiction of her long custody battle. This is believed to be the first such appeal for Federal intercession on constitutional grounds in a child custody case.

Jurisdiction at Issue

Custody matters ordinarily are strictly reserved to the state and local courts. The issue here, therefore, is one of Federal jurisdiction.

Mrs. Anderson contends that the "imprisonment" of her children is not only "cruel, inhuman and damaging" to them and herself, but also is a violation of the First, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution.

The case is expected to establish a legal landmark. Whatever the District Court here decides, the decision is almost certain to be appealed.

In an interview yesterday in Indianapolis where they have moved to escape "harassment" in Louisville, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson acknowledged that their three years of married life has been difficult.

Both of them have lost several jobs when their controversial marriage became known. The appearance of Mr. Anderson in his automobile to meet his wife after work has already cost Mrs. Anderson three restaurant jobs, she said.

1375
625
2,000

INTEROFFICE REQUEST FOR PAYMENT FORM

PLEASE PAY THE SUM OF: _____

TO: _____
Name

_____
Address

_____
City and State

REASON FOR PAYMENT: 625 [illegible]

1375 [illegible]

IF DEPARTMENTAL OR SPECIAL BUDGET, SPECIFY: State [illegible]

air [illegible]

PAYMENT IS GENERAL OPERATIONS _____ PROJECT

_____ EXPENSE.

DATE _____ 19 66

REQUESTED BY: [illegible]

APPROVED: _____

1,150
3,000
4,150
625
4,775

INFORMATION GIVEN TO PAT BY MARGE - REFER TO IT

1. When Quarterly Reports come in one copy circulates to the following:
   Paul Anthony
   Al Ulmer
   Sam Adams
   Pat Watters

2. I am to fill out yellow sheet saying INTEROFFICE REQUEST FOR PAYMENT ~~ROLL~~ form. Make one yellow, 1 copy on green paper Give the yellow sheet to Mrs. Alexander. Write a letter telling them here is their check. On original and 1 white copy with SRC's letterhead, 1 green + reading file this also goes to Mrs. Alexander. List amount of check in Marge's brown notebook. Important

1375 abs
625 letters

3. Southern Inter Agency Conference
   Meets three times a year. Send notices about next meeting. Set-up a meeting for Steering Committee. Take minutes and send them. Make a note to myself to arrange through Mrs. Knox for the conference room to be available for both meetings.

4. Ruth Howard keeps files on all financial information from Councils and all Memberships and Budgets from state councils.

5. Folder that says Southern Intergroup Agencies don't ever send out.

6. Each State Has separate folder. Everything that is not specific should go in General Correspondence folder just for that state in which we do have state councils.

7. Miscellaneous file. Anything that does not have a specific folder goes in there.

Dear

~~Gentlemen:~~

Here is your check for $2.000

1 org, with

1,375 internship
625
2,000

Enclosed is a check in the amount of $2,000.00, $1,375 of it representing your first quarterly grant-in-aid for 1966, and the remaining $625 represent the quarterly SRC

grant toward the NAIRO intern's salary.

— Please sign and return the enclosed receipt carbon at your convenience.

Janet — keep and count for Mr's total and addresses — Moffie

Henri MENDY
Chambre 292
Cité Universitaire
DAKAR-FANN (SÉNÉGAL)
West Africa

Momath Thiam chez
Djim Momar Diop
employé à la Printania
31 Avenue Albert Sarraut
Dakar SENEGAL
WEST AFRICA.

N'GANGA Bernard
Maison des Etudiants BP 2102
BRAZZAVILLE - CONGO - (CENTRAL AFRICA)

PIERRE YAKÉTÉ
S/C YABOUÉ ALBERT
INFORMATION
BANGUI
Central African Republic

Lawrence P. G. Pufong
c/o Cameroun College of Arts & Sc.
Bambui, Bamenda
West Cameroon. F.R.C
West Africa

Jean-Paul NGOUPANDE
Lycée Barthélemy BOGANDA
B.P. 831
BANGUI
CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Victor Tchamo
B.P. 93 Yaoundé
Cameroon - W. Africa.

Mbida Bonaventure
Collège Vogt B.P. 765
Yaoundé - CAMEROON
W. Africa

Service R. Nanguiadé
S/c de Djimé Dominique
Affaires Economiques
B.P. 424 Fort-Lamy
Rep. of CHAD
AFRICA

MISCELLANEOUS

AC 3/10/66

Negro Death Rate Leads in Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defense department figures show that proportionately more Negroes have died in Viet Nam than other U.S. military personnel, but officials deny there is any discrimination in battle area assignments.

If the figures show anything, a Pentagon spokesman said, "it is the valor of the Negro in combat."

The figures, compiled in a recent Pentagon survey, show for example that of the Army force in Viet Nam at the end of 1965, 16,531 or 14.8 per cent were Negroes, while the Negro death rate between 1961 and 965 was 18.3 per cent.

MARINES COMPARED

Of the Marine force in Viet Nam, 3,580 or 8.9 per cent were Negro, compared with an 11.3 per cent Negro death rate in the 1961-65 period.

The Negro death percentages for enlisted men only stand at 22.1 per cent for the Army and 12.0 per cent for the Marines.

Here is the breakdown of 1961-65 deaths as provided by the Pentagon:

Army—A total of 1,078 including 213 officers, 865 enlisted men. Negroes: 6 officers, 191 enlisted, total 197 or 18.3 per cent.

Marine—A total of 346, including 37 officers and 309 enlisted. Negroes: 2 officers, 37 enlisted, total 39 or 1.13 per cent.

The Navy was unable to come up with precise figures, but estimated its number of Negroes in and off Viet Nam at 500, or 5.1 per cent, with only one Negro dead in the four years.

The Air Force reported 908 Negroes, or 8.3 per cent, and no Viet Nam deaths.

The data covered 98 per cent of the forces in Viet Nam last December, the Pentagon said.

The Defense department called upon the services to conduct a one-year survey of Negro participation in Viet Nam because of what it termed "many requests." Previously available records did not break down enlistment by race.

QUESTIONS RAISED

Some congressmen have raised questions about whether Negroes are discriminated against on the battlefield. And some civil rights leaders have protested that Negroes are forced to fight a war with which they are not in sympathy.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told Southern senators last month that Negroes and whites share the dangers proportionately in front-line fighting.

During secret hearings on $12.3 billion of emergency Viet Nam funds, Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., said home Negro constituents had complained that Negroes were being assigned "in disproportionate numbers to the most dangerous areas in Viet Nam."

Russell then asked: "You haven't heard of any of them being selected to make a forlorn-hope attack on any extraordinary strong position?"

"No, sir," Wheeler replied.

In response to another question, Wheeler told Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., that in certain airborne units, the proportion of Negro soldiers runs as high as 18 per cent, compared with 13 or 14 per cent in most units.

MISCELLANEOUS

"The one thing I know is that the white man wants production. He respects production. That's my job. I've got to produce."

"The white father encourages his child to take part in athletics. Many times the Negro athlete doesn't even know who his father is."

"A man tells his son that the Negro is an inferior man. Now I'm responsible for his boy. I've got to convince the boy that I'm not inferior."

Lambert Reed Must Win Respect, Then Games

By NEIL AMDUR
Herald Sports Writer

"They threw a black hat out for Jackie Robinson when he came to bat," Lambert Reed says. "But when he hit a home run, the same guys applauded."

Joe Wilson, who hopes to sell insurance, called Reed the other day and said Reed was Dade County's Jackie Robinson. So did several of Reed's friends from Richmond Heights. The name Jackie Robinson now rings in Reed's ears but the sound has no sentiment.

AMDUR

Lambert Reed believes man must be judged by performance not color. Reed dislikes mediocrity. When someone reminds him of his first head coaching season in Dade County, he winces. Two wins in 10 games doesn't stand by itself.

Last week, Reed was recommended for another coaching position. When approved, he will be (at 28) the youngest head coach at the county's youngest high school. Killian, still under construction in the southwest, is scheduled to open this fall with 1,200 students.

Killian should be ideal for Reed. It has the challenge and opportunity for development. But not even Reed knows how white students will react to him as head football coach. Reed is a Negro.

"Killian will require a big adjustment for me," he says. "Last year Mays (the Negro high school where Reed now coaches), welcomed me with open arms. Going to Killian, I'll have to prove I can get the job done.

"There's a lot of doubt I can do it at Killian. There will be name-calling. But football is nothing but a challenge. And one thing I know is that the white man wants production. He respects production. That's my job. I've got to produce at Killian. If I don't, I don't deserve to be head coach."

★ ★ ★

LAJEAN REED says her husband is ambitious. She married him five years ago, after the two had met at Morris Brown College in Atlanta. It wasn't Lambert's size that attracted her. There were other 6-3, 250-pound tackles on the football team. "She used to hate my guts," Lambert says, "because I was an outspoken freshman."

Reed made the Pittsburgh Courier's Negro All-America in his senior year. He had two pro football tryouts — at Cleveland and Detroit. Paul Brown told him he was too fast to play tackle and not good enough for guard. "They had Jim Ray Smith, Gene Hickerson and John Wooten at guard," Reed says. "They didn't need me." The Lions' George Wilson told Reed that education needed him more than football.

Education needs Reed. He is frank, perceptive and honest — with himself and his position. He doesn't flinch when he talks about whites and Negroes. He talks confidently. Experience, he believes, will justify his ideas.

Reed is not taking the Killian job as an administrative figurehead for the future. "I'm going to hire a staff that jells," he says. "And it doesn't make any difference what color they are. I know what the situation will be. If things go good at Killian, it will be 'we.' If things go bad, it will be 'I.' It's may responsibility that we produce a winner."

★ ★ ★

REED'S BIGGEST asset at Killian will be his insight. He understands people. At Mays, he sees the plight of the Negro athlete who gets little motivation from home and who must be lured into sports with the prospects of glory. The coach is the boy's soul; he builds the dreams.

"The white father encourages his child to take part in athletics," Reed says, "either because he was an athlete or because he sees the value of the game. Many times the Negro athlete doesn't even know who his father is."

Last year, Reed had a quarterback who lived in Goulds, and a split end from Princeton and a tight end from Goulds. Reed didn't realize until the end of the season that his quarterback had a tendency to pass to the tight end.

Then there was his head trainer. Reed always wondered why Perrine boys got the best football equipment until he found out the trainer lived there.

Reed sees Killian a winner. The school will draw from Richmond Heights which he knows is culturally motivated. Add the white population in the southwest is rich in athletic tradition.

Killian will have nearly 300 Negro students the first year. The football program will be limited to 10th grade scheduling and Reed knows he will have problems on both sides: from the white parent who may keep his son out of Killian because of Reed to the Negro athlete looking for an easy out.

"A man tells his son that the Negro is an inferior man," Reed says. "Now I'm responsible for his boy. I've got to convince the boy that I'm not inferior. I know there's going to be some parents wondering about their boys. I just hope they let their boys decide."

The Negro athlete will find nothing but an Ivy League-type dresser greeting him. "A Negro boy might think he can come to Killian and have it made," Reed says. "Well, he's got another thing coming. We'll put 11 black ones or 11 white ones on the field but it'll be the best 11 we've got. No one's told me to put a certain percentage of whites and blacks on the field. If they do, they've hired the wrong man."

★ ★ ★

REED HAS heard the talk that Negro coaching is inferior to white. He disregards it. He doesn't figure it's worth an argument.

Reed's father, Lambert Reed Sr., told him in Douglas, Ga., that life wasn't all black. This is Reed's thinking and when he talks of Traz Powell and Nick Kotys, he talks of successful contemporaries not skin-types.

"Coaching is the difference between winning and losing," says Reed who worked as an assistant under Powell at Carver before moving to Mays. "You've got to take your boys to the football field knowing they can win.

"That's going to be my job. It's going to be a long-range program but I expect to win. I've never done anything without wanting to win."

—Herald Staff Photo by JOHN WALTHER

Lambert Reed Learned Early That Life Isn't All Black
. . . yet-to-be-approved Killian grid coach faces challenge

Infernos Cavort At Beach Show

The Infernos will meet Danny Miller and Mike Paidousis in a Texas tornado death wrestling match Wednesday night at Miami Beach Auditorium.

In a death match no one dies, but all four opponents are allowed in the ring at the same time. In another bout, former college football star Calvin Pullins will take on Tiger Conway.

AUTO LEASE
ANY MAKE - ANY MODEL
"THE FEELING'S MUTUAL"
MUTUAL LEASING CORP.
AS LOW AS $49.50 PER MO.
SPECIAL LOWEST RATES BY DAY, WEEK, OR MONTH
PH. 621-0585 - BROW. 523-2579

Play The World's Largest-Lighted 18-Hole
GOLF COURSE
DAY OR NITE
COLONIAL PALMS
13601 S. Dixie Hwy. — Phone CE 8-0555
GREEN FEES $2.25 to 6 P.M.
Sat., Sun., Hol. $2.75
After 6 P.M. . . . $2.75
OPEN DAILY 7 A.M. to MIDNIGHT
Electric Carts and Hand Carts Available
CLEARANCE SALE ON GOLF EQUIPMENT AND APPAREL!

MISCELLANEOUS

NEGRO PREJUDICE ON JEWS DOUBTED

MISCELLANEOUS

Panel Asserts Antagonisms Are More Anti-White

NYT 3/28/66

By IRVING SPIEGEL

Buildings Commissioner Charles P. Moerdler and two civil rights leaders agreed yesterday that Negroes who are accused of being anti-semitic are basically expressing anti-white attitudes.

Discussing the situation with them, a prominent rabbi partly agreed but said that theological teaching had played a "very significant role" in creating Negro anti-Semitism.

The rabbi, Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, a Reform Jewish group, said the teaching was the charge that the Jews were the "Christ killer."

The spiritual leader held that Christian writers, including Negroes, were in agreement that the "first attitude of the Negro toward the Jew" was influenced by "that particular tradition of the literal interpretation of the Gospel."

The roots and the extent of "black anti-Semitism" were discussed on the "New York, New York" program over WABC-TV.

In addition to Commissioner Moerdler and Rabbi Eisendrath, the others who took part in the discussion were Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, and Alexander Allen, eastern regional director of the National Urban League.

Mr. Allen said that "some anti-Semitism" existed among Negroes, but he added that "there is anti-Semitism throughout the American society." He analyzed the Negro attitude this way:

"There are anti-white feelings and it happens that the most easily identified — the closest figure—the landlord and the corner grocery store, are very frequently in the hands of Jewish businessmen. And I think this is the point at which friction takes place. It's basically anti-white; it's not anti-Semitic."

In agreeing with this viewpoint, Mr. McKissick said that in many communities it did not matter whether the person was "Jewish or Italian," adding that "by and large it's a feeling of anti-white more so than directed at the particular Jewish people."

Mr. McKissick noted that there were some Jewish merchants who "really exploited" and "some other Jewish merchants who are pretty fair." In answer to a question, he said that the greater majority of those who exploited operated business in Harlem.

In discussing the changing character of neighborhoods from predominately Jewish to Negro, Commissioner Moerdler listed Harlem and the Brownsville section in Brooklyn, pointing out that Jewish merchants and landlords, despite the changes, remained.

"When the Negro sees the white businessman or the person to whom he must let out frustrations," the Commissioner said, "in the overwhelming majority of the instances it is frequently a Jew."

However, he said, this hostility is not aimed primarily at the Jew but "at the white community that has for years kept down a people."

Reform Democrat to Run

Nathan Straus 3d, a Reform Democrat, announced yesterday that he would seek the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Bronx's 22d Congressional District.

WAR ROLE SOUGHT FOR HOMOSEXUALS

NYT 4/17/66

Groups to Aid Deviates Ask End to Pentagon Ban

By PETER BART

Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, April 16 — A national campaign to end the exclusion of homosexuals from the armed forces was set in motion here this week.

The campaign will culminate in a series of parades and demonstrations in major cities on Armed Forces Day, May 21.

The organization staging the campaign contends there are 17 million homosexuals in the nation, most of whom would be eager to fight for their country. The organization, called the Cimmittee to Fight Exclusion of Homosexuals From the Armed Forces, argues that an end to the ban would ease the shortage of manpower available for service in Vietnam.

Donald Slater, a spokesman for the committee, which is based here, said the drive represented the first manifestation of a new militancy in "the homosexual movement." The campaign, he said, grew out of a convention of homosexual organizations held Feb. 19-20 in Kansas City.

The convention, which was formally called the National Planning Conference of Homosexual Organizations, is said to have represented the first major effort of homosexual groups throughout the nation to organize a unified self-improvement program.

About 40 homosexuals representing 15 groups attended the two-day meeting, among them members of the Council on Religion and the Homosexual of San Francisco; the Janus Society of America, Philadelphia; the Mattachine Society of New York, and One, Inc., of Kansas City.

The homosexuals also agreed to set up a national legal fund to defend homosexuals who are in legal difficulties and to fight against "restrictive" sexual laws.

Mr. Slater discussed the aims of his organization in the small, sparsely furnished offices of Tangents magazine, a homosexual literary periodical of which he is the editor. Tangents, an outgrowth of a defunct publication called One, has a circulation of 5,000, according to its editor, a small, slender man with graying hair. The walls of the office are lined with books dealing with homosexuality. A seminude male adorns a calendar on the wall.

Mr. Slater said he was encouraged to find an increased willingness of homosexuals across the nation to discuss their situation publicly.

He said he did not believe that the homosexual population was increasing relative to the total population but conceded that "it may seem that way because of the trend toward more open discussion."

The campaign on military policy, Mr. Slater said, will focus on distributing leaflets to the public and encouraging people to write to the President. To attract public attention, homosexual groups around the country will seek to go on radio and TV programs and to engage in public debates.

MISCELLANEOUS

JOB CORPS SEEKS RACIAL BALANCE

Acts to Halt Trend Toward All-Negro Enrollment

By NAN ROBERTSON

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 17 — Antipoverty officials are seeking ways to halt or reverse a rapidly accelerating trend toward an all-Negro Job Corps.

They fear that if they do not act now to entice more whites into the corps and to stem the present high rate of white dropouts, there will soon be de facto segregation in the national youth training program.

"A black Job Corps would be a terrible, terrible thing," said Dr. David L. Gottlieb, a sociologist at the Office of Economic Opportunity. "Nothing could be worse than to create a program that has broken down racial barriers and then let it turn into a segregated system."

There are 23,000 enrollees in 97 centers across the country. At all seven women's centers, Negroes are in the majority. At the much bigger men's urban camps, with contingents up to several thousand, Negroes are swiftly gaining numerical dominance.

Camp Kilmer, N. J., is now more than two-thirds Negro; just before the Christmas furlough the ratio was 40 per cent Negro, 60 per cent white.

The Job Corps has now embarked on a project to attract teen-agers from rural areas, where most white recruits come from.

Also planned are a pre-tested "big brother" advisory structure to give each enrollee more personal guidance; and a "payoff" promotion system for enrollees, featuring quick rewards in rank and money for effort.

The corps may also adopt a policy of assigning friends to the same camps in groups.

The most explosive idea being contemplated is to make staying in the corps compulsory—to insist, as Dr. Gottlieb puts it, that the enrollees "become productive, creative members of society even if they don't want to."

"It's going to bug some people," said Dr. Gottlieb, an imaginative young man who has extensively worked with and written about teen-agers.

One radical possibility which will not be attempted unless a legal rationale is found for it, is to achieve racial balance with a quota system—that is, by limiting the percentage of Negroes admitted to the corps or assigned to individual camps.

More than 300,000 young men and women 16 to 21 years old applied to enter the Job Corps last year when it was announced. Acceptances have been on a first-come, first-served basis after undesirables such as serious criminal offenders are screened out.

Recent spot checks indicate that Negroes and other nonwhites, most of them from cities, are staying in; the whites, mostly rural and particularly from the South, are heading home in ever larger numbers.

Enrollees can stay in the corps a maximum of two years. The spot checks indicate that the dropout rate for whites is four times the rate for Negroes.

The Job Corps' big-city Negroes, toughened by urban pressures, seem more aggressive and mobile, adapt easier to an unfamiliar environment, come mostly from broken homes, and have "less to go back to," Dr. Gottlieb says.

Their aspirations, officials of the corps have found, are both higher than those of poor whites and more directed toward the white-collar jobs that have been denied their race in the past.

The rural whites in the corps, officials say, find it much harder to accept change, have traveled less, generally come from intact homes and are more plagued by homesickness. They want to go back home where everybody knows them when they graduate from the Job Corps, even though most of the jobs they could take are in cities.

Corps officials say that the rural whites are attracted by simple occupations, such as driving a bulldozer or working in a gasoline station, and that, in the poor-white South, there is a tradition of what has been described as "keeping down with the Joneses"—community pressure not to rise above one's present station.

It has been found in Job Corps camps that as soon as the Negro-white ratio nears 50-50, the white exodus begins to accelerate.

These steps are now being taken to attract whites into the corps:

Letters have just been sent to principals of 24,000 small rural high schools with information about who is eligible for the corps and where teen-agers may find out more about it.

Extension service staffs of 4-H clubs and universities are being pressed to recruit applicants.

The United States Employment Service, which screens most of the men for the corps, is sending staff members into the field as recruiters instead of waiting for prospective enrollees to approach the service.

Among the steps now being taken to keep enrollees in the corps are the following:

A "corpsman advisers" system has been tested for four months in four Job Corps centers and will begin nationwide the end of April when a 30-page instruction handbook is sent out.

Close-Up

MISCELLANEOUS

Tech, Georgia Fumble; Michigan State Scores

AC 5/5/66

Decatur high school senior Jack Pitts is "the finest quarterback prospect we've ever seen on film," says Michigan State's football coach Duffy Daugherty.

Mr. Daugherty, overwhelming choice of national sportswriters as 1965 Coach of the Year, believes young Mr. Pitts has "more all-around ability . . . quickness, agility and sense of timing" than any of State's present roster of quarterbacks.

The man from East Lansing isn't alone in his regard for the Trinity High School whiz. The young man has been wooed by Minnesota, Wisconsin, Wake Forest, Arizona, some predominately Negro schools and others he's not sure about, since his coach did the talking.

He hasn't heard a whisper from Georgia Tech or the University of Georgia.

Jack Pitts was captain of little Trinity's championship team and has played "everything they offered," which means basketball, track and baseball as well.

Off the playing fields, he's president of the senior class, president of the Honor Society and a member of several other academic achievement clubs. His national College Board score was in the 800s.

TRINITY HIGH'S FLEET-FOOTED JACK PITTS

"The Finest Quarterback Prospect We've Seen"

("And what do you do in your spare time?" I joked with him. "Oh, it doesn't take too much time," he replied seriously; "I'm taking only four classes this year.")

Jack Pitts has not let all the offers and the visits to distant campuses go to his head. He's quiet, almost shy until you talk with him a while. "It's pretty hard for a boy that young to get all that attention and keep his feet on the ground," Coach Daugherty observed. But Pitts has.

The Decatur stand-out isn't sure what he will major in—probably business administration, engineering or law. He has two years of general studies in which to make up his mind, he explained.

Without a scholarship, Pitts would have had to stick close to home if he had attended college at all. Mrs. Lillie Mae Pitts has three children to raise—a younger daughter and son besides Jack. Jack had been considering Clark College.

But now he's chosen Michigan State. Duffy Daugherty is a happy man. "I think he's a boy who'll be a great credit to us and to his high school . . . not just in athletics. He can go on to greatness," the coach predicted.

DUFFY DAUGHERTY

A Happy Man

Michigan State's gain, as they say . . .

BRUCE GALPHIN.

Admin. file MISCELLANEOUS

May 18, 1966

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: Ed Stanfield

FROM: Ed Lewis

Mutual of New York can cover the staffs of the State Human Relations Councils on the following basis:

$10,000 max
4,000 max

89¢ per thousand of life insurance per month

$18.58 for complete medical care per family per month

and

$ 5.64 for medical care for single people per month

As there can be some saving to SRC by bringing these people in, I suggest that they be advised of their opportunity with a July 1 or August 1 cut-off date.

cc: Paul Anthony

EL/km

EMORY UNIVERSITY
ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30322

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

June 23, 1966

file

J. Edwin Stanfield
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Mr. Stanfield:

We have received your application for participation in our Second Atlanta-Regional Laboratory for Community Leadership Development, to be held at the Sheraton-Emory Inn, Atlanta, Georgia, July 24-31, 1966. It is not yet clear how many participants can participate on a commuter basis. We are giving this serious consideration and when a decision is reached we will communicate with you promptly.

Be assured you will be given top priority in this commuter category whenever the number of such participants is agreed on by the faculty and the advisory committee.

Yours truly,

Chas. T. Lester

Chas. T. Lester
Dean

CTL:ss

EMORY UNIVERSITY
ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30322

Dear Mr. Stanfield:

Your check for $25 drawn on the account of Southern Regional Council, Inc., has been received as a down payment in the event of possible participation in the Laboratory for Community Leadership Development.

We appreciate your interest in the Laboratory and as soon as the Planning Committee has selected participants you will be notified.

Chas. T. Lester
Dean
Graduate School

file

Arthur M. Cohen
Chairman
Planning Committee

July 20, 1966

Mr. John Pecoul
2106 North Broad Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19121

Dear John:

Thanks for your letter of July 18. We are pleased that Ellen liked the prospect.

Concerning the maternity benefits, we have a contractual obligation to cover all of our employees under our plan and it would not be possible to divert the monthly cost to another plan. However, most such plans, including ours, provide maternity benefits even after the coverage is discontinued, provided the pregnancy occurred while the mother was covered. Have you checked that carefully in your present contract?

Cordially,

J. Edwin Stanfield
Director
Field Activities

JES/km

file

2106 N. Broad St.
Philadelphia, Pa. 19121
July 18, 1966

Mr. Edwin Stanfield
5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta, Ga. 30303

Dear Ed:

Thank you so much for your time and Paul's on our visit. Ellen was very happy with what she saw and heard. Going "south" should be less of a problem for her now.

As for the Rusche's apartment, it would cost $70.00 plus phone and utilities. It is a lovely place but because they would be returning by Dec. 1 and that would require another move, we have decided to say no and try to find a place with a six-month lease or availability. Al Ulmer spoke of the Atlanta University area and we think it is a real possibility — as well as Ardley Park. We drove through each and checked the ads and feel confident we can swing it with something acceptable rent-wise and time-wise.

One other practical matter has come up and that is about our maternity coverage under a change of health insurance. It would lapse for ten months if we switch to the S.R.C. plan ~~the~~ and the way things look, that might cause some difficulty. Would it be possible to apply whatever you would pay for me in the S.R.C. group policy to my present health insurance plan? I would make up the difference — if any ($248 per year) and we would have no lapse in maternity coverage. I found out that I can continue our present plan after we leave Phila. if I wish. Is this possible?

Thanks again and we'll see you in September.

Sincerely,
John Pecora

P.S.: Had good visits with Helen Mervis and Jack Sisson in New Orleans.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

August 1966

Paul Anthony, Executive Director

John H. Wheeler, President

ALABAMA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
P. O. Box 1310
Auburn, Alabama 36830
A. C. 205 887-3438
Exec. Dir.: Jerry Roden
Assoc. Dir.: Robert Valder
Chmn.: C. G. Gomillion
RAP Dir.: Lewis Black

ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
1310 Wright Avenue
Little Rock, Arkansas 72206
A. C. 501 FRanklin 6-3541
Exec. Dir.: Nathaniel Griswold
Assoc. Dir.: Elijah Coleman
Chmn.: The Rev. Walter B. Clancy

FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
6241 N. W. 17th Avenue
Miami, Florida 33147
A. C. 305 691-0220
Exec. Dir.: August VandenBosche
Chmn.: Dr. H. Franklin Williams
RAP Dir.: LaVert H. Taylor

GEORGIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
52 Fairlie Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
A. C. 404 525-6468
Exec. Dir.: Mrs. Frances Pauley
Assoc. Dir.: Oliver Holmes
The Rev. Eddie Smith
Chmn.: Dr. Joe Hendricks
RAP Dir.: Hubert Thomas

LOUISIANA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
2522 - 77th Avenue (temporary)
Baton Rouge, Louisiana 70807
A. C. 504 355-7116
Exec. Dir.: Mrs. Patricia Miller

MISSISSIPPI COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
306 First Federal Building
Capitol at State Street
Jackson, Mississippi 39201
A. C. 601 948-0878, 948-0879
Exec. Dir.: Kenneth Dean
Chmn.: The Rev. Duncan M. Gray, Jr.

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
121 E. Third Street, Room 301
Charlotte, North Carolina 28202
A. C. 704 FRanklin 6-6833
Exec. Dir.: Will C. Allred
Chmn.: John R. Taylor

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
1330 Laurel Street
Columbia, South Carolina 29201
A. C. 803 ALpine 6-8808
Exec. Dir.: Mrs. Alice Spearman
Chmn.: John Hills
RAP Dir.: Eugene Hagan

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS, 1106 - 19th Ave., So.
Nashville, Tennessee 37312
A. C. 615 297-6568
Exec. Dir.: Baxton Bryant
Assoc. Dir.: Harry Wiersema
Act. Chmn.: Martha Ragland

VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
17 E. Cary Street
Richmond, Virginia 23219
A. C. 703 648-4444
Exec. Dir.: Robert L. Combs
Chmn.: David Scull
Assoc. Dir.: Bailey Wharton

HOUSTON COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
5409 Austin Street
Houston, Texas 77004
A. C. 713 JA. 6-1829
No Director at present
Chmn.: Henry Groope

Administration MISCELLANEOUS

HUMAN RELATIONS WORKSHOPS

SUMMER 1966

The Council on Human Relations
281 The Arcade, Cleveland, Ohio 44114
Telephone: (Area Code 216) 781-6630

PREFATORY NOTE

This brochure on Human Relations Workshops is the 5th or 1966 edition of an annual publication developed by The Council on Human Relations, Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Nell C. Henry of the Council's staff is responsible for its development.

Originally conceived as a handy reference list for intergroup relations practitioners, the brochure has become an important resource for educators, social workers and city officials. Its usefulness has grown as the human relations crisis has deepened and as the need for objective study and systematic training has become increasingly important.

Francis Keppel, U. S. Commissioner of Education, has been widely quoted for his terse "thank God for the Civil Rights Movement." Commissioner Keppel's comment indicated his satisfaction that, at last, the educational door was open and changes, needed changes, could be introduced.

Everyone of the approximately 75 workshops listed in this brochure is concerned directly or indirectly with these anticipated and necessary changes. Experience seems to suggest that these changes depend primarily on direct confrontation and continuing dialogue. And the workshop is, par excellence, the place or process where this kind of personal change most often and most readily takes place.

As a unique tool or instrumentality, the Human Relations Workshop, currently a modest and largely unadvertised development on the American educational scene, merits extended use. This brochure is published with this purpose in view.

. . . J. D. NOBEL
. . . The Council on Human Relations, Cleveland, Ohio

I WORKSHOPS AT COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

ALABAMA

Mobile, Alabama 36608
"Human Relations Workshop"
Dates to be announced *(6)

ALASKA

UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA 99735
"Community Development Workshop"
July 11-22

CALIFORNIA

CALIFORNIA STATE COLLEGE AT
Los Angeles, California 90032
"Education in Intergroup Relations"
June 20 - July 28 (3)

CALIFORNIA WESTERN UNIVERSITY
San Diego, California 92106
"Intercultural Understanding"
June 27 - July 15 (5)

LISLE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM
Palo Alto, California
See statement on last page.

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
Los Angeles, California 90045
"Human Relations and Group Guidance"
June 22 - August 2 (6)

NATIONAL TRAINING LABORATORIES
University of California Conference Center, Lake Arrowhead, Cal.

1. "20th Annual Summer Laboratory in Human Relations Training"
   July 17-29
2. "6th Annual Laboratory for Educational Leaders"
   July 17-29
3. "7th Annual Laboratory in Community Leadership Training"
   August 7-19

(Conducted in cooperation with Western Training Laboratory, University Extension, University of California at Los Angeles: cosponsored by the School of Education, the Institute of Industrial Relations, and the Graduate School of Business Administration.)

For further information write to:
National Training Laboratories
National Education Association
1201 - 16th Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20036

(See statement under National Training Laboratories in Maine)

SACRAMENT STATE COLLEGE
Sacramento, California 95819
"Workshop in Human Relations and Communication"
June 20 - July 15 (4)

SAN FRANCISCO STATE COLLEGE
San Francisco, California 94132
"Human Relations Workshop"
June 27 - July 15 (3)

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY
Stanford, California 94305
"Guidance Workshop", 332w
June 20 - July 1 *(4)
"Guidance Workshop", 339a
July 5-15 (4)

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA EXTENSION
Los Angeles, California 90024
"9th Annual Leadership Laboratory in Human Relations and Supervisory Skills"
May 29 - June 4

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC
Stockton, California 95204
"Workshop in Human Relations"
June 27 - July 8 (2)

UNIVERSITY OF REDLANDS
Redlands, California 90723
"Minorities in Our Culture"
July 26 - August 6 (2)

COLORADO

UNIVERSITY OF DENVER
Denver, Colorado 80210
"Workshop in Human Relations"
June 20 - July 22 (7½)

CONNECTICUT

THE UNIVERSITY OF CONNECTICUT
Storrs, Connecticut 06602
"Workshop in Education: Communications as a Factor of Human Relations and Intergroup Process"
July 5-22 (3)

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY
Washington, D.C. 20016
"17th Institute on Human Relations and Intergroup Understanding"
June 20 - July 8 (3)

ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP
on University of Maryland campus
"American Politics in a Revolutionary World"
(for those 19-23 years of age)
June 19 - July 30
Conducted by:
Encampment for Citizenship
2 West 64th Street
New York, N.Y. 10023

The Encampment is a six-week "living-in" educational program designed for junior citizens who are interested in first-hand acquaintance with basic social issues. Guided by informed and skilled adult leaders, the Encampment participants explore problems in human relations, labor and international relations and civil rights. The participants themselves represent a great variety of socio-economic, racial, religious and cultural groups, a fact which makes the Encampment interlude intensely personal and stimulating as well as profoundly educational.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY
Washington, D.C. 20007
"Institute on Human Relations"
July 5-9

LISLE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM
Washington, D.C. 20036
See statement on last page.

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

ILLINOIS

NORTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY
DeKalb, Illinois 60115
"Family Relationships"
June 13 - August 5 *(3)

NATIONAL CATHOLIC CONFERENCE FOR INTERRACIAL JUSTICE
See under
"BY RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS."

INDIANA

VALPARAISO UNIVERSITY
See under
"BY RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS."

KENTUCKY

COUNCIL OF THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINS
Berea, Kentucky 40403
"Workshop on Urban Adjustment of Southern Appalachian Migrants"
July 8-22

ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP
Barbourville, Kentucky
"The Rural South and American Democracy"
(For those 15 through 18 years of age.)
July 3 - August 13
Conducted by:
Encampment for Citizenship
2 West 64th Street
New York, N.Y. 10023
(See statement under Encampment for Citizenship in Washington, D.C.)

URSULINE COLLEGE
Louisville, Kentucky 40206
"Community Relations" (for sisters only)
July 6-8

MAINE

NATIONAL TRAINING LABORATORIES
Gould Academy, Bethel, Maine

1. "20th Annual Summer Laboratory in Human Relations Training"
   June 13-25, Judy 13-15, July 24 - Aug. 5
2. "6th Annual Laboratory for Educational Leaders"
   July 24 - August 5
3. "7th Annual Laboratory in Community Leadership Training"
   July 3-15
4. "3rd Annual Laboratory in Conflict Management"
   July 24-August 5

Conducted by:
National Training Laboratories
National Education Association
1201 - 16th Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20036

The work of the National Training Laboratories is part of a massive modern trend, falling under the head of behavioral science. It is at Bethel, Maine, that Kurt Lewin's pioneering idea for the analysis of face-to-face groups has been given a practical laboratory testing year after year since 1947. Beginning in mid-June, three sessions are held, each of two weeks' duration, for participants from all walks of life. It is the primary business of NTL to study group reactions, to alert members to what is wrong, and what they can do about it. The three main goals are to increase the sensitivity of the individual to his own role and his own responses and help him express complicated or even negative attitudes acceptably, to provide new skills for conducting and diagnosing group meetings, and to develop methods of participation and leadership. Additionally, the "Bethel pattern" has expanded into laboratory sessions running two weeks for professionals in various occupational fields. Planned in close co-operation with leaders in these fields, these laboratories are tailor-made programs for a particular occupational group, and are held annually in various locations throughout the country.

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE
Orono, Maine
"Education for Intercultural Understanding"
August 1-19 *(3)

MARYLAND

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
College Park, Maryland 20742
"Human Relations in Educational Administration"
June 20 - July 29 (6)

See also ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP under Washington, D.C.

MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON UNIVERSITY HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER
Boston, Massachusetts 02115

1. "13th Annual Summer Laboratory in the Improvement of Human Relations"
   June 24 - July 8 (3)
2. "Advanced Training in Methods of Human Relations Education"
   June 24 - July 8 (3)

MICHIGAN

EASTERN MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY
Ypsilanti, Michigan 48197
"Seminar in Inter Group Education"
August 8-19 (2)

UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT
Detroit, Michigan 48221
"Workshop in Human Relations"
June 27 - July 22 (6)

MISSOURI

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY
St. Louis, Missouri 63130
"Human Relations Commission Institute"
June 24-26

SAINT LOUIS UNIVERSITY HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER FOR TRAINING AND RESEARCH
See under "FOREIGN WORKSHOPS"

NEW JERSEY

RUTGERS—THE STATE UNIVERSITY
Graduate School of Education
"Human Relations in Professional Education"
July 5-22 (6)

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

NEW MEXICO

THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque, New Mexico 87106
"Intercultural Relations Workshop"
June 20 - July 15 *(4)

NEW YORK

ADELPHI UNIVERSITY
Garden City, New York 11530
"Police and Community Relations Workshop"
Dates to be announced (3)

ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP
Riverdale, Bronx, New York
"Urbanism and American Democracy"
July 3 - August 13
For those 15 through 18 years of age.)
Conducted by:
Encampment for Citizenship
2 West 64th Street
New York, N.Y. 10023
(See statement under Encampment in Washington, D.C.)

THE NEW SCHOOL HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER
New York, N.Y. 10011
Six cources, each meeting one day each week:
"Absurdity and Humor: Four Novels of Our Day"
"Four Attitudes in Contemporary Drama"
"The Ideas of Americans: What We Believe and Why"
"Communication and Adjustment"
"Windows on Other Lands and Cultures"
"Sources of Political Power"
June 7-30

HOFSTRA UNIVERSITY
Hempstead, New York 11550
"Workshop for Educators and Community Leaders"
July 5-22 (3)

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF EDUCATION
Washington Square, New York, N.Y. 10003

1. "Workshop in Group Dynamics"
   June 6 - July 1 (6)
2. "Institute on Problems of Desegregation and Integration"
   July 18 - August 5 (4)
3. "Workshop for Instructors of Teachers of Disadvantaged Youth"
   June 27 - July 1

STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT BUFFALO
Buffalo, New York 14214
"Human Relations Workshop"
June 27 - July 15 (3)

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
Syracuse, N.Y. 10010
"Institute on Human Relations for Law Enforcement Officers"
June 13-24

YESHIVA UNIVERSITY
New York, N.Y. 10003
"Management of Troubled Youth"
July 5 - August 2 (3)
"Anti-Poverty and Desegregation"
July 5 - August 2 (6)

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

OHIO

WESTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY
Cleveland, Ohio 44106
"Workshop on Intergroup Relations"
June 20 - July 29 *(6)

OKLAHOMA

SOUTHWEST CENTER FOR HUMAN RELATIONS STUDIES, UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA
Norman, Oklahoma
"Justice in Community Relations"
8th Annual Human Relations Seminar
July 25-30 (2)

OREGON

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY
Forest Grove, Oregon 97116
"Workshop for Human Relations"
June 20 - July 5 (3)

PENNSYLVANIA

KUTZTOWN STATE COLLEGE
Kutztown, Pennsylvania 19530
"The Improvement of Human Relations in School and Community"
July 18 - August 5 (6)

TENNESSEE

FISK UNIVERSITY RACE RELATIONS DEPARTMENT
Nashville, Tennessee 37203
"23rd Annual Institute of Race Relations"
June 27 - July 9 (3)

TEXAS

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY
Dallas, Texas 75222
"Workshop in Human Relations"
June 6 - July 1 (3)

UTAH

NATIONAL TRAINING LABORATORIES
College of Southern Utah
Cedar City, Utah

1. "20th Annual Summer Laboratory in Human Relations Training"
   August 7-19
2. "7th Annual Laboratory in Community Leadership Training"
   August 7-19

   Conducted by:
   National Training Laboratories
   National Education Association
   1201 - 16th Street, N.W.
   Washington, D.C. 20036

   (See statement under Maine National Training Laboratories)

UNIVERSITY OF UTAH
Salt Lake City, Utah 84112
"Intermountain Group Development Laboratory"
August 7-19

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

WASHINGTON

PACIFIC LUTHERAN UNIVERSITY
Tacoma, Washington 98447
"Human Relations Workshop"
June 27 - July 15 *(3)

WISCONSIN

MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY
Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53233
"Human Relations Institute"
June 20-21 (3)

II WORKSHOPS CONDUCTED BY RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

NATIONAL CATHOLIC CONFERENCE FOR INTERRACIAL JUSTICE

"Traveling Workshops"

College of St. Theresa
Winona, Minnesota
June 10-11

Mundelein College
Chicago, Illinois
June 20-24

Albertus Magnus College
New Haven, Connecticut
June 28-30

Four Motherhouses
Dubuque, Iowa
July 1-3

Georgetown University
Washington, D.C.
July 5-8

St. Mary's
Notre Dame
July 8-10

St. Catherine's
St. Paul, Minnesota
July 11-23

Xavier College
Kansas
July 13-17

Assisi Heights
Rochester
July 16-17

St. Thomas
Houston, Texas
July 18-29

Our Lady of the Lake
San Antonio, Texas
July 25 - August 5

Good Counsel
Mankato, Minnesota
July 24-26

St. Mary's Dominican
New Orleans, Louisiana
August 1-12

St. John College
Cleveland, Ohio
June 13-17

Under Title IV of Civil Rights Act

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

LUTHERAN HUMAN RELATIONS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA
Valparaiso University
Valparaiso, Indiana 46383
"17th Annual Institute on Human Relations"
July 22-24
"Workshop in Human Relations"
July 25-28

III WORKSHOPS ABROAD

PUERTO RICO

UNIVERSITY OF PUERTO RICO
Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico
"Social Welfare Workshop"
June 12 - July 16

*Signifies number of hours or units of credit.

ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP
Cayey, Puerto Rico

"Democracy and Social-Economic Development in the Western Hemisphere"
(For those 19-23 years of age.)
June 26 - August 6

Conducted by:
Encampment for Citizenship
2 West 64th Street
New York, N.Y. 10023
(See statement under Washington, D.C.)

INTER-UNIVERSITY COMMITTEE ON ISRAEL

"5th Annual Summer Study Tour of Israel"
July 12 - August 10

For information write to:
Inter-University Committee on Israel
250 West 57th Street
New York, N.Y. 10019

SAINT LOUIS UNIVERSITY HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER FOR TRAINING AND RESEARCH

"13th Annual Foreign Workshop in Human Relations and Group Guidance" in Scandinavia
August 3 - September 2 (6)

Apply to: St. Louis University
21 North Grand
Saint Louis, Missouri 63103

IV RELATED PROGRAMS

THE LISLE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The Lisle Fellowship offers the opportunity for students and young adults to participate in international summer programs in intercultural relations. The purpose of Lisle is to give young adults the challenge to experience the development of relationships with peoples of other cultures and backgrounds and to learn through practical fieldwork experiences about the ways of living and thinking in another culture. The programs take place in California, Washington, D.C., Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Denmark, Germany, Ireland, Colombia, Republic of Congro and USSR.

V HUMAN RELATIONS CENTERS

ALBERT M. GREENFIELD CENTER FOR HUMAN RELATIONS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA (Philadelphia)

Charged with a three-fold responsibility, the University of Pennsylvania's Center encourages and carries out both pure and applied research, offers courses of instruction with special emphasis on the graduate level, and engages in community service.

Fellowships are offered to doctoral students in allied areas on condition that they write their dissertations in the field of human relations. In addition to the staff's serving on advisory committees of intergroup agencies in housing, employment, public accommodations, and education, the Center also has an intern relationship with some of the city intergroup agencies. M. A. degree in Human Relations is granted.

CENTER FOR HUMAN RELATIONS AND COMMUNITY STUDIES OF NEW YORK UNIVERSITY (New York City)

At present, the program is entirely graduate in scope, with the exception of one course taught as an elective for persons specializing in the various helping professions.

The center is concerned with the integration and application of the behavioral disciplines for the purpose of furthering full human development. It seeks to make understood how the relations of people in schools and other institutions, in community organizations, in ethnic groups, and in regions and nations of the world may contribute to the maximum growth of all. It seeks also to teach the principles, arts, and techniques of successful performance in the many types of professional work in which its majors can apply the great concepts of the sciences of man.

COMMUNITY TENSIONS CENTER OF SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE (Springfield 9, Mass.)

The Community Tensions Center of Springfield College is an integral part of the institution with special responsibility in the area of intergroup relations. The center discharges this responsibility in three ways — at the graduate level through specialized instruction to students about to enter professional community service vocations — at the undergraduate level through general instruction to give students an understanding of community tensions and equip them with a minimum of skill to become responsible citizens in our multi-group society; and through basic and applied research in advancing knowledge in the broad field of intergroup relations.

In addition, the Center conducts workshops, institutes study programs and serves as a consultative service to community and professional groups.

HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER OF BOSTON UNIVERSITY (Boston, Massachusetts)

Focused on that part of the spectrum of personal relations that extends from interpersonal relations through group, intraorganizational and intergroup relations, to community relations, Boston's areas of responsibility include instruction (seminars and field service projects), research (basic and applied), and community service (short-term and long-term training programs, and consultation to particular agencies involved with certain intergroup problems).

Annual faculty conferences on relationships between human relations studies and various problems of university instruction, research, and administration; the provision of voluntary "unstructured" groups designed to support self-examination; fellowships to outstanding graduate and professional students, and a "living-in" summer workshop round out the Boston program.

SOUTHWEST CENTER FOR HUMAN RELATIONS STUDIES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA (Norman, Okla.)

The basic purpose of the Human Relations Center is to provide opportunities for the study of human conflict and its resolution. To accomplish its purpose, the Center has three types of subgoals:

EDUCATION — to develop educational opportunities and intergroup experiences at the adult and graduate levels for professional persons and lay leaders. This is done through institutes, conferences, workshops, seminars, and other educational programs throughout the regular school year, and in summer sessions.

CONSULTATION—to provide consultative services to organizations and committees on inter group problems.

RESEARCH—to initiate and stimulate research in the field of human relations, to collect and disseminate research findings.

IMPORTANT NOTE:

Colleges and Universities conducting workshops during the summer of 1967 are asked no notify The Council on Human Relations as soon as their plans are formulated. The deadline for inclusion in the 6th Annual Edition of The Human Relations Workshops Brochure is March 1, 1967.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

EXPANDED GRANT-IN-AID PROGRAM FOR 1966

General Conditions

Duration

The Southern Regional Council's expanded grant-in-aid program is made possible by a three-year Ford Foundation grant. Commitment to the 1966 grant schedule, however, is for one year only. Grants to state councils will be revised for the second year, and again for the third, in the light of their progress toward attaining the general purpose of the expanded aid program.

Purpose

The general purpose of the expanded grant-in-aid program is to enable the state councils to increase their membership and program and to become self-sustaining in their basic, staffed operations. As a means to this end, grants for the first year are mostly to make possible adequate or more stable staffed operations

Evaluation and Revision

The Southern Regional Council will consider this expanded program to be attaining its purpose only if it results in significant increase of both membership and financial support from the membership of the several state councils. Therefore it should be clearly understood that performance in these two respects will weigh more heavily than need in the annual revisions of the grant schedule.

No "matching funds" provision is attached to the 1966 grants. It is expected, however, that each state council will make during 1966 a planned, systemmatic effort to enlist new members and new chapters and to raise funds from a broad base of individual contributors. The success of such an effort will weigh heavily in the annual evaluation. (This may be interpreted frankly to mean that failure of the membership to support the state council will result in less aid, not more, from the Southern Regional Council.)

It is probable that larger portions of the 1967 and 1968 grants will be designated for particular projects, and that support of staffs made possible by the 1966 grants will be proportionately reduced. For this reason policy boards of the state councils should consider both their determination and the possibility to assume rapidly support of whatever staffing is made possible by their 1966 grant. Should determination be lacking or the possibility doubtful, they should seriously consider rejecting the grant because of this condition and in fairness to employees and potential employees.

Payment Schedule

Except where noted, the annual grant will be paid in equal quarterly installments, due February 15, May 15, August 15, and November 15.

The first quarterly installment of each grant will be paid as soon as possible administratively. Where one of the purposes of the grant is to employ additional personnel, expenses incurred in finding and moving the employee may be considered a part of the overhead expense. The second quarterly installment of grants for additional staff will be withheld, if necessary, pending actual employment of the staff person.

Reporting Requirements

Quarterly payments will be made only if (1) the last-due quarterly program report has been received by the Director of Field Activities of the Southern Regional Council and (2) monthly financial and membership reports have been received regularly (beginning with a report for April, 1966). Quarterly installments due on the fifteenth of the months mentioned above will be paid upon receipt of the statistical report for the preceding month, plus any past-due reports.

Monthly statistical reports, in order to be acceptable, must show the following:

1. A breakdown of receipts into membership dues, individual contributions, corporate business contributions, S.R.C. grants, foundations grants, and miscellaneous receipts. The report must show for each category the amount received during the month and the total for the fiscal year to date in that category.

2. A chapter-by-chapter breakdown of membership growth for the month and each chapter's total for the membership year to date. (This may include out-of-state and at-large categories.)

3. A separate accounting for funds received from the expanded (Ford Foundation) grant-in-aid program, with a breakdown of each category of disbursement into expenditures for the month and the year to date. (We recommend, but do not require, a similar reporting for the disbursement of other funds.)

Grant Schedule

Alabama Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $9,000. ($9,000 requested)

Use. The grant is toward salary, travel, and overhead for a full time associate director; and to make possible the securing of an intern beginning in the summer or fall of 1966. (Approximately $3,000 of the grant is for the latter purpose.)

Special conditions. The Alabama Council is presently without an Executive Director. Therefore the second quarterly installment is subject to filling of both staff positions.

Should the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials discontinue their intern program, or for other valid reasons, use of approximately $3,000 of this grant may be re-negotiated with the Southern Regional Council.

Arkansas Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $8,000 ($12,450 requested)

Use. The grant is for needed increases in staff salaries; additional out-of-state travel for the staff, for the purpose of attending professionally edifying meetings and conferences or special consultations on program; and wages and overhead for part-time staff workers in school desegregation and community organization.

Special conditions. None.

Florida Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $7,000. ($9,000 requested)

Use. The grant is made toward salary and overhead for an intern or assistant to the director; and to strengthen the general operation of the Florida Council.

Special conditions. The first two quarterly payments will be made, in the case of Florida, but the third and fourth will be contingent upon employment of an intern or assistant.

Georgia Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $9,000 ($13,000 requested)

Use. This grant is to be used toward payment of salary, travel and overhead for an additional staff person whose duties will include assistance of local chapters to strengthen organization and program and organization of new chapters.

Special Conditions. None.

Louisiana Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $10,000. ($10,000 requested)

Use. The Louisiana Council has no professional staff at present. This grant is to be used for staffing.

Special conditions. None.

Mississippi Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $16,750 ($16,750 requested)

Use. This grant is for employment of a staff person for work primarily with college students and faculty; for student conferences; and for work scholarships.

Special conditions. An irregular schedule of payments of this grant, as requested by the Board of the Mississippi Council, is approved.

North Carolina Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $8,000. ($8,000 requested)

Use. This grant is for general support, to assure a stable, staffed operation.

Special conditions. Since the N.C. Council's executive director post is presently vacant, the general condition concerning "additional" staffing applies in this case also.

South Carolina Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $9,000. ($12,600 requested)

Use. The grant is to help provide salary and travel for an additional, full time professional staff person.

Special conditions. None

Tennessee Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $11,000. ($14,000 requested)

Use. The grant is to enable TCHR to hire and provide expenses for an assistant or associate to the Executive Director; and to provide opportunity for the staff to travel to conferences and meetings out-of-state.

Special Conditions. None.

Virginia Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $8,250. (9,500 requested)

Use. This grant is for employment and expenses for an Associate Executive Director; and for additional out-of-state travel and conference expense for professional edification of the staff.

Special conditions. Approximately $500 of this grant must be used for staff travel to out-of-state conferences and meetings which would provide helpful information or improve professional skill.

Houston Council on Human Relations

Recommended: $4,000. ($6,500 requested)

Use. This grant is toward the Houston Council's proposed "Battaglia Vista Project" -- coordination and direction for about twenty VISTA volunteers to be placed in five census tracts in the lower socio-economic areas of Houston.

Special conditions. None.

DIRECTOR OF FIELD ACTIVITIES

During this quarter the field director has attended at least one function of each of the ten state councils on human relations. This travel helped to acquaint him with the several organizations.

Inauguration of the expanded grant-in-aid program made possible by our $300,000 grant from the Ford Foundation was one of the significant tasks of the quarter. General conditions for recipents, prepared by the field director, stress growth and self-sustenance by the state councils.

Another major concern of the field director has been to establish a staffed operation in Louisiana. To this end the New Orleans Community Relations Council has affiliated with the state council and a decision has been made to locate the LCHR office in Baton Rouge. A search fof a director has started.

An "Experience Report" requested by the U.S. Conference of Mayors was assigned to the field director. It is a study of positive actions by municipal officials to improve human relations. The report is near completion.

The field department has cooperated with the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and private agencies in planning ten state-wide conferences on school desegregation. The first was held in Louisiana on March 26 with 750 participants. Others will be on successive Saturdays in April and May. S.R.C. secured a grant of $8,000 to obtain resource persons and provide travel expenses for participants in these conferences.

Other activities include the usual duties connected with SRC's functioning as the secretariat of the Southern Interagency Conference, attendance at a regional consultation of the National Social Welfare Assembly in New Orleans, speeches at two local councils, "trouble shooting" trips, and efforts to help the North Carolina and Alabama councils find directors.

POSSIBLE OFFICE OF EDUCATION CONSULTANTS

The following are on the staff of the American Friends Service Committee, currently engaged in efforts to desegregate schools. They might be able to serve occasionally, especially outside the areas for which they are responsible.

Miss Constance Curry
American Friends Service Committee
41 Exchange Place, Room 501
Atlanta, Georgia
404-523-6629

Miss Winifred Falls
American Friends Service Committee
41 Exchange Place, Room 501
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
404-523-6629
(Primarily in Alabama)

Mr. Hayes Mizell
American Friends Service Committee
c/o Voter Registration Project
2022 Taylor Street
Columbia, South Carolina
254-5953

The following are currently employed by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc., and are working on school desegregation. They also might take occasional "outside" assignments.

Mr. Allen Black
1009 W. Irvine Street
Florence, Alabama
205-766-2453

Mr. Joanna Edwards
1707 South Chester, Apt. 217
Little Rock, Arkansas
501-FR4-5118

The following are on the staffs of state councils on human relations in their respective states and should be asked to serve only outside their states.

Mr. Ozell Sutton
Associate Director
Arkansas Council on Human Relations
1310 Wright Avenue
Little Rock, Arkansas
501-FR6-3541

Mrs. Frances Pauley
Executive Director
Georgia Council on Human Relations
52 Fairlie Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia
525-6468

Rev. August VandenBosche
Executive Director
Florida Council on Human Relations
6241 Northwest 17th Avenue
Miami, Florida
691-0220

Mr. Kenneth Dean
Executive Director
Mississippi Council on Human Relations
306 First Federal Building
Capitol at State Street
Jackson, Mississippi
948-0878 (601)

Mrs. Alice Spearman
Executive Director
South Carolina Council on Human Relations
1330 Laurel Street
Columbia, South Carolina
803-AL6-8808

Mr. Baxton Bryant
Executive Director COR
Tennessee Council on Human Relations
1106 19th Avenue South
Nashville, Tennessee
615-297-6568

Mr. Robert Valder
Associate Director
Alabama Council on Human Relations
2809 Governors Drive, S.W.
Huntsville, Alabama
205-539-4277

Mr. Robert Alexander
Executive Director
Houston Council on Human Relations
5403 Austin Street
Houston, Texas
713-Ja6-1829

The following persons are recommended by Mr. Vernon Jordan, Director of the Voter Education Project, Southern Regional Council, who suggests that his recommendation be mentioned in communicating with them.

Mr. Cleveland Denard, Principal
Carver Vocational High School
1275 Capitol Avenue, S.W.
Atlanta, Georgia
523-6902

Dr. Samuel Cook
Atlanta University
223 Chestnut Street
Atlanta, Georgia
(Chairman, Department of Political Science)
JA3-6431

Mrs. Isabelle Webster, Attorney at Law
9½ Ashby Street
Atlanta, Georgia
524-3856

The following are highly knowledgeable individuals who have had some experience with problems of school desegregation in the South:

Mr. David Broils
595 Brookwood Drive
Athens, Georgia
(President, Athens Council on Human Relations)
Bus.404-548-7511 (270)
Hom.548-6119

Mr. Joe Hendericks
Mercer University
Macon, Georgia
(Chairman, Georgia Council on Human Relations)
Bus. 912-743-1511
Home 912-SH5-2115

Mrs. Nancy Adams
1455 S. Miami Avenue
Miami, Florida
305-379-7145

Mrs. Paul S. Darien
2349 Twin Lake Circle
Jackson, Mississippi

The Reverend Charles Hamilton
1224 Gwinnette Street
Augusta, Georgia
(Has served as "Program Associate" for school desegregation with AFSC)

Mrs. Charles Alston
Eatonton Road
Milledgeville, Georgia
(Has served as AFSC "Program Consultant")

Mrs. Mason Robertson
607 E. 51st Street
Savannah, Georgia
(Housewife, Physician's wife)
912-AD3-9442

Mr. Edward F. Parrish
1015 Bartow Street
Brunswick, Georgia
(Teacher)
912-265-1599

Mrs. Margaret Belcher
2861 Urban Avenue
Columbus, Georgia
(Operates a secretrial service)
Bus. 322-6113
Hom. 561-3472

Consultant -5-

Mr. C. W. Aycock
319 E. 15th Street
Rome, Georgia
(School Principal)
232-4874

BIAS IN ATHLETICS IN SOUTH CHARGED

MISCELLANEOUS

Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, May 14 — The Southern regional director of the American Civil Liberties Union has asked the United States Commissioner of Education to investigate racial discrimination in school athletic programs.

Federal funds should be withheld from institutions found practicing discrimination, as provided by Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, Charles Morgan Jr. of Atlanta said in a letter to Harold Howe 2d.

Mr. Morgan emphasized that discrimination existed in the athletic programs of colleges in the Southeastern Conference.

"Typical of S.E.C. athletic programs are those at Louisiana State University and the University of Georgia," Mr. Morgan wrote. "At L.S.U. there are 113 football players. No Negroes are numbered among the 55 varsity, 34 freshmen and 24 red-shirted team members.

"The University of Georgia has nine football coaches and one director of recruiting. They each are members of the white race. One Negro student is trying out for the University of Georgia team, according to our information, but he has not yet obtained an athletic scholarship."

Name & Address	Occupation	Organization
Girod Jackson 1227 Cohen St. ?
Mrs. Ethel Martin 701 14th St. Lafayette, La.	Housewife	Human Rel. Council Members
Robert Thompson P.O. Box 62 Clinton, La.
Fred Jones 710 West Green St. Farmerville, La.	School Teacher
Alvin J. Kendrick 207 Whaley Street Haynesville, Louisiana	Teacher	Claiborne Parish Civic League
Ray Wallace 1725 N. 30th St. Baton Rouge, La.	School Principal
Mrs. Pernella D. Sounier 409 Gelpi Drive Lake Charles, La.	Teaching
V.W. Williams, Jr. 8964 Rickshire Drive Baton Rouge, La.	School Principal	Arlington Elementary
Leroy Jones 1026 North Madison Tallulah, La.	Factory Worker
Isaac Reynolds 2209 Dry Ades New Orleans	Field Secretary	CORE
John W. Joseph 537 Perry Lane Opelousas, La	School Teacher	Carter G. Woodson H.S.
Charles P. Loeb, Jr. 331nSo. St. George St. Eunice, La.	School Supervisor

Name & Address	Occupation	Organization
Reverend Abraham E. Davis 1852 Abbie Street Shreveport, Louisiana	Minister	NAACP
Roy B. Givens 417 W. 5th St. Crowley, La.	Teacher
S. T. Evans, Sr. Rt. 1 Box 129-A Athens, Louisiana	High School Principal	Claiborne Civic Lesue
Mrs. Virginia Y. Collins 9130 Fig St. New Orleans, La.	Anti-Poverty Program	Parent-Teacher asso.
Mrs. Flaise T. Glem 3060 Badley Rd. Baton Rouge, La.	Operate's a Nursery	Herman Relation Council
Reverend Julius Hill P.O. Box 758 Grambling, Louisiana	Minister	Church
Reverend Richard H. Harry 807 Simpson St. Leesville, La.	Minister
Charles Hudson 1227 W. Bellevue St. Opelousas, La. 70570	School Teacher
Reverend A. E. Durham P.O. Box 31 Newllton, La.	Minister	Church
Jack Brady P. O. Box 1058 Lake Charles, Louisiana
George Dodd, Jr. 1208 Jefferson Ave. Homer, La.	Public Worker	Clairborne Civic Lesue

Name & Address	Occupation	Organization
George Dodd, Jr. 1208 Jefferson Ave. Homer, Louisiana	Public Worker	Clairbone Civic Lesue
Reverend Z. B. Banks 710 East Levee St. Tallaluh, Louisiana	Minister
Reverend Noel Gaines, Jr. 1333 Silverlilly Lane Marrero, La.	Minister
James C. Coit P.O. Box 926 Houma	Teacher
Huex Fontenot P.O. Box 38 Palmetto, La.	Teacher	Community Association for Welfare of Sch. children
I. Candy Davis 505 West Green St. Tallulah & Lake Providence, La.	Task Force Worker	Southern Consumers'
Delores Schuyler 303 St. John Lafayette, La.	Staff Worker	Southern Consumers'
Mrs. Louise Suiewa 1132 Erie St. Shreveport, La.	Housewife	NAACP
Sylvester Watson 6106 Albany Rd. Shreveport, La.	Woodwork	SLCS
Reveren T. L. Green Rt. 2 Box 246 Homer, La.	Minister	Clairborne Parish
Sidney Briscoe Box 963, Jennings, La

Name & Address	Occupation	Organization
Dave Kenerson Ethel, La.		Community Release
E.M. Wallace Box 746 Houma, La.	Store Mgr.	NAACP
Stacy R. Wilson 4521 Lincoln Park Ave. Monroe, La.	Architect
J. W. Blankenship Saline, La	Attorney
Anthony Gerald Pierre 908 So. Orange St. Lafayette, La.		NAACP Ass. Sec.
Marion Overton White 1520 North Market St. Opelousas, La.		NAACP
Fred Lacey Route 2, Box 18 Greensburg, La.	CORE Task Force	CORE
Rogers J. Newman 7860 Emile Baton Rouge, La. 70807	Prof. of Mathematics
Joseph Robinson 1703 St. John St. Lake Charles, La.	Truck Driver	NAACP
Rev. R. H. Tucker 1209 Cadez St. New Orleans, La. 70117	Minister	A.M.E. Church
Rev. S. R. Johnson R.I S Box 36 St. Joseph, La.
Jonas E. Mason P.O. Box 987 Eunice, La.	Principal	Charles Drew H.S.

C. Considering state-by-state, community-by-community conferences in several southern states on utilizing Off of Ed. (EEOP) guidelines — plans by March. (AFSC - Comm't C.)

D. Oscar McCloud — Presb. worker in Ga. + Ala.? — on plans .... Un. Presb. esp. in Wilcox Co.... Another's comment: Start including denom's in school conferences! (addressed to Comm't)

E. Jack Wilmore — from U.S. Civil Rts. Comm Commission planning conferences in South on school desegr.
Objection voiced: Better not include school boards!
Fairfax: Can't you move U.S. Commission tow. Action — follow ups?
Wilmore: No. Mandate limits.

IX. RC — International Justice
"STAR" program in Mississippi communities

X Urban League
New booklet "Beyond Today's Struggle" (ordered one for LAM + LS)

SOUND OF ORCHESTRA TUNING UP....
FADE UP TITLE "The World of Music with Morton Gould" PAGE TURNS TO "

AS GROUP SINGS:

Everybody wants Freedom

Everybody wants Freedom

Everybody wants Freedom

Freedom, Freedom

MUSIC FADES OUT....to humming

GOULD:

Welcome TO the THE WORLD OF MUSIC, my name is Morton Gould. The nonviolent revolution of the Negro in America today has been sharp and urgent in its demand for equality of citizenship. It remains the nation's most pressing domestic issue. In every corner of the land, the Negro's continuing struggle for self-respect and human dignity is being waged against a thrilling backdrop of "Freedom Songs". These hymns of Freedom, Deeply immersed in the religious faith of the Negro community, in many instances, as the modernization of the Spirituals of the antebellum Negro community. These "new" Freedom Songs, improvised by the people making tomorrow's history, will in time take their place beside the traditional spirituals in our national folk heritage.

SONG PICKS UP TO COMPLETION:

Do you want your Freedom?

So do I

Do you want your Freedom?

So do I

Do you want your Freedom?

So do I

Certainly, certainly,

certainly, Lord

GOULD:

Here is what Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. has said about the music.

(PICK UP BOOK)

"In a sense, the Freedom Songs are the soul of the movement, signed to invigorate a campaign...they are as old as the history of the Negro in America. They give our people a new courage and a sense of unity. ....they keep alive a faith, a radiant hope in the future, particularly in our most trying hours."

(PUT DOWN BOOK)

Here now, to help us appreciate the full impact the music has had, is a man who has not only studied it, but has lived with it. He is the former Chief of Staff to Dr. King, and now a publishing executive with the Negro Heritage Library. He was the chief organizer pf the Birmingham demonstrations and one of the revolution's most articulate spokesmen: The Reverend Wyatt Tee Walker.

WALKER:

Thank you, Mr. Gould. To understand the role of the Freedom Songs today, we really have only to recall the part played by the Negro Spirituals in breaking the chains of slavery more than a century ago. Then, as now, music was both a source of moral instruction and a rallying cry to collective action. Then as now, this music was the dramatic emblem of the struggle to freedom and mighty weapons in that struggle. Then, as now, these hymns, acted as a common denominator for the Negro community - welding individuals, with individual doubts and fears and weaknesses, into a dynamic striking force. A hundred years ago, the Spirituals rand out the slaves' faith that somehow they would find release from bondage; today these same spirituals are tearing down the walls of that polite form of bondage known as segregation. The Freedom Songs can be heard in the North and in the South, wherever the "land of the free" fails to live up to its promises. They surge forth as mass meetings on the picket line, during sit-in demonstrations. They are the sould of the movement.

(MUSIC: "OH FREEDOM")

Oh Freedom, Freedom - sole
Oh, Freedom, Freedom
Oh, Freedom over me
over me
And before I'll be a slave
I'll be buried in my grave and go home to my Lord
and be free ee ee.

WALKER:

"And before I'd be a slave, Id'd be buried in my grave...." Here we have one of the most glorious hymns to freedom in all American music. Born on the slave plantations, this vibrant Spiritual sounded a prideful note of determination. Later it became a marching tune of Negro regiments in the Civil War, and after Emancipation, it returned to the South as a jubilant victory cry. In 1955, when a tired seamtress, Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat in Montgomery, Atlanta as the system of segregation demanded, "Oh Freedom" presided at the birth of the non-violent revolution. As the citizens of Montgomery mounted a crushing boycott of the city's buses, they walked the streets chanting its timeless words. They had submitted tired feet for tired souls and in 385 days of marching and singing, they brought dignity to public transportation in Alabama.

(MUSIC UP, "NO MORE JIM CROW..." TO COMPLETION.)

Oh, Lord, no more Jim Crow

No more Jim Crow

No more Jime Crow

Over me

And before I'd be a slave

I'd be buried in my grave

And go home to my Lord

And be free

No Segregation - segregation

No Segregation - segregation

No Segregation over me

And before I'd be a slave

I'd be buried in my grave
And go home to my Lord and be Free-ee-ee.

WALKER:

In Nobember of 1956, nearly a year after the boycot had begun, the U.S. Supreme Court flatly declared bus segregation unconstitutional. This Striking victory for nonviolent action thus set the stage for future developments in what was to become the nonviolent revolution. Nonviolence would be its chief weapon and its prime source of moral strength. The Freedom Songs had been indispensible in supporting this vital cornerstone of the revolution simply by providing a vehicle of expression for the highly charged emotions that might otherwise explode into individual acts of retaliation.

(MUSIC: "WE SHALL NOT BE MOVED" - one chorus;)

We Shall not
We shall not be moved
We shall not
We shall not be moved
Just like a tree that's planted by the waters
We shall not be moved

WALKER - CONTINUED:

When the lunch counter sit-ins began to spread to cities across the South, the demonstrators used the message of these songs as the only armor to ward off the taunts, the abuses and the blows. But with the help of these songs, they found the collective courage to stand their ground proudly, with passive and heroic dignity.

(MUSIC - CONTINUED - "WE SHALL NOT BE MOVED":)

Just like down at Woolworths
We shall not be moved
Down at Woolworths
We shall not be moved
Just like a tree that's planted by the waters
We shall not be moved

WALKER - CONTINUED:

Like so many of the sit-in songs, this hymn is a real old-timer, pressed into modern service. It started out as gospel hymn, inspired by the verse from the Book of Jeremiah: "....blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord for he shall be as a tree planted planted by the waters...." The sit-ins carved a deeper nitche of immortality for this hymn in the folklore of American music.

(MUSIC - "WE SHALL NOT BE MOVED" - CONTINUED)

"Til we have ~~freedom~~ peace and freedom
We shall not be moved
"Til we have peace and freedom
We shall not be moved
Just like a tree that's planted by the waters
We shall not be moved

WALKER - CONTINUED:

In the 1930's , the orginal hymn did its own private job of integrating. It became a fighting song of both Negro and white coal miners in the West Virginia Mining Union; within a few years,

It had become one of the best-known labor songs in America. And then in 1960, its exultant credo was ammended again. With even more fervent rhythm, this ~~xxxx~~ re-vamped hymn escorted the sit-ins to success in Greensbore, North Carolina, Nashville, Tenn., Tallahassee, Florida, and Petersburg, Virginia-and a host of other cities.

MUSIC UP TO COMPLETION:

We'll fill up all the jails
We shall not be moved
We'll fill up all the jails
We shall not be moved
Just like a tree that's planted by the waters
We shall not be moved

We shall not (chorus repeat)
We shall not be moved
We shall not
We shall not be moved
Just like a tree that's planted by the waters
We shall not be moved

WALKER:

As the Negro revolution gained in scope and momentum, a new and powerful development appeared in the nonviolent thrust--The Freedom Ride. Braving the legal terrors of injunction and martial law, as well as the lawless terror of mob violence, these 20th century crusaders were arrested by the hundred on every conceivable charge. Often, the authorities had to set up make-shift prisons to accomodate the ever-growing numbers of demonstrators. The jail-houses of Mississippi echoed to the Freedom songs. The riders' faith in the inevitable rightness of their mission was cemented by the music they brought with them; and if words and stanzas didn't exist that would express their exact feelings, they simply made up new ones on the spot. I can remember vividly in at least a half dozen of my own jailings, the overwhelming impact these freedom hymns have had in keeping morale high. I have felt them lift the weight of inevitable monotony that prison inflicts; I've seen them inspire new confidence in our hearts; I can remember itsmusic dispelling fear that comes to every one of us; these hymns have changed many a harrowing experience into a heart-warming one as well....

(MUSIC: "COME BY HERE MY LORD")

OHhhhhhhhhhh.....

Come by here My Lord (solo)

Come by here

Come by here MY Lord

Come by here

Come by here My Lord

Come b y here

Oh Lord, come by here

Eulabel - Sombody's prayin', Lord

Chorus - Come by here

Eulabel - Somebody's prayin', my Lord

Chorus - Come by here

Eulabel - Somebody's prayin'

Chorus - Come by here

Oh, Lord, Come by Here

Women - Somebody needs you Lord

Men - Come by here

Women - Somebody needs you Lord

Men - Come by here

Women - Somebody needs you Lord

Men - Come by here

All - Oh Lord, Come by Here

Men - Down in the jailhouse Lord

Women - Come by here

Men - Down in the jailhouse Lord

Women - Come by here

Men - Down in the jailhouse Lord

Women - Come by here

All - Oh Lord, come by Here

All - We want to be free my Lord

Come by here

We want to be free my Lord

Come by here

We want to be free my Lord

Come by here

Oh Lord, come by here

WALKER:

By the Fall of 1961, the nonviolent revolution had built up a full head of steam. The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee was born of the Sit-Ins; the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, under Martin Luther King, now spreadeagled the South; the Congress of Racial Equality had sent organizers into every Southern state except Texas; everywhere NAACP branches were electric with vitality. Then, just before Christmas, all these civil rights groups joined in a unified coalition, and the name of Albany, Georgia, exploded into the headlines. There for nearly a year, the battle raged, not now against some isolated objective such as a segregated library or lunch counter, but against the whole vicious system. Over a thousand rights workers were arrested during this period, but the campaign continued to gain in assurance and effectiveness. Again in Georgia, the freedom songs were in the vanguard of the struggle; as one of young leaders put it, quite simply; "without music, there could have been no Albany Movement".

MUSIC - MEDLEY :

Over my head
I see trouble in the air
Over my head
I see trouble in the air
Over my head
I see trouble in the air
There must be a God somewhere.

Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(Chorus)
I see trouble in the air	(solo male)
I see trouble in the air	(chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see trouble in the air	(solo male)
I see trouble in the air	(Chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see trouble in the air	(solo male)
I see trouble in the air	(chorus)
There must be a God somewhere	(all)

Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see justice in the air	(solo male)
I see justice in the air	(chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)

I see justice in the air	(solo male)
I see justice in the air	(chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see justice in the air	(solo male)
I see justice in the air	(chorus)
There must be a God somewhere.	(all)

Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see freedom in the air	(solo male)
I see freedom in the air	(chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see Freedom in the air	(solo male)
I see freedom in the air	(chorus)
Over my head	(solo male)
Over my head	(chorus)
I see freedom in the air	(solo male)
I see freedom in the air	(chorus
There must be a God somewhere	~~(xxxx)~~ (solo sing-male)

WOKE UP THIS MORNING

Woke up this mornin'
with my mind stayed on freedom
Halleju
Halleju
Hallejuuuah

Singin' and prayin'
with my mind stayed on freedom
Halleju
Halleju
Hallejuuuah

Ain't no harm to have my mind stayed on freedom
Halleju
Halleju
Hallejuuuah

WALKER:

Perhaps the most significant battleground of the Negro revolution, and the one which may have marked the turning point in the crusade, was Birmingham. Through the unparalled dedication and devotion of an army brandishing only the healing sword of nonviolence, the commerce and industry of the South's great steel center ground to a complete standstill. Despite the jailings, the beatings, the dogs and the waterhoses, the protests continued unabated, until at least a firm start was made towards smashing once and for all the brutal face of segregation in Birmingham. And even more important than the local break-through, was the fact that the whole campaign fixed the eyes and the conscience of the nation on the dilemna of the black man in America as no other series of events had done before. Birmingham, more than any other single factor, prompted a courageous John F. Kennedy to present to Congress the most sweeping Civil Rights legislation in the country's history. As for the role of music in Birmingham, I can do no better than to read you a brief passage from Martin Luther King's book "Why We Can't Wait". (PICK UP BOOK)

These are Martin King's own words:

"I have stood in a meeting with hundreds of youngsters, and joined in while they sang 'Ain't Gonna Let Nobody Turn Me 'Round'. It is not just a song; it is a resolve. A few minutes later, I have seen those same youngsters refuse to turn around from the onrush of a police dog, refuse to turn around before a pugnacious Bull Conner in command of men armed with power hoses. These songs bind us together, give us courage together, help us to march together...."

(MUSIC - "Ain't Gonna Let Nobody Turn me 'Round")

(OPTIONAL SUGGESTION - Show various slides of scenes during the Birmingham riots, while the song is being sung)

(Uses piano and drum)

Ain't gonna let nobody turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Ain't gonna let nobody turn me 'round
Keep on walkin', keep on talkin'
Marching on the Freedom Land

Ain't gonna let Bull Conner turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Ain't gonna let Bull Conner turn me 'round
Keep on walkin', keep on talkin'
Marching on the Freedom Land

Ain' gonna let no fire hoses turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Turn me 'round
Ain't gonna let no fire hoses turn me 'round
Keep on walkin', keep on talkin'
Marching on to Freedom Land

WALKER:

This then is the dramatic story of the civil rights songs -- the chants and hymns and spirituals which are blending into an electric command: "Freedom Now!" As an outgrowth of one of America's most vital currents of traditional music, the freedom songs are marking a new chapterin the long and proud history of a people. Now, as we close this brief survey, we do so, inevitably, with the most eloquent musical expression of all. Starting out as a Baptist hymn, this Marseilleise of the freedom fighters followed the well worn trail from church to union hall to sit-in counter; without benefit of sheet music or radio exposure or popular recordings, it became the anthem of the entire movement. Today it invariably closes mass meetings, or prayer vigils, or protest marches. The singers stand, arms linked and hands clasped, renewing their faith to its measured beat, rocking back and forth in time to its noble, yet joyful credo: "Deep in my heart, I do believe, We shall overcome someday....."

We shall overcome

We shall overcome

We shall overcome some day

Deep in my heart

I do believe

We shall overcome

Someday

We shall overcome

We shall overcome

We shall overcome some day

Deep in my heart

I do believe

We shall overcome someday

Truth shall make us free

Truth shall make us free

Truth shall mmake us free today

Deep in my heart

I do believe

We shall overcome someday

The Lord will se us through

The Lord will see us through

The Lord will se us through someday

Deep in my heart

I do believe

We shall overcome someday

States - Gen

When The State Council movement was initiated, its founders planned a temporary commitment of funds and personnel. By 1957, it was hoped, individual Councils would have enough local support to sever formal connections with SRC. But the fast moving events of the past decaed, the unimagined opportunities, the unforseen resistance, made an expanding Council movement necessary. And that movement could neither exist nor expand without continuing SRC support.

Now, ten years later, in the light of all the events compressed into this decade, is an appropriate time to re-examine the Human Relations Councils - the role we play on the local level and our relationship with SRC.

What follows is a synthesis of the feelings of State Council Directors in searching for new directions, new program emphasis to meet our expanding needs:

The Directors are agreed that the basic relationship between SRC and the Councils is healthy, as is that between our respective staffs. However, we feel very strongly that changed circumstances call for a total re-evaluation of the formal framework (or structure) within which that relationship functions.

More and more, the achievement of human relations gains must come from local understanding of, and local action on the issues. For while the courts may decree school desegregation, that decree will be ignored unless the local community is prodded to prepare for it. The Congress may enact civil rights legislation, but the law will be flounted unless local people pressure for its compliance, test it, and file complaints under it. The function of the Human Relations Council is to translate into local reality the dreams of the planners, the innovators, the legislators. Or to put it in the words of SRC's Executive Director: "Everywhere there is a growing awareness that numbers do count, that the once prevalent notion of a small band of good people quietly doing good is outmoded and that the Councils on Human Relations...have unique opportunities and therefore responsibilities for program accomplishments."

It is good indeed to have this recognition. But as Councils struggle day-by-day with disheartening resistance, with potential members too fearful to join the Council, with unstretchable budgets, with trying to provide services and materials which we have neither the funds nor the staff to supply, we inevitably experience a sense of isolation from the community in general and SRC in particular. The State Directors are aware that while grants in aid to State Councils have remained at the same level for the past eight (8) years, the SRC budget has almost tripled. We are aware that the total number of SRC employees has increased substantially in the past ten years while the number of SRC staff serving Councils in eleven Southern states consists of the Field Director and one intern.

Work

All the Directors have the highest regard for Paul Anthony. His dedication, resourcefulness and competence cannot be too highly praised. We question merely whether the field department is large enough to serve our needs. Similarly, the State Council Directors respect SRC's other staff members and programs.

By and large however, State Directors are ignorant of many SRC programs. As a case in point, many Directors were not aware of the scope and direction of the VEP; we wondered what role we could or should play in the program. Not having been briefed on its basic out-look, some queried what seemed to be an inconsistent attitude toward the Councils; sometimes soliciting cooperation and sometimes rejecting it.

Further specific examples to illustrate the State Directors' point of view could be dangerously misleading. For our aim in presenting this memorandum is broader than improving the techniques of communication between SRC and the State Councils, augmenting the Field Staff, or even securing more money. What we seek, in partnership with the Executive Committee and the Executive Director is a total re-evaluation of the role we are playing and can play in each of our States, and a review of our total relationship with the SRC.

* * * * * * * * *

When the SRC conceived the Human Relations Council idea none of the events which have reshaped the South had taken place: the Supreme Court decision, the bus boycott, the sit-ins or Federal Civil Rights legislation. It took extraordinary vision to foresee the need for local Councils before these things had occurred. With this kind of insight from the SRC planners on the one hand, and the day to day practical experience of State Council Directors on the other, a new look at the role of the State Councils ten years after their beginnings is bound to be fruitful for all concerned.

We recommend that:

(1) That SRC and the State Councils have a joint fund raising effort for the Council on Human Relations movement with a goal of $5,000,000 to be raised in a period of three (3) years from business, industry, labor and foundations.

(2) That a committee be set up to study the basic organizational structure of the relationship of SRC with the State Councils to build a more dynamic human relations program.

(3) That a joint committee work with publications and research which will be specifically useful for the Council on Human Relations Movement.

(4) That a special effort be made to create a regional and national identity of a Council on Human Relations Movement.

Signed:

Charles Kelly, Houston
Baxton Bryant, Tennessee
Helen Furman, North Carolina
Edwyn Lewis, Florida
Edwin Stanfield, Alabama
Nathaniel Griswold, Arkansas
Frances Pauley, Georgia

Add Houston

Alabama Council on Human Relations
2809 Governors Drive, S.W.
Huntsville, Alabama
539 - 4277 (205)

Membership: 724 (March, '65)

Ed Stanfield's home telephone number: 852-5938 home address : 2108 Fulton Drive

Officers:

President: Nat Welch, P.O. Box 1192, Auburn. Home: 887-2927
Ofc.: 887-5455
Vice Pres.: Lucius Pitts, Miles College, Bham. State 8-6577
Second Vice President: Rev. J. C. Wilson, P.O. Box 67, Tuskegee Institute
Third Vice President: Father Brice Joyce, 220 E. 19th St. Sheffield, Ala.
Secretary: Mrs. Lois Reeves, 218 Bibb St., Tuskegee Inst.
Treasurer: Mrs. Moreland Smith, 3236 Bankhead Avenue, Montgomery

Budget, 1965: $24,500.00

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: $7,277
Other: 4,985
Total: 19,439 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

Arkansas Council on Human Relations
1220 West Capitol
Little Rock, Arkansas
FRanklin 4-4521

Membership: 777 (Jan; 1965)

Nat Griswold's home address and phone: same

Officers:
President: Walter B. Clancy
Vice President: Dr. Townsend

Budget, 1965:

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: $8,203
Other: 10,000
Total: 25,618 (includes SRC)

Major projects:

Florida Council on Human Relations
356 South Beach St.
Daytona Beach, Florida
255-5881

Membership: 2700-2800 (June, 1965)

Ed Lewis's home address and phone: 251 S.W. 65th Ave., Miami
922 N. Wild Olive, Daytona Beach

Officers:

President: Dr. H. Franklin Williams, U. of Miami, Coral Gables
V. Pres. : Mrs. Henrine Ward Banks
Treasurer: Mr. Herbert Davidson, Daytona Beach, News Journal CL-2-1511
Secretary: Mrs. Eugene Halmi

Budget, 1965: $39,000.00

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: $9,563.
Other:
Total: 17,930 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

Georgia Council on Human Relations
5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Room 201
Atlanta, Georgia
525-6468

Membership:

Frances Pauley's home address: 943 Clifton Rd., N.E., DR. 3-6735

Officers:

President: Dr. Joe Hendricks, Mercer U., Macon
V. Pres. : Rev. Austin Ford, DeKalb Co.
V. Pres. : A. J. McClung, Columbus
Secretary: Mrs. Harry Richardson, Atlanta
Treasurer: John Glustrom, Atlanta

Budget, 1965: -1964-65 - $50,000

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: $18,408.
Other: 30,100
Total: 54,723 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

Louisiana Council on Human Relations Membership:

Officers:

President, Dr. James R. Oliver, P.O. Box 2992, Lafayette, La.
Vice Presidents: Mrs. Barbara Erickson
Dr. Murray J. Martin
Secretary: Mrs. Leo Mervis
Treasurer: Dr. Martin L. Harvey

Budget, 1965:

Major Projects:

Mississippi Council on Human Relations Membership:
306 First Federal Bldg.
Capitol at State Street
Jackson, Miss.
948-0878

Ken Dean's home address: 3635 N. State St., Apt. 3, Jackson, 362-8981

Officers:

President: Rev. Duncan M. Gray, Jr.,
Vice President: Dr. D. I. Horn, Jr.
Vice President: Rev. E. A. Mays,
Sec.-Treasurer: Rev. Donald Thompson

Budget, 1965: $19,000

Funds raised, 1964:

Local:	$1,000
Other:	800
Total:	2,200

Major Projects:

North Carolina Council on Human Relations
121 E. Third Street, Room 301
Charlotte, North Carolina
FRanklin 6-6833

Membership:

Helen Furman's home address: 1300 Queens Rd., 375-3486

Officers:

President: Dr. T. Franklin Williams, Chapel Hill
1st V. P.: Dr. S. E. Duncan, Salisbury
2nd V. P.: Dr. C. E. Boulware, Durham
Secretary: Mrs. Chase H. Benson, Greensboro
Treasurer: Rev. Moses S. Belton, Charlotte
Asst. Treasurer: Dr. Raymond M. Wheeler, Charlotte

Budget, 1965: $35,519.40

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: $7,626
Other: 13,000
Total: 27,015 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

South Carolina Council on Human Relations
1330 Laurel Street
Columbia, S.C.
ALpine 6-8808 (803)

Membership:

Alice Spearman's home address:

SU 7-4276

Officers:

President: Rev. Fred Reese, 4600 Daniel Dr., Columbia

Budget, 1965:

Funds raised, 1964:
Local: 5,340
Other: 17,000
Total: 41,303 (Includes SRC)

Major Projects:

Tennessee Council on Human Relations
1106 - 19th Avenue South
Nashville, Tennessee
297-6568

Membership:

Baxton Bryant's home address: 3313 West End, 297-4065

Officers:

President: Mrs. Martha Ragland, Nashville
Vice President: Louis Sinclair, Knoxville
2nd V. Pres. : Dr. Vascoe Smith, Memphis
Secretary: Mrs. Ernest Silver, Oak Ridge
Treasurer: Dr. G. J. Tarleton, Nashville

Budget, 1965: $31,000.00

Funds raised, 1964:

Local: $4,151
Other: 7,500
Total: 17,399 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

Virginia Council on Human Relations
17 East Cary Street
Richmond 19, Va.
648-4445 (703)

Membership:

Bob Combs' home address:

Officers:

President: David H. Scull, Turnpike Press, Box 170, Annandale
1st V. Pres: Harold O. Dewitt, 426 Burbank St., Williamsburg
V. Pres.: John A. Lapp, Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg
V. Pres.: Mrs. George E. Mattus, 1502 S. Main St., Blacksburg
V. Pres.: M. C. Martin, First State Bank, Danville
Secretary: Dr. Edna M. Colson, Va. State College, Petersburg
Treasurer: Dr. J. Rupert Picott, 316 E. Clay St., Richmond

Budget, 1965: $27,135.00

Funds raised, 1964:

Local: $19,775
Other: 17,200
Total: 52,002 (includes SRC)

Major Projects:

200 NEGROES HELD FOR COLLEGE MARCH

Miss Star

LORMAN, Miss., March 4 (UPI) — Campus security officers and local authorities arrested Charles Evers, the Negro Civil Rights leader, and 200 other demonstrators today when they marched on Alcorn College, a Negro institution, to present a list of grievances.

Claiborn County Sheriff Dan McKay and Mr. Evers and about 180 Negroes had been jailed at Port Gibson, near the state-supported college. He said most of the Negroes had refused to post bond.

The sheriff said they were charged with disturbing the peace and bond had been set at $35 each. He esaid most of the other demonstrators were minors.

The sheriff said the arrests were made after the demonstrators had gone about half a mile into the Alcorn campus.

Mr. Evers earlier this week called on the State College Board for an investigation of student loan policies of the college.

Mr. Evers, state field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, also sent a telegram to the Office of Education in Washington requesting the immediate withholding of all Federal funds and a thorough investigation.

RTY AID RE IN SOUTH

MISSISSIPPI

Supports Mississippi Negroes Despite Criticism

3/7/66

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss. March 6—In early January, Mrs. Ardella Jordan, a 54-year-old Negro, stopped working as a $3-a-day maid and began teaching kindergarten pupils without pay.

Since then, she has been collecting food from her neighbors to provide hot lunches for her four-year-old pupils and struggling to overcome the handicaps of her own eighth-grade education.

She still spells the word "brush" without an "s" in preparing classroom hygiene charts, but she has succeeded in teaching "counting" to children from impoverished homes in which arithmetic is difficult even for the parents. She stacks bubble gum in piles and distributes it to the children when they correctly identify the number of pieces.

This week, after one of the most prolonged battles in the nation's antipoverty drive, Mrs. Jordan—along with nearly 2,500 other low-income Mississippi Negroes—will start receiving a Federal pay check as a teacher in one of the Office of Economic Opportunity's Head Start programs.

Tough Decision for U.S.

The decision to provide funds for the Child Development Group of Mississippi, which received Federal Funds for a two-month program last summer and since then has been operating classes such as Mrs. Jordan's on a voluntary basis without Government assistance, was one of the toughest the Office of Economic Opportunity has yet faced.

Had the agency refused to finance the program for a second time, it would have alienated a major segment of the civil rights movement, angered the program's staff members and the parents of its 9,000 pupils, and invited the wrath of the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, an organization founded by Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers.

Ten days ago, after six months of deliberations, the Office of Economic Opportunity announced that it was granting the Child Development Group $5.6-million—enough to finance 125 centers with 9,000 pupils in 28 counties for six months.

As the agency knew it would, the announcement immediately aroused the indignation of the state's Congressional delegation, many of its newspapers, its segregationist organizations, and some of its more liberal and moderate white citizens.

James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, arose on the Senate floor to say he was "shocked." Two Democratic colleagues agreed.

Representative John Bell Williams found the decision to be "inconceivable." Senator John Stennis said it showed "remarkably poor judgment" by Federal officials.

Rights Members Employed

The battle lines were drawn last summer when the Child Development Group, operating under an Office of Economic Opportunity grant of $1.4-million, hired about 30 of its 1,160 faculty members from such civil rights organizations as the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party and the Congress of Racial Equality. The director of last summer's program was Dr. Tom Levin, a New York psychologist who had worked with another civil rights organization, the Medical Committee for Human Rights.

Among the other staff and faculty members were many Negroes who had been active in local civil rights projects. The state headquarters for the program was Mount Beulah, an assembly center for the Delta Ministry, the civil rights arm of the National Council of Churches.

Mr. Stennis denounced the Child Development group's civil rights connections and declared that $500,000 in "discrepancies" existed in its finances.

The attack was broadened to include the qualifications of the group's school teachers and its educational materials. One book, designed to teach children to read by retelling their own stories in their own language, was criticized because it included a line that read, "My dog eat meat."

The development group countered that it had saved taxpayers money by teaching nearly 2,000 more students than it had agreed to teach. It conceded, however, that $30,000 had been "improperly" accounted for because of lost receipts and inadequate records. The loss has since been adequately accounted for or replaced, it said.

In applying for the new Federal grant, the group met objections from Washington by arranging to move from Mount Beulah, hiring an experienced administrator, engaging a leading Jackson accounting concern to audit its books, and expanding its board of directors to include three middle-class whites and Negroes in addition to the present membership of civil rights leaders and the poor.

Its experimental teaching methods and policy of hiring "eager and able" Negro teachers regardless of educational qualifications have received testimonials from across the country.

"I saw children grow a bit, gain a bit of respect for themselves, feel that, after all, there is a lot more possible than they and their parents ever thought possible," said Dr. Robert Coles, a Harvard University research scientist after visiting the Head Start centers.

Some Mississippi moderates and liberals favor other Head Start programs that promote racial "understanding" by bringing middle-class whites and Negroes together as administrators and policy makers. However, John Mudd, a 26-year-old Harvard graduate student who has directed the group since last August, argues that the group's approach is invaluable because it teaches impoverished Negroes that they can act for themselves.

Florida School Boycott Urged

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 5 (AP)—A coalition of civil rights and ministerial organizations called Saturday for a boycott of public schools Monday and Tuesday o dramatize their complaints about school segregation. Leaders of the protest said they were asking the city's 90,000 white students along with the 30,000 Negro students to stay home.

Director of Dental Research Named by Surgeon General

WASHINGTON, March 6 (UPI) — Surgeon General William N. Stewart announced today the appointment of Dr. Seymour J. Kreshover as director of the National Institute of Dental Research.

Dr. Kreshover of Bethesda, Md., joined the United States Public Health Service in 1956 after serving as professor of oral pathology and diagnosis at the Medical College of Virginia.

He has been awarded the Public Health Service's Meritorious Service Medal and the honorary degree of Doctor of Science from the University of Buffalo.

MUTILATED PAGE (s)

MISSISSIPPI

through which he can get redress."

Many of the cases handled by the Philadelphia board involve more misunderstanding and excessive language than head-knocking. And the truth often seems to lie somewhere between the stories told by the offending cop and the aggrieved citizen.

Indeed, under the direction of executive secretary Clarence Farmer, a 49-year-old Negro printing executive, the Philadelphia board is run more like a social agency than an investigation unit. Operating on a $14,500 annual budget, Farmer unabashedly uses his contacts in the ghettos and at police headquarters to foster better understanding. "Many of the complainants will be happy with just an apology," Farmer told NEWSWEEK's Pat Reilly. "It's hard sometimes to get the policeman concerned to say he's sorry—but I can always get the captain to say so."

Lindsay's Plan: New York's Lindsay made enlargement of the city's complaint review board one of his key campaign planks last year and was determined to redeem his pledge—especially in light of the heavy vote he pulled in the ghettos. Far less radical than the experiments in Philadelphia and Rochester, Lindsay's plan called merely for the addition of four civilians to the departmental panel of three police officials who now judge complaints. Yet he ran into fierce headwinds from headquarters. The mayor's proposal, cried Police Commissioner Vincent Broderick, was "a cruel hoax." Lindsay's solution: to replace Broderick with Philadelphia's professorial Police Commissioner Howard R. Leary, no admirer of civilian review but a top cop who has learned to live with it.

Even as Leary was sworn in last week, his new foot-soldiers were mounting a near-hysterical attack against the mayor's modest reform. A civilian-controlled review-board formula could "spread like wildfire" throughout the U.S., warned John Cassese, the head of the New York Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. "If that should happen," orated Cassese, "then Russia should send a medal to the city of New York and say: 'Thank you for accomplishing what I haven't been able to do these many years . . . immobilize the police department'."

But more sophisticated law-enforcement officials believe that civilian review can actually make the policeman's lot easier. "It seems so clear that a law-abiding policeman need never fear civilian review," said Federal District Judge David L. Bazelon last week. "His morale should not be lowered by the airing of citizen complaints. Rather, he ought to be encouraged by the increased community respect which can be expected when the public sees that the police are also required to obey the law."

'Secret' Crisis in the Delta

He stood in the chill in front of a tin-sided general store in Tribbett, Miss., his cap pulled low, his hands jammed deep in the pockets of his baggy khakis, his ebony face cast in deep relief by a single naked bulb. He is a tractor driver on the plantation just up the road, but work is so short that he makes no more than $15 in a good month. He houses his wife and thirteen kids in a farm shack at the sufferance of The Man, and he feeds them on the largesse of the Federal surplus-food program: black flour and grits and butter and rice and nine tins of meat a month for fifteen people. He is hungry and he is angry, and there is nothing for him to do but wander down to the store with others of the dispossessed and talk.

And the talk, in this worst Delta winter in memory, has turned desperate. The driver listened to the voices rising around him like a litany: "Somebody sho' better do something." He spat into the oil-blackened ground. "I wasn't born to live like this, wasn't nobody, colored or white," he said. "I'll tell you something, now, it keeps up like this, there's gonna be a big parade, a lot of big parades all over this countryside, with some torches and a few other things, too. 'Cause I ain't gonna let my people starve. None of us gone let our people starve. So it's not gone be stealing—it's just gone be a taking."

That bitter voice was only an integer in a set of grim statistics that has lately begun to haunt Mississippi and frighten Washington. With technological progress far more to blame than racial prejudice, up to 20,000 Delta Negro farm laborers are expected to be idled this cotton season—a staggering total that amounts to half the shrunken pool of workers still working the black-belt soil of Mississippi.

Another Country: The Delta DP's are, potentially, the kindling of revolution, and lately—only lately—the Federal government has begun to take urgent notice. Their plight has been discussed at secret Cabinet-level meetings, examined first hand by a succession of official visitors, anatomized in a flood of stunned confidential memos ("I felt," one U.S. higher-up wrote home, "as if I had been out of the country"). The result has been a stepped-up program of aid to the Mississippi poor—and the prayer that it will not be too little too late.

Matt Herron—Black Star

Tent colony at Tribbett: 'There's gonna be a big parade'

The problem lies in the quickening erosion of The System in the Delta, the flat, sun-scorched alluvial plain that edges the Mississippi from Memphis to Vicksburg. For most of the century since Emancipation, that system had evolved only glacially from slavery to a sort of latter-day feudalism. It preserved some of the style of the ante-bellum Good Old Days, but it endured only as long as the Delta planters could afford it.

Spurred by the competition from elsewhere in the U.S. and abroad, the planters have in recent years speeded the advent of the new technology. Chemical weed killers have made the old, familiar gangs of Negro cotton choppers all but obsolete, and machines —not men—will pick 95 per cent of this year's crop (compared to 69 per cent in 1964). Moreover, a new Federal crop-control program will pay planters 10.5 cents a pound for cotton they don't grow this year—a subsidy expected to take up to a third of the Delta's 925,000 acres of cotton land out of production. In sum, the new arithmetic means no jobs for perhaps a fourth of the 26,000 Delta Negroes who work the farms they live on—or for most of the 14,000 "day haul" laborers who are trucked in gangs to whatever plantation needs them.

And that in turn means no exit in sight from the prison called poverty. The Delta winter is always hard; Negroes somehow survive it on the expectation of work at planting time. This year, for too many, that last wisp of hope is gone.

Willy James Sanders is, at 54, the youngest remaining man in a cluster of 27 Negro shanties at the edge of a cotton field a mile down a rutted road from Rolling Fork; the young, the mobile, the ambitious have long since fled North. "We stay hungry," Sanders told NEWSWEEK's Marshall Frady. "That's the way we live—hungry. We keep goin' on [surplus food] commodities, and ever once in a while The Man give us a dollar or two." But his 5-year-old daughter has epilepsy and his 3-year-old son is dying of sickle-cell anemia, and Sanders does not know how long he can go on. "Not long," he says, looking down the row of unheated shacks. "Something gone have to give somewhere."

Tent City: The evangels of the left wing of the Movement have been laboring for months to advance that day—with no more visible effect, for a time, than frightening the planters into speeding up mechanization still more. A dozen drivers who struck for higher wages on one Tribbett plantation last summer were promptly run off the land. Fueled by high hopes and heady talk from the civil-rights professionals who organized them last summer, the strikers moved defiantly into a makeshift tent colony to wait out The Man. But The Man's only other response was to mechanize his operation even more and take the maximum 35 per cent of his acreage out of production under the U.S. subsidy program. The tent city still stands, a huddle of Army tents on a patch of land outside Tribbett. But its population is down from a peak 150 to a hungry, gloomy 48.

Nothing seemed to work—until, three weeks ago, a band of 60 of the dispossessed from Tribbett and elsewhere barged into the deactivated Greenville Air Force Base and announced they were going to stay the winter. A crew of Air Police ran them out, but the short-lived squat-in made the Federal government the target for the first time—and it joggled Washington into action.

Without fanfare, a stream of high-level officials headed South—the biggest Federal invasion, said one Mississippian, "since Grant took Vicksburg." And the messages home were all the same. The situation, one high-level official said in a confidential memo, "has the seeds of protest in it, particularly if given wrong leadership . . . This vacuum of despair and frustration must be filled by the Federal government with constructive endeavors geared to meet the real needs of the people." Another—an old civil-rights hand—reported: "This many displaced people means a hell of a situation, and it comes at a time when there's an awakening. These people are angry, frustrated—and knowledgeable. I've never seen the same seething resentment before."

On White House orders, a closed-door conference of top officials—among them Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach, Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz and poverty chief Sargent Shriver—was called at the Office of Economic Opportunity. The speed-up spread down from there. OEO and Agriculture stepped up a stalled free-food distribution program. Another snarled project—a $5.6 million Operation Head Start program for 9,100 pre-school children—was put through last week over pro forma protests by Mississippi's Congressional delegation. And so was a thirteen-county literacy and job-training program.

Matt Herron—Black Star

Delta family: 'Nothin' here'

Those programs scarcely scratch the surface—but there are more on Washington's front and back burners. Poverty and agriculture officials are considering a variety of projects putting the unemployed to work cleaning up national forests, roadsides, rural-electrification lines and soil-conservation drainage ditches. Officials have already put out private feelers to coax industries to build plants in Mississippi—and asked seed companies to provide packets of vegetable seeds to Negroes too poor to afford them even at a dime apiece. They are considering making some vacant government buildings available for winter housing for the dispossessed—including the barracks at the deserted Greenville air base. And they are even brainstorming the possibility of an Operation Homestead—buying land and reselling small, subsistence-size plots to Negroes on long-term, low-interest loans.

Poverty: Can the effort turn the tide in the Delta? "The problem," said one young Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee worker at the Tribbett tent city, "is that the people around here don't think there is any chance for them, and it's probably too late for the government to move now." The roots of poverty lie tragically—and dangerously—deep in the black Delta soil. Outside Rolling Fork, a black woman in a shabby red coat knelt in her front yard, chopping kindling with a handleless ax blade. "None of us doing nothing," she said. "The men all gone, the work all gone, there ain't nothin' along here." And outside the general store in Tribbett, under the dim single light, a 41-year-old black man with eight children, two grandchildren and no future said bleakly: "It's a tight fight, and after a while we just ain't gone have no choice but to do something. And that's liable to be most anything—whatever it takes." He tapped his chest with a gnarled forefinger. "And when it comes, this is one of us that's gone be right there."

CALIFORNIA:

Tax Wonderland

Last July 4, hours after the fireworks displays had ended over San Francisco Bay, 48-year-old Norman A. Phillips downed several drinks at a bar and then set out to do something about a simmering grudge against his boss. The resulting fireworks illuminated California's worst public scandal in years—and cast dark shadows over one of its major sources of local public revenue, property taxes.

Such taxes are based on valuations assigned to personal and corporate holdings by public assessors. But the manner of establishing these evaluations is so recondite that the whole assessment process has traditionally been considered ripe for favoritism and fraud. In parts of California, where elected county assessors control fiefdoms well insulated from outside scrutiny and are allowed a wide range of personal discretion in setting values, assessment practices had been considered not only ripe but rotten. Yet evidence had been hard to come by—until Norman A. Phillips literally produced a truckload of it.

Fired by drink and anger, he drove a pickup truck to the stucco house in Castro Valley, near Oakland, which was used as an office by his boss, a suave little tax consultant named James C. Tooke, 46. Tooke had worked briefly for the Alameda County (Oakland) assessment department and now had large corporate clients in eight Western states. Phillips lugged five gunmetal gray filing cabinets out of the office and carted them away. Eventually they ended up in the hands of California's Attorney General Tom Lynch.

Payoffs: Among the most damning of the contents were canceled checks made out by Tooke to employees of various county assessors' offices. And Alameda County Assessor Donald Feragen and San Francisco County Assessor Russell Wolden were promptly indicted after detailed grand-jury testimony by Tooke and by a onetime assistant in Wolden's office, Max J. Newstat, both of whom turned state's evidence. The thrust of the charge: the officials accepted payoffs for shaving the property assessments of big-name corporations.

In grand-jury testimony released last week, Tooke elaborated on the ad hoc system for dividing spoils between tax consultants and county assessors. During a meeting in a Mission Valley motel outside San Diego in 1962, Tooke said, County Assessor John McQuilken complained that he was not getting a proper cut of a $35,000 consultant fee paid by General Dynamics (for which, Tooke said, the company received a $227,728 tax saving). "He was very upset," said Tooke, "and called [another consultant] a chiseler."

Assessor McQuilken himself escaped indictment by committing suicide with an overdose of barbiturates. But in January three of his San Diego subordinates were indicted. And the dimensions of the spreading scandal grew sharply: the chief assessor of Seattle, Wash., pleaded guilty to charges of bribery and resigned his post, and Arizona's attorney general launched an investigation, based on California tip-offs, that is currently hot on the trail of one of that state's largest corporations.

Climax: Then, last week, a climax of sorts was reached. Yet another assessor was indicted. Along with Earl McLain of Butte County, Calif., the first corporation (Butte County's Continental Nut Co.) was charged—with perjury, fraud and conspiracy involving an alleged $1 million in dodged taxes. And in the San Francisco area, assessors Feragen and Wolden came to trial. (Wolden, who has refused to resign his post, still vows to run for re-election. "People are always making trouble," he shrugged last week. "But I'm putting a good campaign together and we'll win it.")

Meantime, thousands of pages of testimony have been compiled by four grand juries so far, and state investigators have begun turning up other tales of tax evasion. Indeed, one investigator figures that three-quarters of the corporations in California—with the willing compliance of county assessors—have been telling less than the whole truth on their property-tax declarations.

Already a number of corporations named in taxpayer civil suits aimed at recovering back taxes have quietly begun to settle out of court. Among those who have already paid up in Alameda County alone: Pepsi-Cola, Kimberly-Clark, P. Lorillard, Gerber Products and Hunt Foods and Industries. "We're catching them with hard figures," said a state official, "and they're paying off like good slot machines." Yet all have denied any knowledge that bribery had helped lower their assessments.

All told, state officials estimate that as much as $200 million a year for three years has been lost in taxes throughout California alone, most of which would have gone toward education. "This," one said, "makes Teapot Dome look like a $2 holdup." And the end of indictments and disclosures doesn't appear to be in sight. Meantime, however, California is taking steps to prevent a continuance of such unseemly practices. This week the state legislature is expected to consider a bill to curtail the power of county assessors and require public disclosure of every company's tax base. "The more I learn of assessors and their assessment practices," Attorney General Lynch told a legislative committee in support of reform, "the more I believe that Lewis Carroll wrote the code."

ARMED FORCES:

Two Bites to a Dog

No one paid any particular attention to the handsome, silver-haired traveler who boarded the train in Washington that mid-December day in 1941. His ticket had been issued in the name of a Mr. Wainwright and, with his somber civilian suit and soft-spoken manner, he might easily have passed for a moderately successful banker or stockbroker off on a business trip to the West Coast. Mr. Wainwright's luggage was as unexceptionable as the man, except for one item he had packed into his valise at the last moment—his wife's sewing bag.

Such was the manner in which Rear Adm. Chester W. Nimitz left Washington, outward bound to take command of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. The country was still afflicted with an acute case of spy-fever and invasion jitters; many expected Japanese landings almost hourly on the West Coast. Tucked in his compartment aboard the train, Nimitz took out his wife's sewing bag and opened up the reading material he had placed in it: top-secret reports on the actual extent of the vast damage the Japanese attack had wrought at Pearl Harbor.

Associated Press

MacArthur and Nimitz (1944): Secrets in the sewing bag

Self-effacing: In a real sense, Nimitz's quiet, calculated departure from Washington was a measure of the man. Of all the top U.S. naval commanders of World War II, the calm, self-effacing Texan was easily the least flamboyant. And once in Pearl Harbor, he calmly, methodically set about rebuilding the fleet. Then, on May 8, 1942, came the Battle of the Coral Sea, the first major sea engagement since Pearl Harbor, and the first naval battle in history fought en-

Mississippi Eyes Rape Abortions

AJ 3/10/66

JACKSON, March 10 (AP) — The Mississippi House has given approval to an emotion - packed proposal to legalize abortions in pregnancies resulting from rape.

Before a final 88-45 vote came on the bill, there were charges that lawmakers were playing God, that they were legalizing murder, and that they were penalizing unfortunate women.

At present, the state permits abortions only when necessary to safeguard the life of the mother.

Rep. Billy Thompson introduced the bill, which would also permit abortions in cases where a deformed baby was a reasonable possibility because of drugs, injury or disease.

Mississippi

3/13/66

O. B. Bowen Jr., 47-year-old president of the Richton Bank and Trust Co. of Richton in Perry County, has been appointed comptroller of state banks by Gov. Paul Johnson to succeed the late Llewellyn Brown. . . . State Rep. Radford DuBois of Yazoo City, is president of the newly organized American Turtle Producers Association. He raises miniature turtles for commercial distribution. . . . George A. Owens will be formally installed as president of biracial denominational Tougaloo College near Jackson on April 21. He succeeds Dr. A. D. Beittel who retired last September. . . . William M. "Fish Bait" Miller, native of Pascagoula and doorkeeper of the United States House, will be honoree at the 17th annual banquet session of the Mississippi Economic Council-State Cham[illegible] Commerce in Jackson April 5. . . . Charles E. Speed [illegible] of Prentiss, is new state senator of the [illegible] district, succeeding the late Sen. E[illegible] [illegible] Former State Rep. Jesse Shanks, attorney of [illegible] lost the race by one vote has filed a contest, but in the meantime, Sen. Speed is serving and drawing pay. A hearing is set for March 30.

Legislators Feel Pressure As Deadline Draws Nearer

3/13/66

MISSISSIPPI

By KENNETH TOLER

Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial Appeal
Special to The Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., March 12. The legislature has only 26 days left to do what it has been unable to accomplish in 67 or else Mississippi's five congressional posts will be filled state-at-large and not by districts in the June 7 election. The deadline for qualifying as well as redistricting is April 7.

Even though the legislators come up with a compromise before the qualifying deadline, that doesn't guarantee the five posts will be filled in district balloting. The biracial Freedom Democratic party, which failed to unseat the representatives last year, has a suit pending in federal court challenging the present setup with a petition attached asking the court to redistrict in conformity with the "one man—one vote" guideline set by the United States Supreme Court.

There is one possible "out" for the legislators who ended 10 weeks of the no-limit biennial assembly Thursday. In a last-minute, hurry-up action, postpone the election.

ANTICIPATING the deadlock that has developed between the House and Senate, several members early in the session introduced a bill to put off the election until August. It has been held in committee awaiting the emergency of its enactment.

Two major problems confront the legislators.

One is to reshape the districts so none of the incumbents will be thrown in the same area. The other is what to do with the 111,611 majority Negro population in the 607,241 populated second (delta) district of Rep. Jamie Whitten of Charleston.

Each legislative branch has passed its own version of how the 82 counties should be districted. Authors of the two proposals are from the second district.

Rep. Kenneth Williams of Clarksdale (Coahoma County), sponsored the House-approved bill which shifted the counties with Negro population majorities into predominately white areas. Rep. Thompson McClellan of West Point (Clay County) in the first district, charged it was "adroitly" drafted to devalue the Negro vote. He said the federal courts would not accept it.

SEN. W. B. Alexander of Cleveland (Bolivar County), offered the Senate-approved plan which retained the majority Negro population in the second district but reduced it to 47,910. The overall population would be reduced from 607,241 to 430,834.

The House bill was pigeon-holed in the Senate for its proposal. However, when the Senate measure reached the House, the original Williams plan was inserted as an amendment, which the Senate, just before weekend adjournment, rejected.

Conference committees to attempt a compromise will be named during the week by Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin, president of the Senate, and House Speaker Walter Sillers.

Meanwhile, an added problem has arisen as a result of the United States supreme court decision last Monday that literacy requirements for voters set out by state statute cannot be used to keep most of the 50,000 certified by federal registrars who cannot read and write from voting in the election for congressmen. The new federally-qualified electors are largely concentrated in the heavily Negro populated second district.

At the same time, the ruling poses a question in view of the 'secrecy' of the polling booth for those unable to read and write. Question is what steps will the federal government take to aid illiterates in marking their ballots. Mississippi law prohibits any assistance being given a voter, except one that is blind.

MISSISSIPPI

Ole Miss Clamps Tight Security On Eve of Bobby Kennedy's Visit

AJ 3/17/66

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Worried University of Mississippi officials imposed tight security on this tree-studded campus Thursday on the eve of an appearance by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y.

The senator, who played a major role in ending the university's century-old segregation policy, will address the law school student body Friday afternoon.

The appearance of the late President's brother has provoked some criticism in Mississippi. A "rebel flag day" protest rally is set for tonight in Jackson, the state capital 180 miles to the south.

Kennedy's only purpose in coming to Mississippi "is to rub salt into the wound," said Rep. Prentiss Walker, this state's lone Republican congressman.

State Rep. Jim True of Harrison County told the legislature Wednesday the visit would be "an insult to all Mississippians."

Some state officials called for a display of Southern hospitality.

Kennedy was attorney general in 1962 when federal marshals and soldiers occupied the campus to quell a riot that followed the court ordered enrollment of Negro James Meredith. Two men died in the riot and many more were hurt.

The New York senator will arrive by private plane, landing at the airport where the bulk of the 20,000 soldiers dispatched here in 1962 were quartered. He will attend a brief private reception sponsored by the campus Young Democrats Club, then will address the law students at Fulton Chapel — just across the street from where U.S. marshals and rioters clashed in 1962.

From Oxford, Kennedy will fly to Tuscaloosa for an address ath the University of Alabama Friday night.

POWELL ASSISTS MISSISSIPPI GROUP

Prods Antipoverty Office on Funds to Build New Homes

MISSISSIPPI

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 2—Adam Clayton Powell stood tall beside his elevated chairman's chair in the spacious new hearing room of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

He wore an impeccable gray suit with matching tie, a baby blue shirt and an orange button on his lapel saying "Free D.C.," a slogan used by advocates of home rule for the District of Columbia. In his hand he flourished a cigar.

In the audience were 50 farm Negroes from Mississippi who had come to Washington try to get action on their applications for about $1.3-million in antipoverty funds to assist in building homes for displaced plantation workers. They wore rough clothing and appeared weary after a long bus ride.

Mr. Powell, Manhattan Democrat who is chairman of the committee, addressed the group as "my black brothers and sisters in Mississippi." He explained that his committee initiated laws but had no jurisdiction in enforcing them.

"However," he said, "there are times we can put pressure on the executive branch."

Another Project Aided

In three hours, he said, he was able to get $3.5-million in antipoverty funds released from the Office of Economic Opportunity for another Mississippi project. In doing so, he said, he "leapfrogged over the Governor and the Mississippi Congressmen."

"We had a similar complaint from Brooklyn," he said. "They came in here and in 30 minutes we had a courier going to Brooklyn with $300,000 in his hand."

Mr. Powell announced that while his audience waited he would retire to his office, call Sargent Shriver, director of the antipoverty program, and tell him "we want this money released." After hearing one witness, he turned the informal hearing over to Representative William F. Ryan, Democrat-Liberal of Manhattan, and left.

A small group of House liberals have held similar hearings in recent months to give Southern Negroes a forum for their grievances, but this was the first one held under the auspices of Mr. Powell.

Frank Smith, leader of the Mississippi group, explained that three organizations in his state—Neighborhood Development, Inc., U.N.A., Housing Project and the Delta Opportunities Commission—had applied for funds to subsidize buildings of homes. Most of the recipients, he said, were living in tents and would have to spend another winter there unless help was forthcoming soon.

Submitted on Feb. 28

The applications were submitted on Feb. 28 after two months of negotiations. The Federal share of building the houses would be about $650 a person.

After three hours, Chuck Stone, assistant to Mr. Powell, returned and announced that the representative had reached Mr. Shriver by automobile telephone.

Mr. Shriver indicated there was difficulty in the applications, the way they were submitted," Mr. Stone said. "I talked to another official in O.E.O. who said it probably would go through. This is symbolic of confusion that permeates O.E.O."

Mr. Stone said Mr. Powell would assign one of his assistants to help with the applications.

Representative Charles C. Diggs Jr., Democrat of Michigan, told the Mississippians, Mr. Powell's commitment is tremendous." He craticized "interminable delay" in the office of economic opportunity.

"These people are very sophisticated," Mr. Diggs said, "They can do the frug better than anybody here."

The hearing was held Thursday night. Mr. Smith asked if Mr. Powell could go with the group the next day to see Mr. Shriver. Mr. Stone replied that he could not but he would send an assistant.

Yesterday Mr. Shriver was out of town but other antipoverty officials met with the Mississippians and promised to do what they could. The word out of the agency was that they probably would get their money.

NEGROES EXTEND TENT CAMP STAY

MISSISSIPPI

Capital Seems Sympathetic to Mississippians' Quest

4/6/64

By BEN A. FRANKLIN

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 5 — The tent camp erected by homeless Mississippi Negroes within sight of President Johnson's White House bedroom may become "more or less" permanent, spokesmen for the group said today.

Officially, the Government professed not to mind. Even the Office of Economic Opportunity —the target of the demonstration—said through a spokesman that the tent-out in the tulips of Lafayette Square might have "a certain charm."

Last night's "sleeping shift" of 30 Negroes—members of the full contingent of 90 are housed indoors when not demonstrating —was invited to breakfast this morning by the women of St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette Square.

Another downtown church promised lunch for one of two day shifts tomorrow. And protest leaders said there were more offers of food and blankets "than we can handle."

Questions directed at the campers by passers-by this afternoon also appeared markedly sympathetic.

'They Might as Well Stay'

Isaac Coleman, a West Point, Miss., field secretary for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, who accompanied the group from Mississippi last Thursday, said:

"Since these people would have to live in tents anyway, en if they went back to Mississippi, they might as well stay right here."

Mr. Coleman, bearded and 22 years old, appeared to be one of only a handful of youthful, educated demonstrators in the group. Most are unemployed field workers and farm hands.

Mr. Coleman called the responses to the demonstration "very good, very encouraging, except from the O.E.O."

But James F. Kelleher, the antipoverty agency's press spokesman, turned the other cheek.

"These are truly defeated, people," he said.

He said there was "no question that they have real troubles. We can't be mad at them."

"Because they are genuinely lost souls," he went on, "their demonstration is far more appealing than the usual civil rights thing."

He said the Negroes' campsite "is serving the useful purpose of calling public attention to their poight."

When the four-tent community went up Sunday afternoon, the announced stay was a week. The apparent extension today seemed to reflect two factors.

They are the tolerance being shown by official Washington and the likelihood that the Negroes' demands of the antiproverty office could not be satisfied quickly.

The demonstrators insist they came here with no premeditated intention to camp out in the park. They said the four 6-by-6-foot tents were rented here last Saturday after a "disillusioning" five-hour meeting with antipoverty officials.

They said the object of both the pilgrimage here and the weekend decision to erect the ents—technically a violation of Federal park regulations—was the same. This was to hasten the processing of three requests for a total of $1.3-million in antipoverty funds to finance construction of low-cost, cinder-block houses for 300 homeless Negroes now living in "tent cities" near Greenville and Leland, Miss. Part of the money would be used to train the homeless applicants in construction skills while building their own homes.

Mr. Kelleher said antipoverty officials hoped to resume talks with the demonstration leaders later this week, "to see whaht we can do to rework their applications on a sound basis."

In interviews today, several of the demonstrators ascribed their homeless, jobless plight to varying causes.

Mississippi Negroes Chased by Troopers In College Protest

NYT 4/6/66

By United Press International

LORMAN, Miss., April 5—About 50 young Negroes dodged tear gas and water hoses today and led state troopers on a foot race across the campus of Alcorn A. & M.

One youth was taken into custody in the chase, which pitted the troopers against darting youngsters who scrambled into nearby woods.

Troopers turned back two marches later at the gates of the all-Negro school.

The demonstrations were to protest the allegedly heavy-handed administration of the state-supported college by the school president, J. D. Boyd. Negroes have complained that Mr. Boyd does not pay laundry and cafeteria workers enough, imposes too strict a curfew on coeds and arbitrarily sends students home for minor rule infractions.

Guardsmen Stand By

State troopers used tear gas on Monday to clear a dormitory of Negroes who had thrown bottles and bricks out the windows at the troopers.

Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. ordered an infantry company of national guardsmen to stand by to reinforce the 100 troopers he had sent onto the campus, but the guardsmen were not needed today. They remained on the ready at nearby Port Gibson, about 15 miles east of Lorman, in southwest Mississippi.

Charles Evers, the organizer of the protests, has stressed that his new campaign is for "human rights," rather than civil rights.

After organizing today's demonstrations, Mr. Evers left for Jackson to meet with the state college board. Mr. Evers, the state field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the college board had invited him to present a formal ls of complaints against Mr. Boyd.

Continued on Page 29, Column 4

Mississippi Negroes Chased at College

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

Alcorn has an enrollment of 2,300 pupils, and about 200 of them staged a two-hour, silent protest march on the campus following the outburst Monday night. The campus was normal today until outside demonstrators showed up.

Songs at President's Home

The first group of 50 was made up of high school students from the surrounding area. The gathered in front of Mr. Boyd's official residence, sain "freedom songs and taunted troopers and Vernon Maxwell, a Negro who heads the campus police.

On one occasion, Mr. Maxwell attempted to turn a high pressure water hose on the demonstrators, but they raced away laughing. State troopers who were backing up Mr. Maxwell joined in the laughter, when, on another occasion, the campus policeman hurled a tear gas grenade at the demonstrators but the gas blew harmlessly away without bothering any of them.

Seeing that the antics were beginning to attract the attention of the student body, the troopers started to advance on the youths, but suddenly sat down on the lawn. The young Negroes continued their harassment, taking off their coats and waving them at the officers in the manner of a bull-fighter.

At this point the troopers jumped up and started the race across the campus, with the screaming demonstrators darting in every direction.

The first gropp of marchers that later turned up at the school gates retreated when the police reminded them that a Chancery Court had issued an injunction banning marches through the campus.

Thirty minutes later another group, made up mostly of women and teen-age girls, appeare at the gates and taunted the police with shouts of "we have a right to march," and "you can't stop us."

The troopers took three quick steps forward and the demonstrators started to run, some of them tripping over others in their haste.

Evers Meets College Board

JACKSON, Miss., April 5 (UPI) — Mr. Evers, the state field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, met here today with the State College board. He said the board had invited him to present a formal list of complaints against Mr. Boyd.

Following the two-hour closed meeting Mr. Evers said the situation "looks favorable," but he declined further comment.

A college board spokesman said "We feel we're making progress."

Meanwhile, attorneys filed a petition in Federal Court here challenging the Chancery Court order blocking demonstrations at Alcorn. The lawyers asked for an immediate temporary order preventing officials from interfering with Negroes in "peacefully assembling" and presenting their grievances to Mr. Boyd.

Evers Seeks Ouster of Boyd

LORMAN, Miss., April 5 (AP)—Mr. Evers said today that the goal of the demonstrators was to oust Mr. Boyd.

"This is a fight between Negroes," Mr. Evers said in a midday pep talk to his followers just outside the college gate. "And you white folks ought to stay out of it," he added as he glanced at a row of 20 highway patrolmen who stood at the gate with billy clubs in hand.

"J. D. Boyd has got to go," Mr. Evers said. "We're going to get him sooner or later. He's only concerned with pleasing the white folks."

"This is my alma mater," Mr. Evers said. "I went to school here four years, and right now I couldn't pass a sixth grade examination.

"They got teachers without degrees, students teaching. It's no wonder the Negro can't elevate himself."

In talking to newsmen, college students complained about the food, the infirmary, the grading system and the teachers.

"They treat us like babies," one student said. "He [Boyd] won't even talk to us and we are students. The president dominates the whole school."

"At the library they search you when you come out," said another. "And we have an infirmary that is not fit to take care of dogs."

Police Patrol Georgia Schools

CORDELE, Ga., April 5 (AP) —The police patroled three Negro schools today to discourage pupils from joining protest marches. The County School Superintendent said more efforts would be made to enforce school attendance laws.

James Y. Moultrie, Crisp County School Superintendent, said "We are going to tighten up as far as children under 16 who are on the streets are concerned."

Seventy-one Negroes, mostly school children, were arrested yesterday after marching to a school, but 40 teen-agers were released on condition they return to classes.

MISSISSIPPI

Negroes Picket Negro, Gas Drives Group Off

AC 4/6/66

LORMAN, Miss. (AP)—A campus security police officer fired tear gas grenades Tuesday at a band of laughing, taunting high school pupils who roamed all-Negro Alcorn A&M college demonstrating against the school's president.

The Negro youngsters, skipping classes at area schools, were driven from the vicinity of President J. D. Boyd's home by tear gas and pursuing state highway patrolmen.

One boy was arrested, raising the total number taken into custoday in two days to 36.

Boyd, target of the demonstrations, was not available for comment. He has issued no statement concerning the unrest.

Alcorn students, cheering the high school youths on, emphasized that their quarrel with Boyd was over campus policies, not civil rights.

The high school sympathizers, about 50 in number, walked onto the tree-lined campus at midmorning. They circled the president's home, clapping hands and singing civil rights songs.

MISSISSIPPI

Associated Press Wirephoto

CLOUDS OF TEAR GAS DURING DEMONSTRATION AT ALCORN COLLEGE
Mississippi Highway Patrolman Moves Out Young Demonstrator at College Entrance

CLUBS, GAS SCATTER MARCHERS

AJ 27/6/66

LORMAN, Miss. (UPI) — State police used billy clubs and tear gas late Tuesday night to break up a crowd of about 2,000 demonstrators who had engaged officers in a noisy, bottle-throwing melee.

The clash came along a highway running through Alcorn A&M College, where demonstrators have been protesting against the administration of the state-supported Negro college.

A highway patrolman was struck in the face by a flying bottle and about seven demonstrators were cut on the head. Others suffered scratches and bruises as they fled blindly into the woods from the tear gas attack.

The clash was one of the most serious of a series of incidents that brought carbine-armed National Guardsmen to Lorman.

THE GUARDSMEN were ordered into this southwestern Mississippi town by Gov. Paul Johnson Monday night to help keep order and reinforce state troopers.

The Guardsmen, however, were not involved in Tuesday night's melee.

Officers said the clash started after inspector Giles Crisler ordered a force of 50 troopers to disperse the demonstrators who were slow to obey orders to leave the highway.

A group of teen-agers surrounded some of the patrolmen and one grabbed for a rifle held by a trooper. An officer nearby whacked him across the head and a scuffle started. Bottles began flying through the air.

Turn to Page 10, Colume 1

MARCHERS SCATTERED

Continued From Page 1

Crisler ordered the tear gas which broke up the melee.

It was the second incident in which tear gas was used in the last two days.

THERE WAS no violence in three marches earlier Tuesday by Negroes protesting the alleged firing of teachers and dismissal of students at Alcorn for participating in civil rights activities. But Negro youths had scuffled with police and threw bricks and rocks at officers Monday before troopers used tear gas to clear a dormitory.

The largest march Tuesday was turned back at the campus gates by troopers enforcing a court order forbidding demonstrations on the campus. The marchers gathered at a nearby store and sang songs.

Two earlier marches were halted at the gates without incident, and troopers chased about 50 Negroe youths across the campus after they had taunted and jeered the police.

NEGRO leader Charles Evers, organizer of the protests, conferred Tuesday in Jackson with the State College Board, which, he said, had asked him to present a formal list of complaints against Alcorn President J. D. Boyd.

Students have complained that Boyd, a Negro, does not pay laundry and cafeteria employes enough, that he imposed too strict a curfew on coeds and arbitrarily sends students home for minor rules infractions.

NEGROES' CAMP-IN IN CAPITAL ENDS

MISSISSIPPI

They Head for Mississippi After Johnson Leaves

4/8/66

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 7—Negroes who had camped for four days across the street from the White House folded their tents today and prepared to return to Mississippi.

A few minutes after President Johnson had left for Texas for the Easter weekend, Frank Smith, spokesman for the group, told a news conference in Lafayette Square:

"After a week in Washington and several days and nights in this beautiful park, we are returning to Mississippi, to our shanties, our tents and outdoor toilets. The people want to spend Easter, a day of renewed hope, with their children and neighbors."

The campers said they would spend the night in churches and homes of Washington friends and board buses for Mississippi tomorrow.

Mr. Smith said the departure of the President, who could see the campers across Pennsylvania Avenue from his bedroom window, had had nothing to do with their decision to abandon the camp-in. Administration officials, who found the sight of the small tent city somewhat unsettling, denied that any promises had been made for new antipoverty funds for Mississippi.

From Tents to Tents

The 90 Negroes, most of whom are displaced plantation workers, pitched four tents between tulip beds in Lafayette Square last Sunday to dramatize their efforts to obtain $1.3-million in antipovery funds for homes in Mississippi. A number of them have been living in tent cities there.

On hand to hear Mr. Smith were white right wingers who had been carrying on a heated dialogue with the campers, seven liberal Congressmen who stood in front of the cameras looking sad and sympathetic and an assortment of plainclothes security officers.

"Since we have been here we have seen progress of a kind," Mr. Smith read from his prepared statement. "The tulips have begun to bloom outside our tents. The people of Washington who had never known us have become our friends. But the officials we came to see, the very men who bear a public trust to hear us, have been only half listening."

The campers, he said, have become "spiritually fatigued" and "some are physically sick."

A physician said one of the group had developed amoebic dysentery and others had evidence of related diseases that was attributed to unsanitary conditions in the Mississippi tent cities.

"We may be back," Mr. Smith said, "because our faith in America has only been toughened, not tarnished."

More Data Sought

As the tents were coming down, Theodore M. Berry, director of the Community Action programs for the Office of Economic Opportunity, called a news conference in Jackson, Miss. He said that organizations seeking funds for housing had been asked to submit additional information and that a decision would be made as soon as possible.

"In the short history of the war on poverty, Mississippi has been awarded more than $32-million" for various projects, he said. In addition, he said, surplus food will be distributed to 500,000 residents of the state, almost a quarter of the population.

1966. MISSISSIPPI NYT 4/9/66

PROHIBITION VOID, MISSISSIPPI TOLD

State Repealed It by Taxing Liquor, a Judge Rules

JACKSON, Miss., April 8 — Mississippi's 1908 prohibition law — the last such law in the nation — was ruled today by a county judge to have been repealed by the state through the systematic taxing and regulating of illegal liquor.

Judge Charles T. Barber of Hinds County Court made the ruling in the Jackson Country Club raid case, in which $10,000 worth of exotic wines and liquors was carted past guests, including Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr.

Judge Barger also held in his ruling that any effort by the state to make it a crime to merely to possess liquor violated both the State Constitution and the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

He declared that it was "amp demonstrated" that there now "exists in Mississippi a state policy of encouraging, fostering, and promoting the sale of liquor under regulation by the state tax commission.

Decision Is Appealed

Paul Alexander, Hinds Count Attorney, immediately appealed the ruling.

The decisioncame as the State Legislature appeared unable to reach any decision on a bill sponsored by Governor Johnson to end prohibition on a local-option basis.

The effect of Judge Barber's ruling was viewed here as an impetus for a new approach to prohibition in the Legislature from the standpoint that possession of liquor could not be barred by the state while it was taxing the liquor.

Mississippi collected last year $4.5-million in revenues from two state taxes—a 10 per cent "import" tax and a 9 per cent sales tax—and had budgeted approximately $10-million from the same sources.

Judge Barber said in his 36-page ruling that to have ruled otherwise would have meant that "this court would have to bury its head in the hypocritical sands of the past."

He said he had found that the "intent" of the Legislature, through taxing laws on liquor dating back to 1944, constituted repeal of the prohibition law.

The taxing statutes, said the judge, "without question permit the licensing of a person to engage in and conduct the business of dealing in intoxicating liquors in the state of Mississippi."

$10,000 Bond Necessary

State tax commission officials had testified that to do business in the state, an illegal liquor operator had to file a $10,000 bond with the commission. The commission also has a systematic arrangement of payment of taxes on illegal liquor to the state, based on invoices that come from the Louisiana state revenue service.

Approximately 95 per cent of the liquor coming into Mississippi is from Louisiana because that state does not collect a state tax on liquor exports.

Judge Barber, an appointee of Governor Johnson, wrote:

"This court, like the ordinary citizen of this state, stands bewildered in the cross-fire of the prohibition statute on the one hand and the sanctioning and licensing statues on the other. The court is unable to reconcile this conflict in its mind."

He said there had been "clear and intentional discrimination" in the application of the prohibition law. He pointed out that "multitudes of conventions, including those of law enforcement officers openly serve liquor without fear of prosecution."

He said that "a phone call will bring delivery to one's home with a bill at the end of the month."

U.S. Court Orders Mississippi to End $2 State Poll Tax

JACKSON, Miss., April 8 (UPI) — A three-judge Federal Court outlawed today Mississippi's $2 poll tax as a requirement for voting in state and local elections.

The judges ruled that payment of the poll tax to vote was in conflict with the United States Constitution. Mississippi was the last state to be ordered to drop the levy as a prerequisite for voting in state elections.

A recent United States Supreme Court decision declared the poll tax invalid in Virginia.

Walter P. Gewin of Tuscaloosa, Ala., a judge in the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and two United States district judges, Harold D. Cox of Jackson, Miss., and Claude F. Clayton of Aderdeen, Miss., ruled in the case.

The ruling enjoined state officials from requiring or enforcing payment of any poll tax in municipal, county, state or national elections in Mississippi. The poll tax had been collected for many years in Mississippi, with the money going into a "Common School Fund" for educational purposes.

Poll taxes in Alabama, Arkansas and Texas were also recently voided in Federal courts.

The collection of poll taxes for Federal elections had been outlawed with the 24th Amendment. Mississippi and the four other Southern states had held on to the poll tax in state and local elections.

Civil rights workers had viewed the poll tax as a psychological hindrance to the registration of poverty-stricken Negroes and whites who might have otherwise qualified to vote in the state and local elections.

MISSISSIPPI

13 of Klan Held for Jury In Rights Slaying Case

Washington Post 4/13/66

HATTIESBURG, Miss., April 12 (UPI) — Thirteen members of one of the most militant Ku Klux Klan groups in the Nation were bound over to a Federal grand jury today in connection with the firebomb death of a Negro civil rights leader.

The ruling came after a daylong hearing before U.S. Commissioner Jack Pittman.

An FBI agent testified in the packed courtroom that the "White Knights" of the Klan met before the death of Vernon Dahmer and decided to get rid of him because he was "getting too many niggers to vote."

The Federal Government has charged the Klansmen with conspiring to violate Dahmer's civil rights. Murder is not a Federal offense unless the crime is committed on Federal property.

In addition to the 13 bound over to a grand jury, a 14th suspect, Charles Lowe, 23, is free on bond pending grand jury action in Texas.

J. L. Martin, local FBI agent, testified that at least three of the suspects — Cecil V. Sessum, 30; Lawrence Burd, 44, and Benjamin Moss, 52 — admitted being present at a secret Klan meeting when action against Dahmer allegedly was discussed.

Martin said Burd, a Laurel radio - television repair shop operator, quoted Klan leader Sam Bowers Jr., as saying Dahmer was a "big NAACP nigger and he wanted some good men to stop him because he was getting too many niggers to vote."

Martin said the meeting was held in a swampy area in nearby Jones County about two or three weeks before nightriders hurled "Molotov cocktails" into Dhamer's home in the predawn hours of Jan. 10. Dahmer, 58, was former president of the County branch of the NAACP.

13 KLANSMEN HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Mississippians Bound Over in Negro Leader's Murder

HATTIESBURG, Miss, April 12 (UPI)—Thirteen members of one of the most militant Ku Klux Klan groups in the nation were bound over to a Federal grand jury today in connection with the death of a Negro civil rights leader.

The ruling came following a day-long hearing before United States Commissioner Jack Pittman.

An agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation testified in the packed courtroom that the white Knights of the Klan met prior to the death of Vernon Dahmer and decided to get rid of him because he was "getting too many niggers to vote."

The Federal Government has charged the Klansmen with conspiring to violate Mr. Dahmer's civil rights. Murder charges could not be brought against the suspects by Federal authorities because murder is not a Federal offense, unless the crime is committed on Federal property.

In addition to the 13 bound over to a grand jury, a 14th suspect, Charles Lowe, 23 years old, is free on bond pending grand jury action in Texas. All were arrested last month after an intensive Federal investigation into the death of the 58-year-old Mr. Dahmer.

J. L. Martin, a local F.B.I. agent, testified that at least three of the suspects—Cecil V. Sessum, 30; Lawrence Byrd, 44, and Benjamin Moss, 52—had acknowledged having been present at a secret Klan meeting when action against Mr. Dahmer was allegedly discussed.

Mr. Martin said Byrd, a Laurel radio-television repair shop operator, had quoted Sam Bowers Jr., the Klan leader, as saying Mr. Dahmer was a "big N.A.A.C.P. nigger and he wanted some good men to stop him because he was getting too many niggers to vote."

Bowers, 51, of Laurel, was identified by the F.B.I. as the Imperial Wizard of the White Knights.

Mr. Martin said the meeting was held in a swampy area in nearby Jones County about two or three weeks before night-riders hurled Molotov cocktails into Mr. Dahmer's home in the predawn hours of Jan. 10. Mr. Dahmer was former president of the county branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Federal investigator said Sessum had asked Bowers what action should be taken against Mr Dahmer, and that Bowers had replied, "That would be determined at the time when they made the practice run or at the actual time when it would be accomplished."

Mr. Martin said Sessum had confessed having taken part in a "dry run" past Mr. Dahmer's house to get the layout of the area. Mr. Martin quoted Byrd as saying that Bowers had told the meeting he wanted only men willing to go on the actual firebomb attack to go on the dry run.

Mr. Martin also quoted Byrd as saying he had seen two of the suspects, Henry De Boxtel, 29, and Howard Travis Giles, 37, of Ellisville, shortly after he had heard on the radio that the Dahmer home had been burned.

Suspects Reported Seen

The agent said Byrd had told him Giles had said:

"I am in a hell of a fix. My car is down there by the house that was burned with two flat tires. The Feds are all over it."

De Boxtel allegedly advised Giles to report that his car had been stolen.

Mr. Martin also testified that Moss had told of having been called to the special meeting but deciding to bypass the dry run on the Negro leader's house.

The agen said Sessum had made his statement in the presence of several F.B.I. agents at the Hattiesburg headquarters of the F.B.I. However, he said Sessum had refused to sign the typed statement on the ground that it might endanger his life. Sessum looked straight at Mr. Martin during the agent's testimony. Several of the suspects, all dressed in neat dark suits, turned and looked at Sessum when Mr. Martin began to testify, but Sessum sat quietly and showed no emotion.

The other suspects are Clifton Eudell Lowe, 50, father of Charles Lowe; James Franklin Lyons, 33; Melvin Sennett Martin, 33; Charles Richard Noble, 23; Bill Roy Pitts, 22; William Ray Smith, 28, and Deavours Nix, 42.

British Consumers Urge Change in Shopping Hours

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Independent Consumers Association, whose magazine, Which?, advises the housewife on good buys in various commodities each month, has asked the Home Secretary to alter shop-closing restrictions.

It was suggested that the interests of shop employes be safeguarded by statutory limitation of their working hours, rather than by restrictions on shopping hours, as at present.

A survey among subscribers to Which? by the Research Institute for Consumer Affairs indicated that 60 per cent of women in full-time non-manual jobs would like shops to remain open until 10 P.M. on one or more days a week.

At present, shops generally close at 5:30 or 6 P.M. on weekdays, although in large towns a few may stay open until 7 or 8 P.M. This means that the majority of full-time women workers have to crowd their daily shopping into their lunch hours.

MISSISSIPPI SCORES U.S. IN SPITE OF AID

NYT 4/19/66

Group Finds Public Criticism and Private Bids for Help

By JOHN HERBERS

Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss., April 18—A special task force set up in February by the Administration to supply inreased economic assistance to Mississippi has found the state a paradox.

While publicly condemning the Administration and Great Society programs, state political leaders are quitely accepting and seeking Federal help.

Mississippi has for some time been the nation's most subsidized state in terms of the return on its tax dollars—$3 received for every $1 paid in Federal taxes. It is now second only to Kentucky in the per capita receipt of antipoverty money.

Yet Mississippians frequently hear statements like that made a few days ago by Representative John Bell Williams, who is considered a possible candidate for Governor next year.

The antipoverty program, he said, "is the most colossal and collectively crooked raid on the treasury in this nation's history."

Decided by Johnson Aides

The Administration's decision to do more for Mississippi despite such opposition was made in Washington by the President's Economic Opportunity Council a few days after displaced plantation workers took over vacant buildings at Greenville Air Force Base and remained there until they were forceably removed. The council is the domestic equivalent of the National Security Council.

Council members found both acute need and a high potential for civil unrest in areas like the Mississippi Delta, a 14-county area of fertile soil where machines are fast replacing Negro workers.

The Labor Department sent a manpower specialist, Carl Shugaar, here to speed job training projects. Mr. Shugaar conducted a survey of three Delta counties and found poverty and unemployment much worse than previous statistics had indicated.

There has been little concern about unemployment in Mississippi because, for one thing, Government statistics have shown the state compares favorably with the national average, which has been declining. Mr. Shugaar said this was meaningless because the Government was measuring insured unemployment. Not counted were thousands of farm and domestic workers who had lost their jobs or were making a couple of dollars a day.

14,000 Interviewed

Fourteen thousand persons in Washington, Bolivar and Sunflower Counties were interviewed. They were said to represent a cross-section of the poorer farm and town dwellers. Of these, 64 per cent reported their annual income at $500 or less, or a family income of less than one-half of $3,000, which the Government has established as its poverty level.

The general attitude of these people, one official said, was disillusionment with both the local establishment and the Federal Government and a feeling that those who need help the most are not being reached.

"While they were telling you this," he said, "they would beg you to deny it, an indication that they had not lost all hope."

As a result of the Administration's efforts and cooperation by Gov. Paul B. Johnson, the Federal effort has increased sharply. A log jam of Mississippi projects in the Office of Economic Opportunity was broken. The O.E.O. has now funded $32-million in antipoverty programs for the state. Manpower training programs of the Labor Department have been allotted $12-million.

During the current six-month period, $24-million in surplus food will be distributed in Mississippi under the most liberalized program of its kind in the nation. Last month, more than 500,000 persons, or one-fourth of the population, were given food furnished by the Agriculture Department.

Free food has been available for some time but many counties in Mississippi said they had no funds to pay the distribution costs. The O.E.O. funded $1.6-million under a project called H.E.L.P. to cover the distribution costs for six months and give jobs to almost 500 people.

The quota is 27 pounds of food per person per month compared to a national average of 15 to 20 pounds. Mississippi is the first state to have either a surplus food or food stamp program in every county.

Something of the degree of poverty is indicated by the requirements for receiving food. A family of four must prove its monthly income does not exceed $155 and an individual $85.

Aside from humanitarian aspects, some political leaders are said to be working for increased Federal assistance because of the change in political climate due to the growing Negro vote. But they are not doing so publicly because it is not yet politically expedient.

In fact, the forthcomng race in which Senator James O. Eastland is being challenged by Representative Prentiss Walker, a Republican, is already showing signs of developing into a contest to decide which candidate is most opposed to the Great Society.

Dean of Faculty Named at Amherst

Dr. Prosser Gifford, assistant professor of history and director of the five-year bachelor's program at Yale, today was named dean of the faculty at Amherst College.

Dr. Gifford will combine his administrative duties with limited teaching at Amherst and active participation in the four-college Asian-African studies program carried on jointly by Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges and the University of Massachusetts.

Under the Yale program that he heads, students spend a year living and working in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Dr. Gifford is a specialist in African history.

Professor Robert B. Whitney will continue as Amherst's acting dean until Dr. Gifford assumes his new duties in January, 1967.

Dr. Prosser Gifford

Bible Week Slated for October

The interreligious Laymen's National Committee has announced here that it has designated the week of Oct. 17 to 23 as National Bible Week this year, Religious News Service reports.

5/1/66

Republicans Ready to Hold First Primary of Century

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., April 30—Another precedent is being set by Mississippi's developing Republican party — its first primary election in this century in this state.

Two Republicans are in the June 7 primary for the party nomination for United States representative from the Fourth Congressional district in the November general election. It is the post being relinquished by the first Republican elected to Congress in Mississippi since the Reconstruction Era in 1964.

Up until the 1964 presidential election in which the Republicans polled 87 per cent of the votes, they have been ineligible for public payment of their primaries. As a result, the few candidates — and they have been few — they have fielded have been by committee nomination without opposition.

Prior to the 1966 legislative session — which enters its 18th week Monday — a party had to poll at least 33 1-3 per cent of the votes in the preceding presidential election to qualify for public payment of its primaries. Incidentally, the Legislature, made up mostly of Democrats, was forced to bail their party out of paying for its primaries as it mustered only 13 per cent of the votes in 1964. That was done by making the percentage apply to the last governorship election in which the Democrats polled 62 per cent and the Republicans 38 per cent.

ONE OF THE Republicans seeking the party nomination in the Fourth congressional district is the first Republican elected to the state legislature since the early 1900s. He is State Rep. L. L. McAllister of Meridian.

Opposing Rep. McAllister, a Certified Public Accountant, is Travis Buckley of Bay Springs, now serving as Jasper County prosecuting attorney, a post he won as a Democrat. Mr. Buckley represents most of the 13 men arrested in the death of Negro Vernon Dahmer at Hattiesburg last January. Those arrested have been identified as Klansmen by the FBI.

MISSISSIPPI

The Republicans are running candidates for Congress in all except Democrat Rep. John Bell Williams' Third district. Rep. Williams backed the Republican electors in 1964 and as a result, was stripped of his Democratic seniority in the Congress, but was retained within the caucus.

A LEAF WAS taken out of Sen. Robert Kennedy's Democratic book by the Republicans by entering a candidate for the First congressional district who resides in the second district. He is Thomas Hal Phillips of Kossuth, a brother of Rubel Phillips, the party's gubernatorial entry in the 1963 general election. He is opposing Rep. Thomas Abernethy (D. Miss.).

State Sen. S. B. Wise of Jonestown, holding his present office as a Democrat, has switched over and is the Republican candidate in the Second congressional district in opposition to Rep. Jamie Whitten (D. Miss.).

In the Fifth congressional district of the 76-year-old Democratic dean of the delegation, Wm. M. Colmer, the Republicans are offering James M. Moye, an optometrist of Laurel.

THE JUNE 7 Democratic primary has its own political problems.

The biracial Freedom Democratic party, not recognized under state law, has entered candidates for the five Congressional posts in the primary being held under auspices of the long-recognized Democratic party of Mississippi. However, the Freedom Democrats served notice they do not subscribe to the regular party's segregation principles nor go along with refusal to support the principles and policies of the parent Democratic national party.

Tangled Liquor Situation Awaits High Court Answer

5/8/66

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., May 7 — Mississippi's 1908 Prohibition law, ignored with official sanction in 59 of the 82 counties and staggering from two legal body-blows, is poised for a come-back or the knockout punch in the arena of the state supreme court.

The issue reached the court during the week after being declared void by Circuit Judge Russel Moore of Hinds county who sustained an earlier ruling by County Judge Charles Barber that legislative enacted taxes on the illegal commodity and state tax commission licensing of liquor dealers had repealed the 58-year-old law by implication.

The challenge arose from a February sheriffs raid on the plush Jackson Country Club which netted $10,000 in liquor and champagne which had been bought for use at a reception for the king of the annual Junior League carnival ball. Charles Wood, club manager, was arrested for possession.

COUNSEL for the club appealed the arrest on grounds the state's recognition of liquor through its taxing processes and control of dealers by the tax commission had repealed the prohibition law by implication. The club was upheld by County Judge Barber whose ruling on appeal to Circuit Judge Moore was affirmed leading the state appeal to the supreme court.

MISSISSIPPI

Supreme court affirmation of the lower courts would make liquor legal in all 82 counties with no state control law to step in. It would also void the taxes which net the state $4.5 million annually. It would be a wide-open situation.

Apparently with that situation likely, the dry-majority Senate Temperance Committee just before adjournment of the 18th week of the biennial assembly surprisingly reported a House-approved bill authorizing counties to hold local elections to "vote from under the 1908 prohibition law." The bill, which takes precedence over a Senate measure for a statewide referendum on legalization of strict enforcement, places control in the state tax commission and preserves the liquor taxes.

THE HOUSE county-option bill is ready for floor action with backers optimistic it will be approved.

Big question still looming is whether Gov. Paul Johnson would sign a county-option bill after stating on numerous public occasion she is committed to a statewide referendum to determine the question of legalization or strict enforcement. Under the governor's plan, it would take a statewide 'wet' vote before counties could call later local elections on legalization.

Basis of the optimism is that Gov. Johnson's late father-governor in 1942 permitted a bill authorizing counties to "vote in" beer to become law without his signature and the possibility the present chief executive might use that as an 'out' for letting the county-option measure become law without his signature. Prior to the 1942 beer "vote in" law counties that had outlawed beer under a 1934 legalization statute could not later reverse themselves. There was no law for "vote in" elections.

GOV. JOHNSON is reportedly concerned over the situation following the two court rulings. Incidentally, both the judges were originally appointed by Gov. Johnson, one to fill a vacancy and the other when a new circuit judgeship was created in Hinds county.

Two matters concern the governor. If the 1908 law is held void by the state supreme court, it means all 82 counties will be 'wet' with no control. The other is the loss of $10 million revenue in the new biennial period commencing July 1.

Plan to Abolish Primaries Passed to Gov. Johnson

5/15/66

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., May 14—Mississippi is on the verge of trying something new in politics — an open - election in which candidates of all affiliations, as well as those without party allegiance, will run on the same ballot with the two leaders entering a tell-tale runoff.

The legislature, winding up the 19th week of the no-time-limit biennial session, approved the plan which does away with political party primaries. The final 'OK' is up to Gov. Paul Johnson after he receives the proposal. His position is uncertain at the moment.

However, after he finished three races in 1963 — two for the Democratic nomination and then the general election in which he bested Republican Rubel Phillips the governor was all for an open-election. Since the issue has been before the legislature he has remained non-committal.

REASONING BEHIND the innovation in campaigning has not been made clear by its proponents. Some contend it is to let Republicans who have been masquerading as Democrats and voting in the latter's primaries — there is no party registration statute in Mississippi — run for office and continue to vote without identifying themselves partywise.

MISSISSIPPI

Others see in it a possible avenue of making it more difficult for former Gov. Ross Barnett, who plans to run for another term in that office next year, to pull a Mrs. Lurleen Wallace. A poll by forces opposed to the former governor and almost everything he espouses placed him out front as of now. Fact is, the survey indicated two of those planning to seek the office—Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin and Treasurer William Winter —too far behind for comfort.

THEN THERE are those who feel the open-election may re-unite the national Democrats and the Mississippi Democrats against Republican foes and sustain the right of the congressional delegation to continued recognition in the national Democratic caucus. Although Mississippi's delegation runs as Mississippi Democrats, whose party organization has disclaimed allegiance to the parent group's policies and platforms, when they assemble in Washington they align themselves with the national leadership.

Originally, the plan was for candidates to run without any party identification. However, it was altered by the Senate to require candidates to identify themselves as to party or as independents.

Sen. Ed Pittman of Hattiesburg, whose uncle was defeated for mayor by a Republican last year, warned the plan would benefit the Republicans. Republican Sen. William Corr of Sardis, first member of that party elected to the state Senate since the turn of the century, took the position the open - election would cripple his group.

SEN. CORR said adoption of the plan would result in a court challenge since he said it is contrary to the state constitution calling for nomination by political party primaries. He said it would result in the federal courts writing Mississippi's election laws "and you know who would be the loser then."

Sen. W. B. Alexander of Cleveland, one of the sponsors, said the open-election would permit an elector to "vote for the man and not the party."

Sen. Talmadge Littlejohn of New Albany, said it would force "those who have been masquerading as Democrats and voting Republican in national elections to come forward and decide themselves as the Republicans they are."

Vote Plan Curbs Negro Advantage

5/22/66

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau, Memphis Commercial Appeal
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., May 21—Increased registration of Negroes as qualified electors under the federal voting rights act is the "why" of two new election bills approved by the General Assembly which ended 20 weeks in session Friday. Final adjournment is not expected for at least two weeks.

Both measures involve the elections of county officials in the 410 beats of the 82 counties — supervisors and school board members. Those officials are now elected by voters in their individual beats —there are five to a county— and not in countywide balloting.

Reason for the change is that in many beats (districts) Negro voters now outnumber the whites. The new system is designed to minimize the advantage of Negroes in the beats where they are now in the majority by permitting all voters in the county to make the selections.

MISSISSIPPI

Retained under the new system, however, is that a candidate must reside in the beat he seeks to represent.

IN ORDER that the system outlined in the constitution of 1890 for beat election of supervisors and school board members may be retained in counties where white majorities remain, the county-wide plan is left to the supervisors to be put in effect. It is discretionary with the supervisors to change the system unless 20 per cent of the electors petition for its submission to the voters for their ratification.

If the new system is to be invoked, the supervisors must act before November as changes must be announced 12 months before the next general election for filling of the offices. Fact is, the new system must be authorized this year because under a legislative approved—but yet to be accepted by Gov. Paul Johnson—'open - election' plan next year's elections will be in October and not August as now specified.

The pending 'open election' system eliminates political party primaries for nominations with all candidates running on the same ballot, but with identifying party affiliation or independent status. The two high candidates enter a runoff three weeks later.

EVEN WITH countywide balloting on beat offices, some legislators anticipate the election of Negroes to county offices. That is likely in at least 19 counties where Negroes of voting age outnumber the whites. However, Negro registration, like that of the whites, has not kept pace with those qualified for elector status.

Some legislators are also predicting the possibility of Negroes winning legislative seats in next year's elections. In several since enactment of the Federal voting rights act and assignment of Federal commissioners to register Negroes, the complexion of the voter has changed.

MISSISSIPPI 1960

NEW YORK TIMES, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1,

Senate in Mississippi Kills Bill To Move Negroes Out of State

JACKSON, Miss., May 30 (AP)—A bill to relocate low-income Mississippi Negroes in other parts of the nation at state expense was put aside Monday by the state Senate.

A 19-to-15 vote to postpone the idea indefinitely ended all possibility that the measure would come up again before the session ends in about two weeks.

The bill, one of its authors, Robert Crook of Ruleville, said, "was designed to assist those persons in our state who have been displaced from agricultural work because of modern farm technology."

"It would be purely voluntary on the part of those who have a low per-capita earning because of their unskilled status," he said.

Mr. Crook never identified "these persons" as negroes but he left no doubt of his meaning.

"The single most fundamental problem that Mississippi has faced in the past is that certain of its citizens are nonproductive and primarily users instead of producers, he said.

"That is the reason that our taxes are among the highest in the United States and that our percapita earning is the lowest."

Mr. Crook said a relocation commission would have assisted persons "who desire to take advantage of better than 50 per cent higher welfare payments in Northern and Western states and to utilize Federal homestead lands that are in great abundance."

"This will also allow certain of our other states an equal opportunity to carry th ecross that the Southern states have had to carry for the last hundred years," he said.

"Most certainly the great critics of the South in the North will join hands with liberal Congressmen and help in assisting these people to become useful and productive members of their home states," he declared.

Senator Ed H[illegible]y of Canton, an area of recent civil rights disturbances and large turnouts of Negro voters, opposed the bill.

"We are all aware of what this bill intends to do, but do you think it is constitutional for public funds to be used for personal use as moving expenses?" he asked.

Senator George Yarbrough of Red Banks, president pro-tem of the Senate, took the floor to answer yes.

Bill Carraway of Leland in the deep Delta area, also opposed the measure. He asked: "Have you got a reciprocal agreement with other states where they can send us some of theirs?"

John Clark Love of Kosciusko called the bill "bad" and said he didn't know "of a single community in Mississippi that wouldn't help a family move."

Paul Lee of Carthage, who is a candidate for Congress, said: "You're coming up here today to say we ought to spend $150,000 to send people out of Mississippi when we have jobs for every able bodied man and woman in the state.

"This is a bad bill. . . . The fellows that vote for this bill had better start thinking seriously."

If the bill had passed, a $150,000 financing measure would have been offered to fund a relocation commission.

Ex-Marine Dies in Plane Crash

Special to The New York Times

FAIRFIELD, N. J., May 31—A 28-year-old student pilot was killed today when the plane he was flying crashed on a nearby golf course soon after taking off from Curtiss-Wright Airport here. The pilot was James Cheatham of 388 Orange Road, Montclair, a Marine Corps veteran who had taken up flying recently. The rented plane, a single-engined Cessna 150, plunged nearly six feet into the ground near the 16th tee of Green Brook Country Club shortly after 8:30 A.M.

PHONE PE 6-5100 . . . OPEN LATE THURSDAY NIGH

MISSISSIPPI

Poverty Meet Set Saturday

Jackson C-L 6/4/66

Poverty programs now in operation in the state will be discussed here Saturday at a statewide conference designed to inform Mississippians about federally - sponsored benefits.

The public conference is slated at 9 a. m. in the Heidelberg, according to Kenneth L. Dean, director of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations, which is sponsoring the meeting.

A dozen government officials will outline the program's progress and goals, Dean said, and answer questons about poverty programs in Mississippi.

"Deep in the Heart of Dixie" is the theme of the conference, because, in Dean's words, "In the heart of every Southerner there is a desire to help the victims of poverty."

Counties Ready to Decide Position on Legal Liquor

6/5/66

By KENNETH TOLER

Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to The Journal-Constitution

MISSISSIPPI

JACKSON, Miss., June 4 — Mississippi is getting set for county legalization of liquor after 58 years of statewide prohibition and 22 years of official flouting of the statute with taxes giving the contraband quasi-legal recognition. Officials expect at least 20 of the 82 counties to ultimately vote from under the 1908 prohibition law which will remain in force in those political subdivisions maintaining the status quo.

The law, signed two weeks ago by Gov. Paul Johnson, becomes operative July 1. It permits 20 per cent or 1,500 electors of a county so desiring to petition for an election to vote from under the 1908 prohibition law.

Counties taking no action will remain dry and Gov. Johnson has emphasized that with the added enforcement authority—use of the highway patrol — given him they will "be dry without any compromise whatsoever."

First elections are expected the latter part of July as the law authorizes the county boards of supervisors to call one 15 days after receipt of a petition. Some counties are ready to circulate petitions as soon as the law goes into effect in order to secure an early vote.

ADMINISTRATION and enforcement of the law are vested in the Tax Commission which has the exclusive wholesale rights in the state. It will issue licenses and permits to retail package stores and operators of hotels, motels, restaurants, cafes, private clubs and lounges for by-the-drink sales solely within municipalities and tax commission "certified" resort areas of counties voting to legalize. A "certified" resort area is one with adequate law enforcement.

The first official action of the three-member governor - appointed tax commission looking to activation of the law was the selection of Earl Evans Jr., of Canton, former FBI special agent and one-time legislator, as director of the Alcoholic Beverage Control division created under the law. Mr. Evans resigned as director of the Commission of Budget and Accounting to take the directorship.

Meanwhile, the legislature has authorized the tax commission to borrow up the $3 million for its initial inventory of liquor which will be repaid from retail sales. Warehouses for the state's stock are being secured, with the first expected in Jackson at the Central Farmers Market where facilities are available.

AN ESTIMATED 40 agents are expected to be under Mr. Evans command. He is also authorized to call on the governor for use of the highway patrol in enforcement of the new law.

Officials said the state will not buy the estimated $1 million in liquor stocks held by the 18 wholesalers who have been recognized by the state and liquor on hand in the 1,700 retail outlets from which the state has been collecting $4.5 million annually in two special taxes — a 10 per cent import levy and a special nine per cent sales tax.

Fiscal officials estimate the state will take in $16.650 million in revenue in the approaching biennial period starting July 1. However, after deducting expenses of the wholesale operation and enforcement provisions, only $3.3 million new money is expected to accrue to the general fund in the initial two-year period. Profits from wholesale operations have been estimated at $6.880 million.

A TAX BILL which will replace the existing levies is to reach the legislative floors in the coming week —the 23rd of the general assembly. It proposes $7.20 a case excise tax on distilled spirits, $3.60 a case on sparkling wine and champagne and $1.32 a case on regular wines, exclusive of the state's 3½ per cent sales tax.

Gov. Johnson assured Mr. Evans the full cooperation in enforcing the law from the state level and hailed his appointment as "one of the strong original keys for the prospects of an impartial administration of the division."

MISSISSIPPI

VOTE CALLED 'FINE' BY FREEDOM PARTY

Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss., June 8—Encouraged by what it called "a fine showing" in Tuesday's primary elections in Mississippi, the Freedom Democratic party said it would run Negroes for county and state offices next year.

"We are not going to be like Alabama," said the Rev. Edwin King, chaplain at Tougaloo College, who was an unsuccessful candidate for a Democratic nomination to Congress. "We expect to elect 15 to 20 members of the State Legislature, four or five sheriffs, and a number of county officials."

Mr. King, who is white, is the Freedom party's "National Democratic Committeeman." He regularly attends meetings of the National Committee of the Democratic party, but he is not allowed to vote.

He said Negro leaders were somewhat disappointed that the total number of Negro voters yesterday in Mississippi did not come up to early estimates of 50,000. The shooting of James H. Meredith in northern Mississippi on Monday and the presence of armed deputy sheriffs near polling places kept many Negroes from voting, Mr. King said.

Many Negroes, he said, could not be convinced that the deputy sheriffs were assigned to keep order at the polls.

Freedom party candidates carried at least two counties in the elections yesterday that saw Senator James O. Eastland and four Representatives renominated.

Terrorists Kill 5 in Aden

MISSISSIPPI

Armed Pair Seized In Path of King

AC 6/9/66

By JAMES K. CAZALAS

COLDWATER, Miss. (UPI)—Police arrested two armed white men Wednesday when they stalled their truck in the path of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his 150-man Mississippi March.

The men were taken away, the truck moved and the marchers swung on to a point just outside Senatobia, Miss., where they broke up for the day.

They walked a total of six miles on the resumption of the 200-mile march from Memphis, Tenn., to Jackson which James Meredith started Sunday. King took it over after Meredith was wounded by shotgun blasts Monday.

The march got started late because of a furor over Meredith's release from William Bowld Hospital in Memphis. Negro leaders claimed he was evicted.

Meredith collapsed in tears while reading a rambling statement to newsmen, was taken out of the hospital in a wheelchair. He was to return to his New York City home Thursday to recuperate.

The day's brief march began late in the afternoon, when King led his followers over the Coldwater River bridge, with dozens of state, county and federal officers guarding them. This was about eight miles south of the spot where Meredith was shot.

Half a mile beyond the bridge, they walked into the little village of Coldwater.

Two white men in a pickup truck drove toward the line of marchers and stopped the truck only six feet in front of King.

Several state troopers rushed up and ordered the truck out of the way.

"I won't move," the driver said. The troopers yanked open the doors, grabbed the men and pulled them out. On the seat of the truck was a .22-caliber rifle.

It was the only incident of the brief march down Highway 51. About 15 of the marchers were white, and near the end of the line a nattily-dressed Negro man carried a small boy.

The march took up one lane of traffic, while state troopers funneled all cars into another lane.

Negro leaders charged that Meredith was given only five minutes to get out of the hospital Wednesday.

Hospital officials said Meredith's doctor signed papers authorizing his discharge Wednesday morning. He had been hospitalized recovering from the effects of about 20 16-gauge shotgun pellets.

Meredith's attorney, A. W. Willis, said that with only five minutes remaining before the checkout deadline, officials went to Meredith and told him "we expect to have our room."

David Hoxie, the administrator, claimed Negro leaders, including King, demanded that Meredith be treated "like the President of the United States."

RACES IN ACCORD IN FAYETTE, MISS.

M/Mississippi

Boycott Ends as Integration Comes to Rural Area

6/10/66 NYT

FAYETTE, Miss., June 9 (AP) — This tiny southwest Mississippi town appears to have surmounted its many racial problems.

A Negro economic boycott, which severely crippled Fayette's white merchants, is over. A long list of Negro grievances have been met by the whites.

White and Negro leaders worked out the problems over a period of months. Announcement of the settlement was fade yesterday.

Fayette is the county seat of rural Jefferson Parish, which has 2,489 whites and 10,142 Negroes, according to the 1960 census.

Stores have been fully desegregated over the period and Negroes have been hired in many establishments.

Civil rights "patrols" that jotted down names of boycott-breakers are gone. Plate-glass windows marred by soap-scrawled signs announcing "this store under boycott" have been washed.

Grievances Are Solved

Charles Evers, state field director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said that a 19-point grievance list, presented to the town last December, has been completely resolved. M Evers made the announcement at a meeting with town officials in City Hall.

"No longer will there be talk of what's best for the Negro or what's best for the white," Mr. Evers said. "We'll now discuss what's best for Fayette and Jefferson County. We're going to start working for what's right."

Mayor R. J. Allen said:

"What we need now is a little bit of forgiveness on each side. I would like to see Jefferson County as a place where the white and colored work together. Let's go forward as friends."

City parks and playgrounds have been desegregated, as are all public buildings. Nine of 10 service stations have closed the third rest room that formerly was reserved for Negroes.

The police force has been integrated and is now composed of one white patrolman and one Negro. Both have equal authority.

Mr. Evers said that city employes have been instructed to use courtesy titles when addressing Negroes, and merchants have promised that their workers will use such titles also.

"We're not going to answer to 'shine, boy, auntie, uncle, or such anymore" Mr. Evers said.

Roads in Negro districts will be improved and Negro funerals will receive a police escort when requested by the family of the deceased.

Mr. Evers, who last month purchased a commercial lot in Fayette, said that he would erect a grocery store, but doubted that he would have any white trade. "But, I'll never discriminate against any white person who wants work," he said.

Treasury Aide Resigns

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 9 — President Johnson has accepted the resignation of Merlin N. Trued as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs. No successor has been selected. Mr. Trued will join the Central National Bank of Cleveland Wednesday as senior vice-president for monetary affairs.

MISSISSIPPI

Rights Leader Fears March Will Hurt Dixie Negroes

AC 6/11/66

By GENE ROBERTS

(Copyright 1966 by the New York Times Co.)

SARDIS, Miss. — The civil rights march to Jackson encountered sharp criticism Friday from a Mississippi Negro leader, who says he wants assurance that it will not be used to "exploit the state for money and publicity."

"I don't want this to turn into another Selma where everyone goes home with the cameramen and leaves us holding the bag," said Charles Evers, Mississippi field director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people.

He charged that "someone" had signed his name to a march "manifesto" without his permission after he had declined to sign the document "because it was too critical of President Johnson."

"And I feel," he added, "that the money that's going to be spent on the march would be more beneficial to Negroes if it were spent on voter registration and voter education."

Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, defended the march which was organized after James Meredith was wounded while on a trek from Memphis to Jackson to dramatize an appeal for increased Negro voter registration.

"This will be the best thing that ever happened for Negroes in Mississippi," McKissick said. "It will show the plight of Negroes in Mississippi and help them stand up and show they are not afraid."

Meanwhile, civil rights marchers and Mississippi State Highway Patrolmen smoothed over a tense encounter Friday as both groups began trying to put some organization into the long trek into Jackson.

Tempers flared early in the day after patrolmen refused to let cars driven by civil rights

Continued on Page 2, Column 6

Rights Leader Fears March Will Harm Dixie Negroes

Continued from Page 1

marchers and newsmen stop within a mile of the marching column. The patrolmen said the step was necessary to keep motorists moving freely on Highway 51.

Marchers complained that the traffic discipline was so severe that it was preventing them from getting doctors and nurses, supplies and march leaders to the marching scene.

The marchers broke ranks and crowded around troopers who were ordering Robert Green of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to move on. Ralph Abernethy, one of Dr. Martin Luther King's top aides in the conference, succeeded in getting the marchers back into formation and then quickly arranged a conference with Charles Snodgrass, head of the investigative branch of the highway patrol.

Snodgrass complained that the marchers had been heckling his troopers, and Abernethy contended that the troopers had been calling the marchers "Niggers."

"I promised that I would take every step to keep the marchers nonviolent and he (Snodgrass) said that he would caution his men," Abernethy said.

MARCHERS DETOUR FOR VOTING DRIVE

Mississippi

Help 50 Mississippi Negroes to Register—Trek a Third of the Way to Jackson

6/12/66

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

BATESVILLE, Miss., June 11 —The civil rights march through Mississippi sparked political interest today among Negroes in Panola County.

The marchers rounded up 200 to 300 local Negroes, walked to the 88-year-old county courthouse and persuaded more than 50 Negroes to register to vote.

That was a small triumph for the marchers because Negro registration had been lagging here.

After a spurt of interest last year, applicants to register had dwindled to only a handful each month this year.

The hero of the day was a 106-year-old retired farmer named El Fondren. He walked shakily into the registrar's office leaning on a cane. He emerged 10 minutes later and was hoisted to the shoulders of two young Negroes and carried into the cheering throng.

Painless Registration

A civil rights worker asked him how it felt to register.

"It's all right," Mr. Fondren replied, seemingly surprised that it had been painless. "Registering is all right."

The marchers left Batesville at 11 A.M., as the sun began to bake the asphalt of U.S. 51, and headed south toward Jackson.

They had spent the night in local homes. This morning they met at a Negro church and walked about three-fourths of a mile to the courthouse, picking up local Negroes on the way.

After getting the local residents registered, the marchers walked about a mile and a half to U.S. 51 to resume their demonstration.

Outside the courthouse, the crowds were addressed by Robert Green, an aide to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Continued on Page 82, Column 1

MARCHERS HELP 50 REGISTER TO VOTE

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

"This," Mr. Green said, "is the very courthouse of all the evil that has confronted Negroes throughout the South for years and years. This is the place where Negroes came only to pay taxes."

The march passed the 60-mile mark today. It began Sunday at Memphis as a personal pilgrimage of James H. Meredith, the Negro who desegregated the University of Mississippi in 1962.

Mr. Meredith was shot and wounded Monday near Hernando, Miss. He expects to rejoin the march, now being conducted by civil rights activists, late next week.

Some leaders of the march now think it may take three more weeks to reach Jackson —163 miles from here. The marchers intend to stop at several county seats and encourage voter registration as they did here.

Despite the recent lag, Negroes registered in Panola County more successfully than in most Mississippi counties during the last two years.

The county has about 7,000 whites and 7,000 Negroes of voting age.

A spokesman for the Justice Department said that in April the county had 6,419 whites and 2,060 Negroes registered.

Relaxed Atmosphere

The Mississippi march thus far has been more relaxed than the Selma to Montgomery march in 1965.

Where the Alabama marchers were protected by the United States Army, the Mississippi marchers are dependent on state highway patrolmen and local policemen.

Despite a few outbreaks of hostility between the high spirited civil rights activists and the grim-faced troopers, there has been little tension and not much evidence that the marchers are afraid. White hecklers have been few.

The whites have expressed their disgust in other ways.

Virtually all the white restaurants in Batesville were closed yesterday as the march entered the town.

A leaflet was distributed during the night bearing the signature of the Ku Klux Klan. The leaflet declared, "We have been invaded by the biggest band of renegades in this country today."

However, the Klan urged nonviolence.

"The best way to deal with this bunch of scum and alley rats is strictly a hands-off policy," the leaflet said. "Remember these people are just waiting for you to do something to one of them so they will have reason to raise all the hell they want to. Do not do anything to cause this."

Hundreds of Negroes watched this morning's procession from the shade of great oak, walnut and magnolia trees on Batesville's Panola Street. Many joined the march, and their courage was rewarded with applause from the marchers.

"Come on, don't just stand there," called the recruiters from the march. "Join your brothers."

The march was led today by two Mississippi Negroes, both officials of the predominantly Negro Mississippi Freedom Democratic party.

They were Robert Miles of Batesville, chairman of the Panola County Freedom Democratic party, and the Rev. J. C. Killingsworth of Enterprise, chairman of the Clarke County Freedom Democratic Party.

Governor's Plane for Meredith

Claude Sterrett, who was with James H. Meredith when he was shot, said here last night that Mr. Meredith would return to Mississippi on Thursday in an airplane to be provided by Governor Rockefeller.

Mr. Sterret made the statement before speaking at a mass street rally at 127th Street and Nenox Avenue. According to police estimates, 300 persons attended the rally "to protest the brutal shooting of James Meredith." The rally was sponsored by the Community Council on Housing.

Mr. Sterrett, who described himself as an associate of Mr. Meredith, said that Governor Rockefeller first offered the use of the plane to Mr. Meredith's wife, June, after the shooting. However, after Mr. Meredith returned to New York, the Governor repeated the offer to him, according to Mr. Serrett.

In his talk at the rally, Mr. Sterrett called for volunteers to accompany Mr. Meredith on his renewed march in Mississippi. He said that Mr. Meredith would require that the marchers "must be black and must be men."

Mr. Sterrett added that "Meredith wants you to know if he receives Federal aid and protection he will not carry a gun."

However, Mr. Sterrett also said, "We must join forces if necessary and take arms—we are at war."

Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, asked the rally to "pledge yourself to walk down the road in Mississippi if you really believe. They're waiting to see how many from Harlem will come down and march. The only way to get freedom is to take it—no one is going to give it to you."

Associated Press Wirephoto

CENTENARIAN HAILED FOR REGISTERING: El Fondren being hoisted to shoulders of participants in the James Meredith march yesterday at Batesville, Miss., after he registered as a voter. He is a retired farmer.

MISSISSIPPI

Associated Press Wirephoto

TWO HIGHWAY PATROL CARS AND WALKING PATROLMEN LEAD WAY FOR MARCHERS
Walking in Mississippi on U.S. Highway 51; Officers Route Traffic Around Them

Negro Leader Questions Aims of Meredith March

BATESVILLE, Miss., June 11 (AP)—The Meredith "march against fear" staged a whooping voter registration rally—and stirred new debate among Negro leaders.

In a new tactic, the 250 Negroes and whites spent two hours in a heavily guarded, hand-clapping, singing demonstration in front of the white columned Panola County Courthouse in Batesville.

Leaving a line of Negroes awaiting to be registered, the column then swung out of town, back to U.S. 51, headed south toward Jackson on the seventh day of the trek. Jackson, the state capital, is 154 miles from Batesville.

"I don't feel marches from Memphis to Jackson are going to get Negroes registered," said

Johnson, Gov. Paul Johnson and Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach in telegrams that "We are going to offer protection (to the marchers) since the officers of the law won't give it."

About 40 highway patrolmen were among the police that guarded the Batesville rally. Groups of whites stood quietly watching as the demonstrators sang and clapped in the warm sunshine.

Negro leaders lifted Sam Flowers, a retired sharecropper, and carried him into the registrar's office as the first appli-

Christian Leadership Conference, meeting with Chicago civil rights leaders, said, "the cowardly attempt on the life of James Meredith has created a national emergency which has focused our immediate energies on Mississippi.

"It has always been basic to the civil rights movement that any act of violence toward the movement of civil rights workers must be met with a massive display of nonviolent direct action. Thus we must complete the march Meredith so bravely began," King said.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

U.S. FLIERS TO MEET REDS ON MOON?

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 11 (AP)—Russia's Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space, predicts that the Soviet Union will beat the United States in the race to the moon.

"When U.S. spacemen go to the moon, they will surely meet Soviet people there," Gagarin said in an interview with the Bulgarian newspaper Narodna Armiya here. Gagarin came to Sofia for the seventh congress of the Communist-led World Federation of Democratic Youth.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Associated Press Wirephoto

TWO HIGHWAY PATROL CARS AND WALKING PATROLMEN LEAD WAY FOR MARCHERS
Walking in Mississippi on U.S. Highway 51; Officers Route Traffic Around Them

Negro Leader Questions Aims of Meredith March

BATESVILLE, Miss., June 11 (AP)—The Meredith "march against fear" staged a whooping voter registration rally—and stirred new debate among Negro leaders.

In a new tactic, the 250 Negroes and whites spent two hours in a heavily guarded, hand-clapping, singing demonstration in front of the white columned Panola County Courthouse in Batesville.

Leaving a line of Negroes awaiting to be registered, the column then swung out of town, back to U.S. 51, headed south toward Jackson on the seventh day of the trek. Jackson, the state capital, is 154 miles from Batesville.

"I don't feel marches from Memphis to Jackson are going to get Negroes registered," said Charles Evers, state director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"INSTEAD OF spending all that money on airplane tickets and campouts, we should spend it on registration," he added. "That's what Meredith was shot for."

Evers, the dominant civil rights leader in Mississippi for more than a year, made his comments in Natchez, Miss., as the rally was under way in Batesville.

Told of his views, Negro leaders with the marchers promptly disagreed. Robert Green, education director for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), said:

"I would say this: We registered about 50 to 70 people in Batesville and I think the purpose of the march is to assist Negroes in overcoming the fear that has been so much a part of their lives." The county circuit court clerk said 53 Negroes registered.

James H. Meredith, who broke the racial bar at the University of Mississippi in 1962, started the march with a few companions in an effort to spur registration. He was wounded by birdshot near Hernando and is recuperating in the East.

THE MAN CHARGED with the shooting, Aubrey J. Norvell, 40, of Memphis, Saturday was granted a habeas corpus hearing to be held in Holly Springs next Tuesday, his attorney said. Norvell, charged with assault with intent to kill, had been jailed in lieu of $25,000 bond.

A militant Negro organization, the Deacons for Defense and Justice, told President Johnson, Gov. Paul Johnson and Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach in telegrams that "We are going to offer protection (to the marchers) since the officers of the law won't give it."

About 40 highway patrolmen were among the police that guarded the Batesville rally. Groups of whites stood quietly watching as the demonstrators sang and clapped in the warm sunshine.

Negro leaders lifted Sam Flowers, a retired sharecropper, and carried him into the registrar's office as the first applicant—following with El Fondren, who gave his age as "106 and nine months."

Circuit Court Clerk Ike Shankle, who doubles as registrar, asked Flowers his age. "I was born in August," said Flowers. But he didn't know which year. When he gave his age as 68, Shankle said, "that would make it 1897, is that about right?"

FLOWERS, unable to write, signed his name on the registrar with an "X."

Before he was hoisted up for the triumphant return to the crowd outside, Fondren, leaning on his cane, walked into the sheriff's office where a clerk asked: "Have you come for your dinner?"

She reached into a drawer, got out some silver and gave it to the old man. It was pretty much routine procedure, he said.

Mrs. Hazel Weed, the clerk, said it has been a long standing practice in her office "to give a little money from our Coke fund to those old folks who come into town once or twice a year. We've know these old Negroes all our lives. They don't have much. It helps a little."

Every one in the office contributes to the fund, she said.

She gave Fondren 50 cents. Mrs. Weed said the man's great granddaughter telephoned her later to say that Fondren is 107 years old.

King Postpones Rally in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 11 (UPI)—Dr. Martin Luther King has postponed a giant civil rights rally and march on Chicago's City Hall from June 26 to July 10 because of the "national emergency" in Mississippi.

The head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, meeting with Chicago civil rights leaders, said, "the cowardly attempt on the life of James Meredith has created a national emergency which has focused our immediate energies on Mississippi.

"It has always been basic to the civil rights movement that any act of violence toward the movement of civil rights workers must be met with a massive display of nonviolent direct action. Thus we must complete the march Meredith so bravely began," King said.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

U.S. FLIERS TO MEET REDS ON MOON?

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 11 (AP)—Russia's Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space, predicts that the Soviet Union will beat the United States in the race to the moon.

"When U.S. spacemen go to the moon, they will surely meet Soviet people there," Gagarin said in an interview with the Bulgarian newspaper Narodna Armiya here. Gagarin came to Sofia for the seventh congress of the Communist-led World Federation of Democratic Youth.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Onward They March and It's No Fun

MISSISSIPPI

By JONATHAN RANDAL

Special to The New York Times

GREENWOOD, Miss., June 17 — The Mississippi whites come in the evenings to stare at the two 80-by-40-foot rented tents and mutter about "the circus."

Pitched almost daily, the tents have lodged hundreds of Negro and white civil rights activists participating in what has come to be called the "Meredith March" from Memphis to Jackson, Miss.

"This is no picnic — it's a grind," said Hal York, a 35-year-old waiter who took a leave of absence from Lindy's Restaurant in New York to join the march the morning after James H. Meredith was shot 11 days ago.

The march is not supposed to be fun, and it isn't. The rights workers return exhausted from a day of marching along hot Mississippi highways or from voter registration drives among frightened Negroes in hostile towns in the Mississippi delta.

Fitful Sleep

Packed into their stuffy tents — one for men, the other for women — the marchers sleep fitfully on blankets or in sleeping bags, often awakened by noisy late arrivals.

For many Northern liberal whites and a few Northern Negroes, the march provides a moral togetherness.

"When I'm marching I like myself," said Mrs. Barbara Kay, a Negro civil rights worker from Englewood, N. J. "It's more real, than playing bridge or having cocktails at home." One long-time civil rights aide said:

"The whites have brainwashed themselves to accept everything. They don't complain much."

Mail deliveries and telephone calls home are the exceptions for the marchers, who are isolated for their own good from the hostile white community.

Luggage is misplaced. Meals occasionally arrive late. Cars fail to show up for missions. Showers and baths are nonexistent at many stopovers.

Yet, discomfort and confusion are borne with the dash of combat infantrymen who are too proud to wear their decorations.

Nor have the white marchers bridled at what has been described as "Negro paternalism." One evening the Negro woman in charge of the kitchen detail explained to a mainly white audience in the tent that they should no longer throw away plastic spoons and forks.

"If I'm saying anything to offend you, she she said, "it's time you packed up because that would mean you are not sincere."

How many marchers have been offended and left is impossible to determine. Both local and out-of-state marchers drift in and out. Some arrive in groups of as many as 80. Others come alone. They stay for a few hours, or a few days, or join the small hard core determined to march into Jackson on June 26.

The hard core is formed around three major civil rights groups—the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee—which are represented permanently by field workers and intermittently by their leaders. Rival rights leaders move in and out of the march and almost never spend the night at camp.

The rank and file includes a sprinkling of white and Negro clergymen, a couple who want to "free Washington, D.C.," at least one Marxist and a 23-year-old girl artist who sketches the marchers.

Relatively few participants of last year's march in Selma, Ala., have appeared. The most prominent are the one-legged James Leatherer, who marches a few miles on crutches every day, and Henry Smith, a Mississippi Negro who wears his rose-colored singlet given the Selma demonstrators who marched from beginning to end.

Trudging along the left-hand shoulder of the road, the marchers are preceded by air-conditioned Mississippi highway patrol cars and followed by a truck bearing mobile toilets, a station wagon used as an ambulance and more patrol cars.

Marchers' outfits vary from T-shirts, jeans and Bermuda shorts to madras jackets, seersucker suits and even an old tuxedo worn by a Chicagoan.

Many Straw Hats

They wear an assortment of headgear that includes many straw hats and handkerchiefs and one Vietnamese peasant's straw hat sported by the wife of a Canadian professor.

Army surplus canteens slung on Sam Browne belts dangle from many hips, and almost everyone has taken to carrying a towel to wipe away the perspiration.

Many men wear heavy duty brown boots. The women favor sneakers and sandals, although three pretty Negro girl students from Rust College in Mississippi made a brief appearance in high heels.

Their departure from the march was greeted with laughter. But most of the time the sun is too hot for much laughter or singing.

Dr. Alfred Klinger of Chicago and his aides keep moving up and down the line handing out salt pills and sun tan lotion from what he calls his "psychological refreshment stand."

Still, one Negro civil rights worker managed to draw laughs when he made up an impromptu verse that went:

"All you Northern liberal white folks
With all that excess fat,
A few days on the Mississippi highway
Will sure take care of that."

Most of the marching songs are old civil rights standards by now. But some white marchers were momentarily upset when a Negro began singing a song apparently based on "Burn, Baby, Burn," the anti-white battle cry of Negroes in last year's Watts riot in Los Angeles.

The whites relaxed as the song, told in ballad form, turned into a plea to Negroes to educate themselves. It ended:

"Burn, baby, burn the midnight oil. Learn, baby, learn."

Marchers Scream For 'Black Power'

AC 6/18/66
MISSISSIPPI

By JAMES K. CAZALAS

GREENWOOD, Miss. (UPI)—Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and black nationalist leader Stokely Carmichael led a 600-man march on this delta town's courthouse Friday with their followers screaming for "black power."

King, who returned from Chicago to rejoin the Mississippi "freedom" walkers, told the noisy throng:

"We are tired of being beaten, murdered and shot down. This community happens to be a symbol. It was here that Randolph Blackwell of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference was shot at, and we are here today to tell you we are not afraid."

Carmichael added his voice to King's.

"We have been marching too long. We have been beaten too long. We have been jailed too long."

On the way out of town they had to pass a gasoline station where an attendant was hosing down the service area. Some of the marchers stepped onto station property and as they did so the attendant lifted the hose and doused them with water.

He then raced into the station and returned with a billy club sticking from one hip pocket and a pistol jammed in the other.

Carmichael, who was near the rear of the line of march, started walking toward the attendant with an irate expression, but two highway patrol cars quickly rolled up and the troopers told Carmichael to go on.

The troopers talked to the attendant but did not arrest him.

Carmichael told his followers they should organize themselves so they can use their political power.

MARCHERS STAGE MISSISSIPPI RALLY

6/18/66

Dr. King Addresses 1,000 From Courthouse Steps

By GENE ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

GREENWOOD, Miss., June 17—Mississippi civil rights marchers led 800 Greenwood Negroes on a protest march to the Leflore County courthouse today and for the second consecutive day had a close brush with violence.

The trouble came when a white service station attendant turned a water hose on the marchers, then ran and got his pistol and billyclub after a white marcher had yanked the hose from his hand and sprayed him with it.

More than a hundred Negro children fled screaming down Main Street at the sight of the pistol and club, but older marchers crowded around the gun-wielding man.

Andrew Young, one of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr's top rights aides, rushed into the milling crowd and persuaded the angry marchers to return to the march column.

Newsmen also had a close encounter with danger. It developed when the drivers of a truck that carries newsmen ahead of the marchers became curious over the contents of a bubble gum carton that had lain on the back of the truck for two days.

Poisonous Snake Killed

The driver untied the string, opened the carton and leaped back in fright as a two-and-a-half-foot water mocassin darted from the package and slithered near newsmen. Reporters and cameramen quickly killed the poisonous snake.

Tension again developed when Leflore County sheriff's deputies shoved marchers from the lawn of the Leflore County courthouse to prevent them from holding a rally at the base of the Confederate memorial.

Dr. King turned the marchers away from the grass after deputies had begun unsheathing their nightsticks.

"We're ready to let you fill up all the graveyards in Leflore County," Hosea Williams of Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference told deputies before turning away with Dr. King.

"I'm so tired, so tired of all this," said Stokely Carmichael of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Two hundred marchers accompanied by 800 Greenwood Negroes, then crowded onto a concrete walkway and spilled over into the street to hear addresses by Dr. King and other rights leaders from the courthouse steps.

back in fright as a two-and-a-half-foot water mocassin darted from the package and slithered near newsmen. Reporters and cameramen quickly killed the poisonous snake.

Tension again developed when Leflore County sheriff's deputies shoved marchers from the lawn of the Leflore County courthouse to prevent them from holding a rally at the base of the Confederate memorial.

Dr. King turned the marchers away from the grass after deputies had begun unsheathing their nightsticks.

"We're ready to let you fill up all the graveyards in Leflore County," Hosea Williams of Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference told deputies before turning away with Dr. King.

"I'm so tired, so tired of all this," said Stokely Carmichael of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Two hundred marchers accompanied by 800 Greenwood Negroes, then crowded onto a concrete walkway and spilled over into the street to hear addresses by Dr. King and other rights leaders from the courthouse steps.

Helping the sheriff's deputies keep the marchers away from the Confederate memorial were six Negroes who townspeople said were trustees from the county jail. Sheriff's deputies denied it.

Many marchers and local Negroes were chanting "Black power, Black power," a cry taught them by Mr. Carmichael at a rally last night when he said: "Every courthouse in Mississippi ought be be burned down to get rid of the dirt."

But on the courthouse steps, Mr. Carmichael was less angry and said:

"The only way we can change things in Mississippi is with the ballot. That's Black power."

Dr. King Cites 'Black Power'

Dr. King, who had avoided use of the term, said "black power" was "the ability to make the power structure say 'yes' when it wants to say 'no.'"

"When we get this power," he said, "we will try to achieve a society of brotherhood."

Mr. Williams said the ballot also had other uses.

"Get that vote and put black faces in those uniforms," he said. "Get that vote and whip those policemen across the head with it."

Then he looked at the sheriff's deputies and said, "If we can die in Vietnam, we can die in Mississippi."

At another point in his speech, he turned to newsmen and said, "I don't think the newsmen can interpret me because they aren't black."

After the rally, as the marchers were walking through the downtown area on their way to Itta Beena, the service station attendant began spraying them with his water hose. Hal York, a white marcher from New York, grabbed the hose and turned it on the attendant, who refused to identify himself.

The police told the attendant to put up his pistol and nightstick, but no arrest was made.

Twice today, Byron de la Beckwith, whose two trials on charges of having murdered Medgar Evans, a rights leader, ended in hung juries, drove up to newsmen and asked if they had seen Charles Evers.

Charles Evers, Mississippi field director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, is the brother of the slain man. At a rally late last night, Mr. Evers noted that Greenwood was the home of Mr. Beckwith and said:

"If I ever lay my eyes on him, if I ever get my hands on him, he'll be through harassing Negroes."

Oklahoma Marchers Tire

CHICKASHA, Okla., June 17 (AP)—A dwindling band of rain-soaked, footasore rights demonstrators switched to cars today to complete their 100-mile march from Oklahoma City to Lawton, Okla.

"I never thought it would be this tough," said State Senator E. Melvin Porter, a leader of the group.

About 70 demonstrators, mostly Negro teen-agers, left

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JUNE 19, 1966.

MOVEMENT

Mississippi March Puts Rights Drive Into Evangelist Phase

By GENE ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

GREENWOOD, Miss., June 18 — As the civil rights march through Mississippi moved into the state's "cotton country" this week, a smiling white marcher looked at all the confusion about her.

"It's a grand show," said Anna Barth, 23 years old, of Chicago, "and it might drive some of the fear out of Mississippi."

Few of the marchers would argue with the observation made by Miss Barth, who is the granddaughter of Karl Barth, the theologian.

It has become increasingly clear this week that civil rights leaders, who once moved from town to town like circuit riders, have no entered their third evangelist phase.

Their foray into Mississippi can lay only a tenuous claim of being a march. Instead, as it ends its 12th day, it is becoming the oldest floating civil rights movement in the business.

It is unlikely that even one marcher will be able to say that he trod the entire, circuitous route to Jackson from the spot near Memphis where James H. Meredith was shot on June 6. At times the march has dwindled to as few as 34 marchers, while 100 to 200 civil rights volunteers fanned out ahead to act as advance men and to urge Negroes to come out and join the march, to attend the nighttime rallies, and to register and vote.

But at times it has swelled to as many as 1,000 singing, shouting marchers as Negroes flocked out of their homes to join in the walking or to crowd around the two circus tents that the marchers erect at night for sleeping.

It's a new concept—a civil rights movement on foot — and no one planned it. It simply evolved.

Today the march began as usual, with some marching and others fanning out ahead of the column. Not far from the starting point two and a half miles from Itta Bena, the marchers passed a falming cross—the symbol of the Ku Klux Klan—and some of them crowded about it to pose for newspaper photographers and television cameramen.

Remain Impassive

Every day the marchers attempt to demonstrate to Mississippi Negroes that they are not afraid of the white man. Twice they have encountered groes must make allof the major policy decisions in civil rights activity and do the organizing of Negroes into a powerful political power base in Mississippi, other parts of the South and in Northern slums.

While most of the civil rights organizations still believed white liberals could be useful to the movement at times, the student committee (known as "Snick") doubts the wisdom of allowing whites to participate in the march, and feels that if they want to help they should organize poor whites and draw them into a loose political coalition with Negroes.

Complaint on oMney

This has led Dan Akron, a 17-year-old white youth from Biloxi, Miss., and Chicago, to mill about the campsite at night complaining that "Snick has cut me out."

Sitting near him yesterday was James Phipps, a young Mississippi Negro liberal, who complained, "If yo usay a couple of radical words around Northern white liberals they cut off the money they been sending to the movement."

"But we ain't going to win our freedom from the Southern white man," he said, "and then loose it agai nto the Northern white man."

Marchers come, spend a couple of days around the marching column and the campsite, and then pass on again, saying that they hope to return agai non Jue 26 for the entrance into Jackson.

Among the marchers have been Mrs. Aleen Kessler, a 72-year-old white housewife from Cleveland, who said she has been wanting to march for years but did not do it until "the shooting of Meredith became the last straw." Hank Werner of the Milwaukee Organizing Committee — a peace group—drifted in and out.

A. Robert Cohen, 23, of Philadelphia was in and out of the march for a while talking of "independent" Marxism, the kind, he said, which is not affiliated with a party. Carl W. Peetz, who is white and from New York, piled into a car with six others and drove 26 hours to join the march for two days and demonstrate that there is "interracial harmony."

Dr. Homer A. Jack, director of the department of social responsibility of the Universalist-Unitarian Association, was here to "loo kover the march" and to determine whether to urge Unitarian ministers to join in.

He said he found the march to be "amorphous and open-ended," but that he felt it was true to "nonviolent principles" and that whites were welcome.

The march is diverse and unorthodox, Dr. King has conceded, but he says it will "continue to roll on to Jackson, awakening the Negroes of Mississippi."

The march is so fluid and was so hastily organized in the aftermath of the Meredith shooting that food sometimes fails to reach the marchers. Twice this week, lunch was delayed and on one occasion breakfast never arrived at the campsite.

"We've got all kinds of food stacked up against a wall in Memphis," said Stoney Cook of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, "but no one has taken time to go get it. They would rather stay here where the action is and march and awaken Mississippi Negroes and get them out to register."

ing the oldest floating civil rights movement in the business.

It is unlikely that even one marcher will be able to say that he trod the entire, circuitous route to Jackson from the spot near Memphis where James H. Meredith was shot on June 6. At times the march has dwindled to as few as 34 marchers, while 100 to 200 civil rights volunteers fanned out ahead to act as advance men and to urge Negroes to come out and join the march, to attend the night-time rallies, and to register and vote.

But at times it has swelled to as many as 1,000 singing, shouting marchers as Negroes flocked out of their homes to join in the walking or to crowd around the two circus tents that the marchers erect at night for sleeping.

It's a new concept—a civil rights movement on foot — and no one planned it. It simply evolved.

Today the march began as usual, with some marching and others fanning out ahead of the column. Not far from the starting point two and a half miles from Itta Bena, the marchers passed a falming cross—the symbol of the Ku Klux Klan—and some of them crowded about it to pose for newspaper photographers and television cameramen.

Remain Impassive

Every day the marchers attempt to demonstrate to Mississippi Negroes that they are not afraid of the white man. Twice they have encountered white men with pistols. Twice they have remained impassive while law enforcement officers shoved them—once from the highway to free the flow of traffic, and again from the courthouse lawn in Greenwood.

At night, the parade ends and the camping site suddenly takes on the atmosphere of an old-fashioned, Southern tent revival.

Last night, hundreds of Negroes flocked around the tents at a public park for Negroes in Greenwood to hear the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King and Hosea Williams of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Stokely Carmichael, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Again and again their voices rang out, telling Negroes that their only salvation lies in the ballot, and that they must register and then vote together to elect Negro officeholders and put Negroes into the police and sheriff's uniforms now worn by whites.

After the speechmaking, the marchers passed collection plates among the audience, as white evangelists have done thousands of times in the South, and collected $342 for food and camp supplies. The money came, Mr. Williams said, "from the poorest people in the country."

When the audience drifted away, a marcher switched on a transistor radio and let the throbbing rhythms of rock 'n' roll music cut through the night air. Cleveland Sellers, the student committee's bearded project director, began dancing on the dewy grass, doing "the frug."

It is like that at night around the campsites. Often a white marcher will tune up his guitar and begin plucking out the newest civil right song, "Burn, Baby Burn," which was written by Jimmie Collier, a staff worker in Dr. King's Chicago movement.

'The New Direction'

It tells the story of a Negro youth who woke up one morning and wanted to fight, but all he had was a match and so he said,, "Burn, baby, burn." But Dr. King came to town and converted him, telling him to "burn, baby burn—burn that midnight oil and learn, bary, learn."

But for the most part, the marchers simply talk about what is becoming manifest during the march as "the new direction of the movement." It is the growing feeling that Ne-

6/19/66

Failure to Act on Revamp Puts Issue Before Courts

By KENNETH TOLER

JACKSON, Miss., June 18—The legislature's failure to reapportion itself or provide the machinery for that accomplishment in the 23-week record - setting biennial session leaves realignment of the 82 counties to a 3-judge federal court composed of Mississippians.

There is no alternative short of a special legislative session before October which Gov. Paul Johnson said he will not convene. The governor's position is that the legislature had the opportunity — and time—to do the job and didn't.

October is the "unofficial" deadline given the legislature by the court to make the change which must be completed before next year's elections for state offices from governor down to constables in the 410 districts of the 82 counties.

THE LEGISLATURE completed its biennial session work last Saturday midnight after a desperate effort, spearheaded by House Speaker Walter Sillers of Rosedale, to outline a course by which it would reapportion along the "one man-one vote" guidelines laid down by the U.S. Supreme Court. It failed.

Before the session convened on Jan. 4, a suit was filed by the biracial Freedom Democratic party for federal court reapportionment to give equal value to each individual's vote. Hearings were delayed to afford the legislature an opportunity to reshape its representation on the premise it is a matter first for the legislature, and failing, then for court intervention.

Basis of the pending suit is the population inequities stemming from assignment of one representative to each of the 82 counties and allocaton of the remaining 40 on a population formula. The 52 senate seats are based on geography without regard for population.

The state constitution of 1890 provides that the legislature may, by two - thirds vote in each branch, adopt a reapportionment plan but it is subject to ratification by the voters. A plan based on the "one man-one vote" formula was offered the house, but was rejected.

MISSISSIPPI

A new approach was taken after Speaker Sillers had conferred with the three federal judges—Circuit Judge J. P. Coleman, the former governor, and District Judges Harold Cox and Dan Russell. Mr. Sillers said the "judges listened while I did all the talking."

FROM THAT MEETING came a proposed amendment to the constitution to permit the legislature, by three-fifths vote, to reapportion without the necessity of its submission for voter ratification. The move was to gain its adoption and submission to the voters in August with assurance from Governor Johnson a special session would be convened in September before the "unofficial" October deadline.

The House approved the amendment, but it ran into difficulty in the Senate. It was on the floor three times, once lacking one vote of the required two-thirds for adoption, and then being finally defeated shortly before the final work session last Saturday midnight by two votes.

MISSISSIPPI

AP 6/19/66

2 Marchers Swap Blows In Quarrel Over Campsite

BELZONI, Miss., June 18 (AP)—A fistfight broke out between two Mississippi civil rights marchers Saturday after leaders decided not to demonstrate over a Negro college refusing use of its campus as a campsite.

Other Negroes quickly broke up the fight after a few blows had been struck and the marchers went into Belzoni for a nighttime voter registration drive.

They paraded through the streets chanting "Black power now! Black power now!" and urged local Negroes to join in a march to the courthouse.

The heavy Negro population in the community of 4,200 was further swelled by the influx of field hands, in town for Saturday night.

Glenn Freedom X of Washington, D.C., a bearded member of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, walked through the crowd saying, "Everybody go everybody go. Don't be afraid, don't be afraid."

FOUR FEDERAL registrars waited in the basement of the post office. In the first hour, 50 Negroes were in line.

Freedom X, who refused to give any other name, was in the fistfight with Lester Hankerson of Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

With no big name leader present, secondary officials had held a roadside conference on whether to proceed to Belzoni where property of the Green Grove Baptist Church was offered as a tentsite. Mississippi Valley State College, at Itta Bena, had refused to let the marchers stay there overnight.

Freedom X and several other workers from the militant SNCC demanded the marchers return to the college and stage a demonstration. Hankerson's group favored continuing to Belzoni for the rally. The fight followed.

The marchers rode into Belzoni after covering 15 miles.

KING HAD left the march earlier for a speaking engagement in Detroit. Neither Floyd McKissick, director of the Congress of Racial Equality nor Stokely Carmichael, head of SNCC, were in the march line.

As the marchers rode in trucks south from Greenwood to start Saturday's walk, they passed a flaming cross, the fiery symbol of the Ku Klux Klan. They stopped at the spot and knelt in prayer.

"I think it is a disgrace," said Alphonso Harris, a Southern Christian Leadership Conference worker from Albany, Ga.

"It is evident that the whites in the delta have no respect for the rights of Negro citizens," said George Raymond of Canton, Miss. "Obviously, it means we don't have any protection if they can burn a cross in daylight."

It was the second day the marchers have encountered open hostility. In Greenwood Friday, a man sprayed water on the march column, a sound truck played a Klan song and children waved confederate flags in their faces.

The marchers—about 100 of them — set out Saturday not knowing where they would spend the night. Permission had been refused to use the grounds of Mississippi Valley State College, a Negro school in Itta Bena, for their tents. The school's president sent a one-sentence letter denying permission.

WHILE THE procession plodded down State Highway 7 toward Belzoni, 27 miles south of Itta Bena, three members of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) met with Dr. J. H. White, the Negro president of the college.

Bob Smith, a SNCC leader, told newsmen afterward the group made five requests: To be allowed to pitch the tents on the campus, a hot meal, use of cooking and shower facilities and that Negro leaders be allowed to speak on the campus.

"At every point we were refused," Smith said.

JACKSON IN SIGHT ON RIGHTS MARCH

Mississippi

City, 75 Miles Away, Said to Be Reachable by Sunday

6/21/66

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

MIDNIGHT, Miss., June 20—The civil rights march through Mississippi moved within 75 miles of Jackson today and marchers said they would reach that city by Sunday.

While planning ahead for Jackson, the state capital, which is their destination, the marchers walked 12 miles, desegregated the courthouse rest rooms at Belzoni in Humphreys County, and continued to increase voter registration among Mississippi Negroes.

A spokesman for the Justice Department estimated that the marchers had persuaded 2,500 to 3,500 Mississippi Negroes to register to vote since they began walking 14 days ago.

Until the march, voter registration had been at a standstill in the state since April.

Many Not Registered

Between August (when the Federal Voting Rights Act was passed) and the end of March, about 100,000 Negroes registered in Mississippi. This raised the total of Negroes who had registered to 120,000 to 130,000 and left about 300,000 of voting age still unregistered.

After a night and morning of canvassing by marchers in Humphreys County, about 150 Negroes were registered by Federal voting examiners. This was about a third as many as the Federal examiners had registered in the entire six months that their office had been open in the county.

In Granada County, voter registration nearly tripled while the marchers were there. There were 697 registered Negroes there when the marchers entered, and about 2,000 during the weekend when a voter registration team left to rejoin the marching column.

Today, the marching column dwindled to 150. Plantation workers, who swelled it to 1,200 persons yesterday, returned to the cotton fields where they receive from $2.50 to $4 a day for hoeing cotton and from $6 to $10 a day for driving tractors.

As the marchers passed a cotton field east of Midnight—a small cluster of sun-baked stores, houses and cotton gins along Route 49—George Simmons leaned on his hoe and smiled.

"It's a fine thing, a fine thing," he said of the march. He was convinced, he said, that somehow the march would result in a wage increase for him and his wife, Lizzie.

His hopes rose during the weekend when he heard a rumor that one plantation owner had already increased wages to $5 a day for hoeing.

But if the story is true, it has had no effect yet on Mr. Simmons's wages. He said he received $3.50 a day for working in the fields, and that his wife got $3 for chopping along beside him.

To arouse enthusiasm among the plantation workers, the marchers began carrying freshly manufactured pennants today that said: "Mississippi March—1966—For Federal Registrars, Aid to Farmers, Jobs."

60 Patrolman on Hand

But some marchers carried signs of their own design. "No Viet Cong Ever Called Me 'Nigger,'" said a placard carried by Vince Young, a 41-year-old Negro, who is a member of the Brooklyn branch of the Congress of Racial Equality and a bus driver for the New York Transit Authority.

The marchers started the day by walking from a campsite in Belzoni to the Humphreys County courthouse there, where they had hoped to gather around the Confederate memorial for a rally.

But they changed their plans when confronted by 60 highway patrolmen—the largest force of patrolmen thus far in the march—and eight Negro trustees from the Parchman State Penitentiary.

The patrolmen and the trustees were summoned by the Humphreys County Sheriff's Department to help enforce signs that warn of a $25 fine for anyone who walks on the grass surrounding the monument.

Robert Green of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told the marchers that he thought that the sheriff's department had brought in the trustees to pit Negro against Negro.

And at his suggestion, the marchers turned away from the grass and walked up the sidewalks and into the courthouse, where they desegregated the rest rooms.

Then some of the marchers fanned out through the town to persuade Negroes to register to vote. One who went to the Federal voting examiner's office was David Carpenter, a 75-year-old retired sawmill worker.

"Well, I couldn't read and neither write," said Mr. Carpenter is explaining why he was registering for the first time, "and time was when I couldn't register."

White Man Shot as Battle Flares in Mississippi March

MISSISSIPPI AC 6/22/66

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UPI). Negroes and nightriding assailants traded bullets Tuesday night. A white man was wounded in the first gun battle between civil rights workers and segregationists.

The battle erupted after a fist fight between whites and Negroes here and a new stand by militant civil rights leaders calling for "black power" and second thoughts on the past "non-violent demonstrations."

Earlier Tuesday, a memorial march led by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in honor of three slain civil rights workers in Philadelphia erupted into a stone-throwing, fist-swinging battle.

BULLETS FLY

Philadelphia police said a white man, Stanley Stewart, was wounded in the fusilade of bullets that whined from passing automobiles into the headquarters of a civil rights group.

Stewart was taken to the Neshoba County Hospital and treated for superficial wounds and released.

The FBI has entered the case.

Ralph Featherstone, a field secretary for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, said more than a dozen shots were fired into the local headquarters for the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party. He said some of the 25 persons inside the brick building returned the fire with pistols.

SHOOTING CONFIRMED

Philadelphia police confirmed that they had reports of shooting in the area.

Featherstone said the shots were fired from three automobiles.

After the second car passed, he said, the civil rights workers returned the fire. He said they believed they hit the third car.

A half dozen marchers and 10 white onlookers engaged in a wild, tumbling brawl that police had to struggle to break up.

The marchers were jeered and stoned, and became the target for whites hurling firecrackers.

Several television camera crews were roughed up and their equipment shattered. A teen-age marcher was brushed by a speeding truck.

King said he held the federal government and the state of Mississippi totally responsible for the violence.

A contingent of the Mississippi "freedom" walkers had come to Philadelphia to conduct a memorial march for James Chaney, Michael Schwerner, and Andrew Goodman, three civil rights workers slain here June 21, 1964.

With King in the lead, the marchers made their way to the Neshoba County jail where they found their way blocked by a line of deputies armed with slapsticks, billy clubs and hatchet handles.

About 300 whites lined the streets, heckling the marchers.

King, speaking over the exploding firecrackers, told the crowd:

"We are not afraid. We are going to work together for freedom. We are here to save America. We are here to save you. Why don't you whites understand this?"

Then about 10 firecrackers exploded together, King started chanting: The Lord is our Shepherd, The Lord is our Shepherd." Others took up the chant.

Associated Press Wirephoto

IN PHILADELPHIA, MISS.: Deputy Sheriff Cecil Price, left, one of 18 accused in case of three civil rights workers killed in 1964, blocks march led by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., right, and the Rev. Ralph Abernathy.

NYT 6/22/66

A Mississippi Mob Stones Negro March Headed by Dr. King

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, Miss., June 21—A jeering white crowd attacked a line of Negro marchers led by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. here today.

Fist fighting raged for about three minutes before the police halted the attack. When the march resumed, whites hurling bottles and stones surged after it.

Two television cameras were smashed and their operators manhandled. Several photographers and a writer were jostled or struck.

"This is a terrable town," Dr. King said as he led the angry, frightened marchers back to the Negro community. "There is a complete reign of terror here."

Later, after flying to Indianola, Miss., for a rally, he said he and other rights leaders would return to Philadelphia and "straighten the place out," using "all our nonviolent might."

The march and a service here today were a memorial demonstration for three civil rights workers killed near Philadelphia in 1964.

Deputy Sheriff Cecil Price, one of 18 white men accused of a conspiracy that resulted in the slayings, was confronted by Dr. King today.

"You are the ones who had Schwerner and those fellows in jail?" Dr. King said to Mr. Price.

"Yes, sir," the deputy replied.

The three rights workers, Michael Schwerner and Andrew Goodman of New York City and

Continued on Page 25, Column 1

White Mob Attacks Negro Marchers Led by Dr. King in Philadelphia, Miss.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

James Chaney of Meridian, Miss., were released from the Neshoba County jail before they were slain on June 21, 1964.

Their bodies were buried in an earthen dam near Philadelphia.

Deputies Watch Melee

During the melee today, only one Mississippi highway patrol car was on the scene. Philadelphia's 10 policemen, including two Negroes, and a group of Neshoba County deputy sheriffs watched most of the violence without moving to stop it.

At least two Justice Department lawyers and an undetermined number of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were present as observers.

About 20 persons left the Mississippi march begun by James H. Meredith this morning and traveled to Philadelphia by automobile to join Dr. King. They left the march at Louise in the Mississippi Delta.

The march here began from Mount Nebo Baptist Church, in the Negro community. About 250 Negroes and a handful of white civil rights workers marched toward the Neshoba County Courthouse to hold the memorial service.

They walked a dozen blocks down dusty, red clay streets into the downtown section.

The first indication of trouble came as they strolled, singing and shouting civil rights slogans, up a hill toward the courthouse square.

A white man in a black sedan drove past the line of march. Suddenly, he applied his brakes and skidded toward the marchers.

Then two young white men in a red convertible roared down the line, missing the demonstrators by inches. The driver braked, the tires squealed, and the car lunged toward the march.

No one was struck by either car.

A young white man and two white girls sped past in a blue convertible. They stopped, and the girls yelled insults.

"I wouldn't dirty my goddamned car with you black bastards," one shouted.

A Swinging Club

Moments later, a pick-up truck with two white men cruised past the line. While one man drove, the other swung a wooden club at the marchers. Negroes in the line said later some had been struck.

The truck brushed near the marchers, and a young Negro fell to the pavement, his face twisting. Some witnesses said the truck struck him. Others said it did not.

The marchers burst into angry shouts.

Two or three policemen were at that point. They did nothing to stop the harassment by automobile.

A large van came next. Richard Perez, a cameraman for the Columbia Broadcasting System, stood in its path with his back turned. Oden Kitzmiller, his sound technician, grabbed his collar and jerked him aside as the van roared past.

When the marchers reached the county jail, a block from the courthouse, Dr. King and the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, executive vice president of Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, led a prayer service. The marchers knelt under the scowl of Deputy Price and about 10 other men armed with pistols and nightsticks.

Whites Block Street

About 100 white men gathered, closing each end of the narrow street beside the jail. A few wore business suits and carried clubs.

As the demonstrators prayed and listened to speakers, one young white man turned a waterhose on them.

A heavy-set white woman, identified as the wife of the jailer, turned the water off. She shook a finger in the youth's face and scolded him.

As the marchers walked toward the courthouse square, the same young man grabbed a television camera, jerking it and the cameraman to the ground. The camera was damaged. The cameraman, George Romilly of the American Broadcasting Company, was not hurt.

The police made no move to stop the youth as he fled.

Dr. King said to Police Chief Bruce Latimer, "We have a serious problem with law enforcement." He said the police had done nothing to protect the marchers.

Chief Latimer replied he was doing all he could.

The marchers held a short memorial service in the street in front of the courthouse after Deputy Price refused to let them on the courtroom lawn.

By then, more than 300 whites, almost all men, had gathered. They jeered during the speeches and songs.

Dr. King, raising his voice, said:

"In this county Andrew Goodman, James Chaney and Mickey Schwerner were brutally murdered."

"I believe in my heart that the murderers are somewhere around me at this moment."

Marchers murmured agreement.

"They ought to search their hearts," Dr. King said.

"I want them to know that we are not afraid. If they kill three of us, they will have to kill all of us."

The Negroes applauded. The whites hooted.

"I am not afraid of any man," Dr. King said. "Whether he is in Mississippi or Michigan, whether he is in Birmingham or Boston. I am not afraid of any man."

Perspiration glistened on his brow.

Singing and Yelling

The Negro marchers sang, "We Shall Overcome." The white yelled derisively.

The tension burst into violence as the marchers headed back to the Negro community.

A camera was pulled from Wendell Hoffman of C.B.S. so violently that his shoulder was wrenched. Other whites knocked to the ground the equipment of Gene Sellers, the sound technician in the crew.

Some 25 white men surged over the television men, swinging, and then flailed into the line of march, their eyes wild with anger. The Negroes screamed.

One white man brandished a five-foot wooden club. Another held a hoe. Negroes separated him from his companions and mauled him.

Several young Negro men struck back with their fists.

Many of the whites remaining on the square moved slowly toward the fighting. After two or three minutes the police broke up the center of the melee, and the march moved on.

Dr. King was 100 yards away, leading the column.

Dr. King Plans Return

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

INDIANOLA, Miss., June 21 —The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said today that he and other civil rights leaders would return to Philadelphia this week "with a large segment" of their Mississippi marching force and "straighten the place out."

"We will use all our nonviolent might," he said after flying here for a rally at which he described today's violence in Philadelphia.

"We got to go back—it's the meanest town in the country," he told other civil rights leaders in a quick strategy conference. "If they get by with what they did today, Negroes will be scared to death."

"We can't take this lying down," agreed Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Mr. McKissick suggested that the march through Mississippi be divided into two parts, with one part going by truck to Meredian for a 41-mile march from there into Philadelhpia along Route 19.

It is the same route that three civil rights marchers — Andrew Goodman, Michael Schwerner and James Chaney — took two years ago today when they drove into Philadelphia and Neshoba County and were slain.

The remaining marching column would continue on its way to Jackson by way of Canton.

55 Miles From Finish

The march, now in its 15th day, covered 18 miles and reached Yazoo City today, about 55 miles from Jackson, its final destination.

Dr. King said that Mr. McKissick's suggestion "sounds good." He said that he wanted to "start the march to Philadelphia" tomorrow or Thursday "at the latest," so that those marchers could finish in time to rejoin the main marching column for its entrance into Jackson on Sunday.

Today's rally in Indianola, the birthplace of the White Citizens Council, was in sharp contrast to the rally and demonstration in Philadelphia.

There were no incidents as marchers left the marching column 40 miles away, traveled into Sunflower County by car and turned out 350 Negroes to hear Dr. King and other leaders at the site of the new Sunflower County court house in Indianola.

More than 100 whites stood quietly on the sidewalk as the Negroes, while waiting for Dr. King, began shouting "black power—black power."

"When people say, 'what do you want?', don't say 'freedom,' say 'black power,'" said Charles McLaurin, a field secretary for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Then he shouted, "What do you want?"

"Black power," shouted Negro women, children, teen-agers and bent old men in overalls.

But when the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, one of Dr. King's top aides, arrived at the rally, he also asked Negroes what they wanted. When some yelled "black power," he commanded, "say freedom."

"Freedom," the Negroes shouted.

U.S. Asked to Guard Mississippi March

6/23/64

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

YAZOO CITY, Miss., June 22—The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and two other civil rights leaders asked President Johnson today to send Federal marshals to protect a second march on the courthouse at Philadelphia, Miss., on Friday.

The request was made in a telegram from Dr. King, Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, and Stokely Carmichael, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

It pointed out that a march on the Neshoba County Courthouse yesterday, led by Dr. King, had been attacked by angry whites unrestrained by the local police.

Philadelphia policemen and county officers made no move

Continued on Page 24, Column 3

Frank Edwards has a recorded message for you. Call REctor 2-8030. Advt.

DR. KING ASKS U.S. TO PROTECT MARCH

Continued From Page 1, Col. 6

to stop white assailants until Negroes began to fight back.

The three rights leaders also said a lawsuit would be filed in the Federal District Court of Judge W. Harold Cox at Jackson, asking him to order the city and county police and the State Highway Patrol to protect Negroes and rights workers at Philadelphia.

"Our movement demands our going back [to Phiadelphia]," Dr. King said.

He repeated his assertion that Philadelphia had had "a complete breakdown of law and order" yesterday.

It was not clear whether the county, which was the scene of a triple civil rights murder two years ago, would become the center of a major, continuing civil rights movement.

One leader close to Dr. King speculated that Philadelphia might be turned into "another Selma," once the James H. Meredith protest march in Mississippi is concluded on Sunday at Jackson.

Leaders of Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the student committee and CORE continued to discuss the town's future today and tonight.

More than 200 marchers continued their trek through the Mississippi countryside today. They held a voting registration rally this morning at the Yazoo County Courthouse, then headed down State Highway 16 toward Canton, the last major town before reaching Jackson.

Mr. Meredith, the Negro who desegregated the University of Mississippi, began the march on June 6 a few miles south of Memphis. He left it after being shot from ambush.

NEGRO BAPTIST AIDE HITS 'BLACK POWER'

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 22 (UPI)—Dr. J. H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention, a large Negro organization, said today that cries of "black power" did not speak for millions of his race.

Dr. Jackson called on Negroes to "develop different attitudes" when tensions threatened to provoke violence.

He said the church should offer "more than just pressure," that "it must generate power" for good in communities.

Dr. Jackson was here to address more than 9,000 delegates at the 61st convention of the National Sunday School and Baptist Convention that claims 5.5 million members.

Asked at a news conference to comment on the Mississippi civil rights march, Dr. Jackson said that what should be emphasized about the shooting of James H. Meredith was that it was "white officials who arrested the criminal, white physicians who administered to his needs.

He said:

"There are thousands of Americans, white and Negro, who believe in freedom. That should give hope instead of despair. Black power statements do not speak for millions of Americans."

3 Hurt in Louisville Blast

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 22 (AP)—A 15,000-gallon tank exploded at the Stauffer Chemical Company today, injuring three employes and touching off a chlorine gas scare that led to some evacuation. Approximately 25 families were removed from the Indiana bottomlands across the Ohio River and the Coast Guard halted traffic after reports that a gas cloud "was hanging in the middle of the river." The threat was brief.

MISSISSIPPI STRIFE STUDIED BY F.B.I.

Philadelphia Uneasily Calm After Incidents of Violence

By GENE ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, Miss., June 22—An uneasy calm returned to Philadelphia today after yesterday's outbreaks of violence in which Negro marchers were beaten and a white man was shot.

White teen-agers drove through the business district today with Confederate flags fluttering from their cars. Negroes stayed close to the homes in the Negro "quarter" as agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation began looking into the outbreak of shooting in the section last night.

Federal sources said the investigation so far had shown that one shot had been fired by a white man into a Negro recreation hall and that Negroes had fired back "with more than 20 shots" at cars that were cirlcing their homes.

Civil rights workers said, however, that whites fired at civil rights headquarters and at Negro homes and businesses "about 20 times" and that Negroes countered with still more shooting.

Mayor Comments

While the F.B.I. was pursuing its investigation, Mayor Clayton Lewis was dismissing yesterday's violence. "There isn't anything to it—it's just those rabble-rousers, a bunch of foreigners, that came in here," he said.

Police Chief Bruce Latimer said he was concerned over the possibility of renewed violence in the event that civil rights marchers should return to Philadelphia.

"But I'm an old Army man," he added, "and I always expect the worst to happen and then I'm not surprised. I am working night and day to keep things down."

Violence erupted here yesterday when the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and others from the civil rights march through Mississippi came here to hold a civil rights rally and a memorial service for three civil rights workers—Andrew Goodman, Michael H. Schwerner and James E. Chaney—who were slain here two years ago.

A white mob attacked the marchers and news cameramen, and a Negro youth was run down by a truck but not seriously injured. This was followed by last night's shooting in the Negro district, an area that is known by whites here as "the quarter."

Copra Production Rise Noted

Copra production in the British Solomon Islands Protectorate during the first quarter of 1966 rose to a record 7,333 tons—an increase of 1,680 tons over the same period in 1965, South Pacific News reports. A bonus of $20 Australian a ton paid by the Copra Board is thought to be partly responsible for the increase, although shipping has been more freely available in 1966. In addition, several copra-making societies are now in full production. It is hoped that the year's figures will reach a record 28,000 tons.

POLICE SEIZE 11 IN RIGHTS MARCH

MISSISSIPPI

Club Negro in Canton, Miss. —State Pledges Protection in Philadelphia Today

6/24/66

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

CANTON, Miss., June 23—Law enforcement officers arrested 11 civil rights marchers today, seized their camping tents and clubbed and kicked a Negro marcher who rushed toward them with flailing arms.

The incident developed when civil rights workers attempted to pitch three circus tents, used to house more than 200 members of the civil rights march through Mississippi, at the McNeil Elementary School without permission of the Canton school board.

[In Washington, President Johnson, responding to a request by rights leaders for Federal marshals in Philadelphia, Miss., said he had been assured by Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. of Mississippi that state troopers would provide adequate protection Friday.]

Charged With Trespassing

After the 11 marchers had been arrested, march leaders quickly raised $1,350 bond and won their release, along with their tents.

Ten of the marchers, including Hosea Williams, a top aide to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., were charged with trespassing.

The other marcher was charged with assault. He calls himself Glenn Freedom X, but was listed on the police blotter as Torrance Gurley, 25 years old, of Washington.

The arrests came as Dr. King and other rights leaders began selecting a team of 60 for a

Continued on Page 21, Column 2

Police Seize 11 Rights Marchers in Canton, Miss.; State Pledges Protection in Philadelphia

Continued From Page 1, Col. 4

rally and demonstration in Philadelphia, where a white mob attacked Negroes and news cameramen earlier this week.

Dr. King and Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, were turned down in Federal District Court in Jackson by Judge Dan Russell when they requested a temporary restraining order, which would have ordered state troopers, Neshoba County sheriff's deputies and the Philadelphia Police Department to provide them with protection tomorrow.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, meanwhile, were inquiring into a shooting incident in Canton last night in which a white man, Wallace Lonsreer, 26, of Canton sufefred superficial gunshot wounds on his left arm.

C. O. Chinn, 46, Canton and Madison County project director for the Freedom Democratic party, was charged with "assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill."

The rights official who was released under $7,000 bond, denied that he had done the shooting.

He said that he and "several other" rights activitis were "standing around" rights headquarters about 10:30 P.M. when "whites passed and threw a homemade fire and smoke bomb that hit a car and bounced off."

Mr. Chinn said that he and the others had pursued the fleeing carload of whites and stopped their car at a service station, where they were met by a volley of soft-drink bottles.

"I ducked down in my car so the bottles wouldn't hit me and was lying there when the shot went off," he said.

Mr. Chinn was among those arrested for attenpting to pitch tents on public school property.

After a tent crew left the school property, Mr. Williams, accompanied by Mr. Chinn, returned to the school grounds to confront the police.

"This is our ground," said Mr. Chinn. "We get no cooperation from white people."

"If you don't move the truck, we'll tow it away and it will cost you," said Sheriff Jack C. Cauthen of Madison County.

Mr. Williams refused to move the truck, arguing that "our marchers don't have any other place to stay."

Eighteen city policemen and sheriff's deputies took 10 of the civil rights workers into custody and as they were walking with them to the police cars, Mr. Gurley (Glenn Freedom X) moved quickly toward the arresting officers.

"He was flailing his arms, but he didn't hit anybody," said a Federal representative who watched the incident.

"I have never seen such a handling of a man," the Government man said. "Clunk, a club hit him on top of the head. Wham, they punched him in the solar plexus. And they kicked him when they got him in the car."

"That guy was on my back," Sheriff Cauthen said. "And when my boys move one, they move him the fastest way they can."

Mr. Gurley has been involved in at least two arguments and one fist-fight with fellow demonstrators during the 17-day march.

Deputy Sheriff Carl W. Holly said that during the scuffle, "somebody bit me or something, and I went over to the Health Department later and got a tetanus shot because I didn't want to get the hydrophobia."

"We don't believe in what happened in Philadelphia and if we can prevent that from happening here we intend to do so," said Sheriff Cauthen.

President Gets Assurance

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 23—President Johnson received assurances today from Governor Johnson that the state would provide protection tomorrow for civil rights demonstrators in Philadelphia, Miss.

The President has no direct contact with the Governor, but Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach talked with him by telephone on the President's behalf.

President Johnson relayed the Governor's assurances by telegram to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Dr. King and two other rights leaders asked the President yesterday by telegram for Federal protection for a march on the courthouse at Philadelphia.

Unrestrained by the local police, whites attacked rights marchers there last Tuesday.

Robert H. Fleming, deputy Presidential press secretary, said the wire sent by Dr. King, along with Mr. McKissick national director of the Congress of Racial Equality and Stokely Carmichael, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, was received by the President late last night.

"The President wired Dr. King that he is informed that additional units of the Mississippi highway patrol were dispatched to Philadelphia on Tuesday," Mr. Fleming said.

"The President also told Dr. King that the Governor had given assurances that law and order will be maintained and advised Dr. King that John Doar, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, will continue to be available in Mississippi until the end of the march."

Mr. Fleming did not release the text of the President's telegram "because we do not choose to put it out."

MARCHERS DEFY MISSISSIPPI CROWD

Hold Rally in Philadelphia, Site of Tuesday Attack—Police Restrain Whites

6/25/66

BY GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, Miss., June 24—The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and 300 civil rights marchers returned to downtown Philadelphia today and braved a speeding car, three bottles, two eggs and hundreds of shouts of "nigger."

The taunts and the missiles came from among 1,500 to 2,000 whites who stared over the shoulders of more than 100 heavily armed state highway patrolmen and local law enforcement officers.

After the bottles were hurled, Stokely Carmichael, the chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, waved his arms at the jeering whites.

"The people that are gathered around us represent America in its truest form," he shouted angrily. "They represent a sick and resisting society that sits in the United Nations and gives lip service to democracy."

Dr. King More Conciliatory

Dr. King was more conciliatory. He declared, "We are going to build right here a society based on brotherhood and understanding."

"Go to hell," a white man screamed. "Go to hell."

"Nigger—you're a nigger," a woman joined in.

[Civil rights workers marched again Friday through Canton, Miss., scene of a tear gas incident Thursday night.]

The marchers were surrounded by whites as they held their rally at the Neshoba County Courthouse, where only three days earlier a white crowd had attacked a rally audience and news cameramen.

Dr. King said he nand many others had returned to Philadelphia today to show "that we can stand before you without fear after we were beaten and brutalized the other day."

Today, Philadelphia policemen, including some who had stood by while the marchers were attacked on Tuesday, joined the state troopers in

Continued on Page 15, Column 2

Marchers Return to Philadelphia, Miss.; Police Restrain Whites

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

keeping the white crowd back from the rally.

In turning down the marchers' request for Federal marshals at today's rally, President Johnson said Governor Paul B. Johnson Jr. of Mississippi had assured him that the highway patrol would protect the marchers.

The crowd of whites began assembling two hours before the rally. There were motorcyclists from Meridian, 41 miles away. Farmers sat on the sidewalk, resting their backs against storefronts, while waiting for the marchers to come.

Not since last fall's Neshoba County Fair, one auxiliary policeman observed, have so many people been gathered in one place in Neshoba County.

White men, women and children were to the right and left of the rally audience, straining at ropes that the local police had placed at the intersections near the courthouse.

Whites stared grimly from storefronts directly in front of Dr. King as he talked, and they peered down at him from the second story winows in the courthouse.

And when the rally was over and the marchers had returned to the Negro "quarter" of this small city of 5,000, a handful of whites were waiting there to yell "nigger."

One white man, a male companion beside him, whipped a gleaming white Thunderbird around a corner. The car sped into the front of the marching column and roared to its rear, forcing newsmen and marchers to scramble for their lives.

An auxiliary policeman spun around and leveled his shotgun at Negroes who were shouting, "Get him."

But a state trooper thrust his gun toward the windshield of the Thunderbird. The car had raced through the marching line at speeds possibly as high as 40 miles an hour, and the driver had then suddenly slammed on the brakes to avoid crashing into two cars that blocked the unpaved clay street.

While the troopers held the driver and his companion at gunpoint, reinforcements arrived, pulled the men from the Thunderbird and took them into custody.

The march started from the Negro quarter, about a mile up dusty clay streets from the business district, andmovedinto the downtown area, flanked by law enforcement officers wearing riot helmets and tear gas packets and carrying riot guns.

A man wearing a shirt tailored from a Confederate flag made an obscene gesture with his hand at the 51 reporters and news cameramen who accompanied the marchers. He shouted, "'Look at 'em, look at 'em."

Two uniformed guards who had been hired by C.B.S. to protect its sound and camera crew moved in closer to the cameramen.

Sheriff Lawrence Rainey and Deputy Cecil Price, who are awaiting trial in Federal Court on charges growing out of the slaying of three civil rights workers here two years ago, outlined a march route around the courthouse for the marchers.

Sheriff Rainey talked with a chew of tobacco in his cheek. And Deputy Price yanked a cigar from his mouth as the marchers approached.

Mayor Lends Megaphone

Mayor Clayton Lewis told the marchers that he did not want "any trouble," and then lent his electric megaphone to the march leaders for their speeches. Floyd B. McKissick, director of the Congress of Racial Equality, shouted through it at the marchers:

"Please keep off the grass."

Missiles began coming from the crowd as the Rev. Clint Collier, a Negro minister from Neshoba County, prayed. One egg went over the heads of the marchers. Another egg and three bottles fell short.

One bottle bounced off a church directory sign that had been erected on the courthouse lawn by American Legion Post 136 as part of its "Back to God Program."

Another bottle bounced and struck Murray Kempton, a columnist for The New York Post, on the foot but did not injure him.

At one point the shouting and the jeers almost drowned out Mr. McKissick, who pointed to the white crowd and said, "There is a sickness in this society."

The taunts followed the marchers away from the courthouse, which is shaded by magnolias and oaks.

"I got a dog," a young white man yelled at the marchers, "who would turn up his nose at you."

Meredith on Way

MEMPHIS, June 24 (AP)—James H. Meredith, accompanied by the comedian Dick Gregory, left today by car for Canton, Miss., to rejoin the march that he started June 5.

Mr. Meredith, whose journey into Mississippi was interrupted a day later when he was wounded by shotgun pellets, did not say whether he was now armed.

MISS.

NYT 6/25/64

Katzenbach Regrets Tear Gas Incident But Bars Criticism

WASHINGTON, June 24 —Attorney General Nicholas deb. Katzenbach said today that he regretted the use of tear gas against civil rights marchers in Canton, Miss. last night.

"It always makes the situation more difficult," he told reporters who questioned him at the White House, where he was attending a ceremony at which Young America Medals were awarded.

The Attorney General would not condemn the action, however, and said that a study was being made of it.

He said that the civil right marchers had been offered thre alternate camp sites but ha insisted on camping on scho grounds after the school boa had denied them use of the grounds.

Another Justice Department ource said that the Mississippi Highway Patrol had reported hat it had removed the marchers from the school grounds o prevent local sheriff's deputies from intervening.

Mr. Katzenbach reported several times to President Johnson during the day and also talked by telephone with Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. of Mississippi.

Robert H. Fleming, deputy White House press secretary, said that Mr. Katzenbach had assured the President that order was being maintained by state troopers this morning.

As the day wore on, Administration officials were keeping a close and anxious watch on developments at Canton, Philadelphia, Miss., and along the line of march on U.S. 51 to Jackson.

Officials at both the White House and the Justice Department refused to discuss what plans, if any, there might be for Federal intervention to give the marchers protection in case of mounting violence.

Mr. Fleming said that the President had "no specific reaction" to the tear gas incident and added:

"The President knows it is going to take time to produce understanding down there but he thinks the effort should be made."

RIGHTS WORKERS MARCH IN CANTON

MISS.

Boycott Is Urged After Use of Tear Gas by Police

6/25/66

By HOMER BIGART

Special to The New York Times

CANTON, Miss., June 24—Civil rights workers marched again through the streets of this Black Belt town today.

Their eyes still smarting from tear gas, their bodies weary from sleeping on the concrete floor of a Roman Catholic mission gymnasium that gave them refuge, the marchers sang out to Negroes on porches and sidewalks urging total boycott of white stores and white employers.

It was what the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a leader of the Mississippi march on Jackson, which tonight reached the northern suburbs of the state capital, proclaimed a "blackout" for Canton.

Another tear gas confrontation appeared likely, for Negro leaders have vowed they would pitch their tents on the grounds of a public school.

Last night the police used tear gas to rout some 2,000 Negro and white demonstrators who were erecting tents on a Negro school ground.

Order From City Attorney

The order to use force came from Robert Goza, the city attorney, who said the Negroes had been warned several times against camping on school property and that they had been offered an alternative site.

In Washington, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach said that the demonstrators had been offered three sites by the city of Canton. But Mr. Goza said he knew only of one.

That offer came, he said, from "a highly respected colored merchant named George Washington."

The city, he said, was willing to provide electricity at Mr. Washington's site. Water was also available there, he said.

However, the site was turned down. "They wanted to put us way out with the cows and pigs," the Rev. Richard McSoley, professor of social justice at Georgetown University said.

The Negro elementary school was closed for the summer vacation. However, Mr. Goza said today that at no time was school property to be used for such obviously noneducational purposes as camping. This was a long established rule, he said.

Enter Business District

The marchers today entered the white business disrtict that flanks the Courthouse, a red brick and white pillared edifice regarded by natives as the architectural gem of Madison County.

They passed out leaflets denouncing the tear gas incident.

"Our tax dollars helped to buy that tear gas."

"Don't buy anything downtown."

"If you work for the White Man, don't go to work Friday."

"Hit them where it hurts."

"We've come too far to turn back now!"

The boycott seemed effective. Negroes comprise more than 50 per cent of the county population. When they stop buying the white merchant suffers quickly.

Two previous boycotts here have won the Negroes some concessions, including clerical jobs in the stores.

Besides urging boycotts, the marchers tried to stimulate voter registration.

At the Courthouse, however, they were turned back by deputy sheriffs with riot guns.

"You got legitimate business in here?" demanded Sheriff Jack Cauthen. "Otherwise, no."

The sheriff, after some discussion, decided to let into the grounds only those Negroes from Madison County who wanted to register.

Six women and two men were allowed to pass. But before they reached the Courthouse steps the bell tolled noon and the registrar's office closed for lunch.

Then everyone marched to a store two blocks away where

AT 101°, A PROTEST BECOMES SWIM-IN

Mississippi

Negroes at Grenada, Miss., Splash Instead of March

NYT 7/13/66

Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., July 12—With the temperature at 101 degrees, the leaders of a civil rights protest movement decided against a street march here today and held a "swim-in" instead.

About 50 Negroes splashed in Grenada Lake, a United States Corps of Engineers project that has been technically integrated but little used by Negroes. There were no incidents. It was the second "swim-in" in two days.

Two dozen whites left the water before the Negroes entered. Some stood angry and perspiring on the bank for an hour until the Negroes left, then got back in the water.

Civil rights leaders spent the day in the air-conditioned sanctuary of Bell Flower Baptist Church discussing strategy. Hosea Williams, a top aide to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., called for a boycott of white stores.

"Clothes don't make the man," he told 130 Negroes.

He urged them to cancel their charge accounts and wear old clothes until Grenada became "an open city."

Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference and local friends of the organization have pledged to make an example of Grenada for the rest of Mississippi. They have demanded an end to racial segregation in all phases of public life.

White leaders seemed bewildered. They went out of their way to please Dr. King and the James H. Meredith marchers when they passed through Grenada last month. Then, when civil rights workers stayed behind to start building the civil rights movement, the white attitude shifted.

Officials issued a curt statement yesterday saying all "demands, threats and intimidation" would be ignored. About 90 demonstrators have been arrested in two weeks.

Twenty-five state troopers broke up a Negro gathering Sunday night with nightsticks and gun butts. Two white civil rights lawyers and an employe of the Federal Community Relations Service were fired on with a submachine gun Saturday night.

The hardened attitude has added fuel to the Negro protest.

"We're going to have a movement in Grenada, Miss.," Mr. Williams told 250 Negroes last night. They cheered wildly.

The Leadership Conference has brought in 10 staff members and four volunteers, including several white persons.

The organization is putting emphasis on its white volunteers. The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the chief advocate of the concept of black power, is de-emphasizing white support.

Dr. King has rejected the term "black power."

George Alan Smith Resigns As ANTA's Executive Head

George Alan Smith has resigned as executive administrator of the American National Theater and Academy, a post he assumed last September.

Donald Seawell, chairman of ANTA, said Mr. Smith's resignation was accepted "with great reluctance by myself and by every member of the executive committee."

Mr. Smith said that he was leaving to finish two books he is writing, and to become an independent consultant in the arts. Before joining ANTA he was a member of the special studies project of the Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

Patrol Clubs Smash Negroes Demonstrating in Grenada

MISSISSIPPI

AS 7/11/66

GRENADA, Miss. (AP)— Steel-helmeted highway patrolmen, wielding billy clubs and gun butts, drove off some 300 Negroes demonstrating outside the Grenada County jail, as sheriff's deputies scattered 100 jeering whites.

But civil rights leaders planned new demonstrations today — a swim-in and a read-in — in their test of public accommodations in this town of 7,914, halfway between Jackson — the Mississippi capital — and Memphis, Tenn.

The trials of some of the 43 civil rights workers jailed for staging a sitdown demonstration on a Grenada street come up today in city court.

Many of the Negroes dispersed Sunday from the jail area had come on a sympathy march for the 43.

Also scheduled today was a preliminary hearing for two white men arrested after shots struck near a federal official and two others as they were about to go into a Negro church late Saturday night.

A column of patrolmen, armed with shotguns, carbines and tear gas grenades, were marched into one group of about 200 Negroes standing near the jail at dusk Sunday.

The troopers were ordered to disperse the crowd after about 50 Negroes first refused to move from the jail house lawn, then shifted to a nearby spot where 150 Negroes were gathered.

The 50 — the ones who staged the sympathy march — infiltrated the larger group as police brought up a bus to take them away.

Patrolmen clubbed to the ground and arrested one Negro man who fought back when the troopers moved in.

When the first group had been scattered, the riot squad turned on another group of some 100 Negroes who were watching from a courthouse parking lot across the street.

The bystanders were still being hit with billy clubs and rifle butts by highway patrolmen when county policemen were ordered to disperse the noisy crowd of whites.

The whites fled and none were hit.

The 50 sympathy marchers, who actually rode in cars to the jail from a church after refusing to accept a police permit for a parade, clustered on the lawn of the new brick jail for 90 minutes before being told to leave.

Earlier, Sheriff Suggs Ingram announced that the two white men arrested had been charged with attempted murder. Later he said his announcement "was premature."

None of the three white men attacked was injured.

The sheriff said the shots were fired at Henry Aaronson, 32, of Jackson, Miss., an attorney with the NAACP legal defense fund; James L. Draper, 51, of the Federal Community Relations Service; and Oliver Rosengart, 24, a New York University law school student.

Sheriff Ingram declined to release the names of the arrested men until he completed his investigation.

Aaronson said he and the other two men were about to enter the Bell Flowers church for a meeting with local civil rights leaders when they saw two men, one with a "submachine gun."

Modern, scientific CHIROPRACTIC assembles the forces of nature to restore lost health. That CHIROPRACTIC has stood the test of personal investigation by millions prove its lasting benefits to sick humanity.

DR. GEORGE C. PAULK, JR.

1139 West Peachtree, N.E.
At 13th St.

Phone
TR. 6-4941

GRENADA REJECTS 51 NEGRO DEMANDS

Mississippi Officials Pledge Fair Law Enforcement

MISS881199

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., July 11—City and county officials stiffened their resistance today to an attempt by Negroes to have all phases of community life opened to them.

Answering 51 demands by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and its local affiliate, the officials said in a statement:

"All persons are hereby notified that demands, threats and intimidation are not proper, appropriate or acceptable means of accomplishing anything, and any and all such tactics will be ignored.

There will be no concessions of any type or degree made to anyone whatsoever, likewise there will be no acceding to any such demands."

The officials pledged fair, firm and impartial law enforcement and denied charges of police brutality.

Troopers Doubled

About 175 Negroes were dispersed yesterday by 25 state highway patrol troopers using gun butts and nightsticks. The number of troopers on standby orders has been doubled.

Meanwhile, two white man were arraigned before a justice of the peace and charged with assault and battery with intent to kill in a submachinegun attack Saturday night on a white civil rights lawyer and two companions outside a Negro church.

The charge carries a maximum prison term of 10 years. A preliminary hearing will be held Wednesday.

The arraigned men were identified as B. C. Bennett of nearby Montgomery County and Bobby Todd of Grenada, both in their 30's. Mr. Todd was released on $2,000 bond and Mr. Bennett on $1,000.

Also today, 14 Negro youths desegregated Grenada Lake, a reservoir built with Federal funds. Several white swimmers left when the Negroes entered.

Elsewhere, 22 Negroes tried unsuccessfully to desegregate a swimming pool. The management turned them away at the entrance, telling them they would have to apply for membership.

Kiwanis Club Runs Pool

The pool is operated by the Grenada Kiwanis Club on a lease from the city. An applicant for membership in the pool club must be approved by two members of the Kiwanis Club.

The statement by the white officials represented a reversal of policy.

When the James H. Meredith civil rights march went through northern Mississippi last month, Grenada distinguished itself by its moderate attitude toward th demonstrators.

Officials acceded to a number of demands by the marchers, led at that time by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Negro voter registrars were hired to help process new Negro voter applicants.

About 20 civil right workers stayed in Grenada after the marchers had left. They reported a few days later that the Grenada county government had dismissed the Negro registrars and that attempts to desegregate public accommodations had met resistance.

Forty-two of 43 demonstrators who staged a sitdown in the street Thursday after being refused admission to a theater remained in jail in lieu of $100 bond each. Hosea Williams, assistant to Dr. King, went to Atlanta to try to raise bond money.

Young Democrats Launch Third-Stream Movement

7/17/66

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau, Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to the Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., July 18—A biracial organization of young Mississippi Democrats, recognized as the official youth affiliate of the senior national committee, is getting in line to become the party's "ears and eyes" in the state.

A crash organization program is underway by the group headed by Hodding Carter III, Greenville newspaper editor-son of the Pulitizer prize winner, and Cleveland Donald Jr., recent Negro graduate of the University of Mississippi.

Leadership in the Young Democrats group make it a point to explain that their organization "has no connection with either the all-white Mississippi Democratic party or the all-Negro Freedom Democratic party."

Its course is chartered directly into the National Democratic party.

THE YOUNG Democrats have more or less "taken the ball" from the senior Mississippi party leaders in opening their ranks to white and Negro alike. Despite the 1964 national convention mandate to the senior Mississippi Democrats to open ranks, they have made no move in that direction.

The Young Democrats expect to be "heard from" in next year's state elections for offices from governor to constables in the 410 beats in the 82 counties. However, they will center on the governorship with an eye to the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Mississippi governors hold the title of titular head of the state party and as such usually head the national convention delegation. However, in 1964 Gov. Paul Johnson did not attend, but sent a more or less hand-picked delegation.

ALL EXCEPT four of the 1964 delegation failed to gain seats when they reneged on agreeing to support the party nominees. Several of the four who remained are in the Young Democratic organization.

MISSISSIPPI

Despite the statewide organizational efforts of the young party members, the old-guard senior state group is standing "still" and without a state headquarters.

However, the Republicans are active having maintained a state party office for several years and is fielding candidates for the senior United States senatorship and four of the five congressional posts in the November general election.

THE YOUNG DEMOCRATS are not taking any part in the congressional elections, standing by for next year's state primaries.

Outside help is being given the Young Democrats by leaders in the national party. A fund-raising dinner was given for the Mississippians in Washington earlier this week hosted by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York, and congressmen Charles Weltner of Georgia, George Grider of Tennessee, and John Brademas of Indiana.

THE FOUR national Democrats were recent visitors to Mississippi. Sen. Kennedy addressed a Young Democrats sponsored meeting at the University of Mississippi; Congressman Grider appeared at Oxford at a Jefferson-Jackson day fund raising dinner sponsored by the University of Mississippi Young Democrats club; Congressman Weltner addressed a Young Democratic rally in Jackson, while Congressman Brademas, a former University of Mississippi student, spoke at Young Democrats sponsored meetings in Jackson and Biloxi.

Indicative of the activity of the Young Democrats, the group has opened a state office in Jackson and employed three field men to travel the state in establishing local chapters.

A second annual state convention is planned in Jackson Aug. 27 with a name-national Democrat to be selected as its keynoter.

7/28/66
J.D.N.

Tougaloo Red Hits At Eastland

Editor, Daily News — In the July 21 edition of the Jackson Daily News I am mentioned by Senator James Eastland as one of "11 known Communists" who "participated and influenced" the recent Meredith-Mississippi March ("Eastland Names Reds in March").

It is not my intention in this letter to deny Eastland's "exposure". I am indeed a "known Communist" — a Marxist, a revolutionary socialist, an open advocate of the revolutionary overthrow of capitalism and its replacement with a world Socialist order. . .Eastland's intrepid snoopers could have saved the taxpayers' money, for in my two years of civil rights activity in this state I have never attempted to hide my polical convictions or my affiliations. Far from denying the charge, I am greatly honored to have been denounced on the Senate floor as an implacable foe o fthis most qualified representative of degenerate racism.

Eastland's latest blast is a heartening sign to the Negro people and the poor people of the state, for it shows that the old plantation master from Sunflower County is trembling at the spectre of thousands of Mississippians rising up to smash his beloved system of racist oppression.

Eastland, who constantly talks of Mississippi's "excellent" race relations, has the tricky job of explaining the mass support of the Meredith-Mississippi March among the state's Negro population, culminating in an enthusiastic rally of some 20,000 at the Capitol in Jackson. The best he can come up with is a handful of alleged Communists who happened to be among the tremendous crowd.

Sorry Senator, but the thousands of Mississippi people moved to action in recent events in the state know they are not "infiltrated." This was the Mississippi peoples' work, "agitated" by you and your kind and the decadent system you so ably represent.

The Senator screams "Communists are staging a revolution in this country." Speaking from the Senator's home state, I say yes indeed Mr. Eastland, there is a revolution being staged here, and although "Communists" can hardly be credited with staging it, it is a revolution [illegible] the nation; to destroy the vile racism nurtured by Eastland and his ilk that blinds men to their common interests in struggle and has denied the most basic of human rights to vast numbers in this state; to destroy the attitude of subservience to a "law and order" designed to prepetuate a reactionary racist order, and to instill the revolutionary will to organize and flight among the opressed masses of this state. There is a revolution afoot here, which will consign all the Eastland's and everything they represent to their long deserved place on the garbage heap of history.

Eastland sees the handwriting on the wall, and fights back with any weapon he can get his hands on; for he knows that a society free of racist oppression means the social, political and economic death of all the James Eastlands of the world.

As a "known Communist" I am proud to be a participant in this revolution that will someday forever silence the James Eastlands.

Phil Lapsansky
Box 95
Tougaloo, Miss.

Editor's note — As chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security, Sen. Eastland is one of the foremost authorities in the nation on the Communist conspiracy. Sen. Eastland has repeatedly warned of subversive influences in racial riots and demonstrations in the North and the South. In his speech citing Communist influence in the Meredith march to which reference is made above, Sen. Eastland identified a Phillip Lapsansky as "a current member of the Socialists Workers' Party, which organization has been cited by the U. S. Attorney General as subversive in accordance with Executive Order 10450." J. M. W.

tisan support of all those who work for a society free of racism, violence and exploitation of man by man.

There is a revolution afoot here to destroy the naked rule of the rich, which has made Mississippi the poorest state in

MISSISSIPPI

Eastland Names Reds In March

J.D.N. 7/21/66

Says 11 Communists In Meredith's Walk

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Communist participation in the James Meredith-Mississippi march was exposed by Sen. James O. Eastland today in the Senate.

Eastland named 11 known Communists who participated in the march.

"After Meredith was sprayed with birdshot on June 6, Mississippi was invaded by outside agitators including Communists," he said. "These Communists actively participated and influenced this march."

Eastland named Edward Crawford, chairman of the New York council to abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities, as one of the Communists taking part in the march.

"This is the kind of thing that is behind the riots and shootings in the northern cities," Eastland told the Senate. "Communists are staging a revoltuion in this country."

Among others named by Eastland on the Senate floor were Earl Harris, a registered member of the Communist Party; Blyden Jackson, former campaign manager for Herbert Aptheker, member of the National Committee Communist Party, USA; Bennett Johnson Jr.; Clarence Jones, who held a position with the Labor Youth League, identified by Eastland as a subversive organization; Phillip Lapsansky, member of the Socialist Workers' Party; Oliver Leeds, member of Communist Party; USA; Stanley Levison, secret member of Communist Party, USA as late as 1963; Derrick Morrison, member of the Socialist Worker's Party of Detroit; Ann Mary O'Brien, former member of Labor Youth League and C. T. Vivian, member of Communist Party, Peoria, Ill., prior to 1947.

Eastland warned that such infiltration should not go unnoticed by the public, and he promised further exposure of Communists invoved in the march as well as other civil rights activities.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

MISSISSIPPI NYT 7/25/66

Negroes Start Communal Farm To Escape Mississippi Poverty

94 Move Into 'Freedom City' After Machines Take Over Their Jobs on Plantations

By ROY REED

GREENVILLE, Miss, July 24—Ninety-four Negroes who are no longer needed on white men's plantations set up communal housekeeping today on a 400-acre farm they may some day call their own.

They hope that it will become a center of agriculture and small industry. It is eight miles south of here, near the town of Wayside, in the heart of the Mississippi River delta.

The new residents arrived in trucks today from Edwards, Miss., where they had lived in an abandoned college since mid-winter. They intend to rise at 5 A. M. tomorrow to start hoeing soybeans, cooking, sewing, and governing themselves.

Desperate Experiment

It is a desperate experiment. Unlike some past attempts at communal living, it is based on neither intellectual curiosity nor idealism.

The people moving into "Freedom City," as it is called, are puzzled, unlettered, almost inert. When their farm jobs were taken by machines, they stayed in the Delta rather than migrate to the cities of the North to find work.

Isacc Foster 24 years old, is the leader of the new community. He said he was not sure the people were entering with much hope of success.

"Mainly, they're coming here cause there's no place else to go," he said.

The new community was an idea of the Detla Ministry, a civil rights arm of the National Council of Churches.

The Delta Ministry is trying to lift Delta Negroes from their growing poverty. A survey last spring by the Mississippi Employment Security Commission found that 66 per cent of the Negroes working age in Washington and Bolivar Counties in the Delta were unemployed.

The Delta Ministry had a hand in an abortive attempt by 110 Negroes and civil rights workers to move into empty buildings at the deactivated Greenville Air Force Base in January.

It also had a part in an unsuccessful farm labor strike against a plantation at Tribett in May, 1965.

Consequently, many Mississippi whites regard the Delta Ministry workers as leftists and "outside agitators."

Some white neighbors reportedly tried to dissuade Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Keel from selling their farm near Wayside to the friends of the Delta Ministry.

The farm is being purchased through the Delta Opportunities Corporation, which is to hold it in trust for the Poor Peoples

The New York Times July 25, 1966

Negroes in Delta area move into a cooperative (cross).

his father defied the wishes of some white neighbors and tried to buy land so he could break out of the sharecropping, day-labor system. He was mysteriously shot and killled, and members of his family believe he was murdered because of the land.

Isaac Foster accomplished something that few other Delta Negroes have done; he completed high school. He was 21 when he graduated. He was never able to attend school more than 70 days a year.

He joined the staff of the Delta Ministry after civil rights workers from the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party persuaded him to break the hold of plantation life.

Others have more difficulty breaking out, Mr. Foster said yesterday. Most plantation Negroes have little schooling. They are taught no skills beyond cotton chopping. They live in almost total dependence on the white "bosses" who provides furniture, food, housing and the schedule of daily work.

"I don't know if they will ever learn to work for themselves," Mr. Foster said. A major problem, he said, will be to teach the residents of "Freedom City" to accept the responsibilities that once rested with the "boss man."

The children may be a problem, too. Taking their place in a cycle of listlessness, they have been subjected to little discipline. Few were required to go to school, because school was pointless for a man born to hoe cotton, Mr. Foster said.

Openly Pessimistic

Mr. Foster will appoint committees for cleaning, cooking, sewing and working the land, but he is openly pessimistic. He and others tried at Edwards to teach basic literacy and the rudiments of cooperative living. They had limited success.

Walter Abney, 25 and his

To Escape Mississippi Poverty

94 Move Into 'Freedom City' After Machines Take Over Their Jobs on Plantations

By ROY REED

GREENVILLE, Miss, July 24—Ninety-four Negroes who are no longer needed on white men's plantations set up communal housekeeping today on a 400-acre farm they may some day call their own.

They hope that it will become a center of agriculture and small industry. It is eight miles south of here, near the town of Wayside, in the heart of the Mississippi River delta.

The new residents arrived in trucks today from Edwards, Miss., where they had lived in an abandoned college since midwinter. They intend to rise at 5 A. M. tomorrow to start hoeing soybeans, cooking, sewing, and governing themselves.

Desperate Experiment

It is a desperate experiment. Unlike some past attempts at communal living, it is based on neither intellectual curiosity nor idealism.

The people moving into "Freedom City," as it is called, are puzzled, unlettered, almost inert. When their farm jobs were taken by machines, they stayed in the Delta rather than emigrate to the cities of the North to find work.

Isacc Foster 24 years old, is the leader of the new community. He said he was not sure the people were entering with much hope of success.

"Mainly, they're coming here cause there's no place else to go," he said.

The new community was an idea of the Detla Ministry, a civil rights arm of the National Council of Churches.

The Delta Ministry is trying to lift Delta Negroes from their growing poverty. A survey last spring by the Mississippi Employment Security Commission found that 66 per cent of the Negroes working age in Washington and Bolivar Counties in the Delta were unemployed.

The Delta Ministry had a hand in an abortive attempt by 110 Negroes and civil rights workers to move into empty buildings at the deactivated Greenville Air Force Base in January.

It also had a part in an unsuccessful farm labor strike against a plantation at Tribett in May, 1965.

Consequently, many Mississippi whites regard the Delta Ministry workers as leftists and "outside agitators."

Some white neighbors reportedly tried to dissuade Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Keel from selling their farm near Wayside to the friends of the Delta Ministry.

The farm is being purchased through the Delta Opportunities Corporation, which is to hold it in trust for the Poor Peoples Conference, a self-help organization inspired by the Delta Ministry.

The farm and equipment cost $160,000. A downpayment of $40,000 was required, and the Delta Ministry received donations from the North and the East. Most of the money came from one unidentified donor, who provided $71,000.

The farm includes a modest residence, a large frame building that the occupants will use for their communal cooking and eating, five used tractors, a used combine and two used trucks.

The families will sleep in 24 plastic prefabricated houses that were ereved last week in a circle 200 yards down the blacktop road from the farmhouse. They were bought for $500 each from a manufacturer in Miami. Including the cost of shipping and building wooden floors, the cost of each was about $800.

Mr. Foster said the residents hoped to learn enough skills to start a modest industry, perhaps quilt-making, to be run by the women while the men work in the fields.

Mr. Foster was president of the Mississippi Freedom Labor Union that struck the plantation at Tribett. He is an athletic(handsome bachelor, the seventh of thirteen children, who was raised on a plantation in nearby Sunflower County.

When Mr. Foster was a child, his father defied the wishes of some white neighbors and tried to buy land so he could break out of the sharecropping, day-labor system. He was mysteriously shot and killled, and members of his family believe he was murdered because of the land.

The New York Times July 25, 1966

Negroes in Delta area move into a cooperative (cross).

Isaac Foster accomplished something that few other Delta Negroes have done; he completed high school. He was 21 when he graduated. He was never able to attend school more than 70 days a year.

He joined the staff of the Delta Ministry after civil rights workers from the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party persuaded him to break the hold of plantation life.

Others have more difficulty breaking out, Mr. Foster said yesterday. Most plantation Negroes have little schooling. They are taught no skills beyond cotton chopping. They live in almost total dependence on the white "bosses" who provides furniture, food, housing and the schedule of daily work.

"I don't know if they will ever learn to work for themselves," Mr. Foster said. A major problem, he said, will be to teach the residents of "Freedom City" to accept the responsibilities that once rested with the "boss man."

The children may be a problem, too. Taking their place in a cycle of listlessness, they have been subjected to little discipline. Few were required to go to school, because school was pointless for a man born to hoe cotton, Mr. Foster said.

Openly Pessimistic

Mr. Foster will appoint committees for cleaning, cooking, sewing and working the land, but he is openly pessimistic. He and others tried at Edwards to teach basic literacy and the rudiments of cooperative living. They had limited success.

Walter Abney, 25 and his wife, Dorothy Mae, 28, were among those moving in today. Mr. Abney explained that they had left a plantation in Sunflower County after the boss man "cussed" him for failing to help a white friend of the owner cut firewood.

Mr. Abney cannot read or write. He knows no skill higher than chopping cotton. Like others in "Freedom City," he has low mechanical skill and will be of little help if a tractor breaks down. He cannot drive an automobile.

But he seems to be spurred, slightly, by some combination of resentment against his former "boss man" and a vague hope that life will be better in "Freedom City."

He said he would like to learn to read and write. He was asked why.

"Well," he said, his dark face suddenly studious, "if anybody walks up and ax me to spell my name, or spell this and that . . ."

He thought a moment longer, then added that reading and writing might also help him, somehow, to get a job. But that obviously was a distant dream.

For the present, he was not worried. He had a place on this good, black soil, and the new soybeans were pushing through the ground at his feet.

"They up to a good stand," he said, regarding the beans with a warm smile. "We got a good rain last week."

NEGROES PROTEST ATTACK BY WHITES

MISSISSIPPI

Grenada, Miss., Marchers Return to Conflict Site

8/11/66

By GENE ROBERTS

Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., Aug. 10—Negroes staged demonstrations here today to protest last night's outbreak of attacks by whites.

Some 100 civil rights demonstrators marched into the business district without incident this afternoon and later ate in six of the city's normally all-white restaurants to test compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Mel Zarr, assistant counsel of the N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., announced, meanwhile, that his organization would seek contempt citations against state and local law enforcement officers who stood by laughing and chuckling last night while whites attacked civil rights marchers.

The officers are under a 19-day-old Federal court injunction that ordered them to refrain from interfering with marchers and directed them to give marchers protection.

"I had my hands full protecting myself and trying to keep things down." said Grenada County Sheriff Suggs Ingram today over an orange drink at Kent's Rexall Drug Store here.

The sheriff, a former barber who weighs 248 pounds and is 6 feet 2 inches tall, said he had 110 state and local officers under his command at the scene and "many others" on stand-by.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock last night, a crowd of about 150 whites threw bottles, bricks, steel pipes and firecrackers at some 300 demonstrators.

One 19-year-old staff worker for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference was carried to the hospital with blood streaming down her face, and at least a dozen other Negroes were also injured—none of them seriously.

The attack sent demonstrators fleeing from the town square with the whites in pursuit.

At one point state and local officers stepped in between the whites and the demonstrators, turned their backs to the white crowd, and rested their guns on their hips with the gun barrels pointed over the heads of the Negroes.

Whites continued hurling missiles over the heads of the officers.

Demonstrators Warned

Many of the officers, including Sheriff Ingram laughed as the missiles struck the Negroes, then issued angry warnings to the demonstrators after two Negroes hurled missiles back at the whites.

Sheriff Ingram said today that some whites in last night's crowd had been drinking, and that he made no arrests "because I didn't know who was drinking and who wasn't drinking, and besides that was a problem for the city police."

State highway patrolmen declined comment on last night's violence. However, a Federal official said state patrolmen had been instructed by patrol headquarters in Jackson to take their orders from Sheriff Ingram.

The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s Suthern Christian Leadership Conference moved into this light industrial and farming center of 4,500 whites and an equal number of Negroes in mid-June to continue a Negro voter registrration drive begun during the civil rights march through Mississippi this spring.

Many of the civil rights workers have since been arrested for "disorderly conduct" and other charges. And Monday night, law enforcement officers broke up a street rally with tear gas on the ground that Negroes were blocking traffic.

HOUSE PANEL VOTES C.I.A. BENEFITS BILL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (UPI) — The House Armed Services Committee approved Tuesday increased fringe benefits for personnel of the Central Intelligence Agency, including subsidized vacations for them and their families.

The committee voted in closed session to send to the House floor legislation revising personnel policies for the agency. Improved retirement and medical benefits made up the bulk of the bill.

Also included was a provision to enhance life for C.I.A. employes serving overseas at so-called "hardship" posts. It would authorize the Government to pay travel expenses for the agent and members of his family for periodic vacations.

The agent, according to the bill, would vacation in a locale where he could relax and get away from the "conditions" that prompted the need for relaxation. The time spent would be deducted from the employe's regular leave quota. He would be permitted such trips once every two years or twice every three years.

Mississippi Highway Chief Faces Contempt Over March Handling

MISSISSIPPI AC 8/13/66

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The head of the Mississippi Highway Patrol and officials of Grenada, Miss., were ordered Friday to appear in federal court Aug. 24 to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for failing to protect civil rights marchers.

Judge Claude Clayton ordered the hearing following a motion by two civil rights lawyers asking that the officials be held in civil contempt. The motion alleged that the defendants violated a July 22 court injunction.

During three voter registration marches this week, Negroes in Grenada were targets for firecrackers, rocks and metal bits. More than 225 state officers were used to push back angry white.

The civil rights attorneys also asked Judge Clayton to broaden the injunction to prohibit officers from arresting or harassing civil rights workers when they are not engaged in a demonstration.

Named defendants in the contempt of court motion were Col. T. B. Birdsong, highway patrol head and four of his patrolmen, Grenada County Sheriff Suggs Ingram, Grenada Mayor J. D. Quinn, City Manager J.E. McEachin, Police Chief J. T. Ray and Constable Grady Carroll, all of Grenada.

The four highway patrolmen named as defendants were Giles Crisler, T. Y. Griffin, C. W. Eubanks and Paul McKelroy.

In response to another motion, Judge Clayton ordered returned $4,300 in bail bond money put up by 43 Negroes arrested July 7 on charges of parading without a permit. Clayton earlier ruled that Grenada's parade permit ordinance was unconstitutional.

Grenada, 42 miles south of here, was quiet Friday. An economic boycott, sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, remain in effect.

GOOD USED TVS

Completely Reconditioned TV

12" TV $19.95

17" TV $29.95

21" TV $39.95

TERMS: $1 DOWN ON ANY SET!

OPEN 9 A.M. 'TIL 9 P.M.

MORGAN TV CO.

469 W P'TREE ST. NE 522-7466

Watchdog Agency Now Eyes New Target---Subversives

AC 8/21/66

By KENNETH TOLER

Jackson Bureau, Memphis Commercial Appeal

Special to The Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 20—Mississippi's 1956 legislative created Sovereignty Commission has turned from segregation to subversives.

Recognizing that its original role as an official "watchdog" of segregation has been put on leash by federal enactments, the commission at long last has accepted desegregation as "the law of the land."

At its first meeting last week since Gov. Paul Johnson took office in January of 1964, the commission shifted its policy to that of "watchdog" over subversive individuals and organizations that advocate civil disobedience. In that role it will exploit information about their movements in an effort to "reduce the effectiveness of their attempts to create turmoil in Mississippi."

IN ORDER to check on subversive individuals and allied organizations, the commission set aside $70,000 of its $200,000 two-year budget for investigations and another $72,000 for its public relations activities.

MISSISSIPPI

Actually, the commission ended its segregation "watchdog" activities when Gov. Johnson took office and declared in his inaugural message to the legislature that "if I must fight it will not be a rearguard defense of yesterday . . . it will be an all-out assault for our share of tomorrow."

Later in February of 1965 the governor told the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights that Mississippi accepts the 1964 Civil Rights act as the law of the land "and now asks those who have criticized our former position and actions to get off our back and get on our side."

GOV. JOHNSON's position drew caustic criticism from strong segregation groups who accused him of "surrendering." In that group was the Citizens Councils professional leadership whose sponsored radio-television forum had been given $195,000 in public funds for its private efforts at maintaining segregation.

When the first biennium of Gov. Johnson's administration began on July 1, 1964, one of its first acts was to stop the monthly donations started under former Gov. Ross Barnett to the councils' forum.

Rather than take a scattergun approach to its new "watchdog" role, the commission spelled out those it plans to investigate as "those individuals or groups who have a history of communistic beliefs or backgrounds on record with the U.S. Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, the House Un-American Activities Committee or the office of the U.S. Attorney General."

THE NEW POLICY was recommended by Erle Johnston Jr., commission director and publisher of a weekly newspaper at Forest, who like the governor, was accused by prosegregationists of "surrendering" and who was largely responsible for cutting off funds to Citizens Councils' sponsored forum.

In an address Thursday before the Mississippi Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives, Director Johnston said the stand taken in 1964 and 1965 by the governor "set the tone for an administration designed to be progressive and beneficial for all Mississippians, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

"We recognize that eventually there must be restoration of racial communication to attain reasonable agreements in those areas where solutions are available," Mr. Johnston said. "This means that the white leadership of each community must be willing to face and discuss the problems that arise with the full support and confidence of their fellow citizens."

At the same time, the commission director said "the colored residents of a community must produce responsible spokesmen willing to talk cooperation instead of coercion."

Intensive Study to Shape New Educational Program

9/11/66

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

MISSISSIPPI

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 10—Gov. Paul Johnson's recommended comprehensive study of education designed to coordinate it with the realities of the world and away from fragmented organizational hierarchies and arbitrary divisions, is under way.

The study from organized pre-school training through the most advanced degrees and the research laboratory is being made by the nationally-recognized management counselling firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton of Chicago. Cost of the first phase is $92,500.

Legislative authorization for the study was given after Gov. Johnson said "Mississippians can never hope to live as fully or as well as their fellow Americans until we do whatever is necessary to provide superior educational opportunities."

"THE TERM 'quality education' has become so trite that it grates upon my senses and I suggest a more meaningful, specific term, 'coordinated education,' " he said.

The initial phase of the project is designed to produce recommendations for the establishment of a modern 'management system' to assure that Mississippi taxpayers get the best achievable results for every dollar invested in education. It is to be completed by Jan. 1, 1967.

Phase One will cover the coordination and management of every level of education in the state, including the organization structure and management of the State Department of Education and the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning.

MISSISSIPPI'S 1964 created Research & Development Council was designated to supervise the study and to contract with a competent professional organization for the services and skills required. In order to make it objective, an outside firm with no loyalties to or connections with any Mississippi school of institution was selected.

Gov. Johnson said with the facts professionally analyzed, along with financing alternatives, "the people will be able —for the first time—to measure realistically the size of the educational improvement task that lies before us."

The second phase, yet to be authorized, calls for a general plan for the future development of education in Mississippi to serve as a guide to the key government and education officials immediately and in the years ahead. It will identify needs and indicate the programs, personnel, facilities and financing required to meet those needs.

GOV. JOHNSON said when all phases have been completed "the work will have resulted in an objective evaluation of the existing educational system, recommendations for more efficient organization and management and a comprehensive master plan for the development and financing of the educational system of the future."

"It is this master plan and a modern management system and an organizational structure capable of carrying it out which conceivably could propel Mississippi to national leadership in the vitally important work of providing practical answers to the society's changed and changing educational requirements," he said.

The Mississippi study will be headed by Jack C. Page, a vice president of the firm and chief of its new regional office in Dallas, Texas.

POVERTY UNIT'S LINK TO BOYCOTT STUDIED

8/30/66 MISS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 (UPI) — Antipoverty officials today ordered an investigation of reports that a Federal Head Start project had helped in a boycott of white merchants in Shubuta, Miss.

The boycott has been waged along with civil rights demonstrations that began Aug. 6 when Shubuta officials do not meet demands listed under the letterhead "Shubuta Head Start Committee."

Theodore M. Berry, director of community action programs for the Office of Economic Opportunity, said no antipoverty programs were authorized to include boycotts. He ordered an investigation.

The demands were sent to the mayor and alderman last month with a cover letter from the Shubuta Community Planning and Improvement Committee.

"As a matter of policy, we are not making grants for the purpose of fostering economic boycotts," Mr. erry said. "But that does not preclude individuals in a private capacity from participating in lawful civic endeavor."

Mayor George S. Busby has said that the signers of the letter, leaders of the demonstration and staff members of the antipoverty program are the same persons.

U.S. SUES OFFICIALS TO PROTECT PUPILS IN GRENADA, MISS.

MISSISSIPPI

Charges Police Stood By as Negroes Were Attacked —Injunctions Sought

9/14/66 NYT

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—The Justice Department brought suit today to require officials in Grenada, Miss., to protect Negro children from whites who are opposing school integration there.

In a suit filed in Federal Court in Oxford, Miss., the department charged that local public officials, including the sheriff and chief of police, stood by yesterday while a crowd of whites beat Negro school children.

[Protected by Mississippi highway patrolmen, Negro pupils attended newly desegregated schools in Grenada for the second day of classes without apparent difficulty, The Associated Press reported. More than 100 white adults clustered in the area jeering.]

According to a statement released here by Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, District Judge Claude F. Clayton was asked to grant both a preliminary and permanent injunction, ordering the Grenada officials to protect the children in the future and to arrest and prosecute those who assaulted or threatened them.

City Is One Defendant

Named as defendants were the City of Grenada; J. D. Quinn, its mayor; Gilbert Allen, Francis Criss Jr., H. J. Ray Jr., Rogers Burt, L. D. Boone Jr., and John Brewer, of the Grenada City Council; J. E. [illegible] City Manager; Pat Ray, chief of police, and Bugg Ingram, Grenada County Sheriff.

The complaint alleges that the city officials were aware of "an imminent danger" that whites would harass, assault and interfere with Negro students seeking to attend local schools that were ordered desegregated by Judge Clayton last month.

According to the suit, Chief Ray, Sheriff Ingram and other law enforcement officials watched yesterday as the children were assaulted. It alleged that unless an injunction was issued, Grenada officials would continue "in their willful failure and refusal" to protect the children and their parents.

The move by the Justice Department, taken under its power to safeguard the integrity of the Federal judicial process, is expected to be only the first legal step by the department to meet the violence in Grenada.

In past situations of official indifference to racial violence in the South, the department has frequently secured Federal criminal indictments under one or more Reconstruction civil rights laws.

Continued on Page 38, Column 6

U.S. SUES OFFICIALS IN GRENADA, MISS.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

One of these, a law that provides a 10-year prison sentence and $5,000 fine for conspiring to deny a person's civil rights, has been used by the Government against whites who use violence to oppose court-ordered integration.

Earlier, six New York Congressmen had joined with eight other members of the House of Representatives in a telegram to Mr. Katzenbach, urging that Federal indictments be brought against the guilty persons.

"We are shocked by reports that even little children have been beaten while exercising their constitutionally protected right to attend public school," the telegram said.

It was signed by Richard L. Ottinger, Adam Clayton Powell, Benjamin S. Rosenthal, William F. Ryan and James H. Scheuer, New York Democrats, and Seymour Halpern, New York Republican, and by George E. Brown Jr., Philip Burton, Don Edwards and Augustus F. Hawkins, California Democrats; Patsy T. Mink, Hawaii Democrat; John Conyers Jr., Michigan Democrat; Donald M. Fraser, Minnesota Democrat and Henry B. Conzalez, Texas Democrat.

Troopers Protect Negro Pupils At Integrated Grenada Schools

MISSISSIPPI 9/14/66

GRENADA, Miss., Sept. 13 (AP)—Protected by 50 Mississippi highway patrolmen in riot gear, Negro pupils entered newly desegregated schools here for the second day today without apparent difficulty. More than 100 white adults clustered in the area jeering.

The whites, who yesterday beat Negro students and newsmen and threatened others, turned on newsmen again today.

A window of one man's car was smashed on the street outside the school by the angry whites. Other cars were rocked and kicked.

A white man, mistaken for a reporter, was beaten to the ground as he talked with Constable Grady Carroll. The man, Henry Aaronson, a lawyer for the N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., his head bloody, was led away by officers.

"You better get the hell out of here right now," white toughs yelled at Jack Thornell, a photographer for The Associated Press. "We ain't going to have no picture taking here for that Yankee press."

A force of highway patrolmen, carrying tear-gas cannisters, riot guns and gas masks, moved in at this point and scattered the whites. The men and women reformed in small knots from the two Grenada (Gree-NAY-duh) schools.

The patrolmen earlier had been stationed about one block from the schools, where the Negro children encountered club-wielding white adults after class yesterday.

The patrolmen, part of a force of 175 sent into this tense north Mississippi town last night, had orders to protect the Negroes. About 100 Negro pupils desegregated the schools yesterday under Federal court order.

The 175 burly officers, in full riot dress, took over last night. They dispersed one hostile crowd early today. A white man who argued was slugged unconscious and carted off in an ambulance.

The crowd dispersed reluctantly, with cries of "Nigger lovers" and "I thought you were a good Mississippian!"

Several hundred whites, shouting defiance of both state and Federal authority, held a furious session last night in the City Hall auditorium to demand that the patrol be withdrawn.

"If you get that State Highway Patrol out of here there won't be a nigger left in Grenada," cried one man.

Mayor J. D. Quinn avoided replying to an angry query as to which official had called for patrol aid. But he said the move had been necessary, otherwise troops or United States marshals would have been sent in.

Under state law, the Highway Patrol may not go into a law enforcement situation off the highways unless local authorities invite them or the Governor orders them in.

Some 30 patrol cars were in this town of 8,000 residents yesterday — but they were not called in early to aid the city and county officers, most of whom merely watched the beatings.

Katzenbach Sues to Protect Grenada, Miss., Negro Pupils

MISSISSIPPI
AC 9/14/66

By The Associated Press

The Justice Department charged authorities at Grenada, Miss., Tuesday with wilfully failing and refusing to protect Negro children attending desegregated schools from assault by an angry crowd of whites.

The department entered a suit which Atty. Gen. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach said asked U.S. District Court in Oxford, Miss., to order Grenada officials to provide protection for the children. The suit also asks that the officials be ordered to arrest and prosecute those who assault or threaten the children.

The department said that unless such an order is issued, Grenada officials will continue "in their wilful failure and refusal" to protect the children and their parents.

In other racial developments, Negroes at Bogalusa, La., voted to stage a protest march despite a city ordinance banning such demonstrations after Negro pupils complained of harassment by white pupils. And about 300 Negroes staged a destructive demonstration at Des Moines, Iowa, after a football game.

A. Z. Young, president of the Bogalusa Civic and Voter League, told Negroes, "When you get some money, don't spend it on wine, get a gun."

Several hundred whites protested federal orders integrating schools before the city's school board. Police had dispersed armed groups of whites and Negroes at Bogalusa Monday.

White persons beat Negro pupils and white newsmen in Grenada Monday, and turned on newsmen again Tuesday.

White toughs yelled at Jack Thornell, an Associated Press photographer, "we ain't going to have no picture taking here for that Yankee press."

A car window was smashed outside a school. Patrolmen moved in at the scene where Negro children earlier encountered club-wielding white adults.

About 100 Negro pupils have desegregated schools at Grenada under federal court order.

The Des Moines violence broke out after a high school Cerebral Palsy benefit game attended by about 12,000 persons. The Negroes broke windows and destroyed property within an eight-block area.

The destruction took place near Good Park, where several similar incidents of violence took place this summer. Police said they were unable to determine what started it.

Gov. Harold Hughes said the disturbance was "an irresponsible act by a group of delinquents."

Authorities at Pointe A La Hache, La., are trying to decide what to do about one of five schools integrated under a federal court order.

The five schools had an enrollment of 5,400 before integration. Now, they have a total of about 1,200 whites and 140 Negroes. But there are no teachers at Woodlawn High, where 31 Negroes are attending.

The entire Woodlawn faculty joined the staff of a proposed private school, and the 250 white pupils at Woodlawn remained at home.

MISSISSIPPI 9/15/66

6 Whites Are Seized in Grenada as Negroes Attend Classes Peaceful

Associated Press Wirephoto

Calm prevailed yesterday as Negro students passed armed highway patrolmen on way to high school in Grenada, Miss.

By HOMER BIGART
Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., Sept. 14 —Local policemen, under Federal court order to protect Negro children attending previously all-white schools, arrested six white men today. All six are natives of Grenada and one of them, Jerome Shaw, owner of a cotton gin, is a prominent segregationist. The police and city officials, cited by the Justice Department for "willful failure and refusal" to protect Negro children and their parents, were under a temporary restraining order issued last night by Federal District Judge Claude F. Clayton in Oxford, Miss. Among other things, the order restrained them from "failing to arrest all persons who violate the criminal laws of Mississippi, or ordinance of the city of Grenada by assaulting, threatening, harassing or intimidating Negro students and their parents." Assistant Attorney General John N. Doar, who spent today collecting evidence here, plans to seek a preliminary injunction tomorrow on the protection of school children. So many city officials have been called to the Federal courthouse in Oxford for tomorrow's hearing that Judge Clayton took the precaution of ordering all Grenada schools closed for the day.

Continued on Page 22, Column 3

6 WHITES SEIZED IN GRENADA, MISS.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

School Superintendent Gayle Wilborn said Judge Clayton ordered the suspension because "he was concerned about what might occur while these officials were absent from the city."

For the first time since schools were desegregated Monday, Negro children went to classes today unmolested by white mobs. They were escorte dby a large force of state highway patrolmen, who were under stern orders from Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. to disperse what the Governor called "toughs and hoodlums." More than 30 Negro children were injured by mobs on Monday and yesterday.

The local police, meanwhile, went into action. Police Capt. W. C. Turner said the following had been arrested:

¶Jerome Shaw, 60 years old, a cotton gin operator, charged with disturbing the peace and destroying property. He was accused of attacking two cars carrying Negro children to the John Rundle High School yesterday. The children told reporters later that they saw "a middle-aged fat man" flail at the cars with a baseball bat. They said they were showered with glass when a rear window was smashed and that some of them were struck by the bat. Mr. Shaw was released in $400 bail.

¶Donald Bain, 19, charged with assault and battery yesterday near the school. He is accused of attacking a 12-year-old Negro boy who is in Mound Bayou Hospital suffering severe facial lacerations.

¶Archie Campbell, 20, and Robert Hall, 20, charged with having concealed weapons. A home-made blackjack, a logging chain and a rubber hose were found in the car they were driving. Young Campbell was later charged additionally with "fighting and disturbing the peace" at the school yesterday.

¶Harold Gee, 40, a construction worker, charged with "fighting and disturbing the peace" last night when a white crowd tried to break up a parade of Negroes around the square.

¶Jack Richardson, 38, charged with "fighting and disturbing the peace" during the same incident.

The City Council, under mounting pressure from moderates to speak up for law and order, issued a statement today saying it had been for law and order all the time. It was issued by Mayor J. D. Quinn.

"Law and order will be maintained in Grenada," the statement said.

"This is the position of the City Council. It has been the policy of the past and will continue to be the policy in the future. All persons violating any laws will be vigorously prosecuted in the courts. In no other way can order exist in Grenada. Full cooperation of all law enforcement agencies will eliminate lawlessness and insure peace and tranquility in our community."

Named in U. S. Suit

The entire six-man council along with the Mayor, Police Chief Pat Ray, Grenada County Sherrif Suggs Ingram and City Manager J. E. McEachin have been named as defendants in the Government's suit for an injunction.

This morning 87 Negro children marched to the formerly all-white schools without incident. The State Highway Patrol had sealed off the area near the Rundle High School and the adjacent elementary school, allowing no one but school children to enter. Segregationist crowds were nowhere in evidence.

Later about 12 Negroes picketed stores on the city square, continuing a boycott of white merchants that began in June. They carried signs demanding jobs and they encountered considerable heckling.

Down the street, Constable Grady Carroll, who wants to be sheriff of Grenada County, aired his personal views to television cameras.

Asked to comment on the mob assaults on newsmen while local police allegedly stood by without offering aid, Constable Carroll said that some reporters deserved a "cleaning."

"When they tell a lie they need a whuppin," he said.

From whom?

"From anyone who wants to give it to them," Constable Carroll said.

Texas Canyon Draws Visitors

CANYON, Tex. (AP)—The amphitheatre in Palo Duro Canyon has attracted thousands of visitors with its production of the musical drama "Texas." But the canyon itself has been an attraction for many people throughout the years. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Jones of Hereford, Tex., who celebrated their golden wedding this year, went honeymooning in the canyon in 1916. They traveled in a covered wagon.

Maryknoll Office Terms Cut

MARYKNOLL, N.Y. (Religious News Service)—The Vatican has given the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America (Maryknoll Fathers) permission to reduce the term of office of its superior generals from ten to six years. The authorization was granted by the Sacred Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith at the fifth General Chapter of the Catholic order here recently.

Negro Boy Tells of Attacks By Angry Mississippi Mob

MISSISSIPPI

AG 9/16/66

OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—A Negro teen-ager who attended a newly integrated Grenada school Monday told Thursday of being struck by a soft drink bottle thrown by screaming whites and of seeing a friend nocked to the ground and stomped.

"People were shouting, 'Stomp that Nigger, kick that Nigger, kill him," continued Tommy Williams Roberts, an eighth grader. "Then the sheriff walked slowly over and broke it up."

Roberts' testimony about the opening day of school came during a federal court hearing on a Justice department demand that Grenada authorities be made to protect Negro pupils.

A newspaper editor, a reporter and two FBI agents also testified along with several Negro parents and students.

REOPEN TODAY

Judge Claude Clayton ordered the hearing resumed. After conferring with Grenada authorities and Justice department lawyers, the judge said Grenada schools could reopen Friday.

The schools at Grenada, a north Mississippi town 45 miles southwest of here, did not hold classes Thursday. Clayton had told them to close because he said he feared for students' safety with many officials required at the hearing.

Joseph B. Lee, editor of the Grenada Sentinel-Star, testified that he attended meetings of the city council called to discuss problems that might arise with "colored people being put into the schools."

"The city council is vitally interested in maintaining law and order," he said. Lee added that the council "had a dread of what might happen."

WINDOW SMASHED

Felix Freelon, a Negro, told of driving his son and several other boys toward the high school. He said a crowd of screaming whites with clubs stopped the car. He told of one man smashing a window with a blackjack and "coming after me."

Freelon said he ran from the car to a policeman but the officer said he was busy.

The Justice department wants Judge Clayton to issue a preliminary injunction which would strengthen the restraining order he issued Tuesday night requiring Grenada authorities to furnish protection to Negro pupils.

The witnesses described vividly the beatings of the Negro pupils and newsmen administered by white adults armed with ax handles, chains, tree limbs and lead pipes.

Mrs. Mary Peyton said she felt her son would have been killed had he alighted from a car outside the school. She said the crowd of whites met the car as she approached the high school.

POLICE ACCUSED

Two policemen watched, she said, but made no effort to break off the crowd when they began throwing rocks at the car.

When her son tried to get out of the car, the whites rushed over and he jumped back into the vehicle, she said.

"They would have killed him," said Mrs. Peyton, "I'm afraid that's what would have happened."

James Bonney, Associated Press newsman from Jackson, described the beatings of Negro pupils and newsmen.

Bonney told of seeing Robert Gordon, United Press International newsman from Jackson, being attacked in front of the school. Booney said Gordon, with blows hitting him from all sides, ran to the school property where an officer was on duty.

The officer ordered Gordon off the school property and when he turned back, the whites began beating and kicking him again, the witnesses said.

GRENADA POLICE ARE CALLED LAX

Mississippi

U.S. Suit Says Authorities Watched the Beatings

9/16/66

By HOMER BIGART

Special to The New York Times

OXFORD, Miss., Sept. 15—Government witnesses testified today that the Grenada city and county police had made no attempt to stop mob attacks on Negro school children and newsmen near that city's newly desegrated schools on Monday and Tuesday.

Hearings opened on lawsuits that have been filed by the Federal Government and a civil rights group requesting a preliminary injunction to require authorities in Grenada to protect the pupils. The suit charges the local police and city officials with "willful failure and refusal to protect Negro children and their parents."

The Government called as its first witness James Bonney, a reporter for The Associated Press.

Mr. Bonney said he had witnessed attacks on two Negro boys, a white photographer and a white reporter by toughs armed with ax handles, chains and sticks.

All attacks, he said, took place near city and county policemen. But, he said, he saw no attempts by the police to restrain the assailants or arrest them.

In one incident, he said that Robert Gordon, a reporter for United Press International, tried to escape from a mob by running across the school ground ises by a county policeman. Then the mob caught Mr. Gordon again and knocked him to the strett, Mr. Bonney testified.

Rescued By Policeman

Finally, two policemen came up and rescued Mr. Gordon. Mr. Bonney said that one of the policemen told the mob: "O.K. boys, he's had enough."

Under cross-examination by Thomas A. Watkins of Jackson, counsel for the City of Grenada, Mr. Bonney was asked if the crowd was not too big for two police to handle.

"They could have made a start" Mr. Bonney said with a smile.

The witness said he had seen about six or eight other police officers near the school.

Had Mr. Bonney tried to stop the attacks, Mr. Watkins demanded.

"I'd had suffered the same fate," Bonney replied. "I would have been of no assistance."

Mr. Watkins asked if Mr. Bonney had done nothing to call police attention to the attacks.

"That wasn't my responsibility," Bonney said.

Why had not Mr. Bonney attempted to make a "citizen's arrest," Mr. Watkins wanted to know. There was suppressed

Government witnesses testified today that the Grenada city and county police had made no attempt to stop mob attacks on Negro school children and newsmen near that city's newly desegrated schools on Monday and Tuesday.

Hearings opened on lawsuits that have been filed by the Federal Government and a civil rights group requesting a preliminary injunction to require authorities in Grenada to protect the pupils. The suit charges the local police and city officials with "willful failure and refusal to protect Negro children and their parents."

The Government called as its first witness James Bonney, a reporter for The Associated Press.

Mr. Bonney said he had witnessed attacks on two Negro boys, a white photographer and a white reporter by toughs armed with ax handles, chains and sticks.

All attacks, he said, took place near city and county policemen. But, he said, he saw no attempts by the police to restrain the assailants or arrest them.

In one incident, he said that Robert Gordon, a reporter for United Press International, tried to escape from a mob by runing across the school ground ises by a county policeman. Then the mob caught Mr. Gordon again and knocked him to the strett, Mr. Bonney testified.

Rescued By Policeman

Finally, two policemen came up and rescued Mr. Gordon. Mr. Bonney said that one of the policemen told the mob: "O.K. boys, he's had enough."

Under cross-examination by Thomas A. Watkins of Jackson, counsel for the City of Grenada, Mr. Bonney was asked if the crowd was not too big for two police to handle.

"They could have made a start" Mr. Bonney said with a smile.

The witness said he had seen about six or eight other police officers near the school.

Had Mr. Bonney tried to stop the attacks, Mr. Watkins demanded.

"I'd had suffered the same fate," Bonney replied. "I would have been of no assistance."

Mr. Watkins asked if Mr. Bonney had done nothing to call police attention to the attacks.

"That wasn't my responsibility," Bonney said.

Why had not Mr. Bonney attempted to make a "citizen's arrest," Mr. Watkins wanted to know. There was suppressed laughter in the courtroom and an objection from a Government attorney, J. Harold flannery.

Question From Bench

Judge Clayton asked Mr. Watkins, "You're not seriously suggesting that's what he should have done?"

Mr. Watkins said that he merely wanted to point out that Mr. Bonney had done nothing to suppress the attacks.

This afternoon, the Government brought to the stand a number of Negro parents and children who said they had been stoned and struck by the crowd while police cars stood nearby.

One girl said that when she approached a police officer with a complaint, she was told, "I'm busy, I'm busy now."

Another witness, Mrs. Mary Peyton, a Negro, said her car had been stoned as she drove her son to school.

She testified that a constable, Grady Carroll, standing nearby, witnessed the stoning and the smashing of the window in the car but did nothing.

The hearings are brought by the Government and by the N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. They are before Federal Judge Claude Clayton.

Governor Pledges Help

Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. of Mississippi said today that State Highway Patrolmen would remain in Grenada, to stop any new disturbances aimed at preventing news covarage of school integration there.

In a telegram to Elmer W. Lower, president of A.B.C. News, Governor Johnson said the Highway Patrol would remain in Grenada "so long as the situation demands."

He said all law officers there would "use every means to quell violence."

"This office wants all of your news personnel to have every opportunity to report straight facts on matters of interest to your viewers."

MISSISSIPPI

26 9/17/66

GRENADA OFFICIAL GETS JAIL TERM

Constable Is Given 4-Month Sentence for Contempt

By HOMER BIGART
Special to The New York Times

OXFORD, Miss., Sept. 16—Constable Grady Carroll of Grenada was sentenced to four months imprisonment today by Federal Judge Claude Clayton for contempt of court arising out of a civil rights case.

The contempt charge arose out of an attack last July by Mr. Carroll on Peter Eichenberry of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law. Mr. Eichenberry was attempting to serve a subpoena on Constable Carroll when he was assaulted.

Judge Clayton interrupted the second day of hearing on a request for an injunction against Grenada City and County officials to sentence Mr. Carroll. During the testimony of the last two days, Constable Carroll has been cited frequently as a police officer who stood by while Negro children and newsmen were beaten by white mobs on Monday and Tuesday in front of newly desegregated schools.

At today's hearing Mayor J. D. Quinn and Police Chief Tat Ray testified that they thought their small police force—14 men—was sufficient to cope with the opening of the desegregated schools on Monday.

Judge Clayton seemed to be startled by the Mayor's testimony. "What you are saying," said Judge Clayton, "is that you were relying on a handful of policemen, assuming that the State Highway Patrol would come to your rescue if something happened."

No Inkling of Violence

Mayor Quinn and Chief Ray insisted they had no inkling that white mobs would appear at the schools.

A newsman who was beaten by a white mob on Monday in front of Grenada's newly desegregated John Rundle High School testified today that the local police made no arrests of the men who struck and kicked him.

He told a Federal Court hearing that the mob continued the assault after two city policemen had lifted him from the ground and held him by both arms.

A man poked him in the groin with an ax handle while the policemen held him, he testified.

But under cross-examination, James R. Reid, a photographer for The Memphis Press-Scimitar, said he did not mean to imply that the police were deliberately rendering him defenseless.

Mr. Reid said that a policeman said to him:

"Boy, you're going to get

State Highway Patrol would come to your rescue if something happened."

No Inkling of Violence

Mayor Quinn and Chief Ray insisted they had no inkling that white mobs would appear at the schools.

A newsman who was beaten by a white mob on Monday in front of Grenada's newly desegregated John Rundle High School testified today that the local police made no arrests of the men who struck and kicked him.

He told a Federal Court hearing that the mob continued the assault after two city policemen had lifted him from the ground and held him by both arms.

A man poked him in the groin with an ax handle while the policemen held him, he testified.

But under cross-examination, James R. Reid, a photographer for The Memphis Press-Scimitar, said he did not mean to imply that the police were deliberately rendering him defenseless.

Mr. Reid said that a policeman said to him:

"Boy, you're going to get killed. We've got to get you out of here."

By that time, he said, the mob had taken all his equipment. The policeman led him a block away from the mob and told him to run to the police headquarters and stay there, he related.

Negative Used in Evidence

He said that when his camera was returned to him it had been opened and some of the film had been destroyed. Ten of the negatives were salvageable, however, and one, submitted as evidence by the Government, showed a policeman in the background while the mob was beating up another Press-Scimitar photographer, Jack Cantrell.

Mr. Reid said that he saw the mob go into action around 12:25 P.M. when Negro children emerged from the school. He was standing in the yard, he said, and he heard "screaming and yelling and a man said 'Hot dog, they kicked one of them."

Then he said he noticed that Mr. Cantrell was being attacked by the crowd. Mr. Cantrell was knocked to the ground, "kicked and stomped" Reid said. He began taking pictures of the attack on Cantrell but the crowd saw him and he heard a yell: "There's another one. Get him."

"Four or five white adults, one a huge fellow, struck me on the head and body. They started taking my camera. I told them they could have the film and for a moment I thought we could negotiate. But then another assault wave—15 or 20 men—came running up and they all began hitting me. Police Chief W. C. Turner and two policemen appeared near me."

Pupils Remained in School

School Superintendent J. F. Wilborn, said that after the mob had assumed threatening proportions the Negro children were given permission to stay in the school auditorium.

Many of them, including a handful who had tried to run through the mob but had returned in fright, remained in the auditorium until the mob dispersed.

Then, Sheriff Suggs Ingram told them it was safe to leave and that they would be given an escort home.

Mr. Wilborn testified that Sheriff Ingram advised the children to leave by a rear door but that the Negroes had replied:

"No sir, we're going out the front door like white folks."

Thirty Negro children and their parents were injured by mobs Monday and Tuesday before the State Highway Patrol restored order.

Superintendent Wilborn produced records showing that 87 Negro children attended the previously all white John Rundle High School and the adjacent Lizzie Horn Elementary School Monday and that only 48 showed up Tuesday. On Wednesday, when the combined force of 300 Highway Patrolmen and game wardens had re-established security, the number of Negro children appearing at the desegregated schools rose to about 100, Mr. Wilborn said.

He said about 150 to 160 Negro children had chosen to attend the two schools.

A Church Voices Sorrow in Grenada Over Mob Violence

MISSISSIPPI—

By HOMER BIGART

Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., Sept. 18—There was a public display of contrition here today over the beating of Negro school children by white mobs last Monday and Tuesday.

At a call from the minister in the First Methodist Church, more than half the members of a congregation of nearly 500 came before the altar to kneel and pray for forgiveness. Some were weeping.

In the sermon, the Rev. C. B. Burt lashed out at the "bestiality" of the white adults who whipped and stomped the Negro children as they integrated two schools.

Mr. Burt said he had witnessed some of the mob action. He said he had seen Negro children stumble in terror as they tried to evade pursuit from a crowd brandishing clubs and chains. "I could hardly believe my eyes," he said.

Among his congregation were the former Grenada city manager, J. E. McEachin, who resigned while under attack for his moderate stand on civil rights, and Bradford Dye, Grenada's prosecuting attorney, who is also under attack but who refuses to resign.

No one walked out in protest when Mr. Burt delivered the strongest rebuke yet heard from a Grenada native against the violence that has put the city

Continued on Page 37, Column 5

GRENADA CHURCH EXPRESSES GRIEF

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

under Federal injunction to protect the Negro children.

Mr. Burt recalled that, as a chaplain in World War II, he had entered Buchenwald a few hours after the Nazi concentration camp was liberated. There he had seen "corpses stacked up for the furnaces," as well as "more than 50,000 living dead."

"I can tell you my heart was not filled with compassion for the German people," he said, "and yet I never saw an American soldier mistreat a German child."

Word that Mr. Burt intended to speak out against the violent element had spread through this town of 8,000 and the large red brick Church was filled to capacity.

Mr. Burt said he did not suspect that any of his congregation had taken part in the violence. But he wanted the members to ask themselves if they had done enough to forestall the "brutality."

As for himself, he said, he felt "a deep sense of guilt and shame" for not having been more outspoken on behalf of righteousness, law and order.

The churches of Mississippi have done too little to prepare the people for inevitable social change, he said, while the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Church has lost one of its finest young preachers to other states.

"Somewhere, somehow, the church has failed when there is this kind of hate and bestiality in a city of this size," Mr. Burt said. "Where was the church when these seeds were planted?"

Mr. Burt warned that Grenada was "in desperate trouble and will be for days to come."

He said "mean and vicious rumors" were being circulated against the "moderates" of Grenada. Two members of his congregation had even been accused of "hiding behind a hedge and taking pictures" of the mob, he said.

On Friday, Mr. Burt testified as a Government witness in the hearings at Oxford, Miss., that resulted in the issuance of the injunction. In his sermon, Mr. Burt said he had received an anonymous telephone call in which a man had asked:

"I just wanted to know if you went to Oxford to testify for the niggers."

"I testified just as any decent law-abiding citizen," Mr. Burt said, "but this man seemed to think I'd committed an act against the people."

None of the larger Protestant denominations has desegregated here and Mr. Burt said he did not think his own congregation was "ready" for it. Yet rumors abounded that "preacher Burt is going to integrate his church," he said.

TROOPERS GUARD GRENADA NEGROES

M/Ssissippi

Second Week of Integrated Schooling Begins Calmly

9/20/66

By EDWARD C. BURKS

Special to The New York Times

GRENADA, Miss., Sept. 19—The attitude of Grenada's shaken white population ranged from subdued or sullen to prayerfully hopeful today as about 160 Negro school children began their second week of integrated schooling without incident.

A good many whites in the community are seething with resentment, not only because of the school desegregation but also because of a week-long economic boycott by Negroes. Dr. King's visit appeared to be putting Grenada's fragile peace to a harsh test.

In addition, the hearing of the first-dozen cases by a city judge involving whites charged with assaults last week was scheduled. This, too, created an air of tenseness.

There were indications that some of the cases might be continued until next week.

Officials Enjoined

Federal District Judge Claude Clayton has issued a permanent injunction ordering local officials to protect the Negro school children from attacks or expose themselves to contempt of court charges.

Commenting on the judge's rebuke, delivered last weekend to city officials for what was termed their failure to prepare for the crisis, one official said today: "When the judge got through you thought you could crawl through the eye of a needle."

Judge Clayton's remarks had a great impact here, but the arrest of 13 whites, including a justice of the peace, on Federal charges that could bring maximum punishment of a 10-year sentence and a $5,000 fine, has been by far the most powerful restraint.

The town expects that other arrests in connection with last week's beatings may be made by Federal authorities.

This morning, under leaden skies, the Negro school children gathered at the Bellflower Negro church for instruction before marching to the downtown high school and elementary school outside which the assaults took place last week.

Negro enrollment at the two schools now constitutes 10 per cent of the total.

Instructions to the children were given by Hosea Williams, Dr. King's aide in charge, and by leaders of a California pacifist organization known as the Institute for the Study of Nonviolence.

Joan Baez in Lead

Then the children marched off, with Joan Baez, the folk singer, an officer of the pacifist group, up front with one of the little girls.

The marchers moved three blocks as television and press cameramen, who crowded the street, recorded every move. Then they turned into a street of large, handsome homes of whites. There the only thing approaching an incident took place.

A man outside an imposing white house shouted harshly for the crowd to make way, and as he did a woman with a child in her car backed furiously out of the driveway, honking her horn and forcing the line of march to break quickly. Then she drove off.

Near the schools, the marchers met 20 troopers gathered at a corner. A burly patrolman told Miss Baez that only students and parents could continue on to the schools, because of a school board request.

"Why?" Miss Baez and Ira Sandperl, director of the pacifist institute, demanded several times.

"This is America," Miss Baez protested.

She said she wanted to enter one school because the mothers of five Negro children had urged her to carry application forms to transfer their children to the former all-white school. The deadline for registration, already extended once, expired Sept. 9, but the Negroes want it extended again.

Finally a captain cut off the debate, answering another "But why" question with: "Because we say so."

Earlier, nine of the children were sent back from the high school. The school authorities reported the pupils had not been registered before the Sept. 9 deadline. A similar number reportedly were sent from the elementary school. School authorities said these children would go to the Negro school.

Miss Baez told reporters she was marching because of the guilt she felt for white Americans and the shame she felt that Negroes had been assaulted last week.

United Press International Telephoto

ACCOMPANIMENT BY JOAN BAEZ: Negro pupils, heading for integrated school in troubled Grenada, Miss., are led by Joan Baez, the folk singer, who is shown being stopped by a state highway patrolman. She was kept from entering the school site.

U.N. Peace Force Leaders Fear Outbreaks in Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Sept. 18 (AP)—United Nations peace force chiefs expressed fear today that there might be fresh outbreaks of shooting between the rival Greek and Turkish factions.

At Arsos, 15 miles southeast of Nicosia, the capital, more than 300 Greek and 300 Turkish inhabitants exchanged gunfire about midnight.

There were no casualties.

Tension has been high in Arsos for 10 days since the murder of a Turkish Cypriote and a reprisal attack in which one Greek Cypriote was killed and two others wounded.

There was also tension in about a dozen villages in the mountains of northwest Cyprus, where Turkish Cypriotes denied a Government charge that they had set more than a dozen forest fires.

291 Pledge Law, Order At Grenada

MISSISSIPPI
A C 9/21/66

(Copyright 1966 by the New York Times Co.)

GRENADA, Miss.—Nearly 300 prominent white citizens of Grenada issued a statement of principles Tuesday promising to use "all of our influence to the support of law and order."

The statement condemned last week's violence by white mobs against Negro school children and called on officials to give their fullest support to upholding the law, regardless of the circumstances or persons involved.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. led a peaceful march of about 160 Negro school children for several blocks to the vicinity of two of the schools that were desegregated last week.

King praised them as "young pioneers of freedom" and told them: "Go on with your disciplined kind of non-violence that will bring the whole nation and this whole community to your rescue."

The white community's statement of principles was signed by 291 white men and women, including bankers, industrialists, professional men, ministers, city officials and housewives.

"We believe that the effective education of our children is absolutely essential to their well-being," it said, "and we insist that an atmosphere conducive to learning be maintained in and around all schools."

Grenada's Leaders Score Attack on Negro Children

MISSISSIPPI

By EDWARD C. BURKS

Special to The New York Times

9/21/66

GRENADA, Miss., Sept. 20—Nearly 300 prominent white citizens issued today a statement of principles promising "all of our influence to the support of law and order."

The statement condemned last week's violence by white mobs against Negro schoolchildren and called on officials to give their fullest support to upholding the law at all times, regardless of the circumstances or persons involved.

This was the first strong public declaration by a substantial body of responsible white citizens in this mill town of 9,000 since the beatings that accompanied school desegregation last week.

It was issued while the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was here to rally Negroes and their children with moderate but firm language.

This morning the Negro leader led a peaceful march of about 160 Negro schoolchildren for several blocks to the vicinity of two of the schools desegregated last week.

The marchers started from the Bell Flower Baptist Church after Dr. King had addressed them. He praised them as "young pioneers of freedom" and gave this advice:

"Go on with your disciplined kind of nonviolence that will bring the whole nation and this whole community to your rescue."

Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference is making one of its key drives for Negro rights here. However, the conference and the local Negro

Continued on Page 32, Column 3

GRENADA WHITES VOW TO OBEY LAW

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3

Freedom Movement were turned down in their attempt to meet with top city officials to discuss the racial crisis.

In response to a telegram signed by the Rev. Sharper T. Cunningham, head of the Grenada County Freedom Movement, and by one of Dr. King's lieutenants, the City Council called a special session at 8:30 A.M. and then wired back its refusal.

The council's reply said that "official policy of the city is that every citizen of Grenada, regardless of race, color or religion, will be afforded the benefit of all the rights provided by law and will be protected in the enjoyment of these rights."

Following last week's violence, approximately 150 state troopers and 100 state fish and game wardens were rushed here to keep order. Most of them are still on the scene. Some city officials have indicated that they were willing to talk to local Negro leaders, but they have been adamant in their refusal to deal with Dr. King or his lieutenants.

Dr. King left the city by automobile for Memphis this afternoon, failing to appear for a news conference that had been scheduled earlier. He made no comment during the day on the statement of principles that had been signed by 291 bankers, industrialists, professional men, ministers, city officials and housewives.

The statement was most specific on the subject of the school situation, where all 12 grades were desegregated by a Federal Court order last week.

"We believe that the effective education of our children is absolutely essential to their well-being," the statement said, "and we insist that an atmosphere conducive to learning be maintained in and around all schools."

The state police have been protecting the schools, and no incidents of importance involving students have been reported.

Boycott Criticized

The effective Negro boycott of white merchants since July was described in the white citizens' statement as injurious to proper relationships and the best interests of the community.

But the statement concluded: "We are firmly committed to the proposition that both races can continue to live in this community on mutually satisfactory terms."

Among the signers were all city councilmen, Bradford J. Dye, city prosecutor; S. E. Krueger and W. W. Odom, top executives of Grenada Industries, a hosiery mill that is the town's largest plant; G. M. Moore and H. J. Ray Jr., top executives of the two banks, and J. M. Boyd, one of north Mississippi's largest contractors.

Associated Press Wirephoto

TO SCHOOL IN GRENADA: Youngsters in Mississippi town are escorted to integrated school by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., in the town to rally Negroes.

Dr. King arrived last night to address a capacity audience of nearly 1,000 Negroes packed into the First New Hope Missionary Baptist Church.

He told the enthusiastic group: "We're going to remain working here until Grenada comes to terms with its conscience. We plan to go all out to make Grenada a model city."

Thirteen whites have been arrested on Federal warrants charging them with conspiracy in the mass attacks on the Negroes last week. One Negro child, 12-year-old Richard Sigh, whose leg was broken during the assaults, remains in the hospital.

Man, 58, Killed by Cab

A 58-year-old man was killed early yesterday morning when he was struck by a taxicab as he tried to cross Broadway at 68th Street. The police said the man, Charles Miller, of 77 West 68th Street, was hit shortly after 2:30 A.M. by a cab driven by Manuel Rodriguez of 1781 Lexington Avenue. Mr. Miller was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival. Mr. Rodriguez was released after questioning.

MISSISSIPPI PACT ON POVERTY ENDED

Head Start Group Is Ousted by U.S. for Irregularities

10/4/66

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—The Office of Economic Opportunity announced today that it had terminated Mississippi's Head Start project, one of the most politically controversial operations of the antipoverty program.

The poverty agency said its decision was not based on political and civil rights considerations, though these have sharpened the dispute over the project between militant civil rights supporter and segregationists. The decision was based, the agency said on serious deficiencies and irregularities.

An internal agency report last week said about $654,000, more than 10 per cent of the grant made to the Mississippi pre-school training project last February, should not be approved as valid expenditures because supporting documents and information were lacking. No criminal charges are being made

A new, biracial group, organized under the influence of the White House, is expected to succeed the ousted Mississippi group, which operated in 20 counties.

The poverty agency said, however, that it was inviting applications from other qualified and responsible groups and hopes to expand its work to parts of the state so far untouched by the antipoverty program.

Head start is a health and school orientation for children of 3 to 5. It has a high degree of parent involvement and appears to be the most popular of the antipoverty projects.

The Mississippi project was known as CDGM, meaning Child Development Group of Mississippi. The sponsor was Mary Holmes Junior College.

Successor Agency

The successor agency will be run by a 12-man board headed by a Negro and a white as co-chairmen.

One is Aaron Henry, a Negro from Clarksdale. Mr. Henry is a civil rights pioneer who was one of the founders of the militant Mississippi Freedom Democratic party. He ran for governor in 1964 on that party's ticket, but has since left the group.

The other is Owen Cooper of Yazoo City, an official of the Mississippi Chemical Corporation. One of the members of the newly chartered group is Hodding Carter 3d, editor of The Delta Democrat-Times in Greenville.

The politically delicate task of setting up the new body was handled by Harry C. McPherson Jr., special counsel to the President, and Douglas Wynn, Greenville lawyer.

Meantime, Clyde C. Ferguson, Dean of the Howard University Law School, has complained to Sargent Shriver, director of the poverty agency, that some of his students, working as summer employes of the agency, had been "misused" in connection with the Mississippi investigation.

Mr. Shriver replied with a general denial and said he would investigate further. Howard is a Negro university in the District of Columbia.

Several of these students reported that they had been instructed to disguise themselves in their "movement clothes"—dress that would identify them with a civil rights organization — and find derogatory information about CDGM. One said he was directed to fly to Jackson, walk down the airport's left ramp, stop at the information booth, and ask for "Zed."

He said he did so and was told to find out whether any persons in CDGM were, or had been, members of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, or of a group advocating "black power," or the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party. If they found such information they were to report it and then find out if these individuals had used CDGM equipment.

SHRIVER OPPOSED ON FUND CUTOFF

MISSISSIPPI

Reuther Unit Scores Decision on Mississippi Head Start

NYT 10/6/66

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—A political issue is building up over the decision of Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, not to refund Mississippi's 28-county Head Start project for pre-school children.

The Citizens Crusade against Poverty, a national organization, is going to lead the fight against that decision. Walter P. Reuther, chairman of the crusade, expressed his concern in a statement today and said:

"I feel that it is extremely unfortunate that the Office of Economic Opportunity has announced a decision not to refund C.D.G.M. [Child Development Group of Mississippi] at the very time that a distinguished board of inquiry is making its investigation into this situation and is preparing to make its findings public."

Mr. Reuther said he had asked for a meeting with Mr. Shriver on Friday to tell him what the crusade's board of inquiry had found on its visit to Mississippi. He said the board would meet Saturday to droft its final report.

Also, said Mr. Reuther, he has called an emergency meeting of the crusade's executive committee next Monday in Washington to review the report.

A Mississippi meeting to protest the agency's decision has been called for Saturday in Jackson.

The crusade's staff here has accused Senator John A. Stennis, Democrat of Mississippi, and other segregationists of using their political power to kill the antipoverty project.

Mr. Shriver's office said the decision was based solely on failure of the project to measure up to minimum managerial needs. O. E. O. spokesmen specifically denied reports of White House interference.

A new biracial group has been chartered in Mississippi and will apply for Head Start funds. Hodding Carter 3d, editor of The Greenville Delta Democrat-Times, a member of the group, also denied published reports that the White House had something to do with its formation.

"If there were any conversations with the White House," he said, "they occurred too late in the process to influence us."

Mr. Carter said also that his group had not been formed as a rival of C. D. G. M. but only as a standby so that the poor children of Mississippi would not be deprived of Head Start advantages in the event C. D. G. M. was not refunded.

MISSISSIPPI TEST ON POVERTY SET

New Biracial Group Gets Its First Head Start Funds

10/13/66

Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 12—A newly chartered biracial group—Mississippi Action for Progress—formed to take over Project Head Start and possibly other antipoverty activities will test this state's prospects for improved race relations in the conduct of Federally financed programs.

MAP has been criticized by backers of the controversial Child Development Group of Mississippi, a civil rights-oriented organization. Its Head Start program has been terminated by Washington after a turbulent year of political conflict with Senator John Stennis, Democrat, and other Mississippians in Congress.

The new organization's first grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity was announced last night. It is $3-million, the first installment of $10-million reserved for Head Start projects.

Militant civil rights workers here have charged a "sellout" by Negro leaders who have joined in forming the Action for Progress group.

Appeasement Charged

The economic opportunity office rejected the Child Development Group's request for a new $20.3-million grant to extend its operations after Federal investigators had reported evidence of mismanagement. Friends of the group charge that the appeasement of Senator Stennis is back of the decision.

Champions of Action for Progress describe it as a "blue ribbon" group of white and Negro leaders. The group was quietly organized several weeks ago when the economic opportunity office first indicated that the Child Development Group would not receive further funds.

Action for Progress is the first state-recognized organization bringing together moderate and liberally inclined white business and civic leaders of the state and Negro leaders with a substantial following.

Its present board of 12, to be expanded to 18, is headed by Owen Cooper of Yazoo City, one of Mississippi's most powerful white industrialists, and Aaron Henry of Clarksdale, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, whose organization has been fought in the past by Mississippi politicians.

Other members on the board include G. L. T. Smith, Jackson Negro businessman and longtime leader in the civil rights movement; Dr. W. P. Davis, white Baptist minister and president of the Mississippi Baptist Seminary for Negroes; Leroy, Percy, Greenville banker and land owner whose family is part of the pioneer stock of the Delta country; Hodding Carter 3d, Greenville newspaperman, Democratic leader and liberal spokesman; Oliver Emmerich, McComb editor and publisher; Oscar Carr, Clarksdale cotton planter; Charles Young, Meridian Negro businessman and chairman of the Mississippi Democratic Conference; the Rev. M. W. Lindsey of West Point and James Gilliam of Clarksdale, a Negro Masonic leader.

Six members of the board will be drawn later from the poor in the poverty "target areas" in the state.

Gov. Paul B. Johnson, who is committed to a campaign pledge that he will never appoint a state biracial commission, has nonetheless endorsed the board and approved its incorporation charter.

That white leaders in Mississippi would sit down with widely known Negro integration leaders was unthinkable in the recent past. "It's still difficult to get people who have a lot to lose even at this stage of the game to do it," said a key figure in the group.

But the reaction in still-segregationist Mississippi to the new group has been unbelievable.

"I've only had one nasty letter," said Mr. Cooper, the chairman of the group, and "otherwise I have had nothng but a favorable reaction."

214 Jailed For March In Grenada

A 10/25/66
MISSISSIPPI

GRENADA, Miss. (AP) — Police arrested 214 Negro marchers — most of them school-age children — Monday when they refused to stop at barricades around integrated Grenada schools.

Sheriff Suggs Ingram said 101 of the demonstrators were sent to the Mississippi State Penitentiary at Parchman, about 45 miles west of here.

They were transported to Parchman in large stake-body trucks.

Ingram said those sent to the prison were all 15 and older and included 10 civil rights leaders and 91 parents and pupils.

Those arrested were charged with obstructing normal use of public sidewalks and refusing to obey an order to disperse.

Police said the marchers refused to turn back at highway patrol barricades two blocks from the school where patrolmen have been stopping everyone but pupils and their parents since early September, when violence against Negro pupils and newsmen accompanied the opening of schools.

Some of the younger Negroes arrested were later released to their parents, Ingram said.

There were no reports of violence and a number of those arrested remained in city and county jails.

City-County School Supt. Gayle Wilborn announced the school board filed suit in federal court at Oxford seeking a preliminary injunction "against persons interfering with school operation."

A hearing, he said, was scheduled for Monday before U.S. District Judge Claude Clayton.

The school system has suspended 287 Negro students, including almost all attending the integrated John Rundle High and Lizzie Horn Elementary schools, until Nov. 1.

The one-week suspension came Saturday after a walkout of Negro students the day before and the announcement of a Negro boycott of schools.

Shriver Here, Disagrees With Mississippi Group

AC. 10/25/66

War on poverty chief Sargent Shriver spent most of Monday in Atlanta meeting with a Mississippi group whose funds he had cut off. He found the meeting "productive" but the group termed it a "failure."

A plea by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on behalf of the Child Development group of Mississippi failed to convince the Office of Economic Opportunity director to refinance the group which conducted Head Start programs in 28 counties, but he left promising to work with them to "overcome serious deficiencies" in their program.

Shriver left about 3:30 p.m. to return to Washington, but the meeting continued into the night and the CDMG board announced its "keen disappointment at the failure of today's negotiations with Mr. Shriver."

"We expressly regret OEO's misinformation, intransigence and lack of understanding of Mississippi's problems," the board said.

'ALMOST INCREDIBLE'

Shriver called their statement "almost incredible" after what he considered a reasonable exchange of opinions and "candid exploration of areas of misunderstanding," but he reaffirmed OEO's determination to meet more with the group and see if it could be brought up to standard for refinancing.

CDMG leaders also expressed their intention to continue to meet, even though Monday's meeting couldn't even bring a statement of agreement on how it went.

Shriver said the money could not be resumed without "comprehensive reorganization."

"They would have to get rid of some of the people they've got and hire some new and different ones — professionals," he said.

KING BACKS

Dr. King called the program "one of the finest in the country —a paragon of what a community action program should be."

Calling the cut-off a response to political pressure by Sens. James Eastland and John Stennis and Gov. Paul Johnson, King said, "I see certain controls that don't look good to us."

King said he had come to express his "absolute support of CDGM," and added that he hoped funds would be restored "so that it will not be necessary to demonstrate or anything of that nature."

He said people on Head Start payrolls had been using their work time as well as government equipment for civil rights activities and had failed to handle contracts properly, control funds or follow OEO policies.

PURELY FISCAL

Shriver, however, called the decision to cut off CDGM "purely fiscal, administrative and programmatic . . . It was not political . . . There was evidence of people not doing their jobs properly."

'HONESTY, TRUTH' NEEDED

MISSISSIPPI

Dean Blasts Negroes Who Use CR Issue For Political Gain

Jackson Daily News 10/28/66

The time has come to criticize Negro leaders who are using civil rights issues to gain economic and political power to control large numbers of people, the executive director of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations said here Thursday.

Kenneth L. Dean of Jackson, in his director's report to the annual meeting of the biracial council, said that at least three Negro leaders in Mississippi are "taking on the characteristics of irresponsible political powers who would use economic and political powers to keep people from being free."

Dean declined to name the three Negro leaders.

He said that the Council on Human Relations should "plan its program on the basis of honesty and truth without regard to race."

Earlier in his report he had said that three things are vital if Mississippi is to improve its national image. He said they are:

—Desegregation of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol.

—Complete desegregation of local draft boards.

—Complete desegregation of the Mississippi Economic Council.

Concerning the highway patrol, Dean said. "There is no reason not to have people from every racial group involved in promoting the safety of the people of the state. Contrary to popular belief, the first interest of the highway patrol is to make our highways safer places for travel.

"It would be particularly helpful to our nation image if we would desegregate the patrol because many people think of the oversized white patrolman as representing all the negative force that has been attributed to our state. Desegregation of the patrol would give more people in the state a feeling of participation in the preservation of safety and in maintenance of law and order in our state."

Dean said that there are at present "at least two positions open on every draft board across the state. The issue of military service is becoming more and more a critical point

Continued on Page 16A

HUMAN RELATIONS SPEAKERS

Michigan Democratic Congressman John Conyers Jr., center, talks with the Rev. Duncan Gray of Meridian, left, and state NAACP President Aaron Henry of Clarksdale, prior to his address to the Mississippi Council on Human Relations Thursday.—Daily News Staff Photo by Charles Gerald.

(Conyers story p. 2)

DEAN

Continued from Page 1A

of discussion with undercurrent racial interest.

"It is right that Negroes should be involved in the decision making process regarding military manpower. I know of no better way to increase the level of patriotism in our state. Mississippians take great pride in this kind of loyalty. It would increase this feeling and be a symbol of good faith if desegregation of draft boards could be accomplished."

The Council director said that the Mississippi Economic Council "has done some of the more responsible work in our state in recent years. People from national concerns are constantly asking me about the MEC and if they are still leading the way in the promotion of better human relations. The last annual meeting of the MEC made a step i nthat direction.

"I recall that one speaker pointed out that the time has come for us to move and he was careful to point out that money is not segregated at the banks. The point has direct significance for the MEC and it would help the state considerably if the MEC could see fit to translate this into its own structure and program. Many local chambers of commerce have desegregated with little or no trouble."

CDGM

Correspondence

Were We Wrong about Mississippi?

Sirs:

In publishing the October 15 story entitled "Shriver Drops CDGM" [Child Development Group of Mississippi] The New Republic has lent itself to a continuing and scurrilous attack on the motives and good faith of the NAACP and its leaders, particularly those of Roy Wilkins.

The statement that "The White House called Roy Wilkins, head of the NAACP, who in turn got in touch with Aaron Henry," is a plain, unvarnished lie. Moreover, the author or authors of it know it is a lie, and they have fabricated it in order to cast a slur on the NAACP. Mr. Wilkins has not discussed CDGM with either Aaron Henry or anyone in the Administration.

Like many others, both groups and individuals, who have been deeply concerned about the future of CDGM and of the Headstart program in Mississippi, I have had conversations with Aaron Henry and with officials of OEO over the past six weeks. Our position has been to support fully that of Aaron Henry, our state president in Mississippi, of Charles Evers, our Mississippi field director, and of the NAACP state executive board, all of whom have been explicit in urging (1) that OEO renew its grant to CDGM, and (2) failing that, that some alternative machinery should be set up in order that the programs might continue. The executive board reaffirmed this position as recently as October 2, 1966. No representatives of the NAACP have met, secretly or otherwise, with Senator Stennis.

The true intent of the writer of your story is further underscored by his snide reference to Aaron Henry as "a one-time Mississippi radical who has turned moderate." Short of losing his life, no Negro in Mississippi can surpass Aaron Henry's credentials as a militant leader in the fight for racial justice. How many bombings, beatings and jailings does your writer require?

It is pertinent to note that the position of our Mississippi leadership was based on principle and that it chose for that reason to ignore the studied exclusion of NAACP participations from most of the programs conducted by CDGM. The references to NAACP in your story were thus not only untrue and unfair; they compounded an injury sought by forces in Mississippi which are dedicated to the elimination of NAACP influence from the state.

John A. Morsell
Assistant Executive Director
NAACP
New York, N.Y.

Your article . . . contains a number of major errors of fact and interpretation about Mississippi Action for Progress. Some can probably be explained by the press of time and the necessity to get something into type. Others are the obvious result of a deep bias in favor of CDGM, a bias which some members of MAP's present board of directors shared. But there are others for which the kindest word is untruth.

Item: MAP is not going to strip the Head Start programs which it will operate of their comunity action function. Its by-laws specifically provide for county committees which will be formed from those participating in the program in each county. These committees will have direct responsibility for program direction, policy recommendations and personnel supervision. It is MAP's deepest hope that within a very short time these committees can be spun off as independent units operating as CAP boards under separate financing and their own direction.

Item: MAP's board will not be entirely hand-picked by its first 12 members. Six additional directors will be elected by and from the counties in which MAP will operate Head Start programs. This, too, is stipulated in the by-laws.

Item: It is a lie to assert or imply that state NAACP members met secretly with Sen. John Stennis prior to or after MAP's formation. They have never done so. It is a lie to assert that the White House contacted Roy Wilkins who in turn contacted Aaron Henry to serve on the new board. The only contacts were made between MAP board members and OEO representatives. It is a lie to say that any White House assistant or Douglas Wynn had any part to play in putting the MAP board

THIS KIND OF CLOCK TELLS A DIFFERENT KIND OF TIME.

It even glows in the dark...like a Princess phone.

Time is just time you say? Well read how this Caslon Clock will change the way you read it.

It is a psychological fact (try it on friends) that when people look away from an ordinary clock (one with hands!), they seldom remember the exact time. They know about what time it is. This is because most often you just glance at a clock to orient yourself to the time . . . in relationship to some upcoming moment, date, event or whatever. But. When you glance away from this digital timepiece and someone asks you the time: you'll give it exactly. Right to the minute. "It is 3:43". That's the difference between seeing all 12 hours at once and this "digital readout" that states the precise time, and only the precise time.

The numbers of this plug-in electric clock can be read at a good 50-paces. A silent electric motor flips the plastic plates into view faster than the eye can see. One second it's 3:43 and then, suddenly, it's 3:44. Don't worry. The change is silent. Not even a "click"

This improved way of telling time is the 110V Caslon 201 digital electric table clock. If that sounds like a mouthful you should see it in 3-dimensional color. It's an eyeful. Beautiful, in the modern manner. The console shape is at home with any decor, in any room — or office. You have a choice of four colors (see coupon) to complement your furnishings. But most important, the Caslon 201 tells time in a way you can't mistake — won't forget! It is something of a conversation piece, too. People will stand there staring at it, waiting, trying to catch it changing time. But it is faster than a wink, and quieter than your wristwatch. (The precision synchronous motor is of the hysteresis type — with 18 poles — operating at a low speed to assure even, silent operation and a good long life.) Dimensions: 5½" x 3½" x 3½"

P.S. A beautiful gift — the kind you'd love to receive.

TAKE TIME - ORDER NOW

Mail to: HAVERHILL'S TNR 1029
526 Washington St., San Francisco, Calif. 94104
Please mail me the 110V Caslon 201 digital electric table clock.
☐ I enclose $24.90 plus $1.00 for Post. & Ins.
Satisfaction or refund guaranteed.
(California Residents Add 4% Sales Tax)
☐ Diner's ☐ Am. Expr. Acct. #_____
Underline your color: Snowhite Charcoal Red-Red Airline Blue Wheatgle Deep-Night
Name_____
Address_____
_____

© 1966 Haverhill's
Searching the World to bring you the Finest together. They did not. Wynn played absolutely no role in contacting or convincing anyone on MAP's board to serve.

NEW REPUBLIC

Item: It is a mistake to say that Owen Cooper and Aaron Henry were at any time co-chairmen of MAP. At MAP's first organizational meeting, held on Oct. 6, Cooper was elected chairman and Merrill Lindsey was elected vice chairman.

Item: Oliver Emmerich is not a loyalist Democrat but a long-time Republican, having backed Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 and Nixon in 1960. Several other board members are not Democrats or Republicans but independents.

Item: It is a misstatement to say that this board is intended as a political vehicle of any kind. Owen Cooper has no intention of running for governor in 1967. If anyone knows anything about Mississippi politics at The New Republic, he must know that service on a biracial committee of this sort would automatically destroy any white's political ambitions in Mississippi. Further, an item in the by-laws of MAP specifically states that no board member can run for any elective office, other than relatively inconsequential local ones such as school boards.

Your zeal in CDGM's behalf is not at issue. There is no one on MAP's board who had any desire to undertake this program as a device to kill CDGM. All were assured that there would be no Head Start program for countless Mississippi children unless a new board could be formed. MAP has only one intention: to bring Head Start to as many children as possible. It does not intend to compete in any counties in which there are existing Head Start centers.

The gratuitous remarks that MAP's charter provides that it shall be kept secret is, perhaps, an understandable misunderstanding, but it is standard language in all non-profit corporation charters to say that the charter need not be made public, just as the charter also says that there will be no issuance of stock, etc. The charter itself is and was a matter of public record.

MAP is a creation of its members. There have never been any conversations, deals or manipulation with or by any Mississippi official or any White House official in establishing the organization. In this case, I would suggest that final judgment on what MAP may do be suspended until you see what MAP does do.

Hodding Carter III
Greenville, Mississippi

In reply:

What is happening to CDGM is a kind of metaphor about the whole War on Poverty. CDGM put into practice the rhetoric of the larger poverty program. "In the flat cotton counties of Mississippi," we wrote in this journal a year ago, "the federal government has come close to subsidizing a movement of poor Negroes to change the pattern of their short, nasty, and brutish lives." Now that central theme of the War on Poverty has been muted. CDGM was cut off by the OEO primarily because it was so successful in its stated goal of community action to break the cycle of poverty. The lives of poor black people in Mississippi did change, by the experience of running their own affairs – in this case, a system of pre-schools

REPRINTS AVAILABLE

The B✤ Congress

The special report from the October 22 issue on the 89th Congress, with the tabulation of each member's vote on key issues.

1 – 9 copies . . . . 25 cents each
10 – 24 copies . . 20 cents each
25 or more . . . . 15 cents each

•

Mail payment and order to

The New Republic
1244 19th St., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20036

for 12,000 children at 121 centers in 28 counties throughout the state.

The impact of CDGM was not confined to kindergarten education. The thousands of parents who participated in running the schools and planning their policies, hiring staff and fighting the inevitable battles, took a new interest in their communities.

The newly activated Negroes had their "agenda" for what they wanted to happen in Mississippi. It was articulated clearly in some cases, and less explicitly in others – exactly as the political demands of Mississippi whites are expressed. But the activation of a large group of poor people with a different agenda for social development was thought to threaten those in power. CDGM's people threatened Senator Stennis, who certainly does not want a large, viable Negro opposition to develop. They threatened white leaders (and Negro "teachers and preachers") in the counties of Mississippi, who fear they are about to lose power. They also threatened those "moderates" in the state who have been trying to put together a new, Democratic coalition.

Mr. Carter is an architect of that new coalition. He is being unduly pessimistic when he says that participation in "moderate" activities destroys political futures. Quite the opposite is true; it is the hope of MAP's leaders that with the help of a base of poor Negroes on the one hand, and the services of the national Democratic Administration on the other, they can eventually emerge as the major political force in Mississippi. Mr. Carter and Aaron Henry, among others, helped found the Mississippi Democratic Conference to that end. It foundered, and its role was largely assumed by the Young Democrats, of which Mr. Carter is state chairman. The YDs have the support, to one degree or another, of the White House and of Senator Robert Kennedy. A few months ago, a Kennedy aide said that their "men in Mississippi" were Henry and NAACP director Charles Evers. One of the chief advisers to the YDs is Douglas Wynn, a long-time personal friend of President Johnson.

It is impossible to look at the complicated dealings between CDGM, the OEO, and the other Head Start groups in Mississippi, outside of that political context. Thus, when Mr. Carter says that his outfit, MAP, will "provide for county committees" and will have a "community action function," it is necessary to see that that function will be to shore up MAP's agenda for Mississippi, and the political power of the Carter-Henry coalition.

Thus, when Mr. Carter says that Oliver Emmerich backed Eisenhower in the fifties and Nixon in 1960, it is important to ask who he backed in 1964, and why he is now thoroughly associated with the group of rich Mississippians supporting President Johnson. The political map (no pun intended) of Mississippi is changing rapidly. Many 1964 Republicans were old Democrats. Many of the pre-1964 Republicans are now Democrats. And thus, when Mr. Carter says that the MAP board will not be "entirely" handpicked, it is worthwhile thinking about the mechanism of control on such a board. What kind of arrangement of power will obtain between 12 "handpicked" original members and six "elected" members from the counties? What will the pre-selection as well as the selection process be? It should be clear that the MAP board will be like most such boards – an instrument to effectuate the decisions of its most powerful members. That may not be wrong, or even unusual; but it is political.

About the details of the relationships between Stennis, Aaron Henry, Wynn, the OEO, the White House, Roy Wilkins, etc., which Mr. Carter questions, we can only say that we believe them all to be true as stated. Mr. Carter denies them, but offers no counterproof. Many of the items were subsequently checked and reported by other journalists, and repeated in The New York Times and The Washington Post. That, of course, is no proof of their accuracy, but Mr. Carter ought to put in at least as much evidence on his side as the reporters did on theirs. There is firm evidence that White House aide Harry McPherson spoke with Mississippians about the future of CDGM and was instrumental in the negotiations leading to the establishment of MAP.

One minor point: When the story of the establishment of MAP was leaked to the Jackson papers, officers had not been elected. It was known that Owen Cooper was the representative of "white power" and Aaron Henry represented "black power" in the coalition. It was assumed that they would be co-chairmen. Subsequently, Cooper was elected chairman, and Henry was not. But he remains the leader of the Negro side in the organization.

It is interesting to get verification of the national NAACP's interest in CDGM from Mr. Morsell. We had not heard that he, as Roy Wilkins' assistant, had "conversations" with Aaron Henry and with OEO officials since the end of August or the beginning of September. Did he carry on these conversations without the advice and consent of Roy Wilkins?

We have learned on good authority that William Phillips, the OEO's chief lobbyist, was in Biloxi in August for a convention of the Young Democrats, and caught up with Aaron Henry at that time. He told Henry that CDGM was as good as dead, and wondered whether he would like to form a new Head Start group to take its place. Phillips was known to be opposed to CDGM on "practical" grounds: he told some OEO officials that re-funding of CDGM might cost the OEO the whole antipoverty bill in Congress this year.

Phillips also tried to get the AFL-CIO head man in Mississippi, Claude Ramsey, into the anti-CDGM camp, but Ramsey refused. For one thing, he couldn't abide the thought of having Owen Cooper as a leader. Cooper, an industrialist, has been strongly anti-union, and Ramsey has been fighting him for a long time. Ramsey's refusal was crucial: it broke up the old Democratic Conference coalition, and excluded the big labor interests. Walter Reuther soon became the leading force behind the campaign to save CDGM. Reuther (and his organizational base, the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty) was able to draw church leaders into the fight. On October 14, some 80 ministers picketed for CDGM in front of the OEO building in Washington. The late churchman, Dr. Robert W. Spike (who was murdered last week in Columbus, Ohio), directed the Citizens Crusade's "Board of Inquiry" into CDGM. Its report concluded that CDGM had been an important social invention, that it deserved refunding immediately, and that the OEO's charges against its operating procedures were either irrelevant, correctable, or untrue. THE EDITORS ventional forms with unconventional love and its enjoyable sadnesses. Those films, like these novels, are high-level soap-opera: the credible dramatization of sophisticated daydreams.

Kauffmann, from page 21

In a recent survey of the current French literary scene J. G. Weightman notes "the French distinction between the inventive part of literature and that which respects already established forms and themes." Then he says: "At any given moment, a large body of writers is producing 'traditional' novels or plays and it may sometimes be the case – although a typical Parisian intellectual will never admit it – that the 'traditional' has a better chance of survival than the 'avant-garde'." The question of survival is not one with which we need afflict Miss Sagan, but Weightman's reminder – that the traditional is always continuing under the more newsworthy – is given emphasis by her work. And it reminds us that no form or method is ever dead when it is well used. The naturalistic play is dead, and we can all prove it, until an interesting one comes along, like Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The traditional novel is dead and, according to the French, deader in France than elsewhere, until Miss Sagan writes another book and proves that Colette has a descendant. Not an equivalent, but an active descendant.

BOOK HUNTING?
Any Book Located
No matter how old or long out-of-print. Name the book—we'll find it for you! (Title alone is sufficient.) All authors, all subjects. Fiction, nonfiction. No obligation. Write to—Dept. NEW BOOKS-ON-FILE
Union City New Jersey

EUROPE
An unregimented trip stressing individual freedom. Low cost yet covers all the usual plus places other tours miss. Unless the standard tour is a "must" for you, discover this unique tour before you go to Europe.
EUROPE SUMMER TOURS
255 Sequoia, Dept. N—Pasadena, California

A Poor Show

JAMES A. WECHSLER

On his return from the Asian front, President Johnson should swiftly review the tragic turmoil in Mississippi stirred up by Sargent Shriver's suspension of funds for the Child Development Group in that state. Such an inquiry into the poor politics of poverty may also involve some agonizing self-examination.

There is cruel drama in the story, with important national overtones. It is a desolate example of how a combination of misguided and mischievous men can destroy a long effort to create an integrated, militant middle in the battle for racial equality.

* * *

The CDGM "headstart" project began in the spring of 1965. It brought pre-school training and hot lunches to underprivileged kids in the state; it also enabled impoverished Negro parents to become active participants in the process of their own emancipation. To a memorable degree, as Walter Reuther and others recently pointed out in protesting Shriver's action, "poor Mississippi Negroes, for the first time in their lives, were teaching themselves and their children to stand up straight."

Inevitably such a program offended what is ponderously called the "white power structure." Many long months ago Sen. Stennis, a veteran Mississippi segregationist, opened fire on CDGM. Shriver has angrily denied that such pressures reached the White House and eventually dictated his course. One cannot pretend to read his mind or explore his subconscious. It can only be reported that the effect of his move has been calamitous and the explanations chaotic.

Responsible citizens who investigated CDGM's operations have sharply disputed the criticisms advanced as the excuse for its termination and its replacement by a more respectable anti-poverty unit called Mississippi Action for Progress, reportedly formed at the request of "high officials" in Shriver's OEO.

This alphabetical nightmare should not obscure the harsh reality; what many conscientious, thoughtful men—from Reuther to A. Philip Randolph and Dr. Kenneth Clark—viewed as one of the most meaningful breakthroughs in the poverty struggle has been scuttled, with explosive consequences.

* * *

Shriver's defense has been weakened rather than improved by obviously planted stories depicting him as the savior of Mississippi's poor from scheming extremists identified with the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

Previously the OEO had contended that its decision was strictly based on alleged evidence of malpractice in the Child Development Group—nepotism, payroll-padding, bad accounting. The allegations were investigated and challenged by a commission of inquiry led by Randolph.

Perhaps because of the frailty of the official case against CDGM, the new indictment is now being leaked; the organization, it is asserted, had become a playground and bank account for the "black power" SNCC faction. The scapegoats have been found: the poor remain the victims.

No serious observer doubts that some SNCC adherents have been involved in the banned group. But, as civil rights leader Joe Rauh—himself a target of some SNCC orators—remarked yesterday, "You can't blacklist SNCC's dedicated people from any real poverty program in Mississippi." He added:

"The point is that they didn't control CDGM. Shriver's action is worth three battalions to the people who are trying to build a separatist movement—and the effects will be felt throughout the country."

* * *

The sad impact of the conflict can be seen in the divergent stands taken by Mississippi NAACP leader Aaron Henry and Marion Wright, representing the NAACP's legal defense fund.

Henry, with a long record of valor in civil rights combat, felt obliged to lend his name to the new Action for Progress group because he was unhappily convinced—after a losing fight to preserve CDGM — that the alternative was abandonment of any federal anti-poverty drive in the state. He is now being harshly jeered as an "Uncle Tom." Miss Wright, a spirited, forthright young attorney, refused to go along. The split between them symbolizes the degree to which the OEO action has fractured and fragmented the ranks of those who were gallantly trying to build a progressive coalition in the face of segregationist violence and separatist diversion.

Further underlining the misfortune is the disclosure that Claude Ramsey, head of the AFL-CIO in the state, has declined to identify himself with Shriver's new project because of the presence of notorious anti-union figures. Ramsey is prepared to stand by CDGM.

* * *

Now there will be new speeches by eminent men deploring extremism in racial affairs and blaming the "black power" advocates for all retrogression in civil rights. Meanwhile the inflammatory word will go out to the ghettos that what began as a noble adventure in Mississippi has been crushed by the white political masterminds in Washington. It is almost beyond belief that Shriver, presumably with the assent if not the prodding of the President, so stubbornly defied the counsel of Reuther and Randolph in this episode. But that is how American leadership compounds its own troubles, seemingly in deference to a Senator from Mississippi.

10/25/66 N.Y. Times

Letters to the Edit

Shriver Defends Mississippi Action

To the Editor:

The Times of Oct. 19 prints an advertisement, "Say It Isn't So, Sargent Shriver," dealing with the Head Start grants in Mississippi. For over two weeks I have been saying that it isn't so, that it hasn't been so, and that it will not be so. But some people are unwilling to listen.

It is shocking to me that any Americans, and especially members of the clergy, should rush into public print impugning the motives of a public official before ascertaining the facts. Fortunately, and to their credit, a number of other individuals called for information before agreeing to sign and then withheld their signatures.

Only yesterday, I heard one of the signers of The Times advertisement, the Rev. Joseph Merchant, apologize before the Senate Appropriations Committee for any statements impugning my integrity in the Child Development Group of Mississippi (C.D.G.M.) situation.

He was speaking on behalf of 73 urban executives from the United Church of Christ, the Episcopal Church and the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. On Monday the Rev. G. H. Woodward expressly apologized for any action of theirs which impugned my honesty or integrity. I trust that others will similarly have second thoughts after they learn the facts.

Achievements Hailed

In many respects the C.D.G.M. project constitutes one of the more promising chapters in the history of the poverty program. For my associates and for myself I take great pride in this exciting chapter. Last February, despite problems and loud protests, we refunded C.D.G.M. with one of the largest Head Start grants in the country, more than $5 million.

More Office of Economic Opportunity staff time and energy went into this program than any other one in order to secure good management and good results. There is no group of individuals in the country which has sought and prayed for C.D.G.M.'s success more than we have at O.E.O. And while many others have talked, O.E.O. has actually worked to try to make C.D.G.M. successful.

As the official charged by law to authorize expenditures under O.E.O. programs, I was faced last August with reports about C.D.G.M. operations which I could not ignore. I received the unanimous recommendations of all the O.E.O. officials involved — Community Action, Head Start, auditing, inspection, civil rights, legal—that under the circumstances I could not again legally refund C.D.G.M.

The justification for this decision has been available and is available for anyone interested. Briefly, it adds up to substantial evidence of gross mismanagement and irresponsibility. We could not in clear conscience and under the law ignore findings of payroll padding, nepotism, conflict of interest and misuse of property.

I reject and resent charges that forces outside my agency made that decision—or that I knuckled under to any pressures. I did not. Nor did any other of the many officials here at O.E.O.

Criticism Questioned

It grieves me particularly that clergymen should give their names to a statement that refers to what unnamed people—referred to only as "they"—have said or charged or done. And I have heard from signatories who confess that they never read the statement before agreeing over the telephone to sign it. Now they regret they did so.

My principal associates have met with the C.D.G.M. board of directors. I will see the board next week. The channels of communication with C.D.G.M. or any other group are always open.

But the plight of Mississippi children is more important to me than the status of any single organization. The children of Mississippi have my pledge that there will be Head Start classes for them and that these will be programs of which they and we can be proud, one in which the poor themselves, Negro and white, will have a major role.

SARGENT SHRIVER
Director
Office of Economic Opportunity
Washington, Oct. 19, 1966

OFFICES OF THE NEW YORK TIMES
Main Office..229 West 43d St., N.Y. 10036. Telephone: (212) 556-1234

Classified Advertising and Microfilm Reference, 1457 Broadway, Bet. 41st & 42d Sts.

Albany.....Press Room, State Capitol
Atlanta.....The Constitution Bldg.
Boston.....News, Herald-Traveler Bldg.; Advertising, 140 Federal St.
Chicago.....News, 435 N. Michigan Advertising, 333 N. Michigan
Detroit.....News, Free Press Bldg.; Advertising, Northland Towers, Southfield
Houston.....Chronicle Bldg.
Kansas City, Mo..2706 Power & Light Bldg.
Los Angeles....News, Statler Center Bldg., 900 Wilshire Blvd.; Advt., 612 S. Flower St.
Miami....Advertising, Dupont Plaza Center
Philadelphia.....News, Bulletin Bldg; Advertising, Philadelphia Nat'l Bank Bldg.
San Francisco.....News, 814 Mission St.; Advertising, 315 Montgomery St.
Trenton.....Press Room, State House
Washington.....1701 K St., N. W.

MISSISSIPPI

The National Citizens Committee for the Child Development Program in Mississippi†

Robert Amory, Jr.
Attorney
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Hugh H. Annett
Director of Presbyterian Urban Church Work
Kansas City, Missouri

Pearly Ayers
Executive Director
Council of the Southern Mountains

The Rev. Thomas M. Anthony
Protestant Episcopal Diocese
Santurce, Puerto Rico

The Rev. Compton Allyn
Dir., Cincinnati Industrial Mission
Cincinnati, Ohio

The Rev. Richard Bauer
Director of National Missions
Detroit Presbytery (Michigan)
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Richard Boone
Director
Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty

Raymond K. Beals, Chairman
Urban Work, Ohio Conference
The Methodist Church

Joan Bowman
Center for the Study of Law and Society
San Francisco, California

Fay Bennet
Executive Secretary National Sharecroppers Fund
New York, New York

Miriam Behrstock MSW
Social Worker
New York, New York

Jerald Brauer
Dean
Divinity School, University of Illinois

The Rev. Larry Black
Director
Camden Metropolitan Ministry (New Jersey)

The Rev. August Vanden Bosch
Executive Director
Florida Council on Human Relations

Robert Benjamin

The Rev. James S. Caskey
Minister for Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Providence, Rhode Island

The Rev. Clarence Colwell
Minister of Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
San Francisco, California

The Rev. Edgar H. Chandler
Executive Director
Church Federation of Greater Chicago

Eugene S. Callender
Executive Director
New York Urban League

Robert H. Courtney
District Superintendent
Cleveland District (Ohio)
The Methodist Church

Dr. Max Conley
Director of Urban Strategy
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

The Rev. Richard Carley
Urban Strategist
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Cleveland, Ohio

The Rev. George R. Cox
Director of Metropolitan Mission
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Indianapolis, Ind.

Desmond Callan, M.D.
Member Executive Committee Medical Committee for Human Rights
New York, New York

Mr. Jack Conway
Executive Director
Industrial Union Dept.
AFL-CIO

The Rev. Robert Chapman
Oakland Urban Consultant
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. George D. Colman
Director of Metropolitan Mission
Synod of Michigan
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. David Glenn Cassie
Pastor
Second Presbyterian Church

Say it isn't so, Sargent Shriver.

Awesome political pressures have made Poverty Chief Shriver abandon a Head Start program considered "the best in the country." 12,000 Mississippi children, and their parents, are praying that he'll change his mind.

Of all the battles Sargent Shriver has fought to keep politics out of the poverty program, none is more crucial than the campaign to save the Child Development Group of Mississippi.

At the moment, it looks as if Sargent Shriver has given up.

CDGM was started in the summer of 1965 to try to bring pre-school training, hot lunches, parental involvement and community action to Mississippi, where none had ever been before.

The aim was to get the poor to do for themselves; to operate outside of the state power structure that had made their development as individuals, let alone as members of a community, impossible.

Wrote a leading journal: "All summer long, an energetic but amateur CDGM staff struggled under intolerable conditions: the hostility of local politicians, threat. So they want Sargent Shriver to drop CDGM and then channel the funds through a group of directors they'll approve.

They've accused the CDGM of everything from nepotism to using a school kitchen to prepare food for the Meredith Marchers. And with their charges in one hand, and a collection of political threats in the other, they may have made Sargent Shriver knuckle under. All he has to do, they say, is replace CDGM with another board. Then they will allow a grant to go through.

A panel of thirteen distinguished Americans*, chosen by the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty to investigate CDGM, was in Washington last week to present their findings. The Citizens Crusade is a private action group financed by national foundations, The United Automobile Workers and other organizations and individuals.

MISSISSIPPI

Say it isn't so, Sargent Shriver.

Awesome political pressures have made Poverty Chief Shriver abandon a Head Start program considered "the best in the country." 12,000 Mississippi children, and their parents, are praying that he'll change his mind.

Of all the battles Sargent Shriver has fought to keep politics out of the poverty program, none is more crucial than the campaign to save the Child Development Group of Mississippi.

At the moment, it looks as if Sargent Shriver has given up.

CDGM was started in the summer of 1965 to try to bring pre-school training, hot lunches, parental involvement and community action to Mississippi, where none had ever been before.

The aim was to get the poor to do for themselves; to operate outside of the state power structure that had made their development as individuals, let alone as members of a community, impossible.

Wrote a leading journal: "All summer long, an energetic but amateur CDGM staff struggled under intolerable conditions: the hostility of local politicians, threats from Mississippi whites . . . makeshift facilities and utterly untrained employees." On the face of it, the program didn't have a chance of succeeding. But it did succeed.

This past summer's program covered 121 preschools in 28 counties for more than 12,000 children. Just as important, maybe even more so, the children's parents were involved. They ran the show themselves, and the difference between that and being on the receiving end of handouts was the real key to CDGM's glowing success. Poor Mississippi Negroes, for the first time in their lives, were teaching themselves and their children to stand straight.

CDGM was what Sargent Shriver had in mind when he spoke about the maximum feasible extent to which the poor may participate in the solutions of their own problems. It is, in fact, what Sargent Shriver and his poverty warriors have been battling for all along.

Unfortunately, the prospect of a self-emancipated Negro community isn't welcome everywhere in Mississippi. Some political leaders see it, with clarity, as a threat. So they want Sargent Shriver to drop CDGM and then channel the funds through a group of directors they'll approve.

They've accused the CDGM of everything from nepotism to using a school kitchen to prepare food for the Meredith Marchers. And with their charges in one hand, and a collection of political threats in the other, they may have made Sargent Shriver knuckle under. All he has to do, they say, is replace CDGM with another board. Then they will allow a grant to go through.

A panel of thirteen distinguished Americans*, chosen by the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty to investigate CDGM, was in Washington last week to present their findings. The Citizens Crusade is a private action group financed by national foundations, The United Automobile Workers and other organizations and individuals.

Ten panel members went to Mississippi and found, among other things, that the program's participants, children and parents alike, had gained "a great sense of dignity and a great sense of participation." The CDGM, they said, has made "an outstanding contribution" and has involved poor children and adults in a "more meaningful way" than virtually any other Head Start program in the country.

The issue is clear: politics and the Poverty Program don't mix. Nobody knows it better than Sargent Shriver. Unless it's those 35,000 Mississippians who are waiting, now, to hear that they can continue the work they started.

THE NATIONAL CITIZENS COMMITTEE for the CHILD DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM in MISSISSIPPI

Room 1151 475 Riverside Drive,
New York, New York 10027

*Panel Members: A. Philip Randolph, President, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters/Dr. Robert W. Spike, Divinity School, University of Chicago/Paul Anthony, Exec. Dir., Southern Regional Council, Inc. Philip Bernstein, Director, Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds/Dr. Kenneth B. Clark, City College of New York/Frances Coe, Board of Education, Memphis, Tenn. Eli Cohen, Exec. Secretary, National Committee on Employment of Youth/Clarence Coleman, Director, Southern Regional Office, National Urban League, Inc., Atlanta, Ga. Robert Coles, Research Psychiatrist, Harvard Univ., Cambridge, Mass./Ralph Helstein, President, United Packing House, Food and Allied Workers, Chicago, Ill./Dr. Vivian W. Henderson, President, Clark College, Atlanta, Ga. John P. Nelson, Jr., Attorney, New Orleans, La./Judge Justine Wise Polier, Family Court, N.Y.C.

The National Citizens Committee for the Child Development Program in Mississippi†

Robert Amory, Jr.
Attorney
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Hugh H. Annett
Director of Presbyterian Urban Church Work
Kansas City, Missouri

Pearly Ayers
Executive Director
Council of the Southern Mountains

The Rev. Thomas M. Anthony
Protestant Episcopal Diocese
Santurce, Puerto Rico

The Rev. Compton Allyn
Dir., Cincinnati Industrial Mission
Cincinnati, Ohio

The Rev. Richard Bauer
Director of National Missions
Detroit Presbytery (Michigan)
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Richard Boone
Director
Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty

Raymond K. Beals, Chairman
Urban Work, Ohio Conference
The Methodist Church

Joan Bowman
Center for the Study of Law and Society
San Francisco, California

Fay Bennet
Executive Secretary National Sharecroppers Fund
New York, New York

Miriam Behrstock MSW
Social Worker
New York, New York

Jerald Brauer
Dean
Divinity School, University of Illinois

The Rev. Larry Black
Director
Camden Metropolitan Ministry (New Jersey)

The Rev. August Vanden Bosch
Executive Director
Florida Council on Human Relations

Robert Benjamin

The Rev. James S. Caskey
Minister for Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Providence, Rhode Island

The Rev. Clarence Colwell
Minister of Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
San Francisco, California

The Rev. Edgar H. Chandler
Executive Director
Church Federation of Greater Chicago

Eugene S. Callender
Executive Director
New York Urban League

Robert H. Courtney
District Superintendent
Cleveland District (Ohio)
The Methodist Church

Dr. Max Conley
Director of Urban Strategy
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

The Rev. Richard Carley
Urban Strategist
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Cleveland, Ohio

The Rev. George R. Cox
Director of Metropolitan Mission
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Indianapolis, Ind.

Desmond Callan, M.D.
Member Executive Committee Medical Committee for Human Rights
New York, New York

Mr. Jack Conway
Executive Director
Industrial Union Dept.
AFL-CIO

The Rev. Robert Chapman
Oakland Urban Consultant
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. George D. Colman
Director of Metropolitan Mission
Synod of Michigan
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. David Glenn Cassie
Pastor
Second Presbyterian Church
Providence, Rhode Island

The Rev. Robert Castle
Rector
St. John's Episcopal Church
Jersey City, New Jersey

The Rev. William Daniels
Minister of Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Louisville, Kentucky

The Rev. John Deboer
Secretary for Urban Church
United Church of Christ

Leslie W. Dunbar
Executive Director, Field Foundation
Mt. Vernon, New York

The Rev. Robert Davidson
Director, Dept. of the Urban Church
Presbytery of Chicago
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Rudolph Devik
Olympia Episcopal Diocese
Seattle, Washington

The Rev. Robert Forsberg
Director
Wider City Parish
New Haven, Connecticut

The Rev. John Fischer
Minister for Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Minneapolis, Minn.

The Rev. Howard S. Fuller
Secretary for Urban Church
United Church of Christ
Buffalo, N.Y.

W. Wallace Francis, (Mr. and Mrs.)
(Concerned Citizens)
Silver Springs, Maryland

James Farmer
President
Center for Community Action Education
(former CORE Director)

The Rev. George Fuller
Urban Missioner
St. Paul, Minnesota

Dr. Aaron E. Gast
Dean, Cornwell School of Theology
Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. Paul Gebhard
Board Member
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Oak Park, Illinois

The Rev. Roger Granados
Presbyterian Urban Consultant
Arlington, Texas

Dr. Richard Gordon
Episcopal Diocese of Missouri
St. Louis, Mo.

The Rev. William Grace
Director of Urban Church Work
North Coastal Area, California Synod
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Ralph Hawley
Dir., Church Strategy and Development
Synod of Kentucky and West Virginia
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. James Hogue
Field Administrator
Synod of Colorado
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Arthur Higgins
Minister at Large
United Church of Christ
New Haven, Connecticut

Dr. Harry Hamilton, Jr., Professor
State University of New York
Albany, N.Y.

Mrs. Harry Hamilton, Jr. (Laverne)
Publications Specialist
State University of New York
Albany, N.Y.

The Rev. Joe A. Harding
District Superintendent, Seattle District of The Methodist Church

The Rev. William H. Hervey
Director of Metropolitan Mission
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Los Angeles, California

Mrs. Cathryn Hoeldtke
Board Member
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Richard Hirsch
Director of Religious Action Center
Union of American Hebrew Congregations

The Hon. K. Leroy Irvis
Majority Caucus Chairman,
House of Representatives,
State of Pennsylvania

Dr. Eugene Johnson
Director
Adult Education Association in the U.S.
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Lawrence Jones
Chairman, Honolulu CAP Committee
Honolulu, Hawaii

Eugene I. Johnson
Executive Director
Adult Education Association of USA
Washington, D.C.

Paul Jacobs
Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions
Santa Barbara, California

The Rev. Robert E. Johnson
Associate for Church and Housing
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Mr. Charles M. Judd
Breneman, Inc.
Cincinnati, Ohio

The Rev. Frank Keneill
Director, Methodist Mid-Towne Parish, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Rev. Mineo Katagiri
Minister for Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Seattle, Washington

The Rev. Julian Keiser
United Church of Christ
Conference in Southern California
Pasadena, California

Sheila Kamerman MSW
Social Worker
New York, New York

The Rev. Gaspar Langella, Ph.D
Presbyterian Work with Cuban Refugees
Miami, Florida

Dr. Charles T. Leber, Jr.
Chairman, Div. of Interpretation Strategy
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. G. Daniel Little Coordinator of Mission Strategy
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Thomas Luce
Pastor
West Presbyterian Church
Wilmington, Delaware

The Rev. J. Lichy
Presbyterian Field Administrator
Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. James H. Laird, Senior Minister
Central Methodist Church
Detroit, Michigan

Lucille Lieberman
Assistant Director, Social Service Centers, University of Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

Beth Ann Lane
Social Worker Institute for Juvenile Research
Chicago, Illinois

Thomas Levin, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Psychiatry
Albert Einstein College of Medicine
New York, New York

Roslyn Levin MSW
Social Worker
New York, New York

Lorraine Liebman MSW
Social Worker
New York, New York

The Rev. Ganse Little
Moderator of the General Assembly
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. William London
Director of Strategy
Synod of Arizona
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

James A. McDaniel
Associate for Community Organization and Poverty
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. William A. Morrison
General Secretary
Bd. of Christian Education
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Paul O. Metzger
District Superintendent,
St. Paul District
Minnesota Conference of The Methodist Church

Dudley Morris
Staff Associates
Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty

Dr. Paul O. Madsen
Associate Executive Secretary
American Baptist Home Mission Societies
American Baptist Convention

The Rev. George Mace
Director, Urban Program
St. Louis Presbytery
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Percy Moore
Executive Director
Council for Civic Unity
San Francisco-Bay Area
San Francisco, California

The Rev. Richard E. Moore
Associate Executive
Presbyterian Synod of Ohio
Columbia, Ohio

The Rev. Charles Mowry
Executive Secretary
Methodist Young Adult Project
Nashville, Tennessee

The Rev. Graydon E. McClellan
General Presbyter
Washington Presbytery
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Joseph W. Merchant
Staff Chairman
United Church of Christ
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Robert Marston
Minister
Christ Congregational Church
Silver Springs, Maryland

Rosealee Meyers
Social Worker
Hull House
Chicago, Illinois

The Rev. Marion E. Mansell
Executive of Mid-South Synod
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Barry Menuez
Associate Secretary
Episcopal Executive Council
New York, N.Y.

The Rt. Rev. Paul Moore, Jr.
Suffragan Bishop
Episcopal Diocese of Washington
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Anthony J. Morley
Episcopal Diocese of Missouri
St. Louis, Mo.

The Rev. James P. Morton
Director, Urban Training Center
Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Kenneth G. Neigh
General Secretary
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Paul Opperman
Massachusetts Institute of Technology
Cambridge, Mass.

Milton Ogle
Executive Director
Appalachian Volunteers

Dr. Joachim Prinz
President
American Jewish Congress

Mrs. Katherine Peak
Vice Chairman, Emergency Committee to Aid Farm Workers
Los Angeles, California

Dr. Rufus P. Perry
President
John C. Smith University
Charlotte, N. C.

Shad Polier
Attorney
New York, New York

Dr. George T. Peters
Chairman
Presbyterian Division of Evangelism
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Taylor Potter
Princeton Theological Seminary
Princeton, N.J.

The Rev. Scott Paradise
Boston Industrial Mission
West Newton, Mass.

The Rev. Arlie Porter
Executive, Detroit Metropolitan Assoc.
United Church of Christ
Detroit, Michigan

Rev. Richard Plummer
Synod Executive
Synod of Ohio
United Presbyterian Church
Columbus, Ohio

Monsignor Charles Owen Rice
Pastor, Holy Rosary Catholic Church
Member, Bd. of Consultors to the Diocese of Pittsburgh

Mrs. Louis J. Reizenstein (Florence)
Member, Human Relations Commissions of Pittsburgh and State of Pennsylvania

Dr. David Ramage, Jr.
Executive Secretary
Gen'l Dept. Mission Strategy and Evangelism, Bd. of Nat'l Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Walter P. Reuther, President
International Union of Mobile-Aero-Space and Agricultural Implement Workers of America

The Rev. Kris Ronnow
Executive Director
Inter-Religious Council on Urban Affairs
Chicago, Ill.

The Rev. David Rohlfing
Minister for Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Newark, New Jersey

The Rev. Robert Ryland
Director of "COMMIT"
Los Angeles, California

The Rev. Richard G. Rautio
Presbyterian Young Adult Project
Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Albert Rogas
Citizens Against Poverty
Oxnard, California

Dr. Kurt Reichert
Associate Professor of Social Work
Bryn Mawr College
Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania

Mr. Bayard Rustin
Dir., A. Phillip Randolph Institute
New York, New York

Gerald Rosenfield, M.D.
Psychiatric Fellow, Mt. Zion Hospital
San Francisco, California

Katherine Reissman
Yeshiva School of Social Work
New York, New York

The Rev. Raymond Schwartzback
Pastor
Calvary Presbyterian Church
Detroit, Michigan

The Rev. Reuben A. Sheares II
Secretary for Urban Church
United Church of Christ
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. David Shields
Urban Missioner
Palisades Presbytery
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. James R. Smucker
Illinois Conference
United Church of Christ
Chicago, Ill.

The Rev. Arthur Stanley
Director of Urban Work
Disciples of Christ
Indianapolis, Indiana

The Rev. Richard Siciliano
Synod of New York
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Syracuse, N.Y.

The Rev. Arthur M. Stevenson, Jr.
Associate Executive
Presbytery of Philadelphia
Philadelphia, Pa.

Mike Svirdoff
National Association for Community Development

Mr. John Sarla
Citizens Against Poverty
Oxnard, California

Dr. Irving Spergel
Professor of Social Work
University of Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

Dr. Lila Swell
Professor of Social Work
University of Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

The Rev. John Stevens
Associate Coordinator
Episcopal Executive Council
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Theophilus M. Taylor
Secretary
The General Council of Gen. Assembly
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

Dr. Furman Templeton
Executive Director
Baltimore Urban League

The Rev. David Thornberry
Rector, Christ Church
Shaker Heights
Cleveland, Ohio

Arthur Thomas
Poverty Rights Action Center

The Rev. George Todd
Associate for Urban and Industrial Ministries, Bd. of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. William A. Wendt
Rector, St. Stephen and The Incarnation
The Protestant Episcopal Church
Washington, D.C.

Dr. Allan Wade
Professor of Social Work
University of Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

Kenneth Watson
Chairman, Conference Board of Christian Social Concerns
Southern California-Arizona Annual Conference
The Methodist Church

George Wiley
Director
Poverty Rights Action Center

The Rev. Bennie Whiten
Minister of Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Jacob Wagner
Minister
Faith Evangelical and Reformed Church
State College, Pennsylvania

Dr. Gayraud S. Wilmore, Jr.
Commission on Religion and Race
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Kenneth Waterman
Executive Director
United Neighborhood Services
Kansas City, Mo.

Robert Williams
Executive Director
American Institute of Planners
Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Charles W. Watt
Presbyterian Director of Strategy
St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. William P. Weiss
(Concerned Citizens)
Bethesda, Maryland

The Rev. Charles R. Wilson
Development Officer
Episcopal Executive Council
New York, N.Y.

Houston Wilson, Attorney
Georgetown
Delaware

The Rev. G. H. Jack Woodard
Executive Officer
Episcopal Executive Council
New York, N.Y.

Dr. David J. Wynne
Executive Vice President
Goodwill Industries of Pittsburgh

Gibson Winter
Professor
Divinity School, Univ. of Chicago

Harlan R. Waite
Executive Director
All-Nations Foundation
Los Angeles, Calif.

The Rev. Herbert White
Director, Board of Urban Ministries
Rochester Area Council of Churches (NewYork)

The Rev. Arthur Walmsley
Executive Secretary
Episcopal Division of Christian Citizenship
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Andrew Young
Associate Director
So. Christian Leadership Conference

The Rev. Philip Young
Field Associate
Board of National Missions
The United Presbyterian Church, USA
Blacksburg, Va.

The Rev. Philip Zabriskie
Home Department
Episcopal Executive Council
New York, N.Y.

The Rev. Donald E. Zimmerman
Executive, Presbytery of Chicago
The United Presbyterian Church, USA

The Rev. Walter Ziegenhals
Minister of Metropolitan Mission
United Church of Christ
Cleveland, Ohio

(IN FORMATION)

†Organizations listed for identification only.

The Washington Post
Times Herald

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1966

Manna From OEO Falls on Mississippi

By Nicholas von Hoffman
Washington Post Staff Writer

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 12 Poverty gold is falling over Mississippi.

Nearly $12 million of it has been dropped on the State by Sargent Shriver and his Office of Economic Opportunity in five hasty and hectic days of philanthropy.

In at least one case the recipients got their money before they had signed an application for it.

Rust College, a small Negro institution at Holly Springs, was granted $1,200,000 last Friday for an Operation Headstart program before OEO had received formal application for the money. The college's president, Ernest A. Smith, said he hoped to complete by today an application explaining how the money he has been given would be spent.

So anxious was Washington to get the green stuff off its hands that Jule Sugarman, national Headstart Director, dispatched a representative from his office to Holly Springs with orders to draw up preliminary plans and a budget within 18 hours. The resulting budget is more than $600 per child over the recommended OEO maximum figures.

See MISSISSIPPI, A4, Col. 3

MISSISSIPPI—From Page A1

Manna From OEO Falls on Mississippi

It is generally believed here that the reason for the speed is OEO's desire to eliminate the Child Development Group of Mississippi which has been running most of the State's Headstart programs. The theory in Jackson is that OEO wants to give all its money away so that there will be none left to give to Child Development.

OEO has been accusing Child Development of mismanagement of funds, of having its nursery schools infiltrated by Black Power cabalists, as being excessively centralized and even excessively decentralized. OEO's critics say the real reason Shriver wants to kill off Child Development is pressure from Mississippi's

A $700,000 money missile was landed on top of a group called Southwest Mississippi Opportunities on the strength of an application telephoned to Washington by a member of OEO's 15-man task force here.

The task force is an administrative pickup team rushed into the state a few weeks ago. Its director, Robert N. Moore, is a former Democratic congressional candidate from Tennessee who runs a 4-man management consulting firm out of Nashville and Atlanta.

"I don't think it would be correct to say that approval was given over the telephone," explained Moore, who used to be an OEO staffer, "but, yes, yes, certain documents were transmitted telephonically."

The biggest stake in the OEO Klondike belongs to Mississippi Action for Progress. This group, which is so new only 11 of its 18 board members have been selected, is meeting today in Yazoo City to pick an executive director to spend the first $3 million of a promised $10 million

The Washington Post
WSPAPER E1 SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1966

Question of Credibility

The chief victim of Mr. Sargent Shriver's current maneuvering in Mississippi is Mr. Sargent Shriver himself. His Office of Economic Opportunity is currently trying anxiously to close the

The Washington Post
Times Herald

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1966

Manna From OEO Falls on Mississippi

By Nicholas von Hoffman
Washington Post Staff Writer

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 12 Poverty gold is falling over Mississippi.

Nearly $12 million of it has been dropped on the State by Sargent Shriver and his Office of Economic Opportunity in five hasty and hectic days of philanthropy.

In at least one case the recipients got their money before they had signed an application for it.

Rust College, a small Negro institution at Holly Springs, was granted $1,200,000 last Friday for an Operation Headstart program before OEO had received formal application for the money. The college's president, Ernest A. Smith, said he hoped to complete by today an application explaining how the money he has been given would be spent.

So anxious was Washington to get the green stuff off its hands that Jule Sugarman, national Headstart Director, dispatched a representative from his office to Holly Springs with orders to draw up preliminary plans and a budget within 18 hours. The resulting budget is more than $600 per child over the recommended OEO maximum figures.

See MISSISSIPPI, A4, Col. 3

MISSISSIPPI—From Page A1

Manna From OEO Falls on Mississippi

It is generally believed here that the reason for the speed is OEO's desire to eliminate the Child Development Group of Mississippi which has been running most of the State's Headstart programs. The theory in Jackson is that OEO wants to give all its money away so that there will be none left to give to Child Development.

OEO has been accusing Child Development of mismanagement of funds, of having its nursery schools infiltrated by Black Power cabalists, as being excessively centralized and even excessively decentralized. OEO's critics say the real reason Shriver wants to kill off Child Development is pressure from Mississippi's two segregationist Senators, John Stennis and James O. Eastland, who have attacked the preschool program for children since its beginning two years ago.

The Rust College situation has a second shadow over it. The college's board chairman, W. Astor Kirk, is a Shriver employe. Reached in his Austin, Texas, office where he is OEO's Deputy Regional Director, Kirk appeared to be backing away from Washington's largessa. "I don't know what the decision of the Board will be on the grant" Kirk declared. "We meet on Oct. 26 and we'll decide whether or not to take it then."

College President Smith indicated something like abashed confusion: "We're sorry we got caught by a situation we weren't aware of. We weren't aware of all these political undercurrents."

A $700,000 money missile was landed on top of a group called Southwest Mississippi Opportunities on the strength of an application telephoned to Washington by a member of OEO's 15-man task force here.

The task force is an administrative pickup team rushed into the state a few weeks ago. Its director, Robert N. Moore, is a former Democratic congressional candidate from Tennessee who runs a 4-man management consulting firm out of Nashville and Atlanta.

"I don't think it would be correct to say that approval was given over the telephone," explained Moore, who used to be an OEO staffer, "but, yes, yes, certain documents were transmitted telephonically."

The biggest stake in the OEO Klondike belongs to Mississippi Action for Progress. This group, which is so new only 11 of its 18 board members have been selected, is meeting today in Yazoo City to pick an executive director to spend the first $3 million of a promised $10 million grant.

One of the local residents with Mississippi Action describes its genesis as follows:

"OEO got in touch with us. We didn't seek them out. That was in August. Their theme was always that the decision not to refund Child Development had been made. It was Sugarman and Berry (Theodore Berry is director of OEO's Comunity Action Program) who did the talking. Their whole thesis was for us to hustle it. They pressured us to make an announcement. They sent down two people from Washington to draw up our application.

"There still wasn't any board. We got together a rush-through charter. Most of it was copied from another organization's. We did it because some way had to be found to take care of the children."

The Washington Post
WSPAPER R1 SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1966

Question of Credibility

The chief victim of Mr. Sargent Shriver's current maneuvering in Mississippi is Mr. Sargent Shriver himself. His Office of Economic Opportunity is currently trying anxiously to close the very conspicuous gap between its high-minded press releases and its coarsely unjust abandonment of the Child Development Group of Mississippi. The OEO has made a variety of charges against the Child Development Group, but none of them is wholly convincing. All of them suggest that the OEO is moving rapidly away from the great purposes that Mr. Shriver himself set in its early days.

The Child Development Group is running Head Start kindergartens, chiefly with Federal funds, in 28 counties of Mississippi. OEO charges that some of the money has been used for civil rights work, and that other money has vanished. The Child Development Group reports that it has instituted tight management procedures, under professional guidance, that ensure accountability.

One must assume that some of the Federal money has been lost, or strayed. But the Mississippi case bears comparison with the history of HARYOU-ACT in Harlem, which lost track of very large sums of money. But HARYOU-ACT continues to get heavy Federal grants. OEO is able to distinguish between the two examples, but it is a narrow and lawyerish distinction that only raises further doubt in a disinterested mind. The Child Development Group is operating almost as an underground, in a part of the country where in recent and fresh memory people have been killed for doing approximately what the poverty workers are doing. If their relationships with the white community are not as warm as OEO would like, it is at least understandable. In Harlem the OEO has deliberately subsidized open and purposeful examples of black nationalism.

The Child Development Group is run mostly by Mississippi Negroes for local Negro children. It is a highly creative, loosely organized, and by no means unsuccessful departure in unorthodox educational techniques. It has made substantial progress where there was very little upon which to build. If OEO persists in its error, and refuses further funds to this courageous and highly useful movement for these insufficient reasons, it will be guilty of an inexplicable injustice. The OEO could very properly give funds to other kindergarten and community action projects in Mississippi beside the Child Development Group, which claims no monopoly. But it cannot break off all support to the Child Development Group without tarnishing its own credit and credibility throughout the Nation.

THE NEW REPUBLIC

Shriver Drops CDGM

Sargent Shriver last week officially announced termination of the Child Development Group of Mississippi, the controversial Head Start program. In September, this journal predicted he would do so. In part Shriver's decision was in response to pressures from Senator Stennis and represents the desires of the White House.

The Head Start program is to be stripped of its community action functions which had involved many poor Negroes, and handed over to an 18-man biracial board of "moderate" Mississippi Democrats. The White House was instrumental in setting up the board. The President is anxious to paste together a loyalist Democratic party in Mississippi in time for next year's gubernatorial elections, and the CDGM program has been sacrificed to this end.

Harry McPherson, Jr., special counsel of the President, negotiated the deal. About a month ago, he called Douglas Winn, a Greenville, Miss., lawyer, who is a personal friend of the President's. Following this conversation, Winn got two "moderate" Democrats to agree to be members of a new board. Owen Cooper, president of the Mississippi Chemical Corp., agreed to be co-chairman. Leroy Percy, chairman of Mississippi Chemical, would be a board member. Both Winn and Percy are members of the President's Club. Cooper is considered to be a possible "moderate" candidate for governor of Mississippi next year. The White House called Roy Wilkins, head of the NAACP, who in turn got in touch with Aaron Henry, a one-time Mississippi Negro radical who has turned moderate; Henry agreed to be the other co-chairman. The board draws heavily from young moderate Democrats and older men who have remained loyal to the national party. The young Democrats include people like Hodding Carter, III, an editor, and Charles Young, a Negro businessman. (He too is a member of the President's Club.) Among the older loyalists are Oliver Emmerich, a newspaper publisher, and Oscar Carr, a plantation owner.

Early in September, Henry, Cooper and Percy met with Shriver in Washington, where future plans were discussed. Representatives from the Mississippi NAACP are also understood to have met in secrecy with Senator Stennis.

On September 13, Cooper, Carter and Percy filed a charter for a new non-profit corporation to take over CDGM's Head Start programs. The three whites signed the papers; the charter stipulates that they have authority to appoint the 15 other members. This means the Negroes will be dummies. Involvement of the poor is out the window. Contrary to OEO guidelines, the corporation charter is to remain secret.

All summer the OEO had been investigating CDGM, in some instances using law students from Howard University as undercover agents.

In announcing termination of CDGM, the OEO put out a voluminous cover story. It said examination of CDGM's affairs had revealed "serious deficiencies and irregularities" in the program, and that because of the shabby state of books and records, payment of $654,000 would have to be held up. This is a curious situation. In February OEO gave CDGM a six-month grant for $5.6 million. And then, to make sure the administration of the program did not become muddled, it employed three consultants at $100 a day, and sent them, along with a staff specialist in systems management, to Jackson, where the four have been throughout the grant period. Moreover, during the six months of the grant, Ernst & Ernst, a reputable and thoroughly established accounting firm, with a local office at Jackson, has been employed to audit the books. This cost an estimated $40,000. In July, Ernst & Ernst in a letter to officials at CDGM said, "As you know, various persons from OEO and from the GAO have had occasion to visit your operation . . . and it is believed that those who have visited and inspected the accounting system and the system established for internal control and check have found it acceptable and for the most part praiseworthy."

October 15, 1966

HEAD START TALKS RESUME IN CAPITAL

MISSISSIPPI

Reconciliation Is Sought on Mississippi Project

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 — The controversy over Mississippi's suspended Head Start project was back on the negotiating table at the Office of Economic Opportunity tonight.

Spokesmen for the project, called the Child Development Group of Mississippi, entered the meeting hopefully at 3 P.M., But two hours later the conferees were reported talking about "gasoline receipts."

One of the antipoverty agency's complaints about the project was its management and accounting procedures, including a lack of receipts or canceled checks. Sources at the project have pointed out that gasoline stations and other retailers in Mississippi are not accustomed to giving receipts or accepting checks from Negroes, nor are poor Negroes accustomed to doing business that way.

Autonomy a Vital Point

The preoccupation with these details suggested to those on the outside that the negotiations had not taken up such essential points as the right of th e Missi sippi group to select its own board of directors and executive officers. The office of Economic Opportunity's conditions for refinancing the project included the replacement of the Rev. James McCree, board chairman, and John Mudd, executive director.

The office financed the transportation of the project's board from Mississippi for the meeting today. Nine or 10 made the trip. Also present for the group were Mr. Mudd and Kenneth Neigh of th e Board of Presbyterian Missions, which with Mary H olmes Junior College ar the nominal sponsors of the Mississippi pr oject.

Julie Sugarman, who runs the Head Start program for the office of Economic Opportunity, and Donald M. Baker, the office's general counsel, were the principal representatives of Sargent Shriver, director of the antipoverty agency. Vice President Humphrey, who has offere to help toward a settlement, was reported standing by.

4 Committees Fight

The cutoff of funds for the Mississippi project more than two months ago have provoked a national protest by religious and civic groups and individuals who accused Mr. Shriver of giving in to Senator John Stennis and other powerful Mississippi Democratic officials. At least four committees of the project's backers have been formed to fight for a renewal of funds.

Mr. Sugarman's most recent important communication to the project, dated Nov. 25, said: "O.E.O.'s October decision not to refund Mary Holmes [a cosponsor] was based on the judgment that the organization could not be refunded within the terms of our legislation, which requires a finding of administrative and program competence.

"Therefore there must be a clear and significant change in the organization before we can consider a further grant. As my previous letter indicated, changes in leadership at both the board and administrative levels of C.D.G.M. are an absolute requirement."

$8,000 in Jewels Stolen

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14 (UPI)—Jack Diamond, a jewelry salesman from Brooklyn, reported to the police last night the theft of his automobile containing two cases of jewelry worth more than $8,000.

GOP Aims at Eastman In Hard-Fought Campaign

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau Memphis Commercial-Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 3 — Mississippi Republicans are turning what historically has been routine general election affirmation of Democratic primary nominations into a hard-fought campaign.

Theme of the GOP effort to unseat Democrat Sen. James O. Eastland and four of his party's congressional standard-bearers is "countdown for '66." It is being shaped in a series of workshops tutored by Raymond V. Humphreys, director of education and training for the Republican National Committee.

MISSISSIPPI

Clarke Reed of Greenville, chairman of the state party, said Mr. Humphreys' participation, along with other national party political organization professionals "is clear evidence of the importance the national party places in our state and our people."

The Republicans are making President Johnson's Great Society the issue and tying in the Mississippi Democrats for local color.

GOP SPOKESMEN assert the Mississippi Democrats "talk one way in the state and another in Washington." It is an obvious reference to the Democrats holding on to their affiliation in the state party which has repudiated the national organization's platforms and policies and claiming their rights in the party's congressional ranks in Washington.

Cognizant of the 1964 Republican presidential elector win in Mississippi which swept into office the state's first Republican congressman since the Reconstruction Era, the Democrats are taking the challenge seriously.

Republican Congressman Prentiss Walker, who is relinquishing his fourth district post to oppose Sen. Eastland, has more or less set the pattern of the opposition. He said "no one can be loyal to two people when they have as divergent views and philosophies as the people of Mississippi and those in the national Democrat party."

POINTING to Sen. Eastland's consistent support of the national party presidential candidates, Mr. Walker called on Mississippians to "repute Jim Eastland for his political game of playing both ends against the middle by paying only lip service to the people of Mississippi while showing his true loyalty lies within the framework of the national Democrat party."

Mr. Walker has been making a swing around the 82 counties, while Sen. Eastland has confined his campaigning up to now to speeches before various group meetings. Sen. Eastland will formally open his campaign later this month at Forest in central Mississippi's Scott county where he was born.

The Eastland forces are concerned for two reasons — the increased Negro vote, now estimated at 159,000 to the white's 561,000, and the attitude of labor. It's not that those groups are pro-Walker, but anti-Eastland.

TWO STATE senators, elected as Democrats, have swung over to the Republican side. Sen. W. B. Alexander of Cleveland in the heavily Negro populated delta, switched too late to be nominated by the Republicans in the first congressional district but is running as an independent endorsed by the GOP. He is opposing Democrat Congressman Thomas Abernethy of Okolona, in the white-hill sector of northeast Mississippi.

Sen. S. B. Wise of Jonestown in the delta's Coahoma county, is opposing Democrat Congressman Jamie Whitten of Charleston, also in a delta county—Tallahatchie.

Mississippi

Laurel Pools Ordered Mixed

LAUREL (AP) — U. S. Dist. Judge Harold Cox Friday ordered the City of Laurel to post signs at both city owned swimming pools advising that "Any citizen regardless of race or color is invited to make use of the pool."

Cox issued oral instructions following a hearing in the case filed by the Justice Department.

The government had asked an injunction restraining the city from further segregation of the pools. Cox did not issue an injunction but said the matter would be left open "to await further developments."

The Justice Department claimed that last summer white civil rights workers were refused admission to the Oak Park Pool for Negroes and Negroes were refused at the Daphne Park Pool.

Clip & file each state

Associated Press Wirephoto

FIRST LADY AND THREE WHO WANT TO BE

JACKSONVILLE, April 2—Wives of four candidates for governor, including Florida's First Lady Mrs. Haydon Burns, are shown at the Florida League of Wobmen Voters convention here. They are (L-R) Mrs. Richard Muldrew of Melbourne, Mrs. Burns, Mrs. Scott Kelly of Lakeland and Mrs. Robert King High of Miami. Mrs. Muldrew's husband is a Republican, the others Democrats.

Urban Position Strengthened In Reapportionment Proposal

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

MISSISSIPPI

JACKSON, Miss., April 2—A reapportionment plan strengthening the urban position in the rural-controlled Mississippi legislature has been offered the current general assembly to ward off federal court distribution of the 122 House seats and 52 Senate posts among the 82 counties. It completely disregards the racial makeups of the political subdivisions.

A three-judge federal court has served notice that the present apportionment must be squared with the "one man-one vote" guideline set by the United States Supreme Court before the 1967 elections and accomplished at the present session before it adjourns the no-limit meeting. Final adjournment late in May is expected for the assembly which ended its 13th week Thursday.

The present House apportionment is based on each county getting one representative and the other 40 distributed on a population formula. The Senate is based on geography with consideration for population which gives 22 counties one senator, and the others assigned to two-county and three-county districts.

INDICATIVE of the urban trend in the proposal by Rep. Sherman Muths of Harrison County (Gulfport), the most populous Hinds County (Jackson) now with nine representatives would go to ten, and instead of one senator would get four.

county districts which now total four. There would be two four-county districts compared to the present one, and four-county districts established.

THE SENATE norm is one senator for each 41,887 population. That is in contrast to the 187,045 populated Hinds County which has one senator, along with Harrison whose population is 119,489.

Indicative of the disregard for the racial population feature, the Muths plan would give Leflore (Greenwood) and Washington counties, both with Negro majorities each an additional representative for four each.

Associated Press Wirephoto

FIRST LADY AND THREE WHO WANT TO BE

JACKSONVILLE, April 2—Wives of four candidates for governor, including Florida's First Lady Mrs. Haydon Burns, are shown at the Florida League of Wobmen Voters convention here. They are (L-R) Mrs. Richard Muldrew of Melbourne, Mrs. Burns, Mrs. Scott Kelly of Lakeland and Mrs. Robert King High of Miami. Mrs. Muldrew's husband is a Republican, the others Democrats.

Urban Position Strengthened In Reapportionment Proposal

By KENNETH TOLER
Jackson Bureau,
Memphis Commercial Appeal
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., April 2—A reapportionment plan strengthening the urban position in the rural-controlled Mississippi legislature has been offered the current general assembly to ward off federal court distribution of the 122 House seats and 52 Senate posts among the 82 counties. It completely disregards the racial makeups of the political subdivisions.

A three-judge federal court has served notice that the present apportionment must be squared with the "one man-one vote" guideline set by the United States Supreme Court before the 1967 elections and accomplished at the present session before it adjourns the no-limit meeting. Final adjournment late in May is expected for the assembly which ended its 13th week Thursday.

MISSISSIPPI

The present House apportionment is based on each county getting one representative and the other 40 distributed on a population formula. The Senate is based on geography with consideration for population which gives 22 counties one senator, and the others assigned to two-county and three-county districts.

INDICATIVE of the urban trend in the proposal by Rep. Sherman Muths of Harrison County (Gulfport), the most populous Hinds County (Jackson) now with nine representatives would go to ten, and instead of one senator would get four.

Likewise, the second most populous county of Harrison with six would go to seven representatives and three instead of one senator. Also, Washington County (Greenville), would have its representatives increased from three to four, and with populous Bolivar County (Cleveland), share three senators instead of the one each they now have.

Under the proposal, instead of Mississippi having 59 counties with one representative each, there would be only 39 with single representation. In place of the 22 counties each with a full senator, the number would be reduced to the six most populous.

ALSO, instead of 16 two-county districts, there would be 28, and 15 three-county areas instead of five. The lone four-county district would be abolished.

Rep. Muths sets up a norm of one representative for each 17,854 population. That is in sharp contrast to the present apportionment under which Issaquena County (Mayersville) with a population of 3,576 has one representative.

On the Senate side, there are 22 one-senator counties which would be reduced to six, while the 24 two-county districts would be increased to 24, the same number of three-county districts which now total four. There would be two four-county districts compared to the present one, and four-county districts established.

THE SENATE norm is one senator for each 41,887 population. That is in contrast to the 187,045 populated Hinds County which has one senator, along with Harrison whose population is 119,489.

Indicative of the disregard for the racial population feature, the Muths plan would give Leflore (Greenwood) and Washington counties, both with Negro majorities each an additional representative for four each.

Voter Impact

M188155IPP)

Ross Knows Negroes Are Part Of State

By KENNETH FAIRLY
In the Delta Democrat-Times

A most astute county politician sat in his office and summed up next year's governor's race.

"Ole Ross ain't gonna mention the nigger in the first primary. You watch and see .He's gonna be on TV and on the stump and talking about how much industry he got to come to Mississippi, how many jobs he created, how he got that big Standard Oil Refinery down at Pascagoula single-handed.

"No sir, he won't mention race. He'll make it to the second primary and then he'll hang the nigger around sombody's neck, whoever it is in the second—Carroll Gartin or William Winter."

He was referring to Ross R. Barnett who bungled his way through four years as Mississippi's governor and who has been running for a second term since Gov. Paul Johnson succeeded him in 1964.

Barnett, moulded from the cast which produced the state's Vardamans and Bilbos, has made only one public statement on voting rights, and that came last year before Mississippi decided to relax its registration requirements.

A fence-straddling statement when compared to Barnett's defiant "go-to-jail" TV appearance prior to James Meredith's enrollment at Ole Miss, it really haid nothing. Barnette took a Lincolnese stand. "This is a government of the people, for the people and by the people—let us keep it that way."

Although he is reported in Jackson to be secretly meeting with Ku Klux Klan leaders and people from Americans for the Preservation of the White Race, Barnett here would appear to indicate that he finally admits Negroes are a part of Mississippi and the United States and that they have a voice in the conduct of public affairs.

Barnett, in the 1967 governor's race, will have to overcome the Negro vote, whatever its number. He is seen as a race-baiter and the concensus is that Negroes will never be taken in by his promises and statements.

Dr. Douglas Conner, Negro doctor at Starkville, says of Sen. James Eastland, "He represents something disgusting to the Negro—his image as a great white father, the white plantation owner. It is unthinkable that a Negro would vote for Eastland." But Negroes generally picture Barnett in the same frame as Eastland. One said, "As fearful as it is, we would vote for Walker (Prentiss Walker, running on the Republican ticket against Sen. Eastland), a Goldwater Republican in preference to Eastland." It is a matter of the lesser of two evils."

If this feeling remains when Barnett offers for office again, he could begin his race with a possible deficit of 125,000 to 200,000 votes if all registered Negro voters were to go to the polls.

But Kenneth Dean, executive director of the Mississippi Human Relations Council with headquarters at Jackson, sees no unity of Negro vote by race or by specific area in upcoming elections.

He is acutely aware of the deep division between the NAACP and MFDP. He describes it this way: "There are individuals in both organizations who want power. These individuals will eventually see that if they want power, they must come together."

This rift was underscored by Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer of Ruleville who has described the NAACP as a "snob" group of benefit to middle and upper class Negroes but of little use to those in the lower economic brackets.

She said it should be called "The National Association for the Advancement of CERTAIN People." A member of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, which seems to comprise the bulk of FDP, once wrote that the only qualification Charles Evers, NAACP field secretary, had was that his brother Medgar was shot to death while engaged in the civil rights struggle.

Whatever the degree of disorder within the civil rights ranks, Dean believes that the white power structure is going to make a very strong attempt to establish a climate in which the Negro will vote, but at the same time, take necessary steps to keep him out of political office.

Dean does not believe that the Democratic Party has a corner on the Negro vote in Mississippi at this time and predicts that it would go strongly in favor of a Rubel Phillips type candidate on a Republican ticket next year, over a Ross Barnett or John Bell Williams.

"But both groups feel that the Negro vote is neither large enough nor well enough organized to count in a statewide election now," he said.

It is a case then, of not being able to determine exactly what impact the Negro vote will have in the next year or two in Mississippi.

If Charles Evers in coalition with Claude Ramsey's Mississippi Labor Council could launch an effective voter education campaign and bring into it dissident members of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, this could develop into a formidable factor in state politics.

It is difficult to forget what a sheriff in a Mississippi hill county said, evaluating the importance of the Negro vote: "Give me 500 Negro votes to start with and there ain't a man in the county who could catch me."

The editor of the University of Mississippi's daily newspaper, The Mississippian, stated it a bit differently when he said, "However it may develop, the potential of as many as 175,000 Negroes registered to vote in 1967 is not being overlooked by possible candidates for office. Most of them are convinced that how they figure or misfigure the Negro vote in the next election could spell the difference between success or defeat."